According to a telegram received at the office of the graduate school, from Dean W. W. Pierson, the Association of American Universities will be the guests of the University of North Carolina at its next annual meeting in 1931.

For the past week Dean Pierson has been attending the annual meeting of this association which has been held at the University of California. The California university, together with Leland Stanford University, was the host at this year's convention.

Dean Pierson, who is a member of the executive committee of the association, was required to attend a meeting before the opening of the convention. He also had a part on the program of the organization. Dr. Pierson presented a paper on "Summer Schools." In his paper he enumerated several of the evils of the summer schools, and suggested certain remedies for these wrongs.

Dr. Pierson is expected to return to the campus sometime toward the latter part of this week.

Crane On Inspection Tour of Institutions

Dr. Harry W. Crane, professor of psychology, is engaged in an inspection of private and state institutions for nervous and mental cases. He has completed his task in the western part of the state. The inspection included the State Hospital and the Broad Oaks Sanitarium at Morganton, Appalachian Hall at Asheville, Beallmont Sanitarium at Black Mountain, and Glenwood Park Sanitarium in Greensboro. The work, which is being done for the state board of charity and public welfare, will be extended to the eastern district later.

At the invitation of the Charlotte supervisor of special classes, Dr. Crane will visit the special calles maintained in connection with the Charlotte Public Schools this Friday. On the following day, he will address the South Piedmont Association of special class teachers on "'The Character of the Feeble Minded."

DR. JOHNSON TO SPEAK ON SLEEP EXPERIMENTS

Dr. H. M. Johnson, head of the Simmons Investigation of Sleep which is being conducted at the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research in Pittsburgh, will give an illustrated lecture on "Some Recent Experiments on Sleep" in Phillips hall at eight o'clock on the evening of November sixth.

On the fifth Dr. Johnson will address the local psychological fraternity, Alpha Psi Delta.

Enka Chemist Visits Departmental Heads

Paul W. Frisk, chief chemist for the American Enka Corporation at Asheville, spent yesterday with Mr. Baity, head of the department of sanitary engineering, and Thorndyke Saville, head of the department of conservation and development here.

He discussed with these men the problems regarding water treatment at the plants of the Company in Enka, N. C.

FRESHMEN TAKE STAND FOR LOW GRID-GRAPH FEE

At the freshman friendship council meeting Monday night, it was asked that the council aid during the Georgia Tech-Carolina game. Thirty men volunteered to act as guides and traffic directors Saturday. They will be given duty sometime during the week by Ed Lanier at the Y.

The council announced that 45 new members had been added to the roll making a complete membership of more than 125. The new members were introduced to the old.

A report of the committee of the "Speak, Greet, Meet Week" was given by W. A. Allsbrook, who explained the plans for the week to the new members.

A very interesting discussion was held concerning students rushing gates and windows of the grid-graph last Saturday. The students claimed that if a reduction of prices would be affected that no procedure as happened in the Tennessee game would follow in the future games.

Knight Will Survey Chinese Education

Dr. Edgar W. Knight of the school of education has been granted leave of absence for a period of two quarters, in which he will visit China. He will do research work in studying educational systems in China. Knight will be accompanied by his wife and family. Dr. Knight is planning to leave from San Francisco on the first of December.

PRINCETON TO CONTINUE RESEARCH IN MONTANA

Princeton, October 28—The geology department of Princeton University is making plans to continue its research in the vicinity of Red Lodge in Southern Montana, where members of the department made important geological finds during the past summer.

The first dinosaur eggs ever found on this continent were discovered there this summer.

Detailed reports are now being prepared on discoveries in this region, and another expedition will go out next summer.

Y WILL SOLICIT FACULTY PLEDGES

Junior-Senior Cabinet Will Be In Charge of Subscriptions From Teaching Staff.

At the meeting of the junior-senior Y cabinet Monday night Doug Kincaid and Sam Gorham, representatives of the Y at the state student volunteer retreat held in Winston-Salem, gave short talks on different subjects of the assembly. Kincaid told the group something of the talks and program of the conference. He stressed the talks of Dr. Russell, of Duke University, and a Duke co-ed. Sam Gorham talked of the technical points in the organization. He told the group something of the work of the volunteers and suggested that a similar student volunteer group be organized at Carolina.

Ed Hamer reported on the meeting of the state student Y cabinet which was held in Greensboro last week. Hamer is president of this organization and told the group something of the work for the ensuing year.

F. M. James, treasurer of the Y, explained to the council the annual finance campaign to be held by the Y this week among the faculty of the University. James gave each member the names of the ten faculty members whom he is to see for the purpose of getting subscriptions to the Y.

A discusion followed concerning the plans for the quadrennial human relations institute. The last institute met on the

WRIGHT LECTURES AROUSE COMMENT

George H. Wright, prominent member of the Asheville Bar and one of the leading real estate lawyers of western North Carolina, recently aroused great enthusiasm among the students and faculty of the law school, by a series of lectures on "Abstracting Land Titles". These lectures were delivered under the auspices of the Law School Association. The officers of the Association are James A. Williams, Hendersonville, president; Martin Kellogg, Sunbury, president of the third year class, McDonald Gray, Statesville, president of the second year class, A. T. Allen, Jr., Raleigh, president of the first year class, James H. Chadbourn, Wilmington, Editor-in-Chief of the North Carolina Law Review, Peyton B. Abbott, Winston-Salem, and Moore Bryson, Asheville, representatives at large, advisors. Albert Coates of the law school faculty is the organizer and director of the Association.

PHI DELTA THETA HOUSE SECURES NEW MOTHER

Within the past few days, Mrs. Lillian M. Florence has established her residence here, as house mother for the Phi Delta Theta fraternity, replacing Mrs. Lillie Williams, Hendersonville, of last year. A native of Boston, Mrs. Florence has lived in that city, in New York, and in Chicago. During the past five or six years she has spent the winters in the South, and for three years has made an annual trip to Durham during the winter. Now, as last year, three fraternities on the Hill have house mothers: Phi Delta Theta, Pi Kappa Phi, and Beta Theta Pi. President Graham desires that every campus social order adopt this form of management.

GRAHAM TO TALK AT SCOTCH RALLY

Presbyterians From Entire State To Assemble in Cumberland Today.

Bluff Church, in Cumberland county, will be the scene of a huge Scottish rally today at 11 o'clock when President Graham of the University gives the main address of the occasion on "The Relation of the Scotch to Education and the University." President Graham plans to show the influence of the Scotch on education in the state from the earliest days of colonization until the present, and to show how instrumental they were in the education progress of the state. His address will point out the numerous institutions in North Carolina that were fostered by the Scotch and the important part the Scotch played in establishing a university for the state.

This rally is drawing people of Scottish ancestry from all parts of the state, and is expected to exceed in size anything of its kind ever attempted. Bluff Church was selected for the assembly because of its significance in the Scotch history of North Carolina, that of being one of the oldest Presbyterian churches in the state.

Infirmary List

There were three people confined in the infirmary yesterday, all suffering from colds. They were: V. L. Briggs, L. C. Plumly, and C. R. Harrington.

DINNER MEETING OPENS ASSEMBLY

The University of North Carolina will be host to the delegates of the Southern Conference on Education at a dinner meeting in the dining-room of the Carolina Inn, at eight o'clock tomorrow evening at which time President Frank Graham of the University will deliver the address of welcome and Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, President of the University of Chicago, will give the principal speech of the opening meeting.

The delegates to the conference, the deans and heads of departments of the University, the Educational Conference Committee, the advisory and executive committees of the University, the faculties of the law and education schols, graduates of the University of Chicago, and Chapel Hill people who are entertaining out of town guests for the conference, will be guests at the dinner. Seats in the balconies around the dining-room will be provided for those who desire to hear the speeches but who cannot be accommodated at the dinner.

DORMITORIES NOW HOLD 1251 PERSONS

According to figures just compiled by M. L. Thompson, of the business office, 1251 students are housed by the University this year, leaving only seventy-three vacancies in the dormitories. This does not include Spencer hall which is filled to its capacity of seventy-five. This leaves 1279 men students of the total enrollment of 2560 to find accomodations in fraternity houses, and the various rooming houses of Chapel Hill. One hundred and thirteen of the 188 co-eds enrolled are housed by sororities and rooming houses.

Guest Speaker

ROBERT M. HUTCHINS

Robert M. Hutchins, youthful president of the University of Chicago, will speak here Thursday at the annual Southern Educational Conference. At the age of twenty-nine he became Dean of the Yale Law School. He is now thirty-one.

FRESHMEN HEAR SENIORS EXPOUND ABOUT FRIENDSHIP

The observance of Speak-Greet-Meet-Week was begun yesterday with the presentation of the idea by Ed Hamer, H. N. Patterson, and Noah Goodridge to the freshmen at the chapel hour.

Patterson put forward the old tradition of speaking to everyone and asked the whole freshmen class to cooperate with the Freshmen Friendship Council in upholding this tradition.

Noah Goodridge stated that he wished to warn freshmen against any timidity that they might feel toward their fellow students by his example in losing the better part of his freshmen year because he entertained this shy and scared feeling.

Hamer impressed the fact upon each student at Carolina that he is supposed to be a gentlemen and to respect and speak to all others as being such. He put forward the enviable custom of greeting each other always as "Gentlemen" that the Washington-Lee students have cultivated. A caution was given to the freshmen not to allow upper classmen to over-awe them.

Officer's Hand Injured While Making Arrest

While trying to subdue his prisoner, G. W. Hill, who was arrested for drunkeness recently, motorcycle officer U. M. Rackley sustained a cut hand. The prisoner had become unruly and attempted to resist arrest; in order to place him in jail the officer was obliged to hit him in the mouth. This resulted in the loss of two of Hill's front teeth and a cut hand for Rackley. Rackley's hand has become infected and it is likely that he will be incapacitated for a few weeks.

GET TICKETS FOR NEXT GAME AT Y

Students may obtain their tickets to the Tech-Carolina game by bringing their pass books to the Y. M. C. A. either Wednesday, Thursday, or Friday at chapel period, or between the hours of 2 and 5 in the afternoon. These pass books must also be presented at the gate Saturday to gain admittance.

HUTCHINS WILL ADDRESS ANNUAL EDUCATION MEET

President of the University of Chicago Is Among Prominent Speakers Here Tomorrow.

The University of North Carolina announces the third of a series of annual conferences to be held at Chapel Hill, tomorrow and Friday, October 30 and 31, and Saturday and Sunday, November 1 and 2, on the general subject, "Education in a Changing Economic Order." The program of the 1930 series will deal particularly with the subject of "Life and Work in the New South."

R. M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, will address the conference in Gerrard hall Thursday night at 8:30 p. m. in one of the principal speeches on the program of the conference. President Hutchins, one of the youngest university presidents in the United States, is noted for his progressive ideas along educational lines.

William E. Dodd, recognized as one of the greatest living historians, will address this body at its Friday night session in Gerrard hall. This metting also will be at 8:30 o'clock. Dr. Dodd has written a large number of widely used text books in government and history.

The major part of the first floor of Gerrard hall will be reserved for the delegates to the convention who will be here from all over the South, but the balcony and the rear part of the first floor will be available for students and townspeople, who wish to attend these two addresses. Both of these men are recognized to be able and interesting speakers.

The program is as follows:

Thursday, October 30

A Word On Faculty Liberty

In the current bulletin of the American Association of University Professors, the leading article is one entitled "Academic Freedom: A Practical Plan to Achieve the Right of Unhampered Thinking and Research for the Teacher." Of particular interest is a sentence in that discussion—namely, "If the college wants to enjoy the advantages of a competent teaching staff and the advantages of a good reputation in the academic world, it must voluntarily pay the price of academic freedom."

Part of the price undoubtedly falls upon the students, and the payment must be in the form of vigorous encouragement to those professors who embrace intelligent liberalism, and who believe in a sincere and hearty goodfellowship with their students. There is no question but that kinship, personal likes and dislikes, private influences, departmental jealousies, religious and economic attitudes, etc., etc.—all, at one time or another, bear some weight upon the hiring, promoting or discharging of instructors; that is, above their basic, necessary qualification—ability. However, the opinion of the general student body is, or should be, too of considerable importance, if voiced together and opportunely.

The sloth and general lethargic habits of many a student is well-known, and it is indeed a great pity that this universal tendency should also be prevalent on a university campus. It functions inevitably where it ought not—everything that is fine and dandy is lazily accepted as being merely normal, but anything that might be considered to be unpleasant is immediately the center of a great deal of fuss and bother of the chronically dissatisfied group. A forceful and entertaining, yet instructive, professor is praised by the students, but only in casual conversations on trunk-tops and fraternity rooms. Yet if there be one or two dull students in that instructor's class, they will, in an attempt to excuse their own shortcomings, attribute their failure to the professor. And unlike the entire rest of the class who raise no commotion over their whole-hearted approval and enjoyment of this sincerely liberal and enlightening teacher, these embittered but determined few will carry their complaints to officials about the "atrocious instructor."

Thus we find that most involuntarily, the administrative offices are forced to hear almost only adverse criticisms of the faculty, because it is usually the inferior or worthless, sometimes an oversensitive student who will comment to officers of the university upon their teachers. This condition is fortunately balanced in most cases by the non-importance that is placed by an intelligent and fair-minded official upon these few and all too shallow reports.

But the possibility of injustice being done to an instructor as well as to the students, is obviously great. Certainly it would be a shame to see much admired professors placed in uncomfortable positions because of the machinations of one or two disgruntled pupils! Is it not time for each and every student to share in his way the pleasant task of retaining the popular and efficient teacher by proclaiming the virtues of the man (much more than has been done heretofore), and not letting them, like with Caesar, "be oft interred with their bones"? All this not so much for their sake as for our own benefit and for the best interests of the University.—M. J. F.

Daviens, Where Are You?

Year before last a new organization was added to the many on the campus. Membership was not to carry with it merely the empty honor of affiliation; it was to imply service in a functioning organization which had specific objectives before it. The Order of Daviens—named in honor of a man famous in the history of the state and the University, William R. Davie—was organized to aid in securing for matriculation here the outstanding graduates of the secondary schools of the state. It was not to be the intention to encourage athletes alone, for the Order was interested as much in scholars and personalities as in football players and javelin throwers. It was said at the time of the formulation of the Order that it was one of the few organizations on the campus with a valid excuse for existence.

Yes, great things were expected of the Daviens, for they had a great opportunity of serving the University. For a first few months of its existence the Order seemed to flourish: the membership comprised a group of campus leaders, regular meetings were held, and there seemed to be a good deal of enthusiasm. But last year naught was heard of Daviens. Whether they met or not, whether they accomplished anything or not, we do not know; although it is generally understood that they did not function last year. So, we presume, the Daviens either have faded out of existence or have joined the ranks of the slumbering.

Daviens, you had an organization with a noble purpose, and the sight of your passing out is not a pleasing one. Why should you permit the Order to fade away? Even if you have not functioned for a year, you can still make the Order of Daviens a successful organization. The Univeristy needs you, for you can be of great use. Oh, Daviens, speak. Where are you?

Speaking On The Campus

The Freshman Friendship Council is doing the University a great service in having a Speak-Greet-Meet Week. This fine old tradition of speaking on the campus has been allowed to run down without our realizing it. There is no use in trying to evade facts: Carolina is far behind several schools in the South in this matter. There is no good reason why this should be, for it is certain that at heart Carolina men are not one bit less friendly than those of other schools in the country. If everyone enters into this heart and soul and gives his entire support to this cause, Carolina will soon acquire the reputation of being one of the friendliest and most likable schools in the South.

The Freshman Friendship Council certainly does not want anyone to feel that he is forced into speaking. If one's disposition is such that he does not want to be friendly and exchange greetings, no law will be passed requiring him to speak. But it is to one's own benefit to greet his fellow-students. Speaking helps in making friends, in bringing out a cheery disposition, and in overcoming timidness. As far as we can see there are absolutely no arguments against it.

If a greeting seems to be given because of custom rather than a sincere pleasure in seeing a friend or a real desire to be friendly, it loses its value. There is a world of difference between a cheery "Hello!" and a dry remark, with head bent down, which sounds like a groan. It is better not to speak than to speak as if you hated to do it.

We should not only have a Speak-Greet-Meet Week, but a Speak-Greet-Meet Year. This week is designated in this way in order to get this idea started once more. This time let's keep up this tradition and pass it on from class to class.—C. A. P.

Purging The Buccaneer

"My sentiments on the subject are well-known. If I had my way, I would abolish the Buccaneer, one of the most outspoken members of the University faculty says whenever the subject is opened to him. His contention, also expressed by one of the executive heads, is that the campus comic is fit for but one unmentionable use; that it is a crude, vulgar, and unworthy of this "Athenian settlement."

The students, on the other hand, seem to enjoy just those things that the faculty men condemn, and they are mature, cultured ladies and gentlemen. Who can deny them the pleasure they evidently get from lying in the gutter? They come up therefrom none the more morally soiled, in spite of their debauchery—or, at least, that's what they themselves say—and the writer, himself a Buccaneer reader, is in no position to disagree with them. Finally, it is only a comparatively small portion of the student publications fee that is alloted to the Buccaneer, and, as a certain man-about- the-campus says, "It's worth it."

But have the morbid editors of the magazine and we, its avid readers ever stopped to consider that "it looks like hell to other people," to the alumni and the faculty especially? We do not advocate, or even suggest herein, that the campus be purged of the comic; but that the "Buc" itself should be purged of all that makes it hateful and offensive to those outside the student body seems desirable and expedient. Else the University will be laid open to the indignity of wearing another black eye.

OPEN FORUM

SHADES OF BEAU GESTE

The "first nighter" (Heaven help us) has made his appearance in Durham. This dreaded spectre of the theatre world, it is rumored, made his debut at the premiere of Eugene O'Neil's masterpiece, "Strange Interlude."

According to eye witnesses, several of whom were alleged to have "passed out" due to the shock, the gentleman in question made his debut attired, as for an afternoon wedding, in a dark black coat, fawn colored pants, a wing collar and a flowing black ascot tie (reputed to have been formerly in the possession of Oscar Wilde). His costume was further enhanced by the presence of an opera hat and a swallow-tail coat. To top the entire costume, he had the audacity to drive up to the theatre in a yellow Ford roadster. It has been since learned that Henry Ford had nothing to do with it either.

Surely, Beau Geste, that inimitable judge of what the well dressed will not wear upon appropriate occasions must have seen his dream come true. It is rumored further, that the ostentatious "clothes-horse," who attempted to impress the theatre going public with the sense of his own importance, is an ex-editor of Vanity Fair. Aside from that he is also well known in University literary circles.

It is indeed fortunate for students who have a sense of decorum and propriety that premiere performances do not take place very often in the vicinity, otherwise we would find the entire audience coming more for the spectacle of a well dressed "first-nighter" rather than for the presentation proper.

"BEAU GROUCHO."

HUMOR OR UNMITIGATED FILTH?

To the Open Forum Editor:

I blush with shame and blanch with fear when I think of what might happen were I to send my copy of the Buccaneer to my distant parents. The idea of mailing it to a female acquaintance is a little less abherrent, but still lacks sanity and judgment. And it is not because I think the above-mentioned personages might be shocked that I cannot conceive of the magazine's coming within a three-mile radius of them. Ah, no! It is because I am thoroughly certain that my alma mater would be condemned as a breeding place of morons, imitative and mediocre. My female friend, I am positive, would write me a withering epistle of scorn and ridicule. She would ask me whether the editors of the monthly weren't given to reading too much of the vulgar, tawdry, sex-ridden publications that insult the human mind by an assumption of popular filth. Certain it is that they have allowed the flavor of these last to cheapen what should be the campus delight. (At this point I should crumple up in some secluded corner, for I could never stand such a tirade from the fair one.) She would declare that if the supposed humor were in any respect humorous, even though it were a trifle obscene, she might be inclined to forgive and forget; but it is purely and simply filth, without any pretence of polish. She would suggest that the persons responsible for the pitifully crude attempts to be witty school themselves in the distinction between a record of sexual abnormality and humor. And I should be able to answer her naught. No, it is too great a risk—the Buccaneer remains outside the three-mile limit.

IN THE WAKE OF NEWS

Jack Dungan

That fountain of youth, that effervescing Buccaneer, has called forth the best line of the week. One of the class of '34 has checked all the jokes which are slightly or greatly off color and written his sweetheart that she is under no circumstances to read the jokes checked.

Speaking of checking, the idea has struck us of having cards printed and filed so that persons who borrow ties may check them in and out. Several of my best fifty cent ties have been missing for weeks at a time. It would be very interesting to know just who has them, at least.

After a trip to South Carolina and that delightful North Carolina town—Gibson—I am convinced that most of the beautiful girls live in small towns. I refer to Francis, Betty, Larue, Mary, Margaret, Polly, Louise, and a few others. Incidentally, I wonder just what Emily Post has to say regarding persons who always look back from the front seat of automobiles at the most inopportune times.

Among the fraternities this is SPEAK — MEET — BEAT WEEK.

If the W. C. T. U. is successful in its attempts to have thirty-six states prohibit the sale, manufacture or transporta—an amendment to the constitution they are actually campaigning for at the present time—a new profession ranking along with that of liquor bootlegging will provide still another means whereby worthy young men of limited means may earn their way through college.

The residents of the Carolina Inn Annex were startled one morning last week by what at first appeared to be a conflagaration of unknown origin, but what actually turned out to be "Eddie" Marshall returning home in the wee hours of a new day from a red hot date with a co-ed.

The co-eds have danced for the first time, as the Tar Heel cleverly put it, and it seems that they did pretty well for beginners.

And "Boss" Hill has become the hero of the campus due to his having caused, through a bite or laceration, Motorcycle Officer Rackley to have an infection. There is many a young man who would have liked to have bitten the hand of said officer.

One is quite at a loss to understand why, if it is quite ethical for a college to spend the earnings of its undergraduates (in football) on athletic equipment, it would be disgraceful for an institution of higher learning to spend these same earnings in equipping, for example, a new chemical laboratory.—Frank Schoonmaker, in Harpers.

Second Varsity Unable To Stop Reserve Team In Scrimmage Session

'Iron Men,' Running Tech Plays, Defeat Second Eleven By 13-7 Score.

TAR HEELS WORK LATE

Coaches Collins, Cerney and Fetzer Drive Team Until Darkness Halts Practice.

Working yesterday afternoon until darkness halted practice, the "iron men" defeated the second varsity eleven 13-7 in a scrimmage session which lasted for over one and one-half hours. For the first forty-five minutes the second varsity was on defense with the yellow jerseyed reserves running Georgia Tech plays. Triple passes behind the line and other deceptive plays caused the second eleven no little trouble.

Regular scrimmaging took up the remainder of the afternoon, and it was during this period that the "iron men" succeeded in routing the varsity. Dunk McNeill, who was placed on the reserves because of inability to cover passes, looked good at carrying the ball yesterday, but continued to be a bit off on his pass defense. Haines Lassiter, reserve halfback, was one of the most consistent ground gainers in the scrimmage session.

The scrimmage was one of the longest held in the stadium this fall, and in all probability another long session will be in order today with the coaches exerting every effort to get a smooth working combination ready for the homecoming Saturday.

Those who saw action in the scrimmage were for the second varsity: Davis, Nichols, Henry and Brown, ends; Hodges and Underwood, tackles; Philpott and Newcombe, guards; Gilbreath, center; Wyrick, quarterback; Maus and Erickson, halfbacks; and McCaskill, fullback. The "iron men" showed: Cole, Grindstaff and Cozart, ends; Smith and Rose, tackles; Kerr and Oliverio, guards; Koehl, center; Ferebee, quarterback; Lassiter, White, Croom and Frazier, halfbacks; and McNeill, fullback.

The first team spent the afternoon in dummy scrimmage with another reserve eleven, drilling on defense for Georgia Tech plays. These two clubs probably will scrimmage this afternoon.

The first varsity lineup yesterday included: Walker and Parsley, ends; Thompson and McDade, tackles; McIver and Fysal, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarterback; Chandler and Slusser, halfbacks; and House, fullback.

Captain Strud Nash was in light equipment again yesterday, but was able to get about fairly well on his injured ankle. Johnny Branch was confined to the infirmary Monday with a bad cold, but was back at work yesterday.

Five thousand delegates will represent half of the teachers in the world at the convention of the World Federation of Education Associations, to be held at Denver, Colo., in July, 1931. These delegates will come from sixty nations and from all the races of the world.

As was to be expected, the much bewailed Carolina line began to respond to Coach Collins' laborious tinkering and oiling when they played Tennessee Saturday. Time after time, the Tar Heel forward wall threw back and smothered the onrush of the Vol backs, and on offense opened plenty of holes for the backs.

No doubt by the end of the season Carolina will present one of the strongest teams in the country, but the big games will be behind the Tar Heels by then. In answer to criticism of Coach Collins, it might be said that, were the schedule to be reversed, with the big games last instead of first, it is very likely that he would have whipped the team into shape to win every game.

At present, in the light of last week's result, Carolina rules as a favorite to win the remainder of this year's contests.

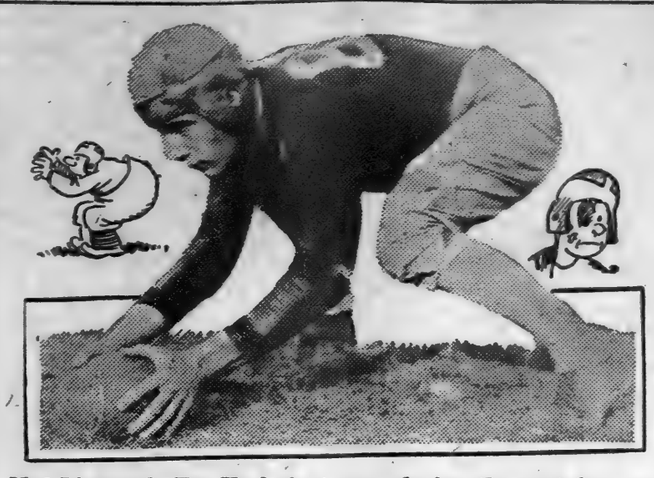
Add Warren certainly won vengeance over his old jinx, Jeff Carroll, with a knockout in Charlotte after 60 seconds of the first round Monday night. Add evidently was determined to get home as quickly as possible, for he tore into his rival at the opening bell and floored him with the first punch of the fight. Carroll tried to stall until his head cleared, but Add landed that swishing right again, and it was "Good night, all" for Jeff.



The swift knockout came as a surprise, because Carroll was rated a good 2-1 bet for a winner. In two previous fights, Add lost on a techincal knockout when he broke his arm in the seventh round of the first bout, while the second fight ended with no decision.

The quick ending of the Monday night fight recalls another one round K. O. credited to Add in Charlotte some years ago. The victim then was Romero Rojas of South America, who in the preceding six months had scored a knockout over Jack Sharkey and had won a decision over Johnny Risko. It seems that Add's comeback campaign is coming along nicely, but whether he will reach as high a peak as he did when he stopped Romero is yet to be seen.

During his last year at Alabama, Wallace Wade is making another bid toward the national championship for the Crimson Tide of Alabama. With a mastodon line and shifty, hard driving backs 'Bama has rung up the best record in the South so far, and should they come through the regular season undefeated, ought to be considered for the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena New Year's day. Perhaps Notre Dame has a better eleven than Alabama, but Rockne craftily refuses to run the risk of having his team go stale and spoil an undefeated season by a post season defeat.

TAR HEEL CENTER PLAYS GREAT GAME

Ned Lipscomb, Tar Heel pivot man, during the past few weeks of play has proved himself to be one of the best centers in the South. He is tall and rangy, being adept at both covering passes and at stopping drives through the line. Ned was in almost every play out at Knoxville last Saturday.

Intramural Results

A. T. O. Defeats S. A. E.

Led by the passing combination of Booker to Kendall, the A. T. O. football team defeated S. A. E. 7-0 yesterday in one of the tightest games of the day. A series of short passes to Kendall accounted for the lone score. The A. T. O. team was clearly the master throughout the contest, having the ball continually in their opponents' territory.

D. K. E. Triumphs 13-0

D. K. E. continued their winning ways, this time adding Kappa Sigma to their list of victims to the tune of 13-0. Lineberger and Holderness did the scoring for the Dekes. "Burrhead" Chatham featured for the victors with some long runs.

Sigma Nu Wins 32-0

Sigma Nu buried the Lambda Chi Alpha team under a landslide of touchdowns, defeating them 32-0. Dameron was high scorer for the victors with 12 points. Sikes and Griffith followed closely with seven and six respectively. Griffith's arm was in great form yesterday, doing the best passing of the year. Dameron and Sykes were on the receiving end most of the time.

Forfeits

Sigma Zeta won from S. P. E. by forfeit.

Chi Phi did not appear for their game with Sigma Phi Sigma and as a result forfeited.

Delta Psi won from Pi Kappa Phi by forfeit.

Guilford-Catawba Leaders In North State Conference

Guilford entered into the picture of the North State conference standing this past week with a startling victory when her football team trounced Atlantic Christian college 69-0 on the greatest scoring orgy of the season.

The most significant game in the loop during the week just closed, however, was the decisive victory which Moran's Indians of Catawba scored over the Elon Christians.

Zengle of Catawba took advantgate of the Indians' holding Elon scoreless and is now high scorer in the conference with 55 points to his credit.

Warren K. O.'s Carroll

A right swing to the jaw in the first round gave Add Warren a victory over Jeff Carroll in Charlotte Monday night. Warren came out of his corner fast and while Carroll was sparirng for an opening, swung his right and the fight was over. The sudden ending came as a complete surprise as the men were supposedly evenly matched with a slight advantage favoring Carroll due to his past victories over Warren and a recet knockout over Sid McIver.

EIGHT ELEVENS UNDEFEATED ON EASTERN GRIDS

From the maelstrom of last Saturday's gridiron upsets, only eight teams in the east remained undefeated. Of these eight aggregations, Dartmouth's White Indians and Fordham's Rams have the most impressive records, each winning five straight games. Army, Cornell, Western Maryland, and Allegheny have won four apiece, but Army has been tied once.

Of the entire group only Fordham can boast the record of an uncrossed goal. The Rams have piled up 160 points while their opponents have failed to score. Dartmouth leads the high scorers with 232 points against two for their opponents, while Colgate, although defeated once in five games, is second with 225 points to their rivals' 14. Carnegie Tech is third with 200 points as against 37 tallied by their opponents.

FIVE FRESHMEN ON INJURED LIST

Coaches Pleased With Showing Of Yearlings Against Princeton.

After a rest Monday the freshman squad was back at work again yesterday. The game they had with the Princeton Cubs was a hard one and several of the regulars were sent to the sidelines with injuries which will keep them out of the game. In spite of the 20-0 score, the game with Princeton was closely fought. The Tar Babies played a good brand of ball. At the beginning of the last quarter the score was only 6 to 0. They had scored earlier on an intercepted pass. Several times the Carolina yearlings got within the enemies' ten yard line. Once in the third period the Tar Babies made four first downs and carried the ball to Princeton's two yard line, only to pass over the goal and have Brandt, Carolina end, knock the ball out of Weisker's arms, thinking he was a Princeton man. Then when the final period got under way, with the score 6-0 against them, the Tar Babies opened up with passes and Princeton intercepted them and turned them into scores. In spite of the defeat, Coach Enright was pleased with the showing made by his men, in view of the fact that they had to ride on the train all day Friday, the day before the game.

LISKIN PROVIDES MAJOR UPSET IN NET TOURNAMENT

Carolina Tennis Team Has Successful Day at Mid-Southern Meet.

Phil Liskin, Tar Heel net ace, provided the upset in Monday's opening round of the Mid-southern tournament at Pinehurst by defeating Richard Covington of Asheville, runner-up for the National Junior Tennis championship in 1928, and seeded No. 4 in the present tourney, in straight sets, 8-6, 6-4.

Covington, who paired with Jacques Brugnon to capture the North New England doubles title last summer and then toured the European tournaments with the French Davis Cup star, was caught off his game today, and his young college rival experienced little difficulty in defeating him.

The Liskin-Covington match was the only one played in the first round. Ed Yeomans, another University star, won by default from Nelson Hyde, Syracuse, N. Y., and the other entries advanced by the grace of byes.

Nine favorites advanced without trouble to the third round in the men's singles division.

DEAN'S OFFICE IS RESPONSIBLE FOR ARRANGING LOANS

Funds Are Administered for Best Interest of Both Students and the Fund.

The administration of student loan funds constitutes one of the really difficult and at the same time fine pieces of service rendered the University of North Carolina by the office of Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students. The administration is handled in such a way as to protect the best interests of the loan fund and to meet the genuine needs of the students.

Until the fall of 1923 loans were secured through the office of the president of the University. For a long time it was required that applications for loans be made before August 15 preceding the term during which the money was to be used. If an applicant was accepted, the applicant would be sent a blank note.

An interesting feature of this system was the immediate part played by the president of the University. It was a common practice for applications for entrance into the University to be addressed directly to the president. Where it was deemed advisable, an applicant for a loan was required to appear personally before a decision would be rendered on his application.

Of course, in adopting rules or regulations as to the administration of the loan funds it was necessary never to violate the express directions of the donor in the matter. Yet uniformity, as far as possible in this matter, is most desirable. Formerly applications for loans were made more or less informally. Today they are made on standard printed forms so worked out as to suggest a student's standing in the University and his financial condition and needs.

The maximum amount loaned to any individual has varied considerably, depending upon the individual and the policy pursued at the time in administering the funds. In the first period of the life of the funds larger total amounts were loaned to individuals than in the decade, 1910-20. In 1915 the maximum sum loaned on a single application was fifty dollars, and no student was allowed more than one hundred dollars during a full scholastic year.

The more recent tendency has been toward lending larger sums. The average amount loaned in 1926-27 was $104.72. The present maximum amounts are one hundred dollars for a single loan, three hundred dollars for a single scholastic year, and six hundred dollars during a student's entire career at the University. These maxima have not been observed inflexibly, but in certain cases, where such was deemed advisable, the limits have been exceeded. The use of general rules, therefore, is not allowed to defeat that very desirable policy of individual treatment of individual applications.

For a long time students in the professional and graduate schools were considered ineligible for assistance from the loan funds, apparently for the reason that the Deems Fund antedated these schools. Recently, however, the idea that their students are ineligible for loans has been entirely abandoned as far as the general administration of the funds is concerned.

Formerly when only the Deems Fund was in existence, the business of actually handling the monies of the funds such as collections, paying out money on notes, and so on, was largely in the hands of the bursar of the University. Since the fall of 1923 these matters have been completely under the direction of the auditor of the University.

Beginning with the session 1923-24, the administration of the loan funds has been a function of the dean of students. No branch of the University administration was more closely in touch with student life and needs than the office of the dean of students. Applications for loans are now considered by a committee composed of the dean of students, his assistant, the secretary to the dean of students, and the head of the Y. M. C. A.'s self-help bureau. Personal interviews are required where such are found to be helpful in acting upon an application. The committee looks to the applicant's actual needs, his worthiness, and his abilities. Records are kept which furnish valuable data on such points.

Loans are made at the legal rate of interest, six percent. Long time loans are made payable within two years or less with the privilege of renewal for a like period as long as a borrower remains a student in the University. The Hogue and Seely Funds are devoted entirely to short-time loans, that is, for a period of ninety-days or less.

If an applicant is successful, he is supplied with a blank note which requires the signatures of two sureties, a notary's certificate that such signatures are genuine, and the certificate of a clerk of court or register of deeds to the effect that the sureties are financially responsible in the amount of the note above homestead exemptions and incumbrances. Experiences has demonstrated that such requirements have not had effect to make student borrowers feel their obligations less. It is particularly valuable to require sureties because such is an index to the credit of the student borrowers and an extra protection for the life of the funds.

NEON MARKER IS MOUNTED ABOVE LOFTY BUILDING

Pittsburg, October 28.—A neon obstruction marker has been mounted forty stories above the street on top of the Cathedral of Learning, new building of the University of Pittsburgh at Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. This marker, designed by R. E. Marbury of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, resembles a spread umbrella with six V-shaped neon tubes sloping downward from the center.

It has been placed atop the Cathedral temporarily to demonstrate the protection it affords tall unlighted obstructions at night from low flying airplanes. Its distinction ball of red light, about three feet in diameter, is visible for a distance of five miles.

Penn State Conducts Freshman Elimination

Altoona, Pennsylvania. — Oct. 27. — (IP). — During the past summer, the Altoona branch of the Pennsylvania State College here opened an unusual trial summer school for prospective freshmen this year.

Here, for six weeks, freshmen tried their wits at college subjects. Those who succeeded gained advanced college credits. Many of those who failed saw their unfitness for college work, and went to work. It is expected that the number of men and women who will drop out of the college at the end of the first semester will be reduced greatly as a result.

American Girls Are More Restricted Than Germans

Wellesley, Massachusetts, October 28—That the American girl is allowed far less liberty in college than the German girl, contrary to the general impression, is the opinion of Miss Ann de Papp, of Germany, an exchange student at Wellesley College here.

American girls work harder at their studies through the semester, Miss de Papp said, but German girls study harder for the final examinations, which are very difficult in Germany.

kin and Weisker watched the workout from the sidelines due to injuries. Mathews and Horney were not in uniform but they are all expected back soon. The workout was a tough one. The backfield men practiced their offensive game, the linemen tried blocking and breaking through the opposition. Later Coach Enright had one line on the defense against another team which was to run the plays. This scrimmage lasted for about twenty minutes and was very fast and rough. Both Shore and Tatum, playing on the defense, received a severe shaking up and Barclay opened up an old wound on his nose. After this scrimmage the squad was divided into five teams and a snappy signal practice was run off. The freshmen are improving with practice and, in spite of their losing the two games they have played this season, they are developing some good material for the varsity.

SENATE DECIDES COLLINS IS RIGHT IN USING MAGNER

Also Believes Republican Party Not Entirely Responsible For Depression.

Discussions of live interest were called forth at the meeting of the Dialectic Senate Tuesday night. Between sixty and seventy members were present.

The first bill, "Resolved, That the Republican administration is responsible for the present economic depression," was discussed for a short time, but it was very one sided. Senators Kitchin, McIver, Dungan and Gentry spoke against the question, and on a vote, the bill was defeated.

Before discussing the second bill, "Resolved, That Coach Collins was not justified in allowing Magner to play in the game against Tennessee," the point was made that the senate was not justified in discussing it. This was voted down. Senators Rector, Shreve, Ramsay, Dungan, Brown, McIver, Little, and Morgan took part in the discussion, bringing out the effect that such action might have on the alumni, the squad and sport fans in the state. The discussion was purely impersonal, consideration being made only as to what was for the best good of the University. The bill was finally defeated.

During the business session preceding the meeting proper, the subject of choosing a clerk was taken up. Billy McKee was unanimously elected for the office. The president also appointed several committees. "Red" Greene was appointed chairman of the constitution committee, with Senators Morgan, Brown, Moore, and Little to serve with him. Senators Bunch, McIver, and Rose were apponted to the finance committee.

Cliff Baucom, William Blount, James Pace, and George Malone were taken in as new members to be initiated at the regular initiation meeting next week.

OLSEN TO SPEAK TO DEBATE SQUAD

W. A. Olsen, instructor in public speaking in the University, will speak at the regular meeting of the varsity debate squad tonight in 201 Murphey hall at 7:30. The speaker will make a few criticisms of the present system of debating used by the members of the squad. He will also point out and discuss some of the fundamentals of the art of debating.

The squad holds its meetings regularly each week for the purpose of discussing some of the different phases of presenting arguments and defending the points set up. In return for regular attendance to the meetings of the squad, a course credit will be given.

The year's program of the squad has not yet been announced, but will be published sometime in the near future. Last year the debating team met some of the strongest teams in the country, and came out victorious. Everything is pointing to a duplication of this record.

Library Circulation Increases In Year

The circulation of the library has had a substantial increase within the last year. This is true at the main desk, in the reserve reading room, and in the commercial and sociology departments, while the education reading room reports an increase of fifty percent of readers over last year.

The library charges out at least 5,000 books each week. The graduates are also using the library more than last year. When the new library was built, it looked as though it had been placed in an inconvenient corner of the campus. Although it has taken the students a year to become accustomed to the new arrangement, it now appears according to library officials that they are getting the "library habit." The old library was in a convenient place for everybody to approach easily when going both to and fom town.

BUS LEGISLATION OPPOSED BY PHI

First Bill Calls Forth Animated Discussion From Representatives

With three of the most interesting bills for discussion yet on its calendar, the Phi Assembly went in for some animated debating at the regular meeting Tuesday night in Assembly hall. Speaker Mayne Albright read the conditions and requirements for the Mary D. Wright debate. Other new business brought up was what time the annual Phi dance should be given this year. After discussing the matter thoroughly the assembly decided to give the dance sometime during the winter quarter. Then the discussion started for the evening after Reading Clerk McDuffie read the folowing resolutions in the order named:

Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring the resolution that all bus and transfer companies be required to build and maintain roads of their own.

Resolved: That the Phi Assembly go on record as favoring the resolution that the present high tariff is the cause of the present business depression in the United States.

Resolved: That in voting the party should be considered rather than the man.

The first resolution which was tabled from last meeting evoked much discussion. Representative Wilkinson held the floor on this bill with forceful oratory. Representative Fisher in speaking for the bill stated at the end of his argument that he was not working for the interests of the railroads when he opposed using the state highways for gross transportation of large companies' goods. Representative Douglas rose to say that in law, corporations were considered as individuals and therefore we have no right to pass legislation which entails individual rights. On account of the limited amount of time the measure had

Playmaker Board Of Trustees Meet

The Carolina Playmakers, Inc., held their annual meeting Monday afternoon in President Graham's office in South building. This corporation is a non-stock organization, charter by the state of North Carolina, acting as on advisory board of trustees to direct the activities of The Carolina Playmakers.

The aim of the corporation is as follows:

First: To encourage and promote dramatic art, especially by the production and publishing of plays.

Second: To serve as an experimental theatre for the young playwright seeking to translate in fresh dramatic forms the traditions and present-day life of people.

Third: to extend their influence in the establishment of a native theatre in other states.

The president of the corporation, Professor Frederick Koch, read a report of last year's activities. One item concerned the 72 performances of The Playmakers, played before approximately 25,000 persons.

The board passed a resolution prohibiting the use of the Playmakers theatre for any purpose other than the educational program of the University. The broadcasting of plays was also discussed, and it was agreed that the usual stage royalty should be paid by the radio station. Plans concerning the improvement of the Forest theatre were considered. Professor Koch announced, through the initiative of P. L. Burch, superintendent of grounds, that the Playmakers theatre wil be given a new coat of paint.

The folowing persons, constituting the board of trustees, were present at the meeting:

Frank Graham, president of the University; George R. Coffman, head of the English department; Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly; Elizabeth Lay Green, who wrote the Local Professors Deliver Addresses

Chapel Hill, N. C., Oct. 29.—Dr. George Howe and other members of the Latin department of the University have given addresses recently at celebrations commemorating the 2000th anniversary of the birth of Virgil.

Virgil's birthday falls on October 15, but in view of the fact that this is the 2000th anniversary, it is considered appropriate to hold the celebrations any time during the year.

Dr. Howe has delivered addresses on Virgil before the State Teachers Assembly of Alabama, the Women's College at Montgomery, Ala.; Roanoke College, and the University of Richmond. He is to speak at Salem College and at teachers' district meetings in Charlotte, Greensboro, Asheville, Raleigh, and other places. Here at the University he has read a paper on the subject before the Philological Club, and is to address the Community Club.

Other members of the Latin department who have given addresses at Virgil celebrations are Professors G. A. Harrer, J. Minor Gwynn, and P. M. Cheek.

The High School Journal has published articles by Professor Gwynn dealing with the life of Virgil, and the Classical Journal is to publish an article by Dr. Howe next month.

The October issue of the Classical Journal carries a Latin inscription in honor of Virgil which was written by Prof. M. H. Griffin, a former member of the University faculty. The inscription won the first prize in national competition.

HUTCHINS WILL SPEAK TONIGHT

Youthful University President Will Address Education Conference in Gerrard Hall.

Dr. R. M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, will address the Southern Conference on Education in Gerrard hall tonight at eight-thirty o'clock. This conference will center its attention on the subject of "Life and Work in the New South." This meeting will be open to the public.

Dr. Hutchins, who is only 31 years old, received his A. B. degree from Yale in 1921, an honorary A. M. in 1922, and L. L. B. in 1925. In 1925 he received his Ll. D. for work done in West Virginia University, Lafayette College, and Oberlin College.

He was master of English history in Lake Placid School from 1921 through 1923. From 1923 to 1927 he was secretary of Yale University, and was a lecturer in the Yale law school from 1925 to 1927. Dr. Hutchins then became acting dean and held this position until 1928 when he became dean. He was also professor of law in 1927. He has been president of the University of Chicago since 1929.

Dr. Hutchins was in the ambulance service of the United States army from 1917 to 1919, and served with the Italian army from 1918 to 1919.

Dr. Hutchins' address will be preceded by a dinner at the Carolina Inn at six o'clock at which the members of the conference will be guests of the University of North Carolina. President Frank P. Graham will welcome the members.

Infirmary List

Only two patients were on the infirmary list yesterday. Both C. F. Crum and V. L. Briggs were suffering from cold.

Speech Changed

President Graham announces that the speech of President R. M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, will be made in Gerrard hall at 8:30 P. M. Thursday, instead of at the banquet at the Carolina Inn. The transfer has been made in order that the public may have the opportunity of hearing him.

PROMINENT MEN ARE INVITED TO ADDRESS GROUP

Colonel Rees Will Deliver First Of Lecture Series Before Taylor Society.

Colonel Rees, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, will address the Taylor Society at its meeting in Bingham hall Friday night at 7 o'clock. Many prominent men have been invited to address the meetings this year. Colonel Rees is the first of these speakers.

W. F. Taylor organized the society, and after his death it was decided that the society would be named for him. Mr. Taylor was a pioneer in the work which the society does, and he did much to bring the society to its present important position.

The Taylor Society has only five chapters in colleges in the United States. The chapter at Carolina is the only one in the South and has been on the campus for three years. It has proved of great benefit to students who plan to take up a business career, for it brings them into contact with business leaders and their views upon modern problems of management.

The society has for its purpose the study of scientific management, and it attempts to improve business methods all over the world and aid the progress of scientific management. It is now in its nineteenth year of existence and has members in Europe and the United States. It deals with the problems of management in every field of business and is of paramount importance to every one interested in business and wishing to see the application of scientific methods to the problems of modern management.

Any persons interested in management is eligible for membership in the Taylor Society. Membership is by election. The Carolina chapter is open to students in the commerce and engineering schools and anyone else taking courses in management. The meetings are open to all those interested in them.

The local chapter has planned twelve or fifteen meetings for this year. "Modern Management" is the subject on which the speakers will talk. The addresses which were made last year were collected and will be published in book form by the University Press. This book will appear in a few days. The society plans to publish the addresses made this year also.

Plans For Eighth Annual Dramatic Contest Announced

Plans for the eighth annual state-wide dramatic contests, which are sponsored by the Carolina Dramatic Association and the University Bureau of Community Drama, were announced here today by Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Bureau.

Winners in the district contest will be selected to enter the Drama Tournament to be held here in connection with the Carolina Dramatic Festival on March 26, 27, 28.

Contestants throughout the State will be divided into four groups: city and private schools, county high schools, senior colleges and theatre groups having paid directors, and junior colleges and community clubs.

Crashing Gates And Reduced Rates

Some spectators were amused, others disgusted, by the successful and near successful efforts of a number of students to gain illegal admittance to the grid-graph reports of the Tennessee and Georgia games. If memory serves us correctly, the two attempts were the first in recent years of students to crash gates with the exception of the much discussed attempts on the Carolina theatre after the Tech game and at the Marine band performance last year.

Gate crashing to us is somewhat like stealing watermelons. To the thieves, stealing watermelons is just a boyish prank. To the owners of the patch it is common theft. But stealing watermelons is usually confined to rather irresponsible boys and not those supposedly of sufficient intelligence to be collegians.

Judging from reports of the Freshman Friendship Council, gate crashing would end if the admission prices were reduced. After all, that is neither for the gate crashers nor the Friendship Council to decide. Those operating the grid-graph aren't in the business for their health, nor do we think they are using the grid-graph as a means of graft. They are providing the students with a service as well as a pleasure and it's up to the students either to accept the offering or to refuse it.

Reduced rates will not prevent gate crashing. Those afflicted by the current depression or just naturally too anxious to get something for nothing aren't going to discontinue their activities because the rates have been reduced from forty cents to a quarter.

Gate crashing belongs to that past barbarous age when freshmen were subjected to hazing and Presidents to having visits from nondescript animals. And it is not to be condoned because "college boys will be rah-rah."

Stop Interferring

For a good many years now—six thousand or fifty million according to individual persuasion—man has been interferring in business not his own. He has been meddling, to be blunt. He has taken unto himself the correction of the world when it may not need his assiduous cares. Some men follow what they consider their conscientious duty and turn professional reformers. And the professional reformer is the most despicable thing that has appeared on this earth in six thousand or fifty million years.

Most men make reforming an avocation. They interfere in matters about which they know little or nothing. They try, in other words, to run the universe, forgetting that this is so complicated a universe that various jobs in it have been delegated to various men. For its athletic teams the universe has its coaches. And its coaches are experienced men, knowing exactly what they are about. And no layman, if that is the word, knows half as much. Coaches know the rules and traditions of their games infinitely better than anyone else does.

We are sorry we cannot describe those persons who criticize Coach Collins for allowing Jim Magner to play in last Saturday's game. We were never taught a word sufficiently emphatic. Some of us were glad and some of us were sorry Jim played. But some of us, thank heaven, have sense enough to know that Coach Collins is coaching, and until dismissed is the director of the team.

OPEN FORUM

FOR SUNDAY ENTERTAINMENT

Everyone deplores the local collegiate custom of a weekly exodus from the Hill, in wholesale numbers, of students released for the week-end and seeking elsewhere entertainment over the period of forty-eight hours or more. Remaining in Chapel Hill means to most of them excessive boredom, for after all students don't expect to study all the time. And when they do remain here, cries the moralist, many a Sunday afternoon is spent in idling, bull sessions, poker, and more vicious amusements. Now consider this scheme for legitimate and praiseworthy entertainment of a Sunday afternoon.

The state law prohibits the operation of a motion picture theatre on Sunday if tickets are placed on sale, though the law does not object if a theatre puts on free shows, shows to raise funds for relief purposes or for charity, or for some other enterprise held to be worthy. And here enters the idea of a kind of Theatre Guild program (of "Movies") for every Sunday afternoon. If a certain group of students, with those townspeople and members of the faculty who wish to join, should plan an organization of this sort, then there would be a regular membership, each member to join, say, at a monthly rate of $1.40 perhaps, and every Sunday there would be a matinee production for those belonging. There would be no need for tickets or commercialism of any sort; everyone entering would be required to show a card of membership, then the audience would be assembled.

The pictures selected for the program could easily be of a tone calculated to offend no one; rather, productions of an interesting and varied sort, providing not only entertainment but instruction as well. In connection with this could come changes in he conventional-program: possibly short talks, educational features, and similar additions to the main attraction. Anyway, the plans for programs to ensue could be worked out later. The important thing is for the idea to get across and begin circulating.

The plan, as sketched here, reveals itself as orderly and systematic, taxing no one's conscience either to belong or merely to condone the idea. Pleasure of a wholesome sort will be provided to serve as a check on the week-end exit of freshman and upperclassman, and finally, the dull stagnation of a Sunday afternoon will be relieved, and waiting for the night, with church, studies, and meetings will not be the bugbear of weariness that it is now.

TENTATIVE QUERY FOR HIGH SCHOOL DEBATES CHOSEN

The tentative query for the high school debates held in the state this year is "Resolved, That the United States should grant immediate independence to the Philippines."

All high schools planning to take part in this state wide debate are to turn in their names to the state committee in charge of these debates, and a schedule is to be formulated. Schools are arranged in groups of three. Triangular debates are then conducted. This system of dividing the teams in groups of three makes it easy for the best teams to be chosen in a short time.

High schools winning the first series of debates meet here at Chapel Hill for the final contest.

Evolution Teacher's Life Is Threatened

Evanston, Illinois, October 29—A father grieving over the death of his co-ed daughter several years ago, was arrested here for threatening the life of a Northwestern University professor because he taught the girl some evolutionarly theories.

Professor Ernest Laurer asked the arrest of A. J. Robinson, of Brookfield, Illinois, charging that the latter threatened to shoot him. In court here Robinson admitted that he had planned to kill the professor.

"My daughter, Roslyn, attended Professor Laurer's class in history five years ago," he said. "He taught her the theory of evolution and that changed her ideas on the whole matter of religion. She began to brood over it, and that led to a nervous breakdown and death."

After Robinson had promised to make no further attempts at molesting the professor, he was released.

Friendship Fountain Erected At McGill

Montreal, Quebec.—October 29.—(IP).—A marble fountain symbolic of the friendship of the United States for Canada, is to be unveiled on the campus of McGill University here Saturday, November 1, with elaborate ceremonies.

The fountain, designed by Gertrude Vanderbilt Whitney, is the gift of a committee of good will composed of about 100 prominent citizens of the United States, including many college presidents, business men, writers, and army and navy officers.

Miss Ellen Ballon, a McGill graduate now living in New York City, originated the idea of the gift. She is the organizer of the United States Committee of Good Will in Canada.

WAR IMMINENT IN NEAR EAST SAYS H. G. WELLS

London, England. — October 28.—(IP).—That another war will break out in the Near East within a decade is the belief of H. G. Wells, well-known English author and historian.

Speaking at a conference on "The Strategy of Peace," Wells said:

"Now is the time for men and women to organize and to tell their governments that if the governments want war, they can count them out."

Wells is not of the opinion that a memory of the horrors of the last war will influence people from entering another one.

GAINES INAUGURATED AT WASHINGTON AND LEE

Dr. Francis P. Gaines was formally invested Friday with the presidency of Washington and Lee University. The inaugural celebration, which began at 9:30 o'clock in the morning, lasted until late Friday night. The services were held in Lexington's largest building, Doremus gymnasium, which had been equipped for the occasion with a loud speaker system.

Dr. Gaines, who is the thirteenth president of the institution, formerlly held the same office at Wake Forest college. A large crowd of alumni and friends of Washington and Lee were supplemented by 141 representatives of other schools. Dr. H. L. Smith, Dr. Gaines, predecessor, also attended.

Visitors at the inauguration were also entertained by the St. Johns-Washington and Lee football game at three o'clock and by an informal dance at night.

Can Branch Repeat?

When North Carolina and Georgia Tech met last year, the game was heralded as a contest between Johnny Branch and Stumpy Thomason. Branch came off the field with all the laurels. This year Stumpy will not be there, but neither will the big Tar Heel line that cleared the way for Johnny so effectively. In other words, if Tech is without Stumpy, Carolina is without its great line, but Branch will have to do his stuff on a more individaul scale if he is to roam far and wide. Saturday's game here will tell the tale.

It is estimated that 20,000 college students will be under paddle rule this fall because they happen to be freshmen.

School-Teachers Present At Kiwanis Club Supper

The Kiwanis Club entertained the teachers of the Chapel Hill and Carrboro school systems at their regular weekly meeting in the Methodist church on Tuesday evening. The room was decorated Hallowe'en style and the members and guests were given noise making favors. The ladies of the Christian church served supper to the members and their guests. Afterward a number of stunts were carried out, among which was a mock indoor athletic meet. Following this four members of the Kiwanis Club put on a play entitled "If Men Played Cards as Women Do." John S. McDonald, of Raleigh gave a humorous talk on "Health."

The next meeting of the club will be in the Baptist church. Mr. Robert Fetzer, director of athletics, will speak.

RAIN FORCES TAR HEEL ELEVEN TO PRACTICE INDOOR

Varsity Teams Drill on Defense For Georgia Tech Plays in Dummy Scrimmage.

FINAL SCRIMMAGE TODAY

First Eleven Probably Will Be Pitted Against Reserves in Last Stiff Workout.

A steady downpour of rain throughout most of the day kept the Tar Heels indoors for practice yesterday, and the scrimmage scheduled for the first team had to be postponed. In all probability the first varsity eleven will be pitted against the reserves this afternoon in the final stiff practice session before the Georgia game.

Dummy scrimmage on defense for Golden Tornado plays kept the Tar Heel varsity busy at the Tin Can for most of the afternoon. The "iron men" walked through Tech formations and plays as the varsity practiced its defense. On the first team were: Walker and Parsley, ends; Thompson and McDade, tackles; Fysal and McIver, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarterback; Chandler and Slusser, halfbacks; and House, fullback.

The coaches are working the Tar Heels at every possible opportunity in an effort to have a smooth working and fast combination ready for Coach Bill Alexander's Golden Tornado Saturday. Practice sessions for the past few afternoons have lasted until darkness sent the team from the field, and blackboard practices and lectures are being held each morning at chapel period.

Both Carolina and Georgia Tech have met with several defeats this season, and are anxious to make up for the defeats handed them recently. Tech presents a very powerful line with two all-American tackles, Speer and Maree, but has not shown anything in the backfield so far this year. The Tar Heels are getting to be a more balanced eleven each day. A battle royal should be in store for the homecoming crowd, with these two teams expected to show best form of the season Saturday.

INTERSECTIONAL GAMES FEATURE FOOTBALL CARD

A number of important intersectional tilts will feature this week-end's grid engagements. Nebraska, one of the strongest aggregations in the mid-west, will be hard put to stop Pitt, which has been defeated only one time this season. Pennsylvania will play host to Kansas in the only other important west-east battle with Kansas favored over the Quakers.

Two southern combines, Duke and Wake Forest, will travel into northern territory to invade the camps of Villanova and Temple respectively. In both cases, the northern elevens are favored over the southerners.

Princeton and Chicago will be featured in the foremost "consolation" game of the week, both elevens meeting with a string of defeats behind them.

In southern climes, King Football will provide fans with several outstanding engagements which will reduce the field in the Southern Conference to a few contestants. Alabama will have its hands full with Kentucky, both teams having stopless records to date. Georgia and Florida, two other conference leaders will attempt to nose out each other Saturday, while Tulane is scheduled for a workout with Mississippi A. & M.

HACKMAN RUNS BALL IN TENNESSEE GAME

Buddy Hackman of the Tennessee firm of Hack and Mack knifes a nice gain through the right side of Carolina's line. Interference is about to cut down Magner (88) but House (92) is leaping forward to tackle Hackman. Blackwood (54) and Lipscomb (87) are coming up for the Tar Heels. The man just in front of Blackwood seems to run on three legs. The artist failed to "white" out the leg of the referee. Courtesy The Alumni Review

TAR HEELS POINT TO TECH CONTEST

Spend Week Perfecting Defensive Play and Ironing Out Kinks in Line.

Paying particular attention to ironing out flaws noted in their team's maneuvers under heavy fire at Tennessee last week-end, the North Carolina coaches are utilizing every resource at their command in an attempt to put the Tar Heel machine in high gear for the Georgia Tech game here Saturday.

There are reasons aplenty, if reasons be needed. The colorful Tar Heels have obliged by playing Homecoming Day bills all season. They took V. P. I., for a ride on such an occasion, but Homecoming Day bills with the mighty Georgia Bulldogs and Tennessee Vols saw the Tar Heels spanked twice. Saturday is Homecoming Day at Carolina. All the old grads will be back, yelling for victory. Carolina will be the only Big Five team in action in the State, and will play before its largest and most colorful crowd of the year. In other words, Carolina figures it's time to turn the tables and win a Homecoming Day game.

The rub comes here. Georgia Tech has a mighty line of 190 pounds, with five experienced seniors, two juniors and two former All-American tackles in Maree and Speer. Tech's foes haven't dented this line much this year, but they've been going around it. The Tech boys have been humiliated enough to make them good and sore, so they'll probably be playing top ball Saturday. And Tech playing top ball means a tough day's work for Carolina.

The Tar Heel line, tackle to tackle, showed its best of the year at Tennessee, and had real power. Coach Collins still wasn't satisfied with his end play, but Parsley and Walker looked good, and the ends are getting lots of work this week.

Poor defensive play of the backs, and lack of punch when gains meant touchdowns were the other faults Collins cited after the Tennessee game, and these phases of play are getting lots of attention this week. McCaskill, Thompson and Daniel, three promising sophomores, have been promoted to the "first 33" in place of more experienced boys who have been lagging.

Beat Two Georgia Teams In One Year? Not Being Done

North Carolina can't seem to muster enough strength to beat two of the mighty teams from Georgia in one year. Last year they beat Tech at Atlanta, but lost to Georgia in Chapel Hill. This year they lost to Georgia in Athens, and what is to happen to Tech at Chapel Hill is still a big question mark, to be settled in Kenan stadium here Saturday afternoon beginning at 2:30 o'clock.

Tar Heel Tennis Stars Fight Way To Finals In Pinehurst Tournament

Wilmer Hines and Ed Yeomans To Meet Today in Championship Deciding Match—Wright, Liskin and Hendlin Also Show Up Well in Mid-Southern Open

One upset and several hard-fought matches marked the second day's play in the Mid-Southern Open Tennis Tournament being played at Pinehurst while Wilmer Hines, Carolina sophomore and 1930 National junior champ, Ed Yeomans, senior at this school and Washington, D. C., champion, fought their way through the quarter and semi-final rounds to meet for the title. The final match will be played off today, having been postponed yesterday because of rain.

The upset of the day occurred when Phil Liskin, who the day before had eliminated Dick Covington, seeded No. 4, met and defeated his doubles partner Hinky Hendlin, seeded No. 5 in the tourney, in three sets 6-3, 2-6, 8-6. Liskin pounded Hendlin's backhand continually, and succeeded in keeping him away from the net during the first set which Liskin took at 6-3. Hendlin came back strong in the second set and rushed the net at every opportunity to take that set at 6-2. In the final chapter Liskin played carefully and kept the ball on Hendlin's backhand to run up a lead of 5-2. Hendlin then staged a beautiful rally and broke his partner's service twice to take the lead at 6-5. This extra outburst of energy was too much for Hendlin and he dropped the next three games to lose the match.

Hines then proceeded to eliminate his teammate, Captain Sonny Graham, in straight sets 7-5, 6-3. It looked as though Graham would give Hines some trouble when he ran the score up to 5-5 in the first set, but after Hines warmed up, he began smashing his forehand and backhand to the far corners of the court and took the second set without much trouble.

Ed Yeomans played excellently to trim Harvey Harris, the Raleigh wonder, in straight sets 6-0, 6-1. Harris had been expected to give him a stiff struggle, but Yeomans was going too good for him, and he annexed the match easily.

Lenoir Wright, who has been playing well of late, put another Tar Heel, Harly Shuford of the freshman team, out of the running in straight sets 6-1, 12-10. The first set went to Wright quickly, but Shuford staged a comeback in the second, and played like a house on fire. The score zig-zagged back and forth until the games were 10 all. Wright then put on some extra steam and ran out the set.

In the semi-finals match Hines trimmed Liskin in straight sets by the score of 7-5, 6-3, 6-0. The first set went to Hines after Liskin had succeeded in deucing it. With the score in the second

State Coach Looks Over Boxing Squad

Lieutenant Elms, boxing coach at State College, was in Chapel Hill Tuesday and spent some time at the Tin Can looking over the Carolina prospects and getting a general line on Conference boxing conditions. State is putting a boxing team in the field this year for the first time and Lieutenant Elms wanted to get some idea as to the type of competition his boys will run up against.

Elms stated that he had several men of better than average ability around whom to build his team. With the exception of Captain Sam Dimeo and one or two others, experienced boxers are scarce in the State camp, but a large squad is working out.

Lieutenant Elms was impressed with the looks of the Carolina squad and especially with Noah Goodridge. Goodridge went into the ring for the first time with Jimmy Gatling and showed his old time speed and cleverness throughout two fast rounds. Gatling also showed up to advantage during the workout and managed to get in some very effective blows. Platt Landis has also reported and is hard at work. He has been out hard at work.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

The game was of no importance to our nation's ten million grid fans, for it was between two high schools in a small city. However, the battle waxed heatedly, as the two teams were ancient rivals on the gridiron.

It happened in the fourth quarter. There had been no scoring, each team fighting for the aerial vantage which seemed to be the only scoring lane in the closing minutes of the game.

Team "B" was in possession of the ball on their own twenty yard line after the quarterback had received a punt and had run it out. Three plays at the line failed, and the fourth down came with a punt formation. At the far end of the field the scoreboard informed the anxious fans that there was only one minute to play. The "B's" lined up and the "A" safety man trotted back to receive the anticipated kick.

"Six-eight-seventeen-thirty-three," barked the quarterback, and the ball was snapped.

"Pass," shouted the opposing

The chaperones will be Mrs. Abby Hardy, Mrs. Ike Manning, Mrs. Gene Rose, and Mrs. Marion Saunders, Mrs. Charles Woolen, Mrs. Lee, and Mrs. Stacy.

The Order of the Grail will give a dance on November 8 after the Carolina-State game and on December 6 after the Carolina-Duke game. These dances will be held in the gymnasium. Ty Sawyer's Buccaneers will provide the music on November 8.

The Grail made every effort to secure permission for a dance Saturday night after the Tech game, but due to a precedent established by the German Club and the faculty committee, no dances may be held on the Hill after the homecoming games. The Grail has scheduled no other dances than the two mentioned above for this quarter.

The German Club will give several dances on the week-end after Thanksgiving. Weide-Meyer's orchestra will play at these dances. There will be a dance on Friday afternoon and night and on Saturday morning, afternoon and night. These are the only dances which the German Club has scheduled for this quarter.

BAILEY AND McCONNELL WILL TALK TO A. I. E. E.

The student branch of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers will meet tonight at seven fifteen in room 206 Phillips hall.

Professor N. P. Bailey will discuss the subject of "Engineering—A Profession." This talk will be of interest to students other than engineers. The second talk of the evening will be "Procedure in Hydro Station Design," by J. M. McConnell, a student here.

The members of the society were expecting a third speaker, Kendall Weisiger, assistant to the vice-president of the Southern Bell Telephone Company of Atlanta, but he is unable to be here Thursday night. However, he will speak to the students of the Taylor Society, of which the most part are engineers, Friday night at the regular meeting.

Registrar's Notice

All students who receive the marks of "W" or "X" at mid-term will find notice of this posted in the Registrar's office Monday morning, November 3rd. The mark of "W" is a warning to the student that he must improve if he is to pass the course. The mark "X" means that the work is quite deficient—very poor. The Registrar is asking that all reports posted in his office be left just as they are posted. The reports have to be used later.

Cross-Country Men Prepare For V. P. I.

The freshman cross-country squad is rapidly rounding into shape for the meet against V. P. I. tomorrow. Rainy weather at present has had no bearing on the efficiency of the team, as the daily work-outs have always been light before meets.

Due to the various time-trials, intramural contests, and the recently-run cake race, Coach Ranson has been able to get a "line" on who will compose the yearling squad which meets the Technicians from Virginia tomorrow afternoon on Emerson field. Most likely the first team will be picked from the following men: Hal Meade, E. E. MacRae, W. R. Grover, L. G. Sullivan, H. E. Vitz, J. B. Farr, A. Gabriel, D. S. Kimrey, R. W. Parker, J. Entwhistle, T. R. Kinnerly, and J. O. Zimmerman. These men are the main cogs in the yearling squad, having shown up well in the cake race, time-trials, and results of general competition held during the past weeks.

The meet with V. P. I. will be run at Emerson field at 4 p. m., the starts and finishes being "clocked" there by officials.

Coach Ranson wishes to announce that any new men desiring to try out for the freshman cross-country team will have that opportunity next week when more time-trials are to be staged

Deaths Outnumbered By Births In County

Ten births and five deaths were reported to Dr. S. A. Nathan, health officer, during September. Of these, seven of the children born were colored. The five persons who had died were all colored; two had died from pneumonia, one from tuberculosis, one from diabetes, and one from malformation.

The number of cases of diseases reported for the month of October are as follows: eleven cases of scarlet fever, ten white and one colored; three cases of diphtheria, all of whom were white; two cases of pellagra (a disease caused by a deficiency of the dietary system). These last two cases were reported from the Orange County prisoners' camp. It was proved that the two men who were suffering from pellagra had not acquired the disease at the prisoners' camp, for they had been at the camp but two days when it was discovered that they were afflicted with this disease.

The health officer states that this month he has had reported the smallest number of venereal diseases in all his experience in Chapel Hill. There were but three cases, all syphilis, one white person and two colored.

Four members of the University of Kansas 1890 football team, the first in the institution, will be special homecoming guests of the university November 7 and 8.

Sheik Pledges

Newly pledged sheiks are asked to meet Pete Gilchrist at the Zeta Psi house tonight at 7 o'clock.

Dr. English Bagby To Deliver Addresses In South Carolina

Dr. English Bagby, professor of psychology here, will deliver two lectures November fifth at the joint meeting of the South Carolina State Conference of Social Work, the Mental Hygiene Society, and the Hospital Association which will meet at Charleston the fourth, fifth, and sixth. The topic before the assembly will be that of childhood.

Bagby, in his two papers, A Primary Personality Defect and The Timid Child will undertake to show how emotional disorders of adult life result from inadequate training by parents in early life.

Bagby is going to Charleston as the result of a special request made by the Conference to President Graham asking him to send the psychologist to the meeting.

half back, fathoming the play, but too late, for a "B" end had dashed off down the field under the supposed punt to receive a long pass. The end drew out toward the side lines in a long slanting run, and the oval sailed from the hands of his quarterback across the field and into his outstretched hands. It was a sure touchdown, for the safety man was behind the end, and a clear field was in sight. The end tore down toward the goal line with the safety man gaining on him at every step. Twenty feet from the goal line, the safety man dove and hit the runner amidships. The end fell to the turf and remained there in a heap, the ball rolling out of his arms across the goal line. It had been a hard tackle and the tackler had obviously spilled the man to make him fumble.

The other members of the two teams were at the far end of the field and the two opposing players had one end to themselves. Somewhere in the recess of the stadium the quarter whistle sounded, but the fans and players were too excited to notice the signal that the game had come to an end.

There back of the goal line lay the ball within easy reach of the safety man who might have seized it and sprinted off down the field toward the enemy goal line. Without hesitation, the safety man walked over to the ball and placed it in the hands of his fallen foe, despite the fact that he was unaware that the game had ended. The stands went mad. Tar Heel Tennis Stars Fight Way to Finals in Pinehurst Tournament set at 3-3 all, Hines let loose and from that point on, all Liskin could do was watch the balls sizzling past him. Hines forehand smash was just too much for Liskin to contend with, and he spent the time during the last two sets standing flat-footed and gazing at the balls as they sped past him so quickly that he could hardly see them.

The remaining semi-finals match turned out to be a corker when Yeomans defeated Wright in four hard sets. Yeomans took the first two sets only after the greatest dificulty. Wright had set point in the first set but couldn't hold the lead, and Yeomans took that one at 10-8. The second set was even up to 4-4 when Yeomans succeeded in breaking through Wright's service and then took his own to win that set 6-4. Wright forced the play in the third stanza and ran up an early lead that was sufficient for him to take the set at 6-3. After the rest period Wright continued to take the offensive and ran up a 4-2 lead that foreboded a five set match. Yeomans recovered, however, and stormed the net at every chance that presented itself and won the next four consecutive to take the match. Wright's good playing greatly pleased Coach Kenfield who expects some excellent work from him during the next few seasons.

In the semi-finals doubles match that was completed that day, Hines and Wright ran through Graham and Shuford like water through a sieve to win the match by the score of 6-2, 6-2, 6-2. Hines and Wright synchronized as smoothly as a well-oiled machine, and the Graham-Shuford combination could do nothing against them. Every time the ball came through to Hines' forehand, the gallery would lean back, knowing that the point was as good as over already, and it was invariably right.

Yeomans and Hendlin were leading Covington and Vail one set to nothing when darkness put a halt to the playing of any more sets. They won the first set 6-1 with ease.

Better every way

The most popular ready-to-eat cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include ALL-BRAN, Corn Flakes, Rice Krispies, Wheat Krumbles and Kellogg's Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee—the coffee that lets you sleep.

THRILL to the flavor of Kellogg's Pep Bran Flakes. That's the matchless flavor that has made them known throughout the nation as better bran flakes.

GERMAN CLUB HAS ANNUAL ELECTION

Dance Leaders, Commencement Marshals and Ball Managers Are Chosen for Year.

At the annual fall meeting of the German Club of the University yesterday in Gerrard hall plans for the dances of the current school year were discussed, and dance leaders, ball managers and marshals were elected. As usual there was little interest shown, and the nominees were elected with no opposition.

Clyde Dunn was elected to lead the fall dances, with Ed Wood and Henry Anderson as assistants. The mid-winter dances will be led by Bill Dunn, assisted by Lynn Wilder and George Bagby. For the commencement ball Holmes Davis will be chief marshall. Other marshalls will be Tom Alexander, Bill Draper, Ed Yarborough, Harry Finch, Tom Shelton, Pat Tillery, and Branch Carr. The commencement ball managers will be Cooper Person, chief, George Moody, Art Sickles, George Thompson, Willis Henderson, Joe Eagles, Alston Watkins, and Beekman Huger.

Immediately following the general meting, the sophomores and juniors members met separately to formulate plans for their class dances. Bobby Carmichael was elected to lead the sophomore dance, and Arlindo Cate and Herb Newcombe were named as assistants. The juniors elected Bill Bridgers to lead their dance with Walter Crouch and Steve Lynch to assist him. The sophomore and junior dances will be held during the fall and mid-winter sets respectively.

Country Club Gives Hallowe'en Dance

The annual Hallowe'en dance of the local country club was held Wednesday night in the club house from nine to twelve. Music for the occasion was furnished by the Stringfellow orchestra. The affair was attended by approximately seventy-five members, one of the largest crowds in the past few years.

The hall was decorated with corn shocks to give the appearance of harvest-time. A scheme was aranged so that the light in the hall would blink at regular intervals.

Immediately following the intermission a grand-march was held with all couples taking part.

Refreshments consisted of apple cider and doughnuts. Mrs. Harold S. Dyer was in charge of the entertainment, assisted by Mrs. Ernest Mackie and Mrs. J. Fred Dashiell.

Professor Studies Foreign Protozoa

Word has been received from Dr. C. Dale Beers, A. B. 1921, A. M. 1922, associate prefessor of zoology, who is spending the year at the Kaiser Wilhelm Institute for Research in Biology at Berlin.

Dr. Beers is studying the life cycles of certain protozoa. He carried with him certain uncommon, and predatory American protozoa which he reports are as easily fed with the smaller German forms at home with American animalcules.

Carroll To Meet Freshmen

Dean Carroll will meet the freshmen of the school of commerce in 103 Bingham hall this morning.

Cheerio Rehearsal

The students who have tickets in Section 19, rows A through N will report to Kenan stadium today at 3:30. If those students wish to retain their seats, they will have to report at the stadium. There will be a short workout with the cheerleaders.

VANDALS INJURE LIBRARY OBJECTS

Books and Magazines Are Marked, Deleted, and Stolen.

There seems to have been a good deal of misuse of books in the main library of the University. C. J. McHail, a member of the library staff, has some interesting example of mistreatment of books in the library. A book of English Drama, written by Nathaniel Lee and published in 1733, had a complete play torn out of it. This book was valuable, but now the value is somewhat lessened. It is evident that there are some people who don't like either detective stories or the University library. Here is a quotation which had been typewritten on the title-page, "This is a hell of a detective story book. It is a mystery to me how anyone could go wild over it. The University library is not worth a tinker's dam though."

Some of the folks who don't like books have a sense of humor, however, according to C. J. McHail of the library. Some students borrowed a book entitled Traveling Through Asia. When the book was returned, this addition had been inked after the title, "on a Mule." Rafael Sabatini"s Carolinian had so many pages torn from it that it had to be discarded. Then there are the persons who like to underscore and underline statements in books. Such people will sometimes ruin a book by making marks on practically every page.

The books which contain handsome plates and engravings are often minus the plates or engravings on being retured to the library. Then there is the problem of those books which are considered "hot" or "daring." These books are usually stolen, if they are not closely watched. Even reference books are not immune from mutilation. Certain volumes of encyclopedias have been badly marked.

Magazines are taken from the reading room and articles are clipped from them. According to several people in the student body it is quite correct to form a personal library from the books which can be stolen from the University.

BYRD FILM FEATURES BENEFIT PERFORMANCE

Under the auspices of the Leonidas Pope chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy a return showing of the Admiral Byrd film taken in the antarctic regions, "With Byrd At The South Pole," will be featured at the Carolina theatre on Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock. The admision is free, but a collection will be taken up to aid in forming a scholarship for some worthy high school graduate of 1931.

The members of the local chapter are also giving a Hallowe'en festival at the Tin Can tonight, to aid them in raising funds for this purpose.

PLAYMAKER CASTING ANTICS ARE SOURCE OF AMUSEMENT FOR ALL

Prof's Puns, Selden's Golden Voice, Prospective Algernons and Jacks, Peculiar English Accents, Together With Nervous Freshmen Awed by Sacred Playmakers Considered Great Fun by Spectators.

By F. Otto James

With all due respect to, and reverence for the fine work that Prof. Koch and his associates, Mr. Selden and Mr. Westerman' are doing at the Playmaker theatre, students who wish to see an as-yet-unexploited, entertinging, extra-curricula activity are uregd to be present hereafter at the try-outs for the plays.

Last Wednesday night, all the aspiring dramatic renderes into North Carolinian of fine old British dramas were on hand—most of them with that sinking feeling at the pit of the stomach, which comes to each and every one of us, while a few were wrapped in the beautiful sheath of self-confidence and knowledge that comes only with experience as a former Playmaker, or a graduate student in English. Many of them there were too, who patiently waiting their turn, tried to appear unconcerned and used to it all, as they nervously fingered the pledge pins on their coat lapels, and dreamt longingly of those first nights when the Tobaccoville High School Dramatic Association's presentation of "Come out of the Kitchen" was applauded as the finest ever seen in Pristine county . . .

After a delightful reading of part of the first scene by "Prof", the real business of finding players for the roles of Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" began. Although many had come there, not more than half present arose when Mr. Selden in a golden voice requested all those who were embryonic Algernons or Jacks (leading male characters), to please form a line against the wall. Perhaps it was Mr. Koch's interpretation of the last word in the decadent drama of the "fin de siecle" that caused a sort of withdrawal, or thinning of the ranks, for while only one young hopeful inquired of the Tar Heel's learned reporter just what this play was about, there were probably others who could not but feel great consternation when they heard a reading of a very, sophisticated, witty, "ultra-ultra" play, of the most affected and pseudo-aesthetic high society in England during the last years of what Leon Daudet called "that terrible 19th century." After all, the Carolina Playmakers are famed

EHRINGHAUS TO ADDRESS RALLY

Orange County Democrats Meet In Pickwick Theatre Saturday Night.

Preparations for the monster Democratic rally to be held here at eight o'clock Saturday night, November 1, in the old Pickwick theatre building are about complete, Ray Farris, field secretary of the Young People's Democratic League of North Carolina, said yesterday. Mr. J. C. B. Ehringhaus, prominent Democratic leader and an alumnus of the University, will deliver the principal address.

Ehringhaus is an able and eloquent speaker, and Farris is planning to have as many students as possible who are eligible to vote attend the meeting. The speaker has been active in support of Josiah W. Bailey, Democratic senatorial candidate, during this campaign and has drawn large audiences wherever he has spoken. Farris states that Ehringhaus will not speak at length but will make his talk brief and direct. The topic of his speech has not been announced but he is expected to discuss the record of the present Republican administration and of the Republican party in general.

Farris is endeavoring to awaken on the campus a sense of political consciousness which, according to the former student body president, is sadly lacking. He urgently requests that all interested students attend the rally, for an interesting program has been arranged.

High Point College To Have New Head

Dr. G. I. Humphreys will be inaugurated as president of High Point College on November 15. Professor H. V. Wilson, member of the National Academy of Sciences and of the National Research Council, has recently been placed on the executive committee of the Biology and Agriculture division of the Council.

PLAYMAKER CAST IS SELECTED FOR NEW PRODUCTION

The cast for the Carolina Playmakers' second production of the year, which is to be Oscar Wilde's highly amusing comedy of London society, "The Importance of Being Earnest," was selected last night following try-outs for the parts.

The play will be producted in the theatre on the evenings of December 11, 12, and 13.

The cast selected is strictly tentative and subject to changes within the period of the first few rehearsals: Algernon, Mr. Barnes and Mr. Figgat; Jack, Mr. Wood; Gwendolyn, Miss Stewart; Cecily, Miss Daniel; Miss Prism, Miss Hudson; Rev. Canon Chasuble, Mr. Herman and Mr. Loy; Lady Bracknell, Miss Crook and Miss Jones; Lane, Mr. Oettinger; Merrimon, Mr. Grotyohann.

A guest performance will be given the members of the Educational Association Saturday evening. Two plays, "Git Up and Bar The Door," and "Cloey," which comprise part of the first bill of the Playmakers' 1930-31 schedule, will be presented. They will be officially presented next week on the evenings of November 6, 7, and 8.

If people were unable to make applications, in spite of the announcement that the house is full, Dr. Dyer says that Mr. Eigenschenk, who will play the organ on Friday and Saturday, will give a third performance on Sunday afternoon, in the event that there shall be applications to the excess of the capacity for the first two days.

Welcome, Educators

The Daily Tar Heel takes this opportunity of welcoming to the University the delegates to the Southern Conference on Education which was formally opened here last evening. We feel that the University is exceptionally fortunate in having this session held here—especially so since the public has been invited to hear the chief speakers scheduled.

We would like also to congratulate the conference's program committee in providing so distinguished a gathering of platform speakers. The men who are scheduled are indeed outstanding in their respective fields: Robert M. Hutchins in law and education; Reinhold Neibuhr in philosophy and theology; R. I. Rees in business and finance; Frank Graham and Edward H. Reisner in education.

It is seldom that conferences of such importance are held here. Certainly few conferences have presented the opportunities to the student and interested onlooker which this conference presents. We hope not only that the meetings will be successfu for the delegates in attendance, but that Carolina students will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear some of the leading men of the nation voice their opinions on some important problems.—B. Wake in The Fall

Once upon a time the Irish had a custom that seemed incongruous to the critical. But it was picturesque to the sympathetic. It was a natural outgrowth of the much-to-be-envied Celtic nature that can never take itself too seriously. But now the practice has hidden in a hole in the ground, and the Irish must take death as the rest of the world.

The Irish "wake" was the reaction of a race of "Pats" who thrived on disaster and made a celebration of every calamity. It was the practice they had of feasting, singing, getting thoroughly drunk while they sat up with a corpse. They were so wedded to the idea that sometimes they wanted an excuse for a wake when they had no corpse. An altruist would volunteer and play the part until his thirst became unbearable.

A wake wasn't gruesome. It was fantastic—as fantastic as the island's Little People, who have also gone into a hole in the ground. We regret its passing.

But yesterday a flight of fancy carried up away and brought us to an idea, perhaps a farfetched idea. But it is too much trouble to be sensible all the time. We seemed to see a wake in the fall in Chapel Hill. The summer is dead. But the earth refuses to take the fact very seriously. It celebrates a prolonged wake. The leaves celebrate. But then when the end approaches, they fall, thoroughly drunk. And the wake ends in a lifeless, bitter, morning-afterness.—V. A. D.

The Question

What do you think of the plans now being considered to establish Sunday movies at Chapel Hill and to use the receipts of these presentations to create student loan funds?

J. C. Williams, educaton student: "The establishment of Sunday movies in Chapel Hill would solve the week-end amusement problem of the student body and, at the same time, accelerate the realization of their greatest need at present—loan funds."

Dr. E. C. Metzenthin, professor of German: "As every day is, or should be, 'The Lord's Day' and since 'The Sabbath was made for man', I should have no objection to Sunday afternoon movies, provided that they are of the better, higher and cleaner type."

Ralph Westerman, instructor of English, business manager of Carolina Playmakers: "The plan to establish Sunday movies of the unusual type is a most excellent one, especially if the proceeds are to be used to create a student loan fund."

Moore Bryson, 206 graduate dormitory, law student: "Sunday afternoons for the past six years have been the bane of my existence. I had to resort to study last Sunday to keep from being bored to death. Needless to say, I favor the proposition no matter in what manner the funds are spent."

* * *

Dr. George Fenley, professor of French: "I am not in favor of Sunday movies at Chapel Hill. Many students attend the cinema at least three or four times a week and Sunday performances merely provide another day for such dull entertainment. The present plan of giving French quizzes to all students absent from classes on Friday or Monday has helped maintain an unusually good attendance record for this department. A quiet walk to any part of Chapel Hill or the surrounding country would undoubtedly prove more beneficial than a crowded theatre."

Playmaker Casting Antics Are Source Of Amusement To All

throughout the state for their faithful, and soulful depicting of the life and linguistics on (a) the tenant farm in the eastern section (b) the miyountaineers of the western part, and (c) the colorful negroes of all sections. Thus it is quite easily understood why there were several dismayed and disappointed young freshmen who preferred to stay out in front as observers—their carefully prepared, but charmingly natural peculiarities of speech, able steps to the lead in another "No 'Count Boy," 'or "Fixin's" would enable them to take no role, but that of "the sound of horse and carriage driving up to the roadway is heard."

However, not all the natural character actors were discouraged from making the attempt. Many a pleasant Greensboro, Sanford or down-Asheville way accent were heard reading, in their breathless way, the leisurely lines of Algernon, strongly concerned with the facts of his cucumber-sandwiches, and busy rolling forth wit-icisms and puns along with advice to the lovelorn. And not only Southern voices were among those on the stage—quite a few were there who had the epitomy of all that is Wildian say "opportoonity," for what in English is "opportunity"—in short they were immediately branded as Northerners. But one aspirant defied detection as to his place of origin. With all the gestures and grace of an experienced "trouper," this gentlemen spoke in a clear-cut English English, only occasionaly lapsing off into sheer Americanisms, but practice will iron out the errors. We feel he is being seriously considered.

Thus the evening went. With new Algernons and Jacks replacing each other as the long line of hopefuls continued to be mowed down by the genteel tappings of Mr. Seldon's pencil and his strident announcements of names. The committee of Messrs. Koch and Westerman appeared interested, and took down the names of the actors as they read their trial lines, and checked and crossed or whatever they did to indicate their opinions. Soon the leading character-fillers were gone and the lesser roles and the feminine parts were to be tried for. The same process went on—of lines being read in widely different manners and accents and intonations.

The sport of the onlookers continued. Their comments, their sneering undertones as they rudely remarked upon the brazeness of that funny-looking girl to apply for a part, or the foolhardiness of the canine-like male who felt that he was made for English drawing rooms of the Burne-Jones period, were all unheard and did not offend the ears of any, but they gave those who would act, but are too diffident, or too wise to do so, too conscious of their shortcomings, a fine opportunity to compensate for their failings. This is wherein does lie the great sport of attending the try-outs—to all those who secertly would love to play at being clever in front of a background of the luxuriant and artistic and appreciative London or New York—to those who often dream, and there are hundreds on the campus, of swaggering across the stage of the renovated Playmaker theatre, uttering lines with an understanding and expression that will be remembered as long as Professor Koch's name is associated with the Carolina Playmakers—to those who in their most shy and gentle exteriors hide the throbbing passions of a Romeo who never fails for words, to all of these and to many more, there is a veritable gold-mine of fascinating moments at the Playmakers. For each time that you wished you were a splendiferous, fantastic character behind the footlights, you can say to yourself at the try-outs that those here, applying for the job are not half as good as you could be—their voices, their tones, their gestures—all are wrong and amateurish; you know how they are to be played!

But there is more than that to attract the heretofore unattracted student—there are the puns of "Prof," those awful ones with which he interpolates his readings, as he did Wednesday night. He, and he alone will be responsible for such things as "Algernon is a Wilde young man." There are those perhaps who would feel their amusement marred by such witticisms—let them be comforted with the thought that they occur very infrequently.

Walker Bolsters End Strength

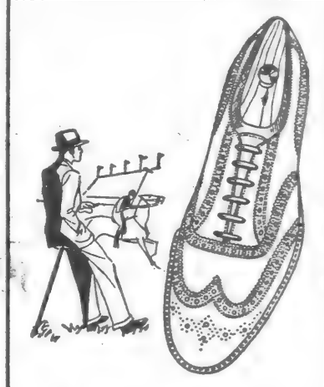
Erwin Walker, promising sophomore end at Carolina, who has been out all season because of a broken wrist, broke into action against Tennessee Saturday and played a heads-up charging game. All of which means Coach Collins will have another end on whom to rely for strength against Georgia Tech here tomorrow.

Carolina Centers Strong for Tech

Fine play by Carolina's two centers was one of the big reasons North Carolina's rookie line joined Alabama's mighties in holding Tennessee to one touchdown, and it looks as if the Tar Heels Lipscomb and Gilbreath will be a big source of power against Georgia Tech here tomorrow.

Coach Picks Subs Wisely

Substituting players at the right moment seems to be an art with Head Coach Chuck Collins, grooming Carolina for a tough home game with Georgia Tech here Saturday. Against Tennessee, Collins sent Gilbreath in for Lipscomb at center, and on the first play thereafter Gilbreath recovered a fumble. Again, he sent McCaskill in for House at fullback, and on the first play following, McCaskill intercepted a Vol pass.



Midnight Show Tonight

A special midnight performance will be shown at the Carolina theatre tonight. The feature attraction is "The Rampant Age," starring James Murray, and is different from the regular Friday picture, which is Nancy Carroll in "Laughter." The doors will open at 11:30, and the film will begin at 11:45.

Big Pep Meeting At Davie Poplar Tonight

Large Crowd Expected To Attend Rally With Good Program Planned

VARSITY RUNNING ATTACK GOOD IN HARD SCRIMMAGE

"Stubby" Rives and Others to Speak Briefly at Meeting Tonight.

By K. C. Ramsay

Everything is in readiness for one of the largest and peppiest pep meetings ever held in University history tonight, when old grads, townspeople and students asemble under Davie Poplar at 7:30 o'clock. Plans are complete for a brief and interesting program.

The University band will start the meeting with several selections, and the cheerleaders will lead the assemblage in Carolina yells during the meeting. General Albert L. Cox, Judge E. E. "Scrubby" Rives and Norman Boren, all former Carolina cheerleaders and now prominent men in the state, will be present at the pep rally and will make short talks.

Coach Chuck Collins and the whole football squad will attend the meeting. Coach Collins is expected to have something to say about the game, and Captain Strud Nash and others on the team probably will talk briefly.

Alumni are expected to start pouring into the "hill town" late this afternoon to join in with the students in this large open air meeting. Billy Arthur and his assistant cheerleaders have been working hard to get things in readiness for the meeting, and several new yells will be used in addition to the old ones. "Hark the Sound," of course, will be sung tonight, and "Rah, Carolina-lina" which was so popular at games a few years back also will be sung tonight.

In the event that the pep meeting is rained out it will be held in Gerrard hall at 9:30 P. M. instead of under Davie Paplar at 7:30.

Varsity Looking Good

The first team yesterday afternoon looked better in practice than it has in some time. A large part of the afternoon was spent with the first eleven on defense. The reserves, running Georgia Tech plays, were unable to make more than two or three yards through the line or around ends at most, and usually were thrown for losses. Pass defense was not up to par at the beginning of the practice, but showed improvement as the scrimmage progressed. Tackling yesterday afternoon was very good with three or four men nailing the ball carrier each time.

Offensive work for the regulars was very good also. The line opened up wide holes in the reserves defense for the fast charging backs to drive through. Rip Slusser, Johnny Branch, Henry House and Stuart Chand-

Nash In Form

The return of Captain Strud Nash to heavy togs from light uniform has helped to boost Tar Heel hopes for tomorrow's engagement with the "Ramblin' Wreck." Nash was confined to light work following an injury to his ankle sustained in the Carolina-Vol game at Knoxville last Saturday.

JOHNSON LOST TO FOOTBALL TEAM

Third Time This Season That Casualties Have Hit Left End Position.

Larry Johnson is lost to the football team for the rest of the year because of deficiencies in his work. The Southern Conference athletic ruling requires that to be eligible for athletics one must be taking twelve hours work. Johnson is now registered for only two courses or ten hours, and is therefore ineligible. Johnson was regular left end on the football team, and has shown up well in Carolina's games played so far. His work in the V. P. I. game was particularly outstanding.

His loss to the team is keenly felt since this is the third time this year that outstanding left ends have been lost to the squad. Herb Nelson is still in a Durham hospital as a result of severe stomach trouble. Irwin Walker broke his arm just above the wrist before the Wake Forest game and has only recently been able to return to the lineup. Walker probably will start at left end against Georgia Tech tomorrow.

ROCKNE NOT CONCERNED WITH FOOTBALL TITLE

The nation's gridiron champs in 1929, and acknowledged possessors of similar honors for several years, Notre Dame will lay no special claim to the title this year, acorcding to Coach Knute Rockne, in stating that his team will not consider post-season games. The supremacy of the South Bend eleven has been established heretofore by several intersectional games at the conclusion of the regular grid season. It was understood that officials of Fordham were negotiating with the Notre Dame mentor to arrange for a post season game, in a challange to what claims Rockne's eleven may make for the mythical title.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

Jack Bessen

Volumes have been written about the "freedom of the press," but when this right is used for other than informatory purposes, something should be done about it. This is referring to what the Raleigh Times has done, when it suddenly came out with a bitter and uncalled for personal attack on Coach Collins and Jim Magner, concerning the suspension of the latter from the football team for breaking training. The Times implied that Magner was not suspended for smoking a cigarette, but for being drunk, and Collins was censured for conveniently putting it under "breaking training." All this was done without the presentation of any verification or proof that Magner was "tanked," and it is obvious that through cheap sensationalism, the Times is probably trying to establish their paper throughout the various sections of the state, outside of the limits of Raleigh. If this stunt has done anything, it has disgusted Carolina students and Carolina football followers with the attitude of the Raleigh paper.

There are only a few men in Chapel Hill that are being paid for running Tar Heel teams and none of them apear on the staff of the Raleigh Times, though one would think that by the way the Times has been telling Coach Collins how to run the team, there is some close connection between the two. If Collins saw fit to put in Magner in the Tennessee game, it is nobody's business but his own. There is no use in "cutting off your nose to spite your face;" Carolina had a good chance to defeat the Vols and with Magner in the lineup, these chances were enhanced. Magner showed well enough that he was sorry for breaking training by paying his own expenses to Knoxville and apologizing to the coach, and after all, that was the main purpose of Collin's action. The Times should apologize to both Magner and Collins and then let the matter drop.

Yale seems to be the hotbed of Eastern football this year, for already there have been arguments over two major games played in the Yale Bowl. Earlier in the season Georgia claimed that one of the Yale scores was illegal, because a son of Eli picked up a fumble and ran for a touchdown. And now Yale has come out with an announcement that the Army score was illegal because an Army player pushed his halfback over the final mark; according to Yale, the score should have been 7-0 with Yale on the long end. However, the New Haven school had good enough sportsmanship not to protest the decision and will accept it as is. Well, we'll be ready for another argument concerning the score after the Yale-Dartmouth game Saturday.

Cadets To Be Ushers

Saturday morning Swain Hall will be the host of about fifty or sixty Oak Ridge cadets who will act as ushers at the Georgia Tech-Carolina game that afternoon. The cadets will be given lunch between 11:00 and 11:30 so that they can be on duty early.

Carolina And V. P. I. Cross-County Team Will Meet Here Today

Five Mile Varsity Run To Begin at Emerson Field at Three O'clock—Freshmen to Compete First Over Three Mile Course

The cross-country meet with V. P. I. will start at 3 P. M. from Emerson field today. The freshmen teams will compete first, getting off a few minutes in advance of the varsity men. The distance for the freshmen will be between three and four miles, and the varsity distance will be an even five miles, the same route being used as was used in 1927 and 1929. The annual Southern Conference Cross-country Meet will be run over this same course November 22.

The varsity team will most likely be picked from the following men: Baucom, Caudle, Farris, Hubbard, Hunsen, Pratt, Watkins, Hunter, Jones, Lumpkin, Petty, Sieder, Thomas, and Hawley, with the first eight men probably starting the meet. The men who are not used in the meet are to be run over the same course in a time-trial.

The freshman team will be picked from Meade, MacRae, Grover, Sullivan, Vitz, Farr, Gabriel, Kimrey and Parker. Like the varsity men, who do not participate in the meet, the freshmen, who do not run against V. P. I. will engage in a time-trial run over the same course.

The V. P. I. team got in last night, and are staying at the Field House down at the stadium until time for the meet to begin.

Last year the boys from Blacksburg defeated Carolina in a dual meet, the scores for the varsity being V. P. I. 24 to 32 for the Blue, and freshmen V. P. I. 26 to 30 for U. N. C. The laurels were carried off by Miles and Palmer of V. P. I., who finished together to place first and second, and Captain Baucom of Carolina who placed third. The V. P. I. men are optimistic in regard to the meet this afternoon, and expect to repeat their performance of last year.

Carolina, State Frosh Grid Teams Play Here

Close Battle Is Expected on Emerson Field This Afternoon.

After several changes had been made, the game between the freshman teams of Carolina and State will be played on Emerson field this afternoon at three o'clock. The Wolflets will have a strong team to oppose the Tar Babies, and a hard-fought and exciting game is anticipated.

The Tar Baby squad had a snappy workout yesterday afternoon and is ready for the game. There will be several new faces in the lineup today due to injuries to regulars and to the fact that some of the other boys have been showing fight and ability. It is uncertain whether Brandt, end, will be able to play on account of his shoulder or not. The line will be strengthened by the return of Parker, hefty center, who has been out due to a sprained wrist. The other linemen to start will probably be Tatum and Mulligan, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards, and two ends picked from C. M. Jones, Adaire, Harrington, Frankel, Brandt, and Townshend. Jones and Townshend have been improving rapidly and this couple may start the game. The backfield will probably show Hackney, fullback; Phipps and Whitener, halfbacks; and Jones, quarterback. Whitener, former Oak Ridge flash, has been doing some very consistent ground-gaining of late and rates a chance to start. Woolen and Priest will share the quarterback duties with Jones, and Cox also may see action in this position before the game is over. Shore, big guard, will see plenty of action today. He is fast and a fighter, and this combination is what is needed in a guard. Strickland, tackle, will get into the tussle also. Peacock, a back from

TECHMEN BOAST POWERFUL LINE

The much-improved and splendid play of the Carolina line against Tennessee, continued in scrimmage yesterday, gives promise that there may be a feature battle between two massive, powerful, and stout-hearted lines when Georgia Tech brings the "Ramblin' Wreck" to Chapel Hill to celebrate Carolina's homecoming day Saturday.

No one can deny that potential greatness isn't written all over the face of Bill Alexander's husky forward wall.

Maree and Speer at tackle are former all-American players, both over 205 pounds. Jones and Herron are fast, capable ends of 170 pounds. Edwards and Brooke are charging guards averaging 180, and Farmer is a mighty center of 194 pounds.

Tech's line averages 188 pounds, and in the way of experience, five of the stalwarts are seniors with a background of three years at Tech, two are juniors, and there isn't an untried sophomore in sight.

Carolina's 182-pound rookie line "arrived" last Saturday, if one judge from the praise bestowed by spectators at the Carolina-Tennessee game.

The last time Georgia Tech invaded North Carolina's stadium, the invaders beat Carolina 20-7.

Former Carolina Track Man to Be Spare Time Coach in Fall Practice.

The coaching staff of the fall track squad has been fortunate in obtaining the services of R. L. Ranson who will assist in the fall work by handling the coaching of the pole vault and high jump. The new coach has had a great deal of experience in these two events and was a member of the University of North Carolina track teams of 1922-24. During his college track career he set a new record in the pole vault.

Coach Dale Ranson has the following schedule for all members of the fall track squad:

DUKE MENTOR IS HEARD ON RADIO SPORTS PROGRAM

Collins Thinks Carolina Offense Has Improved Notably as Defense Changes Little.

Chuch Collins in the position of lead speaker on the B. C. Sports Revue program, which is broadcast each Wednesday evening over radio station W. P. T. F. in Raleigh between 7:30 and 8:00 P. M., introduced the Duke mentor, Coach DeHart, over the air. Last night DeHart conversed on the merits of the Duke team, and its chances against Kentucky on November 8. The Blue Devil coach warned Chuck Collins that he was pointing for the game with U. N. C. as well as for the Kentucky tilt, and that he was going to try to leave Duke with a schedule of victories of which its alumni would be proud.

"Red" Davis, captain of the Duke team, spoke briefly on his team's chances to overwhelm Kentucky when the boys from the "Blue Grass" state journey to the "Friendly City" next week.

Collins next persuaded Bill Cerney, backfield coach of the University of North Carolina football squad ,to say a few words in regard to the merits of the Georgia Tech football team. Having scouted the Tulane-Tech game in Atlanta last Saturday, Cerney had a few remarks to make on the strength of the next opponents of Carolina. He was certain that Bill Alexander's team has not hit its stride except one time this year, whipping South Carolina by a convincing score, and that is due for a strong comeback. Earl Dunlap, Tech's versatile quarter, is the main cog in Alexander's grid machine, and is bound to "get going" against the Tar Heels tomorrow. The 190 pound fullback, Cane, is nick-named "Sugar," but Cerney says that his cognomen should be "Hurri" Cane, as he is deadly on line plunges and sweeping end-runs. With these two star backfield performers, and a great line built around the All-Americans Speer, and Jones, Cerney seems to think that the U. N. C. team will have its hands full stopping the terrific onslaught which is to be brought to the Hill tomorrow by Georgia Tech. Tech's line weighs 190 pounds per man, while the Tar Heel line tops the scale at 178 per each. Tech's paper advantage as regards weight in the line is 12 pounds for each man.

As everyone seemed to be anxious to hear what Collins had to say about the progress of the Tar Heels up-to-date, he supplied the information. The Carolina offense has improved 100 percent, but defense is far below par, Collins said. The Tar Heels showed a drive and punch at Knoxville which made the Carolina enthusiasts think that the tide had turned in their favor; but when the Bulldogs crushed the Heels down at Athens, well, the Blue and White boys looked as if they were sick according to the coach.

With the explanation of what a team should do to keep in training, and the work of a cooperating team all through the year, Chuck brought the program to a close.

It is understood that "Doc" Sermon, new head coach of the N. C. State Wolfpack, and Captain Mack Stout, of the State team, will be the speakers on the program next Wednesday evening.

HAMLET HI GRID PROSPECTS GOOD

From the eastern half of the class 'B' high school football teams comes the news that Hamlet High School has one of the best teams in the championship race.

The "Sandhill" boys have won every game they have played so far this year, routing Monroe 33-0, Laurinburg 32-0, Candor 33-0, Presbyterian Junior College at Maxton, N. C., 7-6, and the snappy Lumberton aggregation 6-0.

The well-balanced line, and adept backfield of the eleven put them among the best as regards the rating of class B teams in the eastern part of the state. Hamlet drew a bye at the high school athletic meeting in Raleigh last Tuesday, where the different officials met to map out a schedule for class B teams in the east.

ler were in the backfield and all four of them ripped off nice gains. Slusser got loose onte for sixty yards.

In line play the best showings were made by Ned Lipscomb, who got tackle after tackle, George Thompson and Bob Blackwood.

The lineup for the the first team showed: Walker and Parsley, ends; Thompson and McDade, tackles; Blackwood and Fysal, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarterback; Chandler and Slusser, halfbacks; and House, fullback.

The reserve lineup included: Grindstaff, Tabb, Cozart and Cole, ends; Rose, and Smith tackles; Herkimer, Kerr and Oliverio, guards; Koehl, center; Ferebee, quarter; Croom, White, Frazier and Lassister, halves; and Houston and McNeill, fullbacks.

After the first team retired a second eleven replaced them and showed up very well. Johnny Daniel and Magner were the best ball carriers for this outfit. On this eleven were: Davis and Bridgers, ends; Crew and Cowper, tackles; McIver and Newcombe, guards; Allen, center; Moore, quarter; Daniel and Magner, halves; and K. Thompson, fullback.

Only Twenty-Five Teams Have Clear Records To Date

New York, Oct. 28.—The nation's list of unbeaten and untied football teams has been reduced to 25.

Clemson, North Dakota and Oklahoma City University head the list, each having won six games. Fordham alone has not been scored on.

Dartmouth has the most imposing scoring record in winning five games without a defeat or a tie, and rolling up a total of 232 points to their opponents, two. Clemson is second on the scoring list with 195 points and Cornell is third with 186.

Morning Matinee

The Carolina theatre will have a morning matinee, beginning at 10:30, of its Saturday attraction, Wheeler and Woolsey in "Half Shot at Sunrise," instead of the usual afternoon showing.

DEBATING TEAMS VISIT NEW YORK

German and English Debaters See the Sights of America's Largest City.

The four foreign university debating teams who are to meet the debaters of more than a hundred American Colleges under the auspices of the N. S. F. A. arrived in New York recently, and collected a few hasty impressions before starting on their tour. The members of the four teams, representing Cambridge University, the National Union of English Students, the Scottish Universities Association, and the National Union of Students of Germany, met each other and some of the American hosts at a tea given by the English-Speaking Union. One member of the Scottish team assured his social success by appearing in kilts, which he intends to wear throughout his tour. The members of the German and the English teams saw their first American football game between New York University and the University of Missouri. They expressed the opinion that the game was "intricate and rough," but cheered vigorously for Missouri, the losing team, none the less. Wall Street, the skyscrapers, and the movies claimed their time for the rest of their brief stay in New York.

The German team asked to see "All Quiet on the Western Front," with which they were much impressed. The war scenes themselves were very true and vivid, they declared, but they thought the scenes in which the German soldiers marched off to war were exaggerated in their gayety and bravado. This movie, incidentally, is to be made available to the N. S. F. A. after 1932 through an arrangement with the producer, Carl Laemmle.

The British debaters were much interested in seeing The Green Pastures which has been barred in London because the diety is represented on the stage. Mr. Elletson of the English Universities team was surprised, he said, by the great similarity in atmosphere between New York and London. The most striking difference that he noticed was the faster pace and efficiency of New York and the more cosmopolitan aspect of its people.

After their brief glimpse of New York, the teams have now started on their American tour. The first debate was held on October 21st, with Bates College, over the National Broadcasting Co. The Scottish team attacked the proposition that "Thrift is not a virtue." Radio audiences all over the United States heard this debate.

Totten Addresses The Garden Club

The Garden Club met Tuesday afternoon in the east parlor of the Methodist church with Mrs. L. A. Koontz in charge of the program.

Dr. H. R. Totten of the University botany department talked to the group about his trip to California this summer, discussing the trees and shrubs he saw along the way.

The club will meet again November 25 at 3:30 in Davie hall. Miss Alma Holland will have charge of the program.

Will Have Chance To Beat Georgia Tech on Home Field

Carolina's victory in Atlanta served to erase a bit of the sting, but Georgia Tech must be beaten on Carolina's home field before the Tar Heels can rest easy and forget 1928. Carolina gets its chance Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock when Tech comes to Kenan Stadium to play its second game of history on North Carolina soil.

Sophomore Back Threats

Jap Hart, 165-pound halfback, and Tom Cain, 190-pound fullback, are two sophomore backs whom Carolina will be watching mighty closely when Georgia Tech brings the 1930 edition of the famous "Ramblin Wreck" to Chapel Hill next Saturday. Hart, who runs like Carolina's Johnny Branch in a broken field, has been doing prodigious things all season, and Cain has been busting lines right and left.

Investigation carried on by Louis I. Dublin, statistician for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, has led to the discovery that college-bred men live longer on the average than other men.

The workout yesterday consisted of a snappy signal drill, then some of the scrubs scrimmaged the varsity scrubs. The freshman coaches are trying to get more snap and co-operation into the plays so that a smooth running offense would be ready to tackle State today.

LEGAL SYSTEMS ARE DISCUSSED BY LAW SCHOOL

Seminar in Administration of Justice Meets for First Time This Year.

In France a lawyer who lies for his client is expelled from the bar; in England if he doesn't collect his fee before trial he cannot sue a delinquent client; and a French married woman may not enter the profession without the consent of her husband—these and other equally foreign customs of foreign countries came to light, last Thursday at 10:30 a. m., when the class in administration of justice in the law school held its first meeting to discuss "Classes in the Legal Profession."

This class is conducted as a seminar, the raculty members participating with the students in the discussion. This is the second year the course has been held for the discussion of present day problems in judicial administration.

Types of specialization in England were discussed by L. J. Giles, Jr. and Allen L. Augston who explained the respective spheres of the barristers who have no contact with the client and may not solicit business even from a solicitor, but who may frequently charge "refreshers" to stimulate their lagging interest in a case, and the solicitors who correspond to our office lawyers and who itemize their bills, listing even letters written, every stamp used and each conference had.

How far the English system of classes has been transplanted throughout the empire was discussed by J. M. Wright, who said that in Canada the dictinction between barristers and solicitors was merely nominal and in the process of obliteration. In Australia, according to Wright, the bar is very thoroughly organized and except for the fact that barristers, after an employment by a solicitor, may talk with the client is similiar to that

NEW DIRECTORY IS DISTRIBUTED

Book Published by Y. M. C. A. Is Not "Who's Who" But "Who's Where."

The student directory of the university for 1930-31 came off the press yesterday.

The book is not a "Who's Who," but simply a "Who's Where," an abbreviated directory and not a catalogue.

The directory was being distributed last night, free of charge, a copy to every dormitory room, every fraternity house, every office on the campus, every home in town, and to every place of business. On request a copy will also be furnished any individual who may need one for continued use. Yesterday it was distributed over the campus.

The University Y. M. C. A. publishes the directory annually and a master directory is maintained at the "Y" office, corrected throughout the year. If any errors or omissions are discovered they should be reported to the Y. M. C. A. office and the correction supplied. When one is unable to get the desired information from the new booklet, the master directory may be consulted at the "Y" office.

Three Hundred Enjoy Phi Beta Phi Dance

The Gorgon's Head lodge was the scene last night of one of the most enjoyable dances of the season when the Pi Beta Phi sorority entertained at their first dance of the year. The large ballroom was artistically decorated with corn stalks and pumpkins which lent much atmosphere to the occasion and carried out the spirit of fall and Hallowe'en. The Carolina Buccaneers directed by Ty Sawyer furnished music for the event which was enjoyed by nearly three hundred invited guests in addition to a large number of returning alumnae and out-of-town visitors present.

The chaperones for the occasion were: Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Caldwell, Mrs. M. H. Stacy, Mrs. Irene F. Lee, Mrs. Ike Manning, Mrs. Charles Woollen, Mrs. Maryon Saunders, Mrs. Abbie Harding, and Mrs. Gene Rose.

DEAN GIVES SAGE ADVICE TO FROSH

Student's Chief Concern Is To Be Crusader for Right, Dr. Hobbs Asserts.

Dean A. W. Hobbs of the liberal arts school spoke to the freshmen at chapel in regard to the advantages that should be derived from college.

The chief concern of a student, he stated, is in nature and in preparing himself to be a student crusader for the right. Maturity of thought and a manlike behavior is especially desirable for perfection.

The dean said that he thought the only remedy for the depression of today is the growth of the desire for proper training and preparation now on the part of the statesmen and business men of tomorrow. Regardless of the dogmas that each may hold in a religious way, he stated that the basic principle back of all religion is the welfare and betterment of the human race, a factor which never has been carried over to any extent into the conduct of government. The principle that has been worked on is a continual tearing down for the benefit of the present age. The future must be taken into consideration before an economic perfectness can be established.

His final advice to the first year men was to caution them against vanity and the slip into mediocrity. He told them to work and make their education really count for something in after life.

CHI PHIS TO GIVE DANCE IN DURHAM

The alumni of the Chi Phi social fraternity will give a dance to their pledges at the Forest Hills tea room tonight from 6 to 8:30 o'clock. Jelly Leftwich and his orchestra will furnish the music for the occasion.

All of the members of the Georgia Tech who will be present for the game have been invited to attend the dance, and quite a large crowd is expected. For the past several years, Chi Phi pledges have been given an annual dance.

Chaperons for the dance will be Mr. and Mrs. Lee Richardson, Dr. and Mrs. C. T. Haywood, Jr., Mrs. Victor Humphreys, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Young, and Mr. and Mrs. Maryon Saunders.

Various Aspects Of Southern Life Cited Before Conference

Various aspects of social and economic changes in the South were cited here yesterday in papers presented before the third annual Southern Conference on Education now in session at the University.

Based on several years of research, the papers were presented by members of the staff of the University Institute for research in social science. Their reports occupied the major portion of the second day's program.

The Conference, which opened Thursday night, with an address by President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, is being attended by leading educators from all sections of the South.

Dr. E. C. Branson, of the University of North Carolina, presided over the opening session yesterday.

A report of "Human Aspects of the Georgraphy of the American South" was made by Dr. Lee M. Brooks of the University, who read a paper prepared by Dr. Rupert Vance, of the University, who was unable to be present on account of illness.

Dividing the South into six distinct regions Dr. Vance's paper referred to them as "variously emerging from different stages of frontier and decadent economy, facing various phases of advancing industrialism."

It was pointed out that "the Cotton Belt, strong hold of the South, and the Piney Woods with turpentine and timber stands transformed into unwanted cut-over lands remain the South's two problematic zones. Industrial superstructures in the Southwest based on gas and oil and in the Piedmont Crescent based on coal, iron, tobacco, furniture, textiles and bound together by power lines furnish the South's most coherent approaches to modern industrial culture. Conquest and near conquest of hookworm and malaria with readjustment in the ill-chosen diet of the southern common man (of which pellagra is an index) will do much to remove handicaps once regarded as inherent in the southern climate."

"Georgraphy," he concluded, "however, offers one factor of superlative importance that may be regarded as not subject to change by man. Let us talk of the weather. At least one industrious student has assigned the South a low rank in civilization and accounted for the status on the basis of sub-tropic climate. Changes are possible, however, in adjustment to climate and it is notable that many southern deficiencies and inadequacies find climate a secondary rather than a primary factor. The handicaps of the South are not inherent in the geographic or biological scheme of things. They are incidental and may be overcome."

"The South's industrial problems which now agitate the entire country cannot be successfully served on the basis of the small snapshot views of detached segments of the contemporary scene," Dr. Clarence Heer of the institute said in duscussing "Incomes and Wages in the South." The ratio of agricultural wage earners to all others was three to one in the South as compared to a ratio of one to two in the rest of the country, he pointed out.

"That the situation in southern agriculture is a basic factor in causing the income and wage disparities between the South and the rest of the country become increasingly clear when wage rates in specific non-agricultural employments are compared. It is in the unskilled occupations capable of being filled by raw recruits from the farm that wage differential between the South and the rest of the country reaches its maximum.

"Specifically, the wages paid common laborers in the South range from 50 to 65 per cent of the average for similar classes of workers in other parts of the country. In semi-skilled employments, the range of southern wages seems to run from 65 to 85 per cent of the wages in comparable employments elsewhere. In the case of skilled mechanics, the disparity between the South and the rest of the country appears to reach its minimum, southern wage rates representing from 75 to 100 per cent of the corresponding wage rates obtaining outside of the South."

"In semi-skilled occupations, which are less immediately affected by the competition of the problems of southern agriculture and if they are to be solved they must necessarily be solved together."

Dr. T. J. Woofter, Jr., of the institute, ascribed the difficulties of cooperative marketing in the South to tenancy, the high proportion of negro farmers, dependence upon merchant credit and its resulting dumping, overproduction, and the lack of technical knowledge of market peculiarities of southern crops.

"All these problems have confronted southern cooperatives and they now have ten years'

DEPRESSION CAN BE REMEDIED BY MORE EDUCATION

Obligations, Opportunities, Necessities of Education Are Great, Hutchins Asserts.

President Robert M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago, spoke in Gerrard hall Thursday evening before the educational conference and the students on the situation education confronts today. He related his section of the country to this by remarking the business depression, and then related the depression to education. Why has education not prevented it, the speaker queried? But incompetence has caused it, an incompetence that has half the world starving to obtain what the other half is starving to dispose of.

He found the answer to be more education, and found the "obligations, opportunities, and necessities" of education greater than ever before. A study of contemporary life is a new solution.

And then Dr. Hutchins spoke for more embracing study and for the overcoming of the intense specialization that separates a teacher from a teacher and a student from an education. Scholarship will be less a matter of sitting in an armchair and of writing scholarly journels. It will no longer be a thing apart, unrelated to the world.

People have more leisure than they have ever had before. England will probably emerge with a more civilized working class than she has ever had before, but adult education has never been popular in this country. Extension work must be made a regular part of the university services, not an after thought by the professor who must live, according to Hutchins.

College work must cease to be a matter hours of work done and number of credits received. An adding machine has no place in deciding whether a student is graduated or not. A would-be research student must not be obliged to spend his enthusiasm on routine work which bores him.

Dr. Hutchins "University of Utopia" would have entrance into the college and promotion from it depend on the individual student and not on an adding machine. But more money and more academic freedom are essential, he declares.

UNIVERSITY NOT FULLY AWARE OF ITS OBLIGATION

Declares Dodd in Four-Division Address, Gerrard Hall, Friday Evening

Dr. William E. Dodd of the University of Chicago spoke Friday evening in Gerrard hall on "The University and the Public" in a four division address. In the beginning, he stated that the university as a part of the democratic and social system of the United States is not entirely safe ground. It is not fully aware of its social obligation to the public. The whole world will soon be ranged against the United States because of her policy of abandoning all cooperation with the world.

The university is the only national hope that can change the tone of the country's foreign policy. After the Franco-Prussian war Germany adopted much the same policy toward outsiders without, however, totally isolating herself. The professors were unable to rise above the national error. "Vital blunders in social policy of foreign relations lead to catastrophe." But professors and universities are valuable only when the people profit by them. And the common man is not interested in the "support of prigs."

In the second division of his speech, Dr. Dodd considered the make-up of the universities. There are more than a million students in the country, on whom a billion dollars is spent yearly. The buildings are masterpieces of architecture, but what are the students in the buildings like? The majority cannot study deeply, and the "majority sets the tone." Many of the students, unable to stand alone, enter clubs. In these clubs, anybody who studies is a grind; anybody who thinks, a Bolshevik. The club group is a third. Another third is too aware of the discrimination to concentrate. The other third, self-help students, are too over-worked to study. The billion dollars a year goes to a small minority: the tenth

'BULL CITY' FIRE LOSS IS $300,000

Million Pounds of Tobacco, Property of American Tobacco Company, Is Burned.

The large storage warehouse of the American Tobacco Company on Morehead Avenue in Durham, was totally destroyed by a fire of undetermined origin, early yesterday afternoon. This is the most disastrous fire in recent years to occur in this section of the state.

More than 1,100,000 pounds of tobacco and a large quantity of packing supplies were lost in the blaze. Eight negro houses adjoining the property were destroyed in the fire.

Two negro children who were locked in one of the houses while their parents went to work were reported to have lost their lives in the conflagration. A search is being conducted to recover their bodies.

On account of high voltage wires near the scene of the burning structure, power lines had to be cut off for two hours, leaving the entire city without power.

The loss was estimated to be well in excess of $300,000.

Assorted Education.

Skeptics who doubt the interest of students in things other than football games during the fall quarter will do well to examine the programs of the present week-end. The Southern Conference on Education opened here Thursday evening with an address by President R. M. Hutchins of the University of Chicago. This afternoon Carolina's homecoming game will be played with Georgia Tech.

Gerrard hall was packed despite the bad weather for President Hutchins' address. Many students attended and many others sought entrance but were turned away when theydiscovered the hall already filled. This afternoon practically every student here will be somewhere in Kenan Stadium.

To youth President Hutchins represents the personification of achievement. Despite his youth he was made the president of the University of Chicago. He has succeeded in his chosen field.

The players this afternon represent those who have been successful in their efforts to make the varsity. They too have succeeded. And it is because they have achieved that we wish to see what they have to offer.

Youth demands success of its idols and it will accept no substitute. Witness the crowds which pack a stadium when Notre Dame plays and those which attend games played between losing teams. Compare the audiences of President Hutchins and those of a lesser figure. Youth pays homage to those who deliver the goods.

CHIPS Off the Old "BLOCK"

By Moore Bryson

I'm all a twitter. Just a few more hours until the big game when the Alma Mater will defend her name and the sons of the Alma Mater shall defend the title conferred on them by Grantland Rice last year. There should be big things doing in our little town on Saturday. From all indications, there will be girls galore on the campus, and the alumni, of course, will make their usual contributions to the Fun Fund.

Someone has suggested that instead of a "Speak—Greet—Meet Week" that we have a "Say, 'Hay, Hay,' Day." I assume no responsibility for this offering, however.

Now that rushing is a thing of the past, it seems that the Shieks, Bulls, and Thirteens should be allowed to discard their distinctive attire. Who ever heard of an Indian continuing to wear his war-paint for days after the battle had been fought.

Speaking of war-paint. An otherwise gloomy morning was made cheerful for me, when on my way to an eight-thirty I passed a flock of co-eds freshly painted for the day's work. Even an old grouch, such as myself, could not resist a smile at such a pleasant sight.

I can't see any reason for all this rumpus about Jim Magner. W. O. Puckett, zoologist, tells the story of a famous Davidson back, Jack Black, who used to go around end for ten yards or more while smoking a cigarette. But, then, that is his story.

Dropped by the Playmaker Theatre last night to watch the try-outs for "The Importance of Being Earnest." J. W. Grotyohann was still trying out for every male character. He should be able to write a play on "The Importance of Being Persistent."

Which reminds me, that if a few more complications arise, I will be able to write on "The Importance of Being Frank."

One fraternity was continuing to rush a certain boy after pledge day. The boy told them that his father was coming down for the Georgia-Tech week-end and would look over the frats rushing his little darling at that time. The above referred to fraternity immediately stopped rushing said freshman. They knew their home-coming week-ends.

A law student of checker fame confided that his interest in a certain young lady was purely "paternal."

Well, I must be on my way if I am to get in training for the Georgia-Tech game.

Here is an "absent-minded professor" story that I have just heard: Dr. Paine, of the English department, walked into a class the other morning with an arm full of books and notes. After getting the desk arranged he proceeded to read his notes for about fifteen minutes before a snicker from the front row called him to a halt. Glancing up, he discovered to his chagrin that he was lecturing to the wrong class. He was just an hour to early.

There are 160 students taking psychology this quarter. About 160 more are expected for the winter quarter, which will make a total of approximately ten per cent of the student body who are taking psychology.

student, who is educated, and the hundredth, who thinks.

Besides the club life, there is the athletic life. Dr. Dodd would not condemn athletics, but he will leave to the imagination the reactions and the attitudes of scholars in universties where far more money is spent for athletics than for professors' salaries.

In the third part of his talk, Dr. Dodd pointed out that every society must have in it one infallible group, or individual. Jefferson tried to halo the president. Marshall made the court the last stronghold of truth. But political bosses and their "social cousins, the industrialists-on-the make" have discredited the courts by the control of appointments.

And now the "life-long devotees of truth in the university faculties" bid fair to be the new infallibles. But they must have freedom of research, press, and speech. By that Dr. Dodd explained that he did not mean a freakish fredom needing no defense. He meant, rather, the right of history to write and speak the truth freely, north and south, about the evolution of the country.

Too heavy a load is on the president's office. He must conciliate alumni, supervise faculty, stimulate students, pacify trustees, and sit in the box on a cold November day to watch a game. He should insure freedom of research to professors. And the supporters of the university should be glad enough to pay the teachers well.

The university should be the last resort in industrial and social distress.

In the fourth division of his address, Dr. Dodd outlined another way in which the universities may serve the nation, and even the world. They may discourage race hatreds. The national period in American history is over. But the United States is now, and has been for the last decade, the greatest hindrance to international progress. The scholars, by wider travel, most serious study of the lessons of the past, and by a more vigorous application of their sense of humor may overcome the evil. Freedom of study is essential. The universities must "make clear the menace of hyper-nationalism."

of England.

The avoues, the solicitors of France, the avocats, the French barristers, who can speak to clients in their own homes and who are the only ones who may address a judge with their hats on, were discussed by W. W. Johnson. He also explained the organization of the bar in Germany where a man is twenty-seven or twenty-eight years old before he can begin the practice for himself, and in Russia where each court controls its own bar. The practice in Russia to-day, Johnson states, is almost criminal due to the abolition of private property.

E. M. Perkins discussed the functional divisions in the United States bar which, because of the economic situation and practical philosophy of frontier days did not adopt the English classification. He also discussed the types of law schools in this country.

Proposals for a junior bar—a plan for a probationary preiod for young lawyers before they are permanently licensed to practice—was discussed by R. M. Gray, who outlined and defended the plan with much vigor. His report suggested that for two years while the young lawyer engaged in the regular practice that he be required to keep a detailed diary and be under the supervision of a committee of the bar who would report upon his fitness and character at the end of that period. Upon the basis of this report the court would determine whether to grant a final and permanent license to practice.

experience in dealing with them," he concluded. "Educational institutions, especially the colleges of agriculture, have been of great service to the movement in research and in leadership. From the present indications this field of service can be greatly expanded in the future."

VARIED PROGRAM GIVEN AT HALLOWE'EN FROLIC

The Hallowe'en Festival sponsored by the Leonidas Polk chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy was held in the Tin Can last night at 8:30 o'clock. Dr. W. S. Bernard was master of ceremonies.

A playlet was presented by two of Miss Ernestine Reynold's pupils, Billy Thompson and Ruth Ellen Andrews. Following this, O. F. Richardson sang. There was tap dancing by Miss Ellen Stewart, and a number of pieces were played on the mouth organ by R. B. House. In addition to these stunts there was a balloon contest. Two orthree fortune tellers were present. Music was furnished by the Carolinians.

An admission charge of thirty-five cents was made, and the money will be used for the scholarship which the chapter will give beginning in 1931 to a high school student chosen by a competitive examination.

Harrelson Visits

Colonel J. W. Harrelson, director of the Department of Conservation and Development at Raleigh was in Chapel Hill last evening to attend the dinner of the Southern Conference on Education at the Carolin Inn and to visit the offices of the Department of Conservation and Development here.

The department here is the Water Resources Division of the main department at Raleigh. Thorndyke Saville, professor of sanitary engineering, is the head of the local division.

New University To Be Without Rules

A new university, to be known as "The Institute of Advanced Study" and to begin its existence with a $5,000,000 endowment from Louis Bemberger and his sister, Mrs. Felix Fuid, will be organized as a college virtually without rules, according to Dr. Abraham Flexner, director.

Extra-curricular activities, athletics, and similar elements of college life will be barred from the campus of the new university, and every effort will be turned toward establishing a school of the highest rank. Only professors of ability and reputation will be employed, but all teachers will receive remuneration more than commensurate with the importance of their positions. Faculty members are to co-operate in the management of the school and occupy positions on the board of trustees.

Wrong Man

Billy Arthur walked across the field at the stadium yesterday afternoon while the Georgia Tech team was practicing. From a reliable source it has been learned that one of the Tech players exclaimed, "There goes Johnny Branch."

Wake Forest Coach Kidnaped And Sent To Philly By Plane

When "Pat" Miller, head football coach at Wake Forest, stayed over Thursday to make apologies in chapel assembly for critical remarks that he had made concerning the athletic administration at the institution, instead of going to Philadelphia with his team, the students kidnaped him, packed him into an airplane and sent him off to beat the football team to the "City of Brotherly Love," by one hour.

So, Miller directed his boys in their final night workout before the game with Temple University. He was intending originally to leave Wake Forest, after the chapel talk, and to meet the team on the field for the game last night. But the students met Wednesday night, collected $105 as airplane fare, forgave the coach for his remarks, and rushed him off Thursday with cheers and songs in his honor.

Left end seems to have a jinx on it this year. First Herb Nelson became ill, then Erwin Walker broke his wrist, Al Cole was then suspended for reasons known to every one, and now Larry Johnson has gone on a vacation (enforced) from the ill-fated position. We hate to think what'll happen next, with the season only half over.

In Asheville, on the way to Knoxville, while the team was going for its work-out at Asheville School, the car in which McIver, Wyrick and several others were riding collided with a truck which decided to turn left suddenly. Wyrick bumped his head, and McIver hurt his knee, but the car got decidedly the worst of the deal. It's a wonder the train didn't run off the track.

Local High School Takes Subscription For Injured Player

The Chapel Hill high school is trying to raise money by a subscription to take care of the operating and hospital expenses of Paul Pendergraft, star center of the high school football team. Contributions are being received from many different sources.

Pendergraft was seriously injured in the game with Apex high school last Friday, when he suffered a blow in the abdomen while making a tackle. He was carried to Watts Hospital in Durham and was operated on Saturday morning.

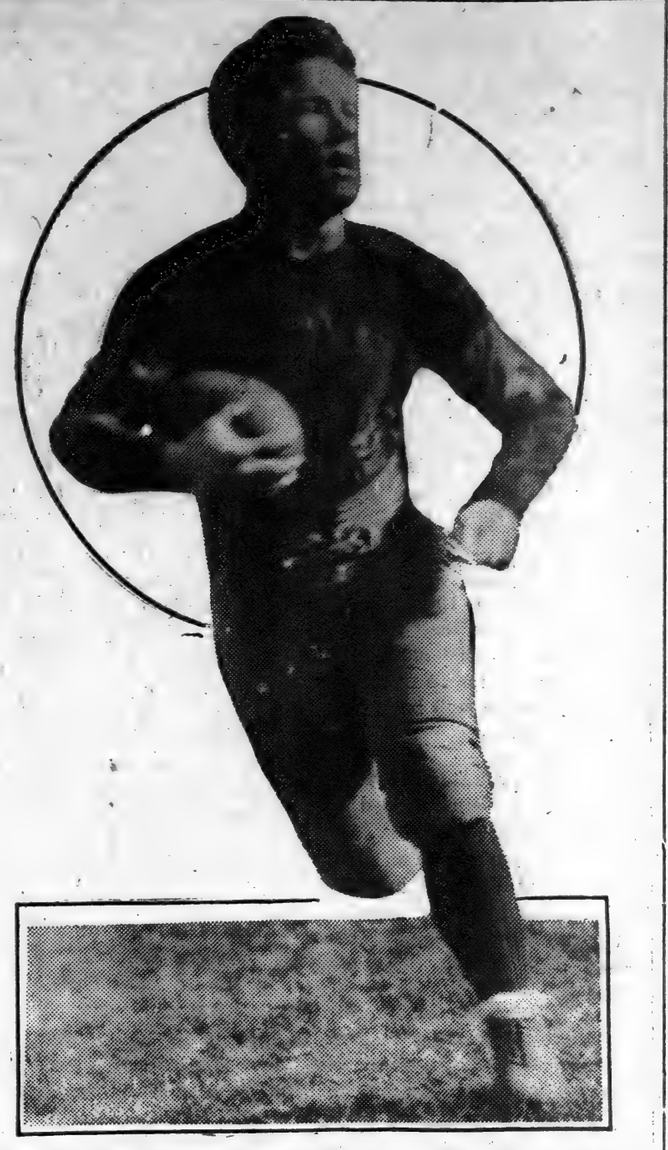
A big pep meeting, many "bull sessions" as to the outcome of the game between alumni and students, and a large crowd at a midnight movie indicated last night that the village is prepared for the big homecoming game in Kenan stadium this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock between the football teams of the University of North Carolina and Georgia School of Technology. Advance reserved seat sales last night had passed the 15,000 mark, and with good football weather promised by the weather bureau, a crowd of over 20,000 is expected to see the game.

The Georgia Tech football team arrived in Durham yesterday morning and went to the Washington-Duke hotel, where they will make their headquarters while in North Carolina. Coach Bill Alexander, a squad of 28 men and team managers made the trip.

Tech Team Heavy

The invading team came to Chapel Hill early yesterday afternoon and took a light workout in Kenan Stadium, placing emphasis on drills in running signals, returning kick-offs and setting-up exercises. The Tech team is considerably heavier than the Tar Heels, outweighing them some five pounds per man. The Yellow Jackets are in good shape for the game, however, Earl Dunlap, captain of the team was declared not to be in the pink of condition.



The Tar Heels took the field after Tech retired, and went through setting-up exercises, signal drills and kick-off returns. The squad is in A-1 shape for the game, Captain Strud Nash, the only man on the injured list, being pronounced ready. The left end position, however, is causing Coach Collins no little worry, since Larry Johnson is definitely out of the game because of scholastic difficulties. Erwin Walker is expected to start in his place, but Archie Davis and Nichols probably will see action before the game is over.

Close Game Expected

Opinion around the village as to the outcome of the game runs any where from a two touchdown victory for Tech to an 18-point margin for the Tar Heels, but the general opinion

WILL HE 'OUT STUMP' THEM AGAIN?

After Carolina defeated Georgia Tech at Atlanta last year 18-7, Johnny Branch was said to have "out-stumped" Stumpy Thomason and the rest of the Golden Tornado. Will he "out-stump" Tech again today?

Carolina Harriers Win From Gobblers By 27-29

Even Count for Defeat Handed Them by V. P. I. Team Last Year.

FROSH TEAMS TIE 28 TO 28

On a very cold, fair, windy afternoon which suddenly enveloped Chapel Hill, the Carolina harriers came back yesterday to avenge defeat at the hands of V. P. I. last year, and won the varsity cross-country meet by 27-29, the low score winning, The freshmen of the institutions seemed to be evenly matched, as their contest resulted in a 28-28 tie.

Miles, of V. P. I. who won the meet last year, again repeated his performance by coming in ahead of the field. His time for the even five mile varsity course was 27.34. Captain Baucom, of Carolina followed closely on the heels of the Virginian to place second, his time being 27.53. Placing third was Elder of V. P. I., his time was 27.57. Georgia Tech and North Carolina go to the mat here today in a death struggle for victory. Both teams have had their ups and downs this season with the Tar Heels having a slightly better record. Carolina's line has improved very much since the Georgia game, and if they play as they did against Tennessee today, they will win. The Tar Heels have a big edge in the backfield, although Captain Earl Dunlap of Tech is a fine, all-round back. It is significant to note that the Yellow Jackets are strongest in the line where Collins' men are weakest. No other team in the South can surpass

TAR HEEL STARS WIN MATCHES IN PINEHURST MEET

Wilmer Hines and Lenoir Wright Capture Mid-South Doubles Title.

HINES WINS SINGLES

Carolina Number One Star Defeats Ed Yeomans for Singles Championship.

Wilmer Hines, national junior champ and flashy Carolina sophomore, annexed the Mid-Southern title at Pinehurst Thursday when he defeated Ed. Yeomans, national parks doubles champ and a senior in the University, in three sets 7-5, 8-6, 6-2. The match was one of the most thrilling contests ever seen on the Pinehurst courts, and both men played an exceptionally high brand of tennis for college circles.

Yeomans started off in a whirl and played brilliantly to take the first three games before Hines could do a thing to stop him. Yeomans was hitting every backhand and forehand shot with all his strength, and nothing went out of bounds. Hines then came back and took the next two games. Yeomans retaliated by taking a 5-3 lead. Yeomans then lost his golden opportunity by dropping his serve twice in a row and losing the set 7-5.

In the second set, Hines decided to take the offensive and by dint of hard pounding at Yeoman's backhand earned a 4-1 lead. Yeomans, with his back to the wall, fought desperately and evened the score at 5-5. With the score at 6-6, Hines smashed Yeoman's service to pieces, and then took his own to win the set at 8-6.

Hines, always a slow starter, hit his game in the final set and couldn't miss a ball. His backhand and forehand shots tore down the side lines and across court where Yeomans couldn't touch them. He ran up a lead of 4-0, Yeomans got two games, and Hines then took two more to win the set at 6-2.

Both Hines and Yeomans are to be congratulated for their fine playing. If these two men and Bitsy Grant continue their good playing, and if Captain Graham, Wright, Liskin, Hendlin, and Abels continue to improve their game, a team will be chosen from this material next spring that should make tennis history for Carolina.

Hines and Wright then won the doubles title by gaining a hard five set victory over Yeomans and Hendlin by the score of 6-2, 3-6, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3. The score itself does not give an indication of the closeness of the match, as every game was close and in doubt until the final point.

The sophomore combination got off to a good start by taking the first set 6-2. Yeomans and Hendlin came back at them with a 6-2 victory in the second set. Hines and Wright began bearing down and stormed the net continually to take the third stanza at 6-3. After the rest period, Yeomans and Hendlin

N. C. State Freshmen Defeat Tar Baby Team On Grid By 12-7 Score

Carolina Yearlings Come Back in Second Half After Being Held Scoreless.

BOTH TEAMS FIGHT HARD

Offensive Play Was Ragged for Both Teams But Defenses Were Strong.

By Claiborn Carr

Yesterday the Tar Babies went down to defeat at the hands of the N. C. State Wolflets by the score of 12-7. The game was a very hard fought, rough, and exciting one from beginning to end. The feeling between the players was at a high pitch several times as there were quite a number of attempts to start a fist fight. However, this was caused by the closeness of the game and after the game was over the members of both teams forgot all their grudges and congratulated each other on the game. All of State's scoring came in the second quarter, so the score was 12-0 at the end of the half. Carolina came back strong in the third quarter and put over a score, the extra point coming as a result of State's offside. In the final quarter the Tar Babies put on another advance that carried the ball to the State three yard line where the Wolflets held for two downs and then kicked out.

The first quarter was clearly a Carolina period. Most of the playing was done in State territory. Several passes thrown by Phipps were completed and State held on her fifteen yard line. Then later in the period Carolina again worked the ball down to the seventeen yard stripe only to have a penalty of offside set them back. The period ended with the ball on the State twenty yard line.

The second quarter was all in favor of State. They played rings around the Tar Babies. The Carolina team seemed to be coasting along on the beginning they had made. This proved fatal for the home team, for the scrappy State eleven went to work and scored two touchdowns before the Tar Babies woke up to the fact that they were being out-fought and outplayed in every part of the game. But it was too late; the game had been won, and the State team deserves much credit for its work.

After the half the Carolina team came back with renewed vigor. Perhaps Coach Enright told them in the intermission that they were asleep on their feet, and were being too polite out there on the field instead of fighting as their opponents were. Whatever he said it did the work and the rest of the game was filled with one Carolina advance after the other. Hackney, Carolina back, ran forty yards for the score in the third period, after catching a pass from Woollen. The game see-sawed back and forth with Carolina having the best of the argument. A kick that went out of bounds on the State five yard line paved the way for the Carolina score. Woollen made the kick.

Carolina continued its good play into the fourth quarter, and it was in this quarter that they almost knotted the score, and, but for the wonderful defensive work of Utley, Wolflet center, the game would have been Carolina's. Hackney failed to gain on the three yard line and after State kicked, the game ended with the ball in State's possession in the middle of the field.

The State line was their main stronghold and the Tar Baby forward wall could not seem to open holes for their backs. The opposing line played very well. Utley, red-headed center, was the star of the Wolflets. Bohannen, halfback for State, intercepted a Carolina pass and ran seventy yards to put his team in line for their second score. McQuage, also of the State backfield, got off some nice punts, and especially one which was good for about seventy yards.

The Carolina line, led by captain-elect McIver, played well despite what has been said. George Barclay was in on every play and is to be plaised for the game he turned in. Parker, Tatum, Shore, and Jones all played a whale of a defensive game, but the whole line seemed unable to clear the State line out. In the backfield, Norman Hackney excelled with his hard line plunging. Walter Jones also go off some nice gains, and best of all he was in there giving all he had the whole time that he played. Phipps and Whitener also played well. Alex Weisker had a streak of hard luck. He went in on two separate occasions and both times received injuries to his leg. He is a fast and enthusiastic back and his injuries will undoubtedly hurt the team.

GOLDEN TORNADO TO SWEEP UPON STADIUM TODAY

Georgia Tech's Team Is Stinging Under 28-0 Defeat By Tulane.

Storm warnings have been sent out from the Georgia School of Technology for Chapel Hill and vicinity. The Golden Tornado is gathering force and strength as it sweeps up the South Atlantic states, and should be blowing a stiff gale by the time it strikes Kenan Stadium this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Stinging under a 28-0 defeat as result of Tulane's tidal wave last week, the Yellow Jackets are going to make a great effort to get back in the win column at the expense of the Tar Heels.

Georgia Tech has a heavy fighting line. Veteran football observers claim that Tech's line is not as bad as it looked against Tulane. In the center of the line Alexander has a heavy center named Farmer; he is the successor of last year's captain, Rusk. Flanking Farmer are Edwards and Brooke at left and right guards respectively. Edwards is a two hundred pound sophomore and Brooke is playing his last year at the Flats. At the tackle posts, the Yellow Jackets present the finest pair of tackles in he south. Vance Maree and "Fat" Speer need no introduction to Carolina fans. Both of these boys tip the scales at two hundred pounds apiece. It is a mansized task to keep these chaps from breaking through the line on offense or defense. At left end is the veteran Tom Jones. Georgia, with Maffet and Smith, is the only team in the conference with a better wingman than Jones. He is a great pass receiver, and goes down fast under punts. At the other flank position is "Red" Herron, who is playing his second year of varsity football.

In the backfield Tech is led by the experienced quarter and captain, Earl Dunlap; he is the only surviving backfield member of Tech's 1928 champions. Captain Dunlap is fine passer, field general, and punter. Bob Hart and "Pat" Barron are the halfbacks. Barron is the brother of the famous "Red" Barron, star back at Tech several seasons ago. Tommy "Sugar" Cain is the plunging fullback on the team. This boy played a nice defensive game against Auburn and Tulane. Coach Alexander has plenty of line and backfield reserve.

The Yellow Jackets were hit hard by graduation last year when they lost "Stumpy" Thomason and Warner Mizell from their backfield. In the line they lost Captain Rusk, center, Joe Westbrook, guard, and Bob Brennon, tackle. In spite of all these heavy losses, Alexander and his assistants will present a scrappy victory-hungry team here Saturday. The Techmen have not forgotten that it was North Carolina who started them on the downgrade last year, and they will be out for revenge.

GAMES YESTERDAY

Zeta Psis Win Tie

Although held to a 6-6 tie, the Zeta Psi tag football team defeated the Chi Psis by a score of 5-3 in first downs in the only game of the afternoon yesterday. The teams were fairly evenly matched as is indicated by the score.

Betas Win by Forfeit

Phi Delta Theta forfeited to Beta Theta Pi in the tag football league yesterday afternoon.

Double Forfeit

The game scheduled between Graham and Old East was declared a double forfeit as neither team appeared.

Postponements

The following games scheduled for yesterday were postponed until a later date: Delta Kappa Epsilon vs. Phi Gamma Delta; Pi Kappa Phi vs. Chi Phi; and Old West vs. Manly.

T. E. P. Beats Z. B. T.

Tau Epsilon Phi continued its march toward the championship by defeating the "Zebes" 13-0 Thursday. The passing combination of Hirsch to Eisner was too much for the Z. B. T. bunch to overcome. Eisner tallied twice, once on a short pass and another time on an intercepted pass and a sixty yard run. Hirsch also clicked off some nice gains. Abrams and Weil starred for the losers.

Lewis Swamps Everett

A smartly playing Lewis team overwhelmed Everett Thursday by the score of 21-0. A safety, and touchdowns by Griffin, Franci, and Waldo made up Lewis' total. Everett played the game under protest, claiming that Crutchfield, who rooms in Everett, played for Lewis.

Aycock Upset 7-0

The Question Marks provided one of the upsets in the football league when they took the measure of Aycock's strong outfit, 7-0. The winners scored the lone marker in the final period after three quarters of standstill football on a long pass, Edwards to Beam. Sutton kicked the point. Longest and Potter starred for the losers.

Mangum Forfeits

The Mangum team failed to show up for their scheduled game with the New Dorms, and as a result, forfeited.

seems to be that Carolina will come out on top with a one touchdown lead.

Many notables are expected here for the game, among them being the Governors of both North Carolina and Georgia, who will be guests of President Frank Graham in the guest box at the stadium. President Brittain of Georgia Tech is also expected to be here and Bobby Jones, Atlanta lawyer and champion golfer, has declared his intentions of being present. Many other important figures from throughout the South will be at the game, since the Southern Conference on Education is in session here this week-end.

Music and other entertainment for the game will be furnished by the bands of the University and Georgia Tech, and by American Legion Flag Escorts from Salisbury and Raleigh. Billy Arthur, Carolina's "one-yard" chief cheerleader has spent a great deal of time in getting a cheering section ready for the game.

Elaborate programs for reuniting groups of both Carolina and Georgia Tech alumni have been arranged, with the Tech alumni joining in a reunion dinner at the Carolina Inn at 12:30 o'clock.

STAR PUGILISTS BEGIN WORKOUTS

Captain Noah Goodridge and Platt Report for Work At Tin Can.

During the past week boxing prospects have brightened due to the actual appearance in the ring of two varsity battlers who are expected to play a major part in the winter campaign. These two men, Captain Noah Goodridge and Platt Landis, both reported in good condition and were able to step into the ring their first day in togs. Goodridge will hold down his old light weight berth again and is looking forward to his most successful year, while Coach Rowe is counting on Landis to take over the lightheavyweight assignment occupied by John Warren last year. Warren will be moved up to fill Bill Koenig's old place in the heavyweight and should find himself at home as he fought as a heavy throughout his sophomore year with good results.

Jack Farris and Nat Lumpkin, welterweight contenders, are busy with cross country at present and will not report for boxing until the harriers have completed their schedule. Billy Stallings has been taking a rest lately, limiting the active contenders in this weight to three. However, these three, Cecil Jackson, Jimmy Gatling, and Red Holderness have presented enough fireworks to prevent the welters from losing the interest that their competition has attracted. All three men are looking good and offer real battles whenever they meet in the ring.

Obie Davis will be back in togs next week after a short lay off and is expected to round himself into fighting shape in a short time. Evan Vaughn, Harry Sheffield, and John Warren have not reported for practice as yet, but it is hoped that they will start to work within the nex few days. All three of these men are monogram wearers and are expected to play important roles in the coming campaign which will be their last.

took a fresh start and swept through their opponents for another 6-2 win. Both teams fought desperately in the final and decisive set. Then, with the score 3-2 on his side, Hines took his service and the lead at 4-2. Yeomans then won his serve and made it 4-3. Wright won his serve, and Hines and Wright broke through Hendlin's service to take the match and the title.

Earlier in the afternoon, Yeomans and Hendlin defeated Vail and Covington in straight sets, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2, the losers threatening only in the second set.

V. P. I. was 27 minutes and 34 seconds.

The freshmen who were responsible for the 28-28 deadlock are listed in order of their placements: Hudgins, V. P. I. yearling placed first, with MacRae and Grover of Carolina pushing him hard to come in second and third respectively. Feltz, V. P. I. came in fourth; Pennington, V. P. I. fifth; Sullivan, U. N. C., sixth; Minnich, V. P. I., seventh; Kimrey, Farr, Vitz, U. N. C., eighth, ninth, tenth; Webster, Barnes, Lyne, V. P. I., eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, with Gabriel of U. N. C. coming in last.

The time set by victor, Hudgins, was sixteen minutes, and firty-five seconds.

SOUTHERN GRID NOTES

Those who would pooh, pooh, Florida's chances since the Furman defeat are reminded that last year Florida downed Georgia, conqueror of Yale and North Carolina, the week after the 'Gators had been beaten by Georgia Tech.

On a rainsoaked field at Athens yesterday Harry Mehre sent Georgia through another long session with forward passing forming a major part of the offensive. Florida has a strong rush line and judging from the practice at Athens Mehre may plan an aerial game against the Gators.

South Carolina and the Citadel finished their polishing today for their 25th meeting at the Orangeburg, S. C., fair at high noon to morrow. Billy Laval, Carolina's shrewd mentor, scouted the Cadets in their game with Presbyterian last week and has warned his Gamecocks that the Charleston teams presents an offensive that will be hard to stop.

Herbert Bryant, 200-pound full-back, has been moved to tackle in one of the shifts Coach Earl Abel has made in an effort to bolster the Virginia machine. Abel hopes to have five regulars, kept out of recent games by injuries, ready for Maryland Saturday.

Coach Bill Alexander of Georgia Tech had Neblett, center and Goldsmith end, running with the first string in practice today, indicating that these reserves may start against North Carolina.

Clemson and Tennessee continued hard drills for their meeting at Knoxville while Coach Harry Gammage, of Kentucky sent his charges through a number of new plays to be used against Alabama.

Another of Coach Bob Neyland's first string football players joined the University of Tennessee's injury list today. Dr. Frank Faulkner team physician announced that Quinn Decker, fullback, was suffering from a cracked ankle bone.

Salisbury Wins High Title

Salisbury high school defeated High Point 6-0 in a game played at Salisbury Friday for the class A high school championship. Eleven other high schools played games Friday in both class A and class B.

All of Coach Collins' guards seem to be short and dumpy. McIver tallest, is only five feet, ten inches. Blackwood is about five feet, eight, and Fysal is five feet, seven and one half in. Newcombe and Dunavant both are the same height as Fysal. Looks like it would be pretty hard for an opposing line to get under them.

Doping 'Em Out

Tech's pair of great tackles, Maree and Spear, while the Carolina tackles have caused Bill Fetzer to lose sleep at night. At left end Bill Alexander has Tom Jones, one of the classiest ends in the South; the flank positions on Carolina's team has been a thorn in the side of the coaches. North Carolina should take the sting out of the Yellow Jackets today, as they have a better balanced team.

In Lexington, Kentucky, two undefeated teams meet. If Wallace Wade's Crimson Tide can drown "Shipwreck" Kelly and his Wildcats, the championship will be within his grasp. That Kentucky is powerful, no one will deny. In fact the Wildcats hold the advantage in the backfield; in addition to Kelly they have a band of good backs. However, 'Bama has undoubtedly the best line in the South. With such men as Elmore, Eherdt, Miller, Sington, and Dotherow, in the forward wall, it is not so surprising that "Flash" Suther, "Sugar" Cain, and "Monk" Campbell are running wild against the best teams in Dixie. If Kelly and Company can stem the Red Tide, they will almost be champions, Tennessee being the only real barrier in her path. However, Alabama should win.

Georgia's Bulldogs meet a team undefeated in the conference in Florida. At times this season Florida has flashed brilliant form. Georgia has played high class football in every game so far. Last year the Alligators upset the dope bucket by licking the Bulldogs 19-6. Captain "Red" Betha's Florida clan may pull another surprise today, but we hardly think so.

At Knoxville, Tennessee, Clemson's Tigers, undefeated so far, meet a crippled but fighting company of Tennessee Volunteers. Josh Cody's eleven has not been really tested against any strong team so far. Tennessee has a great line and a good backfield. The Tigers will have a hard time beating them. The Vols should come through.

Davidson is stronger this year than they were last year, while V. M. I. is weaker this season. Hence, "Gloomy Monk" Younger's boys should win.

In the other game at Lexington, Virginia today, V. P. I. struggles with Washington and Lee. The Gobblers have a fast, hard charging line with a good backfield. The Generals have a poor line and a poorer backfield. Evidently, the Gobblers should win, although you can never tell about this game between the two old rivals.

Contrary to the opinion of many of the "wise ones" we pick Duke to down Villanova. When it is remembered that Duke lost to Villanova's Wildcats 58-12 last year, it is hard to see De Hart's team as winners. This year, however, Villanova has not had such a wonderful season, while the Blue Devils are enjoying their best season in years and years.

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE HAS NO BOOKINGS YET

Has Yet to Present Any Definite Schedule of Events For Season.

The entertainment committee has authorized the secretary of the committee to correspond with several of the production companies in the country in an attempt to secure definite contracts for engagements here this year. Due to the fact that the date of the opening of the new auditorium had not been finally set, the committee was unable to make any definite arrangements before now.

According to one of the members of the committee, plans are being made for an entertainment sometime during the first week of February. There will be two other performances produced during the winter quarter, and two more in the spring session. "If funds permit," stated the committee member," we will stage three entertainments during the last quarter of school."

Dr. H. S. Dyer, chairman of the committee, stated that due to the present economic condition the committee would be able to secure some of the finest talent in the country for a very reasonable rate. "I have never seen such excellent talent available for such prices," continued Dr. Dyer.

The committee, however, is faced with the problem of whether to cut down in the character of the productions or raise the price in the season tickets for future years. Because of the cut in the state budget this problem must be dealt with. It has been customary, heretofore, for the committee to receive financial aid from the state, but this help will not be available this next year. This question has not yet been decided upon, but will be passed sometime in the future.

The dollar paid for entertainment fee this past quarter will be carried over to the winter session, and the season's entertainment tickets will not be published until the winter quarter.

TAR HEEL STAFF HEARS SAUNDERS

Editor of Alumni Review To Comment on Staff's Work Tonight.

Continuing its policy of having specialists in journalism and English address its weekly meetings, the Tar Heel staff will hear J. Maryon Saunders, the editor of the Alumni Review, and former editor of the Tar Heel, comment on the work of this organization at its regular meeting tonight at 7:15 in room 104 Alumni Building.

At the beginning of the year, the Tar Heel employs a large group of prospective reporters and editors but drops them from the staff immediately upon their failure to discharge their duties. For this reason there is always room for additional men of ability.

Reasons for removal from the staff are: failure to turn in news articles over a period of two weeks, lack of interest, and absence from weekly meetings.

Bob Madry, director of the University News Bureau, has been secured to speak November 9.

Literary Cooks Meet

Last Friday night, in their own eight room clubhouse on West Rosemary Lane, the C. W. J. Literary Society held its first winter dance. It is said to have been a complete success.

The C. W. J. Literary Society is a recently organized group of cooks, waiters and janitors in Chapel Hill, who, by reason of their long and constant association with the professorial and the student population, have established their own clique of lovers of literature.

When confronted with the insinuation that like many another clubs in Chapel Hill, the meetings of the C. W. J. Literary Society sometimes assume the scenes of ribaldry, a responsible member in good standing, a janitor at Spencer hall, was quick to deny most vigorously that such things went on, and emphasized the fact that the C. W. J. Literary Society is purely "literary."

PIERSON PLEASED WITH MEETING OF GRADUATE DEANS

Chapel Hill Selected as Scene of Next Session of Association Of American Universities

"One of the best, if not the best meeting over held," says Dean W. W. Pierson in discussing the thirty-second annual meeting of the Association of American Universities. Dean Pierson has just returned from this meeting, which was held jointly at the Universities of California and Stanford, October 23-25. He is especially enthusiastic over the number of important papers read during the meeting, and the numerous topics related to graduate work that were discussed.

The Association of American Universities is made up of twenty-nine of the leading American universities. Each year they meet at a different school to discuss problems of graduate work and organization, and to present important research papers. Dean Pierson feels particularly proud of the compliment paid to the University of North Carolina in being chosen by the Association as the scene of next year's session, which is to be held here either October or November 1931.

REINHOLD NEIBUHR TO PREACH TODAY

Theologian's Sermon To End Southern Conference on Education.

Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr, professor of Applied Christianity at the Union Theological Seminary in New York City, will speak at eleven o'clock this morning in the Chapel Hill Methodist Church. This is the last address of the Southern Conference on Education which began here Thursday. Dr. Neibuhr's subject will be "Social Intelligence and Spiritual Dynamic."

For thirteen years after his graduation from the Yale Divinity School until 1928, Dr. Neibuhr was pastor of Bethel Church, Detroit. There his ministry to industrial workers appealed to both employer and employee. In 1927 his book Does Civilization Need Religion? was published and in 1929 Leaves From The Notebook of a Tamed Cynic.

Dr. Neibuhr has been for fifteen years a contributor to the Atlantic Monthly and is now editor of World Tomorrow and contributing editor of Christian Century. He is also a contributor to Survey Graphic and New Republic. Dr. Neibuhr is a participant in liberal social movements especially the Socialist party. He spent last summer in Germany and Russia studying conditions in those

BAITY EXPLAINS WATER CONDITION

Peculiar Taste Is Not Due to Any Chemical Application.

Professor H. G. Baity of the sanitary and municipal engineering department gave an explanation yesterday of the condition of the water at Chapel Hill and vicinity. A very peculiar taste was developed Friday afternoon which was similar to chlorine water. The odor was similar to that of phenol or iodorphorm or a medicated odor. This odor or taste is not due to any process that is being applied to the water. The University consolidated service plants stated that a test was made of the water Saturady and that the water was entirely fit for domestic use.

The undesirable taste is due to the slow rain during the last two days. The rain falling on leaves and extracting the chemical properties which were not extracted during the summer months due to the very intense heat and the lack of rain is the reason for the undesirable taste and it was stated that this will wear off in a few days. However, a treatment process is under way.

The University consolidated service plants also stated that the same condition in the water was prevalent in the cities in this section and in many parts of the state.

Discussion Of Economic Order Ends Conference On Education

Ways and means by which education may overcome obstacles of a changing economic order were suggested here yesterday at the third day's session of the University of North Carolina's third annual Southern Conference on Education.

The Conference suspended work shortly after noon following a series of three addresses by N. R. Crozier, president of the department of superintendence of the National Education Association and superintendent of schools, Dallas, Tex.; Prof. Edward H. Reisner, professor of the history of education in Teachers College, Columbia University; and Dr. John W. Abercrombie, vice-president of the National Education Association and assistant state superintendent of Alabama.

In the afternoon the delegates were guests of the University at the North Carolina-Georgia Tech football game, last night they were guests of the Carolina Playmakers, when the widely known dramatic group presented three folk-plays under the direction of Prof. Frederick H. Koch.

Presiding over the session was Dr. F. P. Gaines, president of Washington and Lee University, who declared that "we are concerned today not with economics in education but with education in economics. There is today a greater threat against the South's sustained development than at any time since the New South ceased to be a mere phrase of hope.

"In the midst of such conditions we need to assure ourselves again that education is not a luxury to be indulged when financial superfluity justifies reckless expenditues, that education is not in the category of generous public whims like an overgrown charity. Education is still the basic necessity of the social order. Education is still the wisest investment in any program of material expansion. Education is still the supreme obligation which one generation owes unto the next."

Nine reasons for the slow development of the Southern school systems were assigned by Dr. Abercrombie. He said they were: the long delay in beginning the tax supported school; the financial impoverishment and bankruptcy under which the school systems were undertaken; the task of providing two systems; the widely scattered population; the illiteracy among both races; the necessity of bearing supernormal financial burdens with subnormal wealth; the withdrawal of much southern wealth through the operation of federal laws; the results of emancipation, and the widespread prejudice against free public schools.

He defined the South's educational status as rating the lowest in the per capita expenditures for education in the nation. "In view of the conditions mentioned," he said, "it must be apparent to all except the very obtuse, the selfishly influenced and the wilfully blind that, notwithstanding the advances made, the South's educational needs still are numerous, great and pressing; that they call for prompt and serious consideration; that the call is loud, clear and imperative. What are those needs? All of them may be summed up in one phrase, namely, the equalization of educational opportunities."

Professor Reisner declared that the school and university were failing to turn out men and

Delegates Named

The interfraternity council has elected John Phil Cooper, Sigma Nu, and Jack Ward, Kappa Alpha, to be the two representatives of this institution at the annual convention of the national interfraternity councils, which will be held November 28 and 29 in New York City.

Each year two delegates are selected to attend this convention. The purpose of the meeting is to discuss some of the rushing, drinking, pledging, and other problems which confront the fraternities in the country. These problems are throroughly discussed, and certain remedies are suggested for them.

Delegates attending the convention this year will be registered at the Pennsylvania hotel, New York City.

LIBRARY EXHIBITS REPRODUCTION OF VERGIL'S POETRY

Petrarch's Copy of Poet's Works Is Center of Anniversary Display.

In honor of the 2000th anniversary of Vergil's birth, the University Library is exhibiting material, from the Hanes Foundation for the study of the origin and development of the book, relative to the poet's works.

A group of facsimiles of important Vergil manuscrips is on exhibition in the middle exhibit case in the east end of the main floor corridor in the library building. Exhibits of printed books and facsimiles of other editions of Vergil will follow during the next few weeks.

The most attractive of the items displayed is a superb facsimile reproduction of the Italian poet Petrarch's manuscript copy of Vergil's works. This manuscript is in the Ambrosian Library at Milan. The facsimile which reproduces with great fidelity the colors and imperfections of the parchment leaves, as well as the handsome illumination, was published for the celebration taking place this year, under the auspices of the Pope, who was at one time the prefect of the Ambrosian Library.

The text of the poems is surrounded by a commentary on it by a famous Roman grammarian, Servius, who, in his commentaries describes customs and manners of the Romans.

The Library is fortunate in having a duplicate copy of the frontispiece to this manuscript which is a small painting by the Italian muralist, Simone di Martino. It shows Vergil reclining on a lawn at work. Simone was a friend of Petrarch's, meeting him at Avignon when Petrarch was living there in 1338.

The commentary of Servius on Vergil is displayed again in a facsimile of a manuscript in the Vatican Library, written in the 10th century. This is interesting chiefly because the handwriting in which it is written, is known as Beneventan script. This kind of handwriting developed in the monastery at Monte Casino and in the religious houses throughout the

Twenty-Three Thousand See Colorful Homecoming Game

Largest Crowd in Kenan Stadium This Year Sees Carolina-Georgia Tech Contest

MANY NOTABLES PRESENT

By Billy McKee

A homecoming crowd of twenty-three thousand alumni and many Tech followers saw a colorful game between Georgia Tech and Carolina end in a tie 6-6 yesterday afternoon. All the scoring was done in the second quarter; although both teams seriously threatened in the last half neither was able to muster enough punch to make another score.

The weather was all that Carolina followers could hope for—a clear, sunny afternoon, but a trifle cold, as the many top coats attested. Several airplanes flew around the field to add their part to the spectacle.

The guest box was filled with many notables. Governor Gardner, President Brittain of Georgia Tech, President Few of Duke, President Sykes of Clemson, President Lingle of Davidson, "Chic" Roberts, chairman of the Georgia Tech board of trustees, and John Motley Morehead, minister to Sweden, were among the guests of President Frank Graham. Bobby Jones, champion golfer, did not show up as was once announced.

Five different bands and bugle corps were present, adding to the enjoyment of the crowds and giving a great deal of color to the game with their distinctive uniforms. First there appeared the blue and grey band of the Charlotte high school. It was followed by the Salisbury Memorial Flag Escort, a drum and bugle corps of forty-three men which has been organized in honor of the men from Rowan county who died in the World War. They were dressed in blue jackets and red knickers and carried a whole series of emblems, including the post colors, twelve American flags, and eight of the major allied national flags. The next band on the field was the huge 112-piece Georgia Tech outfit in their white uniforms with yellow stripes, which played their selections with lots of pep and life. The Raleigh American Legion drum and bugle corps also marched across the field in their lavendar coats with white crossbands. Last of all came our own Blue and White organization with its high-stepping drum major. The two college bands performed during the half as well as before the game, forming T's and N. C.'s and playing the different school songs.

The sound of the "Song of the Cheerios" played by the Carolina band during the last half of the game was welcome to those students and alumni who were here several years ago when that song was played and sung at every football game. It seems that Carolina is about to revive that custom now.

Billy Arthur, Carolina midget, had a special stand erected below the Carolina sections so he could better be able to direct his cheering section. Billy made a very unusual entrance on the field riding a horse, from which he climbed down on a rope ladder. The cheering was rather mediocre, being very poor at some times while at others it was good.

PARAGRAPHICS

In Europe young people are trained to think and in America they are largely trained to remember."—Hamilton Holt.

If a "Student Government Week" wasn't set aside once in a while, in a great majority of cases the students wouldn't know they had a government.

"The political beach is strewn with the wrecks of those who took the nice things said about them to heart."—Mayor James J. Walker. This doesn't apply to the University politics. There were never any "nice things" said about the campus politicians.

"It cannot be denied that many martyrs have been pig-headed fellows with only one idea in their heads and that a bad one.—Dean Inge.

Foreign Relations

Much attention was manifested by a group of students particularly interested in foreign relations when the Foreign Politics Forum was organized last spring. The Forum was well under way at the close of school last year, and it is expected that the group will function much more effectively this year as definite plans begin to take shape.

As the University has no school or department of foreign relations, it may be said that the Forum provides a sort of training ground for prospective diplomats and public men. Lectures on different phases of intrenational relations or related topics are heard from time to time, and informal discussions are held. It is to the credit of the Forum that it was instrumental in bringing to the campus last year so eminent an authority on the League of Nations and its workings as Sir bert Ames.

The Forum is not interested in propagating faith in any political creed or policy. It is interested in problems of foreign politics from the standpoint of the student; that is, it tries to Herbert Ames.

We hope that the Forum will continue the work begun last year and that it will have no difficulty in securing adequate program facilities. Members of the Forum are desirous of having new students join them, as the Forum is an entirely open organization. It is understood, however, that those who are not interested enough to want to add something to the discussions are not eligible.—B. M.

Extension Division And Mass Education

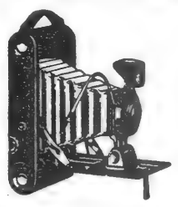
In high position among the problems of present-day social existence is enlightenment of the masses. The age when institutions of collegiate rank carefully guarded the secrets of education from the masses grows dim because of the veritable avalanche of liberal educational ideas which have "taken the day." The tables are completely turned, and the prevailing attitude toward education is equality of opportunity. Not only are universities attempting to instruct the masses within their portals, but extension courses have been arranged for carrying the spark of enlightenment to persons who, for various reasons, are unable to leave their homes. The work of the Extension Division of this university is doubtless conspicuous enough to be considered typical.

There is no branch of the University which has as fertile a field for exploit as does the Extention Division. It reaches many persons who passed the school age long before the wave of "education for all" reached its present pinnacle of prominece. Many of such peosons are teachers in the public schools of the state. Herein is comprehended what is perhaps the greatest service which the extension workers have been able thus far to render the people of the state. Young teachers (many of whom are college graduates, to be sure) utilize the possibilities of the extension courses in various parts of the state to raise their certificates. This practice very obviously makes for unification of pedagogical principles in public school instruction.

Through the medium of extension courses in history, languages, literature, and the popular sciences, the University Extension Division has been the most conspicuous contributory factor in the work of enlightening the masses of North Carolina. The extension workers are herewith congratulated and urged to add more fuel to the flame.—J. C. W.

OPEN FORUM

WHY SUNDAY MOVIES?



To the Editor:

Apropos the sentiment expressed by Mr. Sheridan in the Tar Heel of October 30 on the topic "For Sunday Entertainment"—The donor of the University organ and auditorium which is its home had a vision of providing opportunity for utilizing Sunday afternoons in a way to add to the educational and cultural experience of the campus life in a splendid way. One outstanding factor in this plan which has found general acclaim on other university campuses throughout America is that the type of entertainment offered on Sunday in the recital halls is not merely a repetition of what is available every night during the week. A vote recently taken among students of a western college where organ concerts have become a regular campus feature reveals that aside from their value as musical events, the students attend them in large numbers in order to experience this contrast from the round of week-night entertainments.

Endeavoring to carry out the desires of the donor, the Department of Music has already announced two series of Organ Concerts, one of which is a Sunday Vesper series, beginning on the 23rd of November, and running throughout the school year. The frequency of these Sunday concerts, as a matter of future policy, depends largely on the response accorded them by the campus. It is felt that these Sunday recitals will provide access to great music without the customary pressure of "trying to teach its appreciation." Fifty minutes spent in this beautiful, intimate recital hall on a Sunday afternoon, listening to one of the finest concert organs in the entire country, will, hopefully, become the practice of many students and faculty as the year passes. For this the organ and auditorium were given. Towards this end the Department of Music hopes to serve.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

Waxing eloquent in juvenile enthusiasm, we look ahead and pine for winter and snowy days. There is perhaps nothing which can counteract a dark outlook so completely as a snow-covered landscape.

The local debaters, we understand, are priming for their coming encounter with the Britishers on "Resolved, That the Emergence of Woman From the Home Is One of the Regrettable Features of Modern Society." The subject is a good one, but the season of the year is wrong. As Old Man Winter swoops down upon us, woman is prone to enter the home, rather than emerge from it. The gentle creature makes herself very happy in the winter season by sitting before the fire and listening to the purring of the house cat (to which animal she has often been compared, remarkable similarity being noted.)

Now that educational emphasis has been shifted somewhat from the constructional side of the matter to what is actually going on within the classroom, perhaps a little inside dope on classroom procedures here on the Hill might be edifying. We vouch for the authenticity of the following:

Professor Crittenden (History VII teacher): "Mr. Blank, why did Washington cross the Delaware?"

Mr. Black (Becoming slightly awake, and in deep voice): "To get on the other side, Sir."

The other day one of our dame friends remarked to us: "Dear, I'm simply dead after that street car ride." Although we never quite mustered enough courage to say so, we thought—"What a logical culmination for a simple life."

The chief task before The Inventors of America is that of devising a muffler which will fit inside of women's mouths.

There was a man up here the other day looking for his son. The boy roomed, he said, "around at the BAITED HOUSE."

Really, we wonder which source is the harder to collect money from: Y. M. C. A. pledges, or fraternity pledges.

College life is nothing more than a drama. Already we are in the second stretch of Act I of the 1930-31 show. In this educational drama the individual student hardly counts at all. If he misses his cue, it is just too bad. If he steps on the trap-door and falls out of the entire show, another puppet is groomed and ready to take his place. Yet this is the machinery which educates us.

This afternoon at two-thirty o'clock in the Sunday School Room of the Chapel Hill Methodist Church Dr. Neibuhr will talk on "Modern Political, Religious, and Social Issues."

The Y. M. C. A., under whose auspicies Dr. Neibuhr will speak, has sent out written invitations to members of the three Y cabinets, certain graduate students and faculty members, a select group from the Duke University faculty, the International Relations club, and the Amphotheron club. These clubs were sent invitations because their conduct on the campus in the past has shown them to be interested in such topics as the speaker will discuss this afternoon.

Following his address Dr. Neibuhr will conduct a forum at which time he will discuss any question that may arise along the line of his speech. During the past summer the speaker has been making a tour of Europe, and his afternoon talk today will concern observations he made of the economic and political conditions in Germany and Russia.

All members of the Y cabinets are reminded of the fact that their usual weekly meetings will be held on Monday night in the lobby rooms of the Y building at 7:15 P. M. Programs of the three cabinet meetings have been arranged, and probably a small part of the time will be given to a discussion of some of the points brought out by Dr. Neibuhr in his talk this afternoon.

Walter Oglesby and Bill Ryan, guard and end on the Citadel football team, have been dropped from the squad for breaking training. Both Oglesby and Ryan have scintillated in the Charleston, S. C., team's games. The Citadel plays the University of South Carolina today at Orangeburg.

Desperate attempts to score in the last minutes of play by both the Carolina and Georgia Tech football teams proved futile is their annual battle in Kenan Stadium here yesterday afternoon, and the game ended in a six to six deadlock, the two teams having made touchdowns during the second quarter. A homecoming crowd of 23,000 people was packed into the stadium to witness the game.

Both elevens showed powerful offensive attacks throughout the whole game until they got within the 15-yard line. When deep in enemy territory, it was impossible for either eleven to drive the ball over for a score.

Rip Slusser of Carolina and Jap Hart of Tech were the best ground gainers in the game. Slusser made 79 yards and Hart netted 74. Barron, brother of the famous "Red," played a nice game for Tech, as did Vance Maree and Tom Jones, Tech tackle and end.

The Tar Heel line opened wide holes in Tech's heavy forward wall for backs Branch, Chandler, and Slusser to make long gains. Carolina was able to gain over the right side of the Tech line almost at will, but going over the left side of the wall with Jones and Maree defending was not so easy. Most of Georgia Tech's gains from scrimmage were made inside tackle with Barron, Cain and Hart carrying the ball. However, Tech's scoring play was a smash off right tackle with Hart carrying the ball.

In the Carolina line, honors must go to Ned Lipscomb, who played a whale of a game both on offense and defense. He intercepted a pass late in the fourth quarter, and time and again nailed the Tech backs for no gain. Erwin Walker, end, and George Thompson, tackle, played well on the left side of the line, opening large holes for the Tar Heel backs on offense, and stopping the offensive thrusts of Tech.

Bob Blackwood also looked good in the Tar Heel line. It was he who recovered a Tech fumble in the third quarter when they were within ten yards of the Tar Heels' goal line. June Underwood started at left tackle but received an injury to his hand and was forced to retire from the game.

Carolina's touchdown came early in the second quarter when Magner, standing on Tech's 27-yard line, tossed a pass to Branch for seven yards. Branch wiggled his way through Tech's would-be tacklers for the 20 yards and a touchdown.

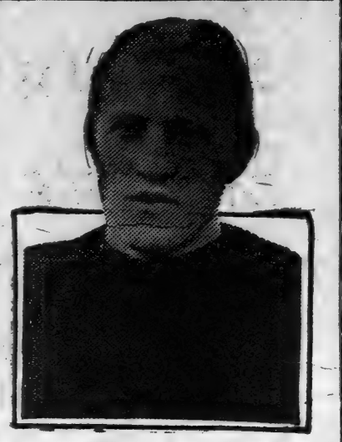
Georgia Tech Kicks Off

Georgia Tech kicked off to Carolina with Rip Slusser taking the ball on his 8-yard line, and returning to his 32-yard stripe. Carolina got two first downs in succession with Slusser and Chandler carrying the ball, but lost it on downs on Tech's 34-yard line. Play throughout the whole first quarter went Carolina's way except when it came to scoring. The Tar Heels made five first downs to Tech's one in the initial period.

It was early in the second quarter when the Tar Heels showed sufficient punch to get a touchdown. The ball was put in play on the Jackets' 44-yard line. On the first play Tech drew an offside penalty; Magner passed to Slusser for a first down on the 27-yard marker, and on the next play Branch took the pass from Magner for the touchdown. Johnny Branch got off a bad kick, missing the extra point.

Dunlap took Blackwood's kick-off on his goal line and returned it to his 34-yard marker. From then on it was a sustained drive on the part of the Tech backs which finally resulted in Hart's offtackle smash for their score. The Tar Heels held the Tech backs for downs three times during the period within the shadow of their own goal, but cn the fourth attempt Hart made his touchdown run. Herron tried for the point, but his kick was wide.

The remainder of the period was taken up with Carolina attempting to score. The Tar Heels advanced the ball to Tech's 40-yard line, but failed to complete two passes and Branch punted to Barron who was downed on his 30-yard line. The half ended as McArthur for Tech made a first down on his 40-yard line.



At the opening of the third quarter Tech started a bruising attack after Barron returned Blackwood's kick-off from his two to his 43 yard line. Hart led in a drive which carried the ball to Carolina's 15-yard line, but Tech failed to make first down and the ball went over to Carolina. Branch kicked out to Barron on Tech's 40-yard line, and again the bruising attack was underway. This time it was stopped on the Tar Heels' four-yard marker when Barron, thrown for a loss of 20 yards, fumbled and Blackwood recovered for Carolina on the 25-yard line.

GAINS 79 YARDS

Rip Slusser was the best ground gainer in the game yesterday, carrying the ball for a total of 79 yards. Jap Hart of Tech was a close second with 74, but no other back came within 40 yards of equalling these records.

INTRAMURAL RACE NARROWS DOWN TO SEVEN TEAMS

Five Fraternity and Two Dormitory Tag Football Clubs Are Undefeated.

Tag football goes into the home stretch and the pack starts to string out behind the leaders. Five of the fraternities are as yet undefeated while the dormitory struggle narrows down to New Dorms and Ruffin. The Sigma Nus, the Dekes, the Betas, the defending champions, the Phi Gams, and the A. T. O.'s are the five fraternity teams who will battle it out for the honor of meeting the dormitory champs.

The campus experts are putting their money on the Sigma Nu outfit because of the recent one-sided scores that this team has been turning in. This club will meet the A. T. O. crowd in a crucial battle on Wednesday. The Dekes have a fight on their hands when they meet the Zeta Psis on Thursday. The latter have won four times and lost just once.

New Dorms and Ruffin square off on Monday and the result of this fracas should crown the winner. Both clubs are undefeated, but New Dorms have played two more games than Ruffin. On Monday Rffin just managed to eke out a 6-0 win over Carr while New Dorms have not met serious opposition as yet.

Ruffin has had to depend almost entirely on McBride to get loose for the tallies. The Ruffin defense is far from invulnerable. New Dorms has a more evenly balanced team both on offense and defense. But in a game where every man is eligible for a pass it makes the dopesters wary in picking them. Without a doubt New Dorms will keep McBride well covered in the game on Monday. Steele, with an average of .750, is still a contender in the dorm race.

The games of the past week reveal the strength of the T. E. P.'s by their stirring defeat over the Z. B. T.'s 13-0. The T. E. P. house is still in the running in the fraternity standings. Dameron, Sikes, and Griffiths, staunch Sigma Nus, made merry at the expense of Lamda Chi Alpha. The final count was 32-0.

.A T. O. kept the ball in S. A. E. territory for forty minutes but managed to shove across only one touchdown. The Pikas, the Z. B. T.'s, and the Pi Kappa Phis are struggling to emerge from the cellar position.

As the weather gets colder, the team occupying the lower part of the standing are more reluctant to come out for a trimming. Consequently the leaders only have to make an appearance on the field, whereupon Mac Gray and his assistants chalk up another win to their credit.

PLAY WELL FOR CAROLINA

NED LIPSCOMB

JOHNNY BRANCH

GEORGE THOMPSON

STUART CHANDLER

Ned Lipscomb continued to be the outstanding figure in the Tar Heel line. He intercepted a Tech pass late in the fourth quarter, when they were making a desperate effort to score. Johnny Branch was the only Tar Heel to cross Tech's goal line.

It was George Thompson (above) and Erwin Walker who opened many wide holes in the right side of the Tech line. Stuart Chandler, sophomore halfback, played excellent ball, making many nice gains and throwing accurate passes.

RED CROSS SAVING COMES INTO COLLEGIATE PROMINENCE

U. S. Military Academy and Most State Colleges Consider Red Cross Certificate as Highest Award for Swimming And Life Saving.

Evidence that university faculties are givin gthought to the need of a sports program which will attract general participation on the part of the students in their institutions is seen by Red Cross representatives having extensive contacts with the educational centers of the country.

The discussion of too much specialized athletic activity, in which only super athletes are wanted, or developed, leaving the majority of the students on the sidelines, has drawn attention not alone of the public, but has aroused interest among the students themselves, even though the charge is not necessarily applicable in all cases.

In some instances, as one observer commented, too specialized athletics has resulted in what might be termed a course in "sports appreciation" but has added no extra credits to the individual student's record. What is needed, apparently, is a program which is valuable to all students primaryly as physical recreation, and which has besides, a certain practical aspect.

For years the Red Cross has been welcomed in universities and colleges with its program of swimming instruction, life-saving, and first aid. These courses have been adopted as official requirements in certain institutions where physical education is stressed. In the U. S. Military Academy at West Point, among others, and most states colleges the Red Cross certificate is the highest award for swimming, and life-saving. In technical institutions, such as schools of mining and engineering, in normal schools stressing physical education the first aid course is recognized for its practical value after grauation.

ELEVEN GAMES IN HIGH CONFERENCE

Eleven high school football games were played in North Carolina Friday in both class "A" and class "B" Conferences in the Eastern and Western part of the state.

In the Eastern Class "A" Conference Raleigh defeated Rocky Mount at Raleigh with the score of 6-0. Goldsboro won over Wilson, 20-6. Fayetteville was defeated by Durham, 13-0.

In the Western Class "A" Conference Asheville was victorious over Greensboro, 7-0. The Salisbury team scored 6 to High Point's 0.

Apex defeated Sanford in the Eastern Class "B" race by 6-0, while Lumberton won over Burgaw 33-6. Wendell lost to Henderson, 12-0. Oxford defeated Bethel Hill with the score of 18-0.

Statesville was victorious over Spencer, 14-7 in the Western Class "B," while North Wilkesboro lost to Mount Airy 39-0.

The Raleigh-Rocky Mount game was broadcasted over the radio Friday. It was the first high school contest heard over the radio in North Carolina.

Looks as if it would be rather difficult for an opposing team to tackle any halfback if he got his knees as high as Bill White, drum major of the University band, when he cavorts between halves.

Wigue And Masque Plans Production

In a recent meeting of the Wigue and Masque, plans were discussed for the new production entitled "The Little Campus." This musical comedy was written by Moore Bryson, with music by Wex Malone.

This production will be the first that the organization has staged in the past two years. The last play produced by the Wigue and Masque was "Mum's the Word," presented in 1928.

Founded in 1919 as an outgrowth of the old Satyr organization, the Wigue and Masque has produced at least one musical comedy or revue each year during its existence, except in 1929. Before 1928 only men were admitted to the organization, but in that year several women were given parts in a play. Since that time they have been admitted to membership.

This dramatic organization affords an opportunity for amateur playwrights, composers, and performers to get actual experience in this sort of work. Membership in the clubs is by invitation only.

Pratt Entertains Engineering Group

Several members of the 105th Engineers, 30th Division, were the guests of Colonel Joseph Hyde Pratt yesterday for the Carolina-Tech football game. Prior to the game a buffet luncheon was served the guests in the Pratt home.

These members have held meetings consistently for some time every two years. Those who attended the meeting of the division yesterday were Major Willard P. Sullivan, Suffolk, Va.; Major Theodore E. Seeyle, Harrisburg, Pa.; Lieut. Herbert A. Church, Washington, D. C.; Lieut. C. C. Fisher, Nashville, Tenn.; General and Mrs. H. B. Fergerson, Norfolk, Va.; Col. Clarence E. Bosch, Durham; Col. and Mrs. John H. Trescott, Charlotte; Capt. and Mrs. Harry St. George Tucker; Major George Lyerly, Hickory; Capt. Ralph Ray, Gastonia; Capt. Zac Smith, Birmingham, Ala.; Lieut. Sydney E. Pennete, Henderson; and Capt. Wm. B. Hunter, Gastonia.

At The Carolina

A costume picture done on a gorgeous scale, and one that portrays with historical accuracy the period of Louis LV's reign in France, comes to the Carolina theatre Monday with Norma Talmadge in the title role of "DuBarry, Woman of Passion." Miss Talmadge displays her characteristic depths of sincerity in the acting and makes real the visualization of the woman who became a power in the French nation through the influences she exercised over the king. The settings are among scenes of magnificent luxury and splendor, revealing the brittle and artificial glory of the last few years of absolute monarchism in France before the debacle of the Revolution.

Conrad Nagel and William Farnum head the long list of the cast supporting Norma Talmadge.

Plan Newspaper Institute

The Executive Committee of the North Carolina Press Association met with R. M. Grumman of the University Extension Division Saturday to make plans for the annual newspaper institute which will be held the first week in January, 1931, in Chapel Hill.

The meeting yesterday was a half-day session. Business was transacted in the morning, and in the afternoon the committee attended the Georgia Tech-Carolina football game at Kenan Stadium.

south of Italy. It takes its name from the Duchy of Benevento which occupies the whole southern portion of the Italian peninsula.

What knowledge we have of the text of Vergil's works today is derived chiefly from seven basic manuscripts dating from the fourth to the sixth centuries A. D. The Hanes Foundation is fortunate in having facsimiles of leaves from five of these manuscripts. All these manuscripts are written in capital letters and some are handsomely illustrated with miniature paintings. It is only by a laborious comparison of one of these manuscripts with another that scholars have been able to produce the editions of Vergil which are now available to scholars.

Carolina-Tech Game Ends In Deadlock

the ball on the 25-yard stripe, Carolina marched through and over the Georgia Tech team for 70 yards, only to lose the ball on downs on Tech's four-yard line. Slusser, around end, made it a first down on his 37-yard line; Chandler passed to Branch for another first down on Tech's 47-yard marker; Chandler and House on line plays made it still another on Tech's 33-yard line; Branch took another of Chandler's heaves for the fourth straight first down, and Chandler made the fifth successive on Tech's 7-yard line, but four plays netted only two yards and the ball went over to Tech.

Lipscomb Intercepts Pass

Carolina threw ten passes in the final period in a vain attempt to score a winning touchdown, but each effort was stopped. When Tech seemed to be on a drive for a score in the last minutes of play, Ned Lipscomb leaped high into the air on his 45-yard line and with only his finger tips pulled down Dunlap's pass, and recovered it for Carolina. It was one of the prettiest one-handed catches ever seen in Kenan Stadium. Recovering the ball, however, failed to aid the Tar Heels, for they lost the ball on downs and Tech started an effort to score, but Gilbreath, substitute for Lipscomb, grabbed Dunlap's pass and was downed on his 40-yard line as the game ended.

Discussion of Economic Order Ends Conference

women big enough to meet the current demands and the future needs of society. Improvement in the teaching force must be accomplished if men and women who possess the intellectual and moral attitudes and attainments to serve society are to be produced, he asserted. "The only persons fit to be teachers are the best that society can produce. A good teacher deserves more social esteem than the head of a bank or the president of the board of directors of a textile mills, and until such teachers are discovered and employed and are so rewarded the schools and universities will continue to be as ineffectual for constructive social purposes as they have been in the past.

"A second essential for educational improvement is that the study of mankind and social relationships be elevated to a position of at least equal importance with the study of science and technology. Until the study of social relationships and human needs in the broadest scope and under the freest conditions can be made a part of education, we can not hope to prepare men and women for intelligent and sympathetic exercise of their political powers."

Professor Crozier spoke on the progress of the South and of its educational needs.

"The need of defining, and perhaps limiting, the functions of our institutions so as to avoid overlapping and monetary waste is pressing," he said. "The economical use of the public school plant involves some big matters. The cities of the South could save millions of dollars yearly by adopting the platoon plan with an enriched curriculum that will surpass all that they are now doing.

"Our public institutions are wasting time, money and energy by not adjusting education to the needs and capacities of the children," he said. A proposal for more diversification and less of the "one crop" education-al system should be employed, Mr. Crozier declared.

The Conference will be concluded tomorrow when Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr, member of the faculty of the Union Theological Seminary in New York City, will deliver a sermon in the auditorium of the Methodist Church at 11 o'clock on "Social Intelligence and Spiritual Dynamic."

Red Cross Saving In Collegiate Prominence

The Red Cross, it is explained, has no part in a discussion of too specialized sports; nevertheless, as the problem has arisen, it has suddenly been realized that in the Red Cross program, which is a part of the work at so many institutions of higher learning, there is an answer ready to hold.

As one Red Cross instructor put it, "the college man is supposed to have higher academic qualifications than one who is not college trained—why should he not be better equipped for practical sport? He very likely will be a golf enthusiast, a tennis devotee, and in summer at least, will spend part of him time on the water. He may be a good hand at the former game, and through Red Cross instruction he can be sure of his qualifications as a swimmer."

The degree of interest in these Red Cross college sports is indicated by the fact that a considerable part of the instruction is by qualified students who give volunteer service. This service has its reward in a certificate from the Red Cross in recognition of a certain number of hours of such service, a higher award in a medal, and of course, the distinctive emblem of the life-saver. Should the graduate elect physical education as his field, he has a valuable asset in this official recognition of his effort.

These facts are generally recognized among college leaders, consequently each year sees a closer degree of cooperation between the Red Cross and the country's educational institutions. Educators are found among the important groups of Red Cross leaders in the country, while the contact of students with the practical value of Red Cross service to themselves and to the communities over the United States has drawn into local leadership of Red Cross Chapters many younger men as they have graduated and started their careers.

ALL TICKETS ARE TAKEN FOR ORGAN RECITAL PROGRAM

Sunday Concert Planned To Take Care of Extra Applications For Dedication Event

Dr. Dyer of the music department announces that all tickets for the organ dedication programs on Friday and Saturday, November 14 and 15, have already been taken. In view of the fact that a large number of faculty members, townspeople, as well as others who had planned to attend, have failed to make application; it is found necessary to continue Mr. Eigenschenk's program over Sunday afternoon. From now on applications that have been for the Friday or Saturday preformance will be filled for the Sunday recital at four o'clock.

Dr. Dyer states that, of 1500 applications received, less than 1000 are from students. 200 are from faculty members and Chapel Hill people, and the remainder are from other towns. Large delegations are expected from Raleigh, Greensboro, Burlington, Charlotte, and other cities. Practically all cities in central North Carolina will be represented.

It is not unlikely that Mr. Eigenschenk will change his program for Sunday afternoon. In view of this, duplicate applications may be made beginning next week. In other words, persons who have already applied for their tickets for the Friday or Saturday performance, may also apply for a ticket for Sunday, also. Requests for extra tickets for Sunday will be filled in the order received, after the requests of those who have been unable to get tickets for Friday or Saturday.

LOCAL PLAYFOLK REHEARSE PLAYS

Saturday evening the Carolina Playmakers presented in rehearsal two of their new bill of three plays for the members of the Southern Conference on Education. Professor Koch explained to the delegates that he felt they would be more interested in rehearsals than in the finished production.

After the first play, Cloey, a romantic Carolina folkplay by Loretto Carroll Bailey, the curtains were opened and Samuel Selden explained the stagecraft while the delegates watched the change of scenery. The second play was a farce of Mississippi folk life by Arthur Palmer Hudson.

LECTURE DEALS WITH BRIEFS AND ARGUMENTS

A medium sized crowd attended the lecture of Colonel W. T. Joyner, of the Raleigh bar, which was delivered in the Law Association room in the basement of the law building, Monday. Colonel Joyner's talk was on the subject of "The Preparation of Briefs and the Argument of Cases in the Appelate Courts in North Carolina." Due to the length of the lecture, it was devided into two parts: the first being delivered at 3 o'clock and the second at 7:15.

The lectures dealt with the preparation of records and briefs as well as the composition of oral orguments. Reading from briefs or referring to them during the rendition of the oral argument was discouraged by Colonel Joyner.

Di Will Debate On Campus Comic

The Di Senate meets tonight to discuss the two bills on the calendar, which are the question of the continuation of the Buccaneer and the present situation of the Carolina football squad.

The bills which will be discussed tonight in New West at 7:00 at they appear on the calendar are: "Resolved, That the Carolina Buccaneer should be abolished"—Beatty Rector; and "Resolved, That the sports writers of North Carolina are largely responsible for the inferior condition of the Carolina football team, and that they are, therefore, deserving of condemnation"—J. C. Williams.

VILLAGE WATER IS AGAIN NORMAL

Vegetable and Phenolic Substances From Leaves and Tar Road Caused Taste

The taste and odor trouble in the Chapel Hill water supply, which has vied with the Georgia Tech game as the principal topic of conversation in the community since Friday, has been corrected, according to advices from Messrs. J. S. Bennett, Supt. of the University Consolidated Service Plants, and H. G. Baity, Prof. of Sanitary and Municipal Engineering. Since the development of this very unusual condition, which unfortunately occurred at a time when twenty thousand visitors were in town, and in greater intensity than heretofore experienced at Chapel Hill or in the state, the officials in charge of water purification have been busy day and night attempting to locate the source of the trouble and apply treatment processes to alleviate it. The current impression of townspeople seems to be that the nauseating taste and odor were due to chemical treatment in the purification process. Such is not the case. Extreme care has been taken in chemical application, and the purification plant is under continuous control by experienced and scientifically trained operators. The amount of chlorine used for final

Anilorac Cafe Goes By The Board Sunday

One of Chapel Hill's legion of cafeterias has faded from the picture. The Anilorac Cafe failed to open its doors Sunday morning. The proprietor of the cafeteria has given no reason for his action in discontinuing his business. It is thought, however, that the poor condition of trade was the reason for the closing of the cafe.

LAND DISPUTES SEEN AS CAUSE OF SOUTH'S PART IN REVOLUTION

Unorthodox View Upheld by Henderson in Leading Article of "Mississippi Valley Historic Review" Likely to Produce Changes in History of This Period.

The leading article in the September issue of the Mississippi Valley Review was "A Pre-Revolutionary Revolt in the Old Southwest," written by Dr. Archibald Henderson, professor of mathematics. This article was based on the intensive research which Dr. Henderson used in an address before delegates from the University of North Carolina aond Duke University at the annual meeting of the American Historical Association in Durham.

In this short historical account Dr. Henderson presents his rather radical ideas of the causes of the revolt of the southern states against Great Britain. He opposes a view which has prevailed unbroken until the present. This view is that the causes of the revolution were in no way economic; Dr. Henderson's view is that the real and most outstanding incentive drawing the south into the war was disputes over land policies. This view he presents with impressive evidence taken from documentary sources.

By short excerpts from the letters of such leaders as George Washington, Patric Henry, Jefferson, and Clark, he points out the disputes caused by the blundering land policies of the mother country. The historians—Fisher, Fiske, Channing, Van Tyne, and others—point out as the causes of the war, the Boston port bill, the Townshend acts, and the violations of contracts between the colonies and Great Britain, but no mention is made of the many British land policies that caused so many disputes.

For twenty-five years prior to the Revolution, Virginia as well as many other states had been promoting land development along her western border. The land companies formed were led by such men as Washington and George Mason. These statesmen were more interested in their land holdings perhaps than in the affairs of the colonies.

At the appearance of the land acts these statesmen were disturbed and aroused to action. many men had bought vast tracts of land from the Indians for small sums, and the mother country was trying either to collect taxes or in some cases to make new states of the newly developed land. The pioneers who owned small tracts were aroused as well. The first act, the orders in council of 1763, was ignored by Governor Dunmore, and the land regulations of 1774 were suppressed.

When Lord Dartmouth learned of those measures, he strictly censured Governor Dunmore. The Governor in turn explained the hostile attitude of the pioneers and statesmen and expressed the opinion that they would not endure such laws. This was many years before the revolt.

Then, on the very eve of the Revolution, the Virginia convention lead by Patric Henry, Thomas Jefferson, George Mason and Pendleton voted in 1775 absolutely to disregard the land policies forced upon them. Coinciding with this was the action of the Mecklenburg patriots of North Carolina on May 31, 1775.

Thus is summarized the view of Dr. Henderson. This view, contrary to those that have up to the present time been accepted as true, may cause many changes in the historic accounts of this period.

Order Of The Coif Is Modelled After English Law Institution

In twenty-eight of the leading law schools of the United States, chapters of the Order of the Coif, an honorary law-chool society, have been established. These include Yale, Pennsylvania, Chicago, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, California, and Stanford. A chapter was established at the University of North Carolina in 1928. Professor A. C. McIntosh is its president and Professor F. B. McCall, secretary.

Membership in the chapter in the University has been awarded to the following: Class of 1927: Samuel Elton Vest, Joseph Lapsley Cantwell, Jr., and William Harrison Abernathy; Class of 1928: Charles Raper Jonas, Clarence Windley Hall, and Frank Bird Gummey 2nd; Class of 1929: Jefferson Barnes Fordham and Susie Marshall Sharp, Chief Justice Walter P. Stacy (honorary); Class of 1930 John Huske Anderson, Jr., Alfred Waddell Gholson, Charles Francis Rouse, Allen Kendrick Smith, Judge John J. Parker of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals (honorary).

The Order of the Coif was organized in 1911 as an honorary law school society, membership in which was designed to mark with distinction those who had attained a rank in their legal studies among the highest ten percent of the senior class.

It was modelled after an institution with the same name which flourished in England for about seven centuries, but with this difference: The English Order of the Coif consisted evclusively of lawyers practicing before one court, the Court of Common Pleas, and the judges of the court could only be selected from that membership. The English order died out following the reorganization of the English court system in 1875. The word "Coif" originally designated a silk cap much like a small baby's cap worn by the lawyers of an early day. In later times, the "Coif" designated a silk rosette worn on top of the barrister's wig.

The national officers of the Order of the Coif are Professor M. T. Van Hecke, University of North Carolina, president; Dean O. L. Rundell, University of Wisconsin, vice-president; Professor E. W. Puttkamer, University of Chicago, secretary-treasurer.

Two Bills On Phi Calendar Tonight

The following bills will be discussed tonight by the Phi Assembly:

These bills were carried over from the last session because there was not sufficient time for their discussion.

ELECTIONS WILL BE HELD TODAY

Four Chapel Hill Democrats Among Those To Be Voted on By 1300 Eligible Persons

The people of Chapel Hill will go to the polls today to probably send in the sixteenth consecutive Democratic administration. The peope will vote in the general election for senator, congressmen, county and state officers. There were 1300 persons registered to vote in this election as compared to 897 registered to vote in the primaries in June. There are a greater number of students voting absentee ballots this year than ever before. The poll holders for the election today are: W. O. Sparrow, L. J. Phipps, Paul Stead, and Paul H. Robertson.

The candidates from Chapel Hill who are running in this election are: John W. Umstead, Jr., for state senator; S. W. Andrews, for register of deeds; S. A. Nathan, for coroner (Nathan has served three terms and is up for his fourth term); M. W. Durham, for county board of education; W. T. Sloan, who is running for re-election as sheriff and was a resident of Chapel Hill before his installation. All these candidates are Democrats and will probably be elected.

The cooperation of the voters is asked so that there will be as little confusion as possible at the polls. Citizens are asked not to loiter within ten feet of the booth, and not to occupy a booth longer than five minutes. All rules in regard to the election will be strictly enforced.

CORONER SPENDS BUSY WEEK-END

The Orange County coroner was quite busy this week-end. Three deaths were reported in the county on Saturday and Sunday.

Bruce Carpenter, who attempted to rob the bank at Efland, died as a result of gunshot wounds. Carpenter entered the bank and threatened S. C. Forrest, one of the officials of the bank, with a pistol, when Forrest attempted to call for help. Forrest managed to gain possession of his own pistol and fatally injured the robber. The coroner's jury brought in a verdict of self defence in favor of Forrest.

Lawrence Bright of Red Springs, North Carolina, succumbed to an attack of angina pectoris just before the football game on Saturday afternoon. Bright was forty-eight years of age and apparently in good health, the coroner's opinion is that the excitement concerning the game brought on the fatal attack.

Lester Jenkins, nine months old, was found dead in bed Sunday morning. The cause of death has not been determined.

NEIBUHR'S SERMON MARKS CLOSE OF EDUCATORS' MEET

Crowd Hears Clergyman on Topic, "Social Intelligence and Spiritual Dynamic"

"The intricacies of our commercial and industrial civilization require a new type of social intelligence without which our civilization is doomed," Dr. Reinhold Neibuhr, noted clergyman and writer, who is professor of applied Christianity in the Union Theological Seminary, New York, declared here Sunday morning in a sermon which marked the closing session of the third annual Southern Conference on Education at the University of North Carolina.

Making indirect reference to the industrial situation throughout the country, Dr. Neibuhr declared that "the people of America are lacking in social intelligence. We are too mechanical. What we need is more of the human touch."

Dr. Neibuhr spoke from the pulpit of the University Methodist church which was filled to capacity. His utterance was regarded as remarkably brilliant and forceful and was received with enthusiasm. The sermon brought to a close the four day session of the conference which visiting delegates declared to be the most successful of the three held so far. The attendance was larger than last year, and the program was notable for the effectiveness of the speakers.

Dr. Neibuhr was introduced by President Frank P. Graham of the University. Rev. C. Excel Rozelle, pastor of the church, presided and offered the invocation, and President W. L. Lingle of Davidson College said the benediction. The University glee club under the direction of Professor Harold S. Dyer ren-

GATE CITY ALUMNI FORM UNIQUE CLUB

Five former Carolina students have formed an eating club in Greensboro which is composed of men from some of the other institutions in the state as well. Former students of Guilford, Wake Forest, and several other universities and colleges in the state are members of this Cavalier Club, as it is called.

This small group of men, all of whom have jobs in the Gate City, have formed this club, and have rented a house on Lake Drive. The club resembles a campus social fraternity in that membership in the organization is by invitation only. Two meals are served daily, and a large majority of the members live in the house.

Organized in November, 1928, with sixteen charter members, the Cavalier Club today has a total membership of thirteen. Five former Carolina students now in the club who were charter members, are Homer Coltrane, '25, Hal Marsh, '26, Rufus White, '27, George Wright, '28, and Red Routh, '26.

The members of the club are at present planning to form a basketball team which they intend to enter in the Gate City league. Special uniforms have been ordered.

It is one of the rules of the club that when a member marries, he loses his active membership. "A home away from home," is the motto of the group.

Ferreting Out The Blame

The meager showers of criticism that commenced to fall upon the Carolina football team and Coach Collins immediately upon the loss of the Georgia game waxed mighty like the traditional downpour of pitchforks and devils' horns when the Tar Heels emerged from the fray with the mediocre Georgia Tech eleven with no better than a tie. Some radicals are on the verge of demanding a new coach; others think the team is "shot through" with dissensions and petty misunderstandings; still others excuse the whole matter by saying that football and other college games are a lot of bunk, that it doesn't matter a damn which team wins.

This associate editor is convinced that the sports writers of the state have done more to ruin the Carolina football team than any other agency. When Carolina does win a football game, some backfield man who happened to have the ball when the scores were made is said to have accounted for the victory. If you don't believe this, just glance at the sports page of any daily paper. Such headlines as "Blank beats Mazooka" are by no means unheard of. One can search even a half-page write-up and find never a word about the work of some guard, for example, whose playing was perhaps as much responsible for the victory as that of the ball-carrier. After all, it is the whole team that wins the game and not one man, or any number of men less than eleven. Such a headline as "Carolina beats Mazooka" would be nearer the truth than 'Blank beats Mazooka."

What is the effect of heaping upon one man the publicity due a whole team? The "big head" is certain to take form. A football player who sees his picture in the paper from time to time and sees his name in the headlines every week is apt to conclude that he must be good; in fact, very good. Rationalizing about the situation, he concludes that he'll be good enough for the big game even after smoking cigarettes, to say nothing of certain other unmamable practices. The next idea that enters the head of Mr. Blank is that he might just as well flunk a few courses, since the old school couldn't possibly get along without him.

As long as coaches are able to persuade professors to pass students who are not doing passable work, there will be plenty of headliner men on the flunked-out list. A rule that applies to the average student should apply equally to football players. Strange as it may seem, these and other contributory factors combine to make football players (the headliner men) feel that somehow football is what makes the world go round, after all. The emphasis placed upon football is, of course, too ridiculous to be tied down in a few words. The age of brawn worship is as certain to pass as was the old age of duels. Only time can accomplish it, however.

There is no real spirit in the Carolina football team. A player who will allow himself to receive two "X's" at mid-term hasn't even one earmark of the Old Carolina spirit that reigned on the campus before the days of commercialized football and publicity-soaked players.

A man who hasn't sense enough to know that tobacco, liquor, and loose women don't help him play football doesn't belong at college in any capacity. Likewise, a sports writer who hasn't enough sense to know that one man doesn't win a football game doesn't belong on the staff of a newspaper.

We concur with a fellow student who suggested the other day that Coach Collins kick the sots and cigarette-hounds off the team and begin with another strain of football material. The present stock seems to have "run out."—J. C. W.

Run Rabbits

The most maligned things in the world are, we feel sure, extra-curricular activities—football, track, periodicals, dramatics, debating, and all the rest. And most of the derogatory remarks are habit. The world, for some unknown reason, is subject to fixed ideas. And one of those tenets is that extra-curricular activities have ruined more potential Phi Beta Kappa students than anything you could have. Men on this campus are pointed out as horrible examples of the result of diverted energies.

And there are in this world students, thousands of them, who have sacrificed their A's to baseball and dramatics. But we are willing to bet more money than we have ever seen that those students leave college of infinitely more account than the students who would not be side-tracked. Don't be a good fox hound, unwilling to take your nose off the scent. Instead run your rabbits now and then, and then come back to your mathematical or Spanish fox. If you must, let your fox escape now and then. It won't hurt to make an F.

Of course the ideal situation would be to combine in one hound the faculty of following at the same time the two animals. Some students, remarkable dogs, possess that faculty. But whether you have it or not, run your rabbits. But be the fox hound too, and now and then come back to the original scent. —V. A. D.

The Importance Of Today's Election

Today is election day. With it comes the obligation of all true Americans to seek to make the ballot execute their will. Some citizens, probably half of the qualified voters, who have lost faith in party pledges will remain at home, caring nothing of the outcome.

Regarded by many as being unimportant, the election today is of utmost importance. There are four chief significances which may be attached to the result. Today the voters of the nation will express their approval or condemnation of the policies o fthe present presidential administration. They will condemn or acquit President Hoover and the Republican party for the serious business depression, unemployment and agricultural prostration by their votes today.

A second significance is of historical importance. The extent of the result on the next presidential election is at stake. During the past fifty years, since 1880, every time the party out of power gained control of the House of Representatives in an off election, it has succeeded in electing its candidate for the presidency in the next presidential election. Will the Democrats secure control of the House today or will the Republicans retain their majority.

Another important factor is the relation of the outcome to the tariff. The voters will decide today whether the Republican party shall be retained in power so that the present high tariff can continue to exist or whether the Democrats will be given a majority in the House in order to begin on a revision downward.

Of great significance are the issues of today's election. In some states the prohibition issue is foremost; in others it is used as a camouflage for attacks by advocates of predatory interests on such staunch opponents of Privilege and Corruption as Senators Walsh and Norris.

The problem today is to get out the voters. Are you going to shirk your duty as a citizen, or are you going to use your instrument of sovereignty in government—the ballot box?

Perpetuating Traditions

They have almost come to be periodic in their appearances: lamentations for the former glories and passing traditions of the University. "Old grads" and those idealists among the present college generations regularly bewail the fact that there are no more gentlemen on the campus, that the honor code is being grossly disregarded, that the old school spirit has ceased to exist, and so on into reams and reams of paper.

Many reasons for this state of affairs may be produced, but one of them is particularly apparent. That is, increasingly more students are coming to the University from homes that have never known the influence of the University, from families in which there are no University graduates. There are, also, a number of students here from other states. The members of neither of these two groups are intimately acquainted with the traditional background of the University; they have not been impressed, through pre-college contacts, by Carolina traditions.

In a large measure, the future of the University depends upon the loyalty of its alumni and this loyalty, in turn, depends upon the students here and now receiving and perpetuating to the generations follow them its spirit and ideals. The task of acquainting the campus with the traditions of the University has been delegated to the Daily Tar Heel by J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the Alumni Association, editor of the Alumni Review and before and since his graduation one of the most popular men on the campus. In a talk to the staff Sunday evening, Mr. Saunders designated the Tar Heel as the only "platform" through which the entire student body could be reached, saying that, as such it bears the responsibility of informing the campus of the ancient and time-honored ideals so much revered by Carolina gentlemen in the past, as well as telling of the present activities and organizational advantages of the University. —E. NEIBUHR'S SERMON MARKS CLOSE OF EDUCATOR'S MEET dered two pleasing selections. Dr. Neibuhr chose as his topic "social intelligence and the spiritual dynamic" and based his text on Phillipian 1:9—"and this I pray, that your love may abound yet more and more in knowledge and all discernment."

The problem which we face in our modern life, the noted divine declared, is to maintain the energies which result in ethical conduct and at the same time to direct moral good will so that it will be effective in the complexities of our industrial civilization. Broadly speaking, it is the business of religion to create moral good will, the spirit of love; and it is the business of education of direct this moral energy.

"Perhaps the most perplexing problem which we face," Dr. Neibuhr said, "is that our social relationships are becoming more and more indirect. We are bound together in our society by means of production and transportation. Human sympathy which flows easily at the touch of human hand ceases to flow when men are bound together only by steel. Multiple ownership destroys the sense of responsibility and the multiplication of workers obscures the individual in the crowd.

"If we cannot bring the anarchic forces at the heart of our industrial society under the control of human conscience and intelligence there is no hope for our generation."

Dr. Neibuhr Sunday afternoon led a forum discussion on modern political, religious, and social issues, the meeting being held in the Sunday school room of the Methodist church. He outlined conditions as he found them in Germany and Russia while touring these countries this past summer, and then threw the meeting open for general discussion.

They shut the door on hybrid styles

Quantity production of equipment has long been practiced by the telephone industry. Telephone designers years ago shut the door on many hybrid styles—seeking first to work out instruments which could best transmit the voice, then making these few types in great quantities.

This standardization made possible concentrated study of manufacturing processes, and steady improvement of them. For example, the production of 15,000,000 switchboard lamps a year, all of one type, led to the development of a highly special machine which does in a few minutes what once took an hour.

Manufacturing engineers, with their early start in applying these ideas, have been able to develop methods which in many cases have become industrial models. The opportunity is there!

Tar Heel Coaches Give Grid Team Day Of Rest

Pleased With Showing of Team Against Much Heavier Georgia Tech Eleven

LIGHT WORKOUT TODAY

Intense Preparations for Game With State College To Begin Wednesday

Being pleased with the showing of the Tar Heels against Georgia Tech last Saturday, Coach Chuck Collins decided to give the varsity a day of rest yesterday. Both Coach Collins and Coach Bill Cerney were of the opinion that it was the best performance that the Carolina team had turned in this year.

"The performance of the Tar Heels against Tech was one of the best exhibitions of real football that the Tar Heels have ever exhibited," stated Coach Cerney. He was of the opinion that Carolina's inability to put over a winning touchdown when the team was deep in Tech territory should be attributed largely to Tech's greatly outweighing the Tar Heels.

The Jackets outweighted the Tar Heels from five to twenty pounds per man. A comparison of tackles reveals that Maree and Speer each weigh over 205 pounds, and that Thompson, Underwood and McDade weigh 185, 178, and 190 respectively.

Except for a possible scrimmage session for the reserves, the Tar Heels will have a light workout today. Intensive preparations for the State College game Saturday will start Wednesday with scrimmage for the "first 33."

State College has made a very poor showing so far this season, and the Tar Heels are conceded a big edge in the contest, but State always points to the game between North Carolina's two state-supported institutions, so a hard fought struggle is expected Saturday.

Alabama Retains Leadership With Five Games Won

The standings of the southern conference football teams including contests of Saturday, November 1, follow:

Duke Enrollment Increases

An official report from Duke University states that the enrollment this year in the University exceeds that of last year by three hundred students. The enrollment for men totals one thousand seven hundred and thirty while the enrollment for women is only five hundred seventy-five—not half as large as the enrollment for men. The greatest increase in students, however, is in evidence on the woman's campus where there are more than two hundred twenty-five more girls than last year.

Plays Alert Game

His recovery of Herron's on side kick-off late in the second quarter of the Tech game and his recovery of Barron's fumble just before Carolina's 80-yard march in the third period are indicative of the fact that Bob Blackwood played a very alert game Saturday.

New Dorms Drops First

The much vaunted passing attack of New Dorms was unable to get started and Ruffin defeated New Dorms by a score of 13-0. This defeat will probably decide the dormitory championship, as the two teams were tied for top place in the standings with no defeats. The standing now is:

Team	W.	L.
Ruffin	6	0
Aycock	4	2

The game was decided in the first five minutes when Grossman took a pass from Riggs and scampered the rest of the way across the line for the first score of the game. The other score came when Royster leaped high into the air and caught a pass behind the goal. Riggs made the extra point on a pass. Hampton's passing and Purser's defensive work at center featured for New Dorms.

Kappa Sigs Win Upset

The twelfth place Kappa Sigs woke up yesterday afternoon long enough to defeat the Sigma Nus, favorite to win the fraternity championship, by a score of 13-0. The work of White and Bagby, each of whom scored a touchdown, was the main feature of the game. The Sigma Nus at no time very seriously threatened to score. All of the scoring was done on passes, White scoring the extra point. This defeat leaves four teams tied for top place with no defeats, although the Dekes are one up on the rest of the field. The standings, including yesterday's games, are:

Team	W.	L.
Betas	3	0
Phi Gams	3	0
A. T. O.'s	3	0
Zeta Psi	5	1
Sigma Nu	4	1
Psi Sigma Kappa	4	1

Steele Loses

Aycock defeated Steele by a score of 19-0 in the intramural tag football league yesterday afternoon. Potter, with 13 points, and Longest, with 6 led the scoring for Aycock.

Zeta Psi Wins Thriller

In a game which at no time was certain as to the outcome, Zeta Psi resorted to first downs to defeat the K. A.'s by 9-8 in first downs. Barber, of Zeta Psi, and Cromartie, of K. A., made the touchdowns. Cromartie ran Thirty-Six Year Rivalry To Be Renewed When State Institutions Meet.

After a "suicide stretch of schedule" against the Southern Cnference pace-setters, the Tar Heels of North Carolina this week swing back into their campaign for Big Five honors, and resume the quest by meeting N. C. State here Saturday afternoon.

The ancient rivalry between the sister state institutions shows Carolina fifteen victories, four ties, and three losses for 22 games of thirty-six year rivalry.

Carolina will have the psychological advantage due to a traditional habit of defeating State, but a lively contest is promised in view of the way State's fire-eaters, shifting players and coaches with great frequency, have been coming out of late.

The Wolves gave Wake Forest a great fight before the Deacons won 7-0, while Carolina had to shoot its bolt to take Wake Forest 13-7.

Tech and Tar Heels first met in 1894. It took the Wolfpack six seasons and seven games to cross the Tar Heels goal, that

WADE ISON OF THE CHARLOTTE NEWS "HEARS RUMblings of Bill Alexander's scalp being wanted in Atlanta and Chuck Collins' in Chapel Hill."

He continues, "The matter of Alexander being put on the skids hasn't so much foundation as has that that Chuck Collins may be ousted at Chapel Hill. Alexander has been the bigger failure here of late though. But they love him in Atlanta and he has done worlds for Tech including his hook-ups with Pop Warner, Tad Jones and Knute Rockne. We are of the opinion that Chuck saw the writing on the wall last year when he started talking Georgetown.

". . . Collins' lack of success that can't be determined has been in his line which first stringly speaking is o. k., but has no reserve strength. The reason for the Georgia defeat, we learned authoritatively, is not other than this reason combined with the fact that Georgia's shift was a constant puzzle to its Tar Heel adversaries. Yes, there're a lot of things that may happen this winter."

WE WOULD LIKE TO KNOW IF THE QUEEN CITY SPORTS writer insinuates that Chuck Collins is not loved in Chapel Hill and North Carolina, and also just what he calls an unsuccessful season.

We also would like to know if he thinks that a group of tackles and ends with little or no previous varsity experience can be expected to play all-American football in the opening games of the season. The performance of the Tar Heel line in the Tennessee game, the fifth game of the season, was A-1. It might be fitting to point out here that the football season is only half over and that the Tar Heels have four more games to play. Three victories, two losses and one tie is not bad either.

Well! Mr. Ison must be getting the critical alumnus' attitude: "If we win a game, we have a wonderful team; if we lose a game, give us the coaches' scalp." Yes! We, too, quite often, have a hard time finding something for our column.

SEVENTEEN FIRST DOWNS TO EIGHT WAS THE STORY of yards gained from scrimmage in the Carolina-Georgia Tech battle, but first downs do not win football games. Coach Chuck Collins is facing the same situation which he faced three years ago. The Tar Heels would drive down to the 20 or even to the five yard line, and lose the ball, and as a rule always outscored opponents in first downs. In spite of all that the coaches could do that year, touchdowns came few and far between.

Coach Collins has no idea of letting such a situation arise in the Tar Heel camp again, and in all probability darkness will be the only thing to halt long offensive scrimmages at scoring touchdowns during the practices this week.

THE TAR HEEL LINE again acquitted itself nobly. Time and again the "green" forwards threw back the Yellow Jackets when under the shadow of their own goal, and when it came to opening holes for the Carolina backs, the gaps in the right side of Tech's line often were wide enough to "drive a wagon through."

Ned Lipscomb is our bet for all-state center, and we would suggest to the Atlanta sports scribes that they scour the conference thoroughly before they select some one else for the pivot position on the mythical team.

BOB BLACKWOOD WAS smart for Tech's on side kick-off trick. That dash for Herron's 15-yard kick-off was typical of the alert game which this second year varsity guard played throughout the game.

If these sophomores, Stuart Chandler and Erwin Walker, continue the football that they played against Tech, and show improvement as they have this fall, there will be another able halfback and consistent end on the gridiron for the next two years.

HERE'S ONE FOR RIPLEY. Believe it or not, Rip Slusser gained one more yard from running plays than the total for all of Carolina's backs. The team's total was 78 yards; his was 79. It was this way. Three of the Tar Heel backs gained a total of minus 35 yards. Stuart Chandler ripped off 24 yards for the afternoon; Henry House hit the line three times for ten yards. Add the plusses and minuses for yourself.

LOOKING AT GAMES played elsewhere, we find that our neighbors only twelve miles distant are continuing their march toward a perfect season except for an early season defeat at the hands of Laval's Gamecocks. Unless we are sadly mistaken, in spite of the fact that he is pointing to the two games, Coach Jimmy DeHart is going to lose two of the remaining contests on his schedule. Kentucky invades the Duke horseshoe Saturday, and the other game is December 6. They both will be very close games, however, and upsets are possible.

WAKE FOREST'S LOSS TO Temple was more or less expected, but State and Davidson must have played much different football from that which they have shown in recent weeks. Maybe they are saving for the Tar Heels.

Another red jersey didn't pass the Carolina goal until 1919. Except for the tie battle in 1899, the Tar Heels won every game from 1894 to 1901 by large scores, ranging from 10-0 to 44-0.

The Techmen eked out scoreless ties in 1904 and 1905, but a break in relations followed the 1905 meeting, and State had to wait until after the World War to stack up their first victory.

Carolina barely won the first post-war game 13-12, but Tech won in 1920 13-3. Dick Gurley, now coach at Lenoir-Rhyne, led State to that win. Runt Lowe's field goal saved the Tar Heels from shut-out, but Lowe's fumble let Faucette sprint half the field for State to win 7-3 the next year.

Monk McDonald's 95-yard run for touchdown won the 1922 game, 14-9, for Carolina's South Atlantic Champions of 1922, and four games following the Tar Heels won by shut-out counts.

Jack McDowell, State's great quarterback of all time, led Tech to a 19-6 victory in 1927. The 1928 game was a 6-6 tie, in which Mac Gray, Tar Heel sub, scored on a pass on the last play. Carolina's great offensive machine of last year wiped out that tie with a stinging 32-0 victory.

sterilization was reduced to the absolute minimum consistent with safety when the condition first appeared, and during this period the amounts used were actually less than one half the usual dosage.

The origin of the trouble is two-fold. First, the slow rain falling continuously during the three days of last week soaked out of the leaves on the wooded watershed large amounts of vege table extracts which imparted color, taste and odor to the water reaching the stream from which the supply is taken. Due to the extremely dry weather prevailing the fall the concentration of this leaf extract was much greater than is the case when frequent rains occur during the leaf-fall season. Second, it was discovered upon investigation Saturday that the two-mile section of the Chapel Hill-Graham highway which traverses the upper part of the Morgan Creek watershed has received a surface treatment of a tar compound just prior to the rains of last week. Small amounts of phenolic substances had been washed from this roadway and found their way into the water supply stream. The medicinal, or iodoformish, taste and odor were due largely to this cause.

After extensive laboratory experiments a successful treatment process was develpode by Messrs. Bennett and Baity on Sunday morning, employing small but defenite amounts of ammonia and chlorine applied in a particular way, which completely eliminated the odor and taste. Emergency equipment was hastily assembled and installed, and by Sunday afternoon the plant was producing a wholly satisfactory product. On Sunday night the taste-bearing supply of water in the elevated tank and distribution system was flushed out and wasted. Consumers will find the water returning to its normal condition as soon as the residual water is completely cleared from the mains and house piping systems.

In spite of the disagreeable taste and odor of the water it has at all times been perfectly safe for domestic use. No chemical or bacteriological constituents have been present which would produce any harmful physiological effect upon the human organism. The infinitesimal amounts of phenols present were sufficient to produce taste and odor, but no harmful effects would have resulted from many times this concentration.

Bare feet on damp floors may give you "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

ON the floors of showers and locker rooms, there the little ringworm parasite that causes "Athlete's Foot" is right at home. Tinea trichophyton is the name, and in colleges as far apart as California and Pennsylvania it has been found that 50% of the men have it. Again, the U. S. Public Health Service reports that "at least half of all adults suffer from it at some time."

"Athlete's Foot," golfer's foot, toe itch, dobie-itch—there are many names for the same thing, and the symptoms are redness between the toes, with i-t-c-h-i-n-g—or a thick, moist skin condition—or a dryness with little scales. The danger signals vary, but authorities agree that they are all traceable to the ringworm germ, tinea trichophyton.

It lurks in the very places where we all go for cleanliness and health—on the edges of swimming pools and showers—in gymnasiums—on locker- and dressing-room floors. In spite of modern sanitation (you have to boil socks 15 minutes to kill it) this fungus parasite infects and re-infects bare feet almost any time they come in contact with damp floors.

Absorbine Jr. kills the germ of

"ATHLETE'S FOOT"

Tests in a famous New York "lab" have revealed that Absorbine Jr. penetrates flesh-like tissues deeply and that wherever it penetrates, it KILLS the ringworm germ.

It might not be a bad idea to examine your feet tonight. At the first sign of the symptoms mentioned, douse on Absorbine Jr. And keep a bottle handy in your locker as a preventive. Use it after every exposure of bare feet on damp floors. At all druggists—$1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Springfield, Mass.

MEYER ADVISES Y TO FIGHT FOR INDIVIDUALIZATION

Civilization of Today Tends to Combine Individualization With Socialization

At the meeting of the junior-senior Y cabinet Monday night, F. M. James, treasurer of the Y, made a finance report, and announced that a final report on the campaign for soliciting subscriptions to the Y among the faculty will be made at a supper to be held next Thursday night.

Beverly Moore, chairman of the human relations committee, announced the personnel of his committee, both students and faculty, and stated that a human relations institute will meet at this University during the month of February.

H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y, announced that a student-faculty conference will be held at Detroit from December 27 to the 31st, and asked that anyone interested in going make plans to go with the delegation which will represent Carolina. A delegation of about ten or more is expected to attend.

K. C. Ramsey was appointed to solicit subscriptions to the Intercollegiate magazine.

At the meeting of the sophomore cabinet H. D. Meyer, professor of sociology, gave a talk on the basis for forming a philosophy of life. Meyer stated, "Freedom comes through obeying the laws of civilization, and this civilization of today tends to mass people together and to combine individualization with socialization. This is a problem that we can start working with here at our school." He advises to fight for individualization and to search for the point at which it must pass over into socialization.

A very live discussion was held at the freshman friendship council concerning problems of study and outside activities.

BULKHEAD NEEDED ALONG SEA COAST

Saville and Gelineau, New Jersey Engineer, Survey Wrightsville

The property owners at Wrightsville beach last week heard two experts recommend the construction of a jettied sea wall as the only means of halting the encroachment of the sea on the nearby strand.

These speakers were Thorndike Saville, professor of hydraulic and sanitary engineering at the University of North Carolina, and Victor Gelineau, chief enginner of the state of New Jersey. They also recommended steps to secure aid in the sea wall project by state legislation.

The North Carolina department of conservation and development, of which Saville is the chief engineer, selected points along the coast from the observation of which they hoped to secure data on the rate of erosion of the coast line. These points were Carolina beach, Wrightsville, Morehead, and Nag's Head.

This was done in 1927 and since then $2000 has been spent each year to compile data and make topographical maps.

According to this data there is a general and steady encroachment of the sea on the strand at Wrightsville beach, and at all the inshore beaches as well. It is also stated that Masonboro inlet is 3000 feet farther north than it was in 1910 and that Moore's inlet is 500 feet farther south.

As a remedy for these gradual changes Mr. Gelineau, who has been combatting a similiar problem in New Jersey, recommended at Wrightsville a bulkhead, probably located at the high water line and built parallel to the sea with groins and jetties perpindicular. He went into the details of their construction and gave a rough estimate of the cost of such a construction.

Mr. Gelineau suggested that these projects be financed by the state legislature, as those of New Jersey are supported. When this will have been finished, he thinks the coast line of North Carolina will be as good as any on the Atlantic.

HOUSE ON STATE TOUR THIS WEEK

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, will give three talks during the week. Mr. House speaks first in Albemarle to the civic club of that city on the subject of "Libraries." He will also address a group in Charlotte on this same subject on Thursday.

Going to Red Springs on Saturday, the executive secretary will appear before the Flora McDonald college for women there.

History Of South Building Recalls Alumni Faithfulness

By Otto S. Steineich

South building is the first structure a Carolina student sets foot in as he arrives on the campus. What varied emotions does the freshman experience as he timidly walks up the wide steps surmounted by an imposing colonnade. The freshman is stricken with awe before the impressive grandeur of the white columns; he is overcome with reverence for the building's age and what that age represents; he thinks of the illustrious men who have preceded him, walking up the steps as he is even now doing; he thinks of the past, and most important of all he thinks of the glorious future.

"Old South," as it is affectionately called by alumni to whom it is very dear, is worthy of the awe and respect paid to it by the sons of Carolina. South carries well the dignity of its 132 years and seems well conscious of the fact that it is the hub around which the entire life of the University radiates, for on bright sunny days it seems to expand and smile down on the students as they pass on the way to their classes.

In 1797 the officials decided that the University needed another building. After much deliberation by the state legislature, and after the architect's plans had been approved, the cornerstone of South building was finally laid on April 14, 1798. The cornerstone had been laid, but this did not necessarily mean that the construction of the building would continue. The foundation had already been excavated about three years before the state legislature authorized the officials of the University to conduct a lottery in order to raise $4,000 to complete the building. We must remember that at this time lotteries were quite the thing, and were practically the only means by which organizations could raise money. In this lottery there were 1500 tickets to be sold at five dollars each. There were to be 531 prizes and 969 blanks; there was to be one $1500 prize, one $500 prize, one $250, one $200, two $100, five $50 prizes, ten $10 dollar prizes and 500 $5 prizes. The prizes amounted to $5500 and left a profit of $2,215.45. General Lawrence Baker won the largest prize. In 1802 another lottery was held which yielded $2,865.36. With the proceeds from these two lotteries and by the aid of numerour donations, enough funds were raised to complete the building in 1814.

When South was built someone wrote to the papers and signing himself "Citizen," denounced it as "a palace-like erection, which is much too large for usefulness and might be aptly termed 'The Temple of Folly' planned by the Demi-God Davie." (The building was not planned by Davie but by Governor Speight.)

At the time of the completion, the Bursar's office was on the first floor to the right, opposite to this was the registrar's office, and back of the registrar's office on the front was the president's office. The rear center was devoted to a classroom. At each end were dormitory rooms except for one large recitation room. The second and third floors were taken up by dormitory rooms.

South remained in use as lecture hall, dormitory and administration building until 1902 when the administration offices were

Crittenden Writes About N. C. Coast

Dr. Charles C. Crittenden, professor in the history department, has an article in the October issue of the North Carolina Historical Review. His subject is "The Seacoast in North Carolina History."

Dr. Crittenden said that the coast of the northern part of Carolina although in appearance the same as that of Maryland and Virginia, is far different. Its apparent good harbors, large inlets, and indented coastline are locked in by sand reefs. "It's not difficult to understand why, with such obstacles in the way, North Carolina has never been able to develop a great overseas commerce."

Three treacherous capes render trading dangerous. The charts and maps of this coast are often inaccurate due to the constant changes in the coastline. These changes are due to the gradual movement of the sand along the beach which fills in the inlets. After a terrible storm great changes are noticed as new bays have been formed and old ones obliterated.

The various places where trading might be carried on were enumerated by Dr. Crittenden and their faults and lack of facilities pointed out. Different efforts were made to improve these spots but nothing of merit was accomplished. Nothing that man could do could stop the ravages of nature.

PLAYMAKERS WILL NOT GO ON TOUR

Northern Trip Abandoned This Year Because of Depression Throughout Country

For the first time in the history of their trooping, the Carolina Playmakers will not make the annual northern tour this quarter. This announcement was made following a meeting of the directors of the organization who decided that a tour would be impracticable this fall largely in consideration of the existing financial condition here and in other sections of the country.

This is the first time since 1926 that the Playmakers have not piled actors, scenery, and the complete paraphernalia for a three act production into a big blue Carolina bus, and set out on a two weeks tour through the north. Three trips are made each year by the organization. These consist of a northern, southern, and western journey, the first of which is taken in the fall, the second in the winter, and the western trip in the spring.

For three consecutive years they have played in New York City. Last year they went as far as Boston, where they were received by Governor Frank Allen at the Massachusetts State House. In Boston they presented their bill for two successive night in the Fine Arts Theatre. This was one of the longest tours ever made by the Playmakers. However, in 1928 they reached New Haven to play in Professor Baker's theatre at Yale. In 1926 they made their first tour north. On this occasion they reached Washington and were received by President Coolidge at the White House. The following year they went as far as New York City and Plainfield, New Jersey. Since 1927 they have played annually in the MacMillan Academic Theatre of Columbia University.

Resigned to the impracticability of making the northern tour, the officers of the Playmakers staff are planning an extensive southern tour. Jacksonville has already been booked, and it is possible that Miami may also be placed on the itinerary.

BASON IS ILL

John E. Lear, professor of electrical engineering, is now serving as head of the department of electrical engineering in the absence of George F. Bason. Bason, the regular head of the department, is confined to his home because of illness and will not be out for several days. Persons connected with this department will see Professor Lear in his office until Bason recovers.

Commerce Freshmen Notice

Dean Carroll will not meet the freshmen of the school of commerce at chapel period this morning as has been announced.

N. C. CHEMISTRY SOCIETY TO HEAR KAMM IN RALEIGH

Research Director of Parke-Davis Company Will Speak Tomorrow Night

The fall meeting of The North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society will be held tomorrow night at 8:00 p. m. in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium at State College in Raleigh. Dr. Oliver Kamm, research director for Parke-Davis and Company, will be the main speaker. His subject will be "Our Present Knowledge of the Active Substances of the Pituitary Gland." Dr. Kamm completed his training and received his degree from the University of Michigan in 1915. Following this he taught chemistry at his alma mater and later at the University of Illinois. He resigned his position at the latter institution in 1920 to become research director for Parke-Davis, manufacturers of pharmaceutical products.

Dr. Kamm's scientific interests have been the relation between structure and physiological actions in organic compounds organic analysis and medical chemistry in general. He is widely known for his outstanding work on the isolation and separation of the physiologically active principles of the ductless glands, especially the pituitary. These extremely potent substances, essential to health and life itself, are of vital importance to the chemist and to the doctor, and the results of Dr. Kamm's research have already given us preparations which are being greatly used in the lessening of human suffering.

Dr. Kamm, besides being a well known investigator, is an excellent speaker and can explain technical terms in a clear and lucid manner and does not hesitate to introduce humor into his talks to bring out a point clearly. The public is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

The second meeting will be held at Duke University on December 1, at which Dr. McPherson, president of The American Chemical Society, will speak. The winter meeting will be at Chapel Hill and the date will be selected later. Dr. Bigelow of Duke and Dr. H. D. Crockford, secretary and treasurer of the North Carolina Chemical Society and assistant chemist of the University, will be on the program.

Playmaker Ushers

Through the courtesy of the management of the Carolina Playmakers it will be possible for a few men to watch this season's production as ushers. Tuxedos will be required. Men interested should see Bill Harris during chapel period today in the business office, second floor, Playmakers Theatre.

Examination for Graduate Students

A French reading examination for graduate students who are candidates for either M.A. or Ph.D. degrees will be given on November 22 at 9:30 A. M. probably in room 306, Murphey hall. Dr. G. W. Fenley will meet those who are interested in a preparatory class for this examination this afternoon at 2:30 in 307 Murphey. This class, if established, will meet two or three times a week until the date of the examination.

What Must Be Done About the Buccaneer?

One of the bills on the calendar of the Dialectic Senate—"Resolved, that the Carolina Buccaneer should be abolished"—caught our attention yesterday as we were perusing the columns of this paper. We were particularly interested in last evening's open discussion of this topic, as it seems that controversy over the campus comic has reached a level unusually high for our sterile time. This query is timely not because the Dialectic Senate proproses to discuss it, but because of its interest to almost every student. But perhaps the Di's analysis will bring out some points heretofore obscure.

There are apparently three elements participating: first, those who would continue the Buccaneer in its present status; second, those who would abolish the publication; and third, those who advocate purgation.

In the first group are the liberal minded who favor little or no restraint in publication of materials. (This does not take in the members of the staff inclusively.) These are the ones who say that the students pay a very small fee for the comic and that the readers are well satisfied with the subject matter and receive a full measure of enjoyment.

Those who propose to do away with the Buccaneer declare that the subject matter is indecent and that there is no excuse for indecency. The publication gives readers outside of Chapel Hill an impression of the University which is entirely distasteful, and such an impression is derogatory to the best interests of the University. There are also those who think the Buccaneer is not worth the money and that the fee paid by students might be put to better uses.

The purgers propose stricter censorship of the subject matter. They would continue the publication because they believe the campus needs and is willing to pay for a comic magazine.

Now, the Daily Tar Heel is not taking sides with any of these elements, nor is it offering any panacea for the existing evils, whatever they may be. We are interested in the outcome of the Senate meeting merely to get an idea as to the consensus of opinion of a fairly representative group of forty or fifty students. As stated above, we are not proposing a remedy for the situation, but we venture to say that if the question were put to a vote of the student body it would be found that the vast majority of students fall into the first category mentioned.

—B. M.

Gradual Encroachment Upon Driving

The town authorities have extended the prohibited parking zones to include a district near the post office. A short while ago the enforcement of a regulation against the parking of cars after midnight on the hard surface in the residential districts was instituted. These new traffic rules, coupled with the inuumerable ones already in effect, tend to make driving in the town burdensome. It is very difficult to find parking space in the business district, and the loss of any of it which is now available will further reduce the already meagre allotments.

A large number of students and townspeople use the post office for a few moments at the time. It has been their practice to draw up to the curb, transact their business in the building, and leave immediately. The new ordinance, which makes a great part of the road in front of the post office prohibited, will cause much inconvenience. The forbidding of night parking seems entirely out of keeping with reason. It is well that vehicles be kept off of the streets in the business section at night, but to force the occupants of dwellings to park their cars at night in out-of-way and unhandy places seems to be taking the thing too far. Chapel Hill is a small town and things could be allowed here that would be impossible in cities.

It seems that while the number of automobiles in town is constantly increasing the town is lessening the amount of parking space. In an effort to prevent traffic jams, Franklin street has been designated a through thoroughfare. At the same time the regulations concerning the entrance and leaving of alleys are continued in effect, thereby continuing the necessity of driving twice in order to go in a desired direction. The town council must gloat in fiendish glee as it tells the motorists what they must and must not do concerning generally accepted privileges.—E. F. Y.

THE "BUC," AGAIN

To the Editor:

Would you please inform me as to how or in what manner it would be possible for me and a group of my friends to discontinue our subscription to the Buccaneer, the so-called "funny" magazine of the campus.

Next quarter, at registration time, we do not want to pay for the magazine which we in no way want to read. It is a most un-comical and plainly puerile magazine, fit for no student with claims to education or self-respect to read. We realize, of course, that the whole payment of all publications is made in one lump fee, but it is necessary to change that arrangement as there are too many students who do not wish to receive the Buccaneer, nor do they wish to pay for any part of it.

C. A. R.

To the Editor:

AND AGAIN THE "BUC"

Pending the fate of that highly estimable periodical, the Buccaneer, may I suggest a highly practical reason for its continuance? Here's the situation:

Years ago, when I was in the midst of those days of blissful flirtation at high school, I was considerably charmed by a fine young lady there. But she didn't reciprocate.

Now that I've become a man (I'm now a sophomore) of course I care nothing for that young lady, but everything for another. But just recently that former flame flared up to me (Oh, I hope this doesn't sound conceited), thinking I was still charmed; but you understand how embarrassed I was. What was I to do?

Well, confronted with this problem, I simply seized the two most recent Buccaneers, and sent the offending young lady these nice clean copies. And, to my great joy (I'm sorry this sounds so conceited) I've never heard from her since.

"W. R."

RECOMMENDATION FOR RELIEF

To the Editor:

In view of the present situation of much unemployment and the consequent probability of increased distress among certain people of Orange county, the Board of County Commissioners, and the County Board of Public Welfare, having met in joint session, request that the people of Orange county give especial attention to the following four points in an effort to meet this situation.

It is recommended:

1. That all persons who are able to do so employ other persons in every possible way.

2. That farm owners take on new tenants, especially those who wish to go back to the farm from town.

3. That private agencies extend their activities and that the public contribute liberally towards the support of such agencies. (This is meant to apply to the local charitable work of churches, parent-teacher associations, King's Daughters, Red Cross, civic clubs, fraternal orders, etc.)

4. That since county funds are insufficient to meet the situation of emergency poor relief it is urged that contributions for the purpose of alleviating conditions in connection with cases not reached by private agencies be made to George H. Lawrence, superintendent of public welfare, Chapel Hill.

JOHN H. HANNER, chairman Board of County Commissioners.

ROY M. BROWN, chairman County Board of Public Welfare.

IN DEFENSE OF THE TEAM

To the Editor:

In an editorial yesterday the writer speaks concerning the Carolina football team, its discipline, morale, scholarship, et cetera. For the number of insinuations and assertions he has included in his lengthy editorial, we would like to see some definite facts cited.

Aside from the fact that the writer might have seen the mid-term grades of the student body posted in the registrar's office, we venture to say that he has availed himself of no first hand information on the above subjects.

Concerning the mid-term grades, it might be well to state that only two football players received unfavorable reports and that they, like other Carolina students, have one week in which to bring up their deficiencies.

The writer probably has not seen the team in practice more than three times this season. How can he be able to judge whether or not there is morale and fight in the team? During the whole season, and particularly during the past few weeks, the team has gone about its work with a great deal of fight and pep. It is lamentable that the student body does not show the same enthusiasm from the stands that the team does on the field.

As for the morality of the football players, we do not see how the writer can be so well informed, since he is not in any way connected with the team or its members. Head Coach Chuck Collins has already this year disciplined members of the team, for infractions of the training rules; we wonder if he is not still capable of disciplining the team? The student body might aid the head mentor, by helping the players keep training, rather than offering them cigarettes, etc.

It is for the alumnus who lost his two dollars on the game to start finding fault with the morality, morale, and coaching of the team. R. A. M.

WATER FAMINE

To the Editor:

We are all realizing more and more every day the importance of cultivating the friendship of our friends in the rural district. The people of Chapel Hill and Carrboro probably never did realize quite so much as in the past three days just how valuable rural friendship really is to us.

One farmer stated to me yesterday that people from Chapel Hill and Carrboro had for three days been hauling water to carry back to town to be used as drinking water and for making coffee.

If anyone has tried any of the numerous beverages that people claim to have during the football season and has found them to be of a worse taste than our water supply, I am quite sure that there have been some funerals for the sampler of the drink would not be able to live to tell the tale.

We are hoping and praying that Mr. Bennett of the water department will devise some way whereby we can get back our good old Chapel Hill water.

History Of Old South Recalls Faithfulness

moved to the Alumni building. At the time of the moving of the offices C. T. Woolen was registrar. In addition he was also enrolled as a freshman in engineering. The actual move was made during December and January of the school year 1901-02. One of the hardest problems encountered during the moving was that of transporting to the Alumni building the heavy iron safe that guarded the records.

In the spring of 1925 South building was condemned as unsafe and was to be demolished. The alumni and ex-president Chase, however, objected to this and the state legislature appropriated $150,000 for the building's repair. This amount was not sufficient to cover the expenses of repairing the exterior and reconstructing the interior and so another $100,000 was raised in order to have "Old South" made serviceable again. The building was saved by constructing a concrete structure on the inner side of the brick wall.

Today the administration offices are back in South; the whole building is taken instead of three offices; in the basement are the vaults for the records, vaults that have more floor space than the former offices and the troublesome old safe combined.

As before, the business office is located to the right of the entrance, the business office now functions under Mr. Woolen and ten assistants. Across the hall stands the registrar's office where Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, Jr., and four assistants take charge of the academic records of the students. President Frank Graham has a suite of offices and an executive secretary and stenographer to help him in his work. The three offices take the entire floor. The bookkeeping department of the University service plants and the University mailing room take up the basement floor.

On the second floor are the offices of the deans of the college of liberal arts, of the graduate school, and of students. These together with the offices of the alumni association and the news bureau occupy the whole second floor. The fast growing University extension division occupies the third floor entirely. The attic is used as storage space by the various departments.

To the visitor who approaches South from the north, the outside will appear the same as always except that it has lost its sheltering ivy.

Wherever its condition was such that it was necessary to replace with new material, the old was copied exactly in the new. On the south side the architecture was changed to conform with the architecture of the new buildings. A portico with stately Ionic columns was built and this side is now the front and the north side the back.

The interior finish was kept very simple except in the main lobby which has pilasters, paneled walls and a terrazo floor. The president's office is finished a little finer than the rest of the building. It has a decorative plaster cornice and wood molding panels on the walls. The entire building is fireproof.

Those loyal sons who saved "Old South" once will not be here to save her a second time, if need be, it is for us to become imbued with the Carolina spirit of loyalty to old friends and to pass it on to succeeding classes so that in case of need our old buildings will have friends.

COMMUNITY CLUB WILL STUDY AMERICAN MUSIC

The music department of the Community Club will hold its regular meeting today, November 5, at 3:30 in the music building in room 3.

This begins a series of several meetings on different phases of American music. Among these will be Negro music, music of the American Indians, and modern orchestral compositions.

The meeting today is in charge of Mrs. G. H. Lawrence, who, after giving a brief sketch of the beginnings of music in America, will discuss the works of Edward MacDowell; and there will follow a program of his compositions.

Mrs. P. H. Winston, Miss Henrietta Smedes, and Mrs. T. S. McCorkle will execute groups from the smaller suites for piano; and the first movement from the Celtic Sonata will be played on the Ampico piano.

Mrs. L. C. MacKinney, accompanied by Miss Brown, will sing several songs for soprano, and Mrs. G. A. Harrer, a group for contralto.

A new coat of paint has been given the inside of The Carolina Playmaker Theatre since the northern tour was cancelled. Evidently those folk actors who go up there looking for the 'opportunity that knocks but once' have discovered the field of their proper endeavor on the walls of their native theatre.

COLLINS SENDS HEELS THROUGH LIGHT WORKOUT

Today's Scrimmage Will Depend On Condition of the Weather

Head Coach Chuck Collins sent the Tar Heels through an hour of limbering-up exercises on Kenan field yesterday afternoon for the first workout since the Georgia Tech game. These two days of rest come as a relief to the squad, since it has been under a heavy strain since September 3, not having let a day go by without work.

Unless the rains of yesterday continue through today, the squad probably will scrimmage today with particular emphasis being concentrated on offense. State College has a very good line, and for this reason the Tar Heel mentors intend to have the scoring power in tip-top form Saturday to meet this strong forward wall.

In spite of the brusing attack and roughness of the Georgia Tech team, the Tar Heels came through the game with a minumum of injuries. The only member of the squad who will be out of the game Saturday, barring injury in practice this week, is June Underwood, left tackle. Underwood split his finger in the game. The injury is responding to treatment nicely, but Trainer Quinlan does not see how he will be able to return to the lineup until the Thanksgiving game with Virginia.

The "suicide stretch" in the Tar Heels schedule failed to hurt the squad physically as much as the average three games. Trainer Quinlan did not have to go on the field in either the Georgia or the Tennessee games, and only once did he leave the bench during the Georgia Tech battle.

Atlanta sports writers in the Sunday papers were of the opinion that the Georgia Tech team played the best football against Carolina that it has played during the whole of this season and most of last. It took an alert and hard working team to match skill and finesse with the brawn and weight of the opponents, and for this reason the Tar Heel coaches are very much pleased with the showing of the team against Tech in spite of the fact that they were unable to break the tie.

The Carolina football camp will be kept busy for the next ten days on account of the games with State and Davidson. In spite of the fact that Carolina is conceded an edge over these teams, they both will be trying to upset the Tar Heels hopes for the State title.

Twenty-two members of the Marquette University football squad this year were captains of their respective high school or prep school elevens, while nine others were captains of their track, baseball or basketball teams.

Atlanta Sports Scribes Praise Georgia Tech

The Atlanta sports writers who trooped to Chapel Hill to see Carolina-Tech in Saturday's 6-6 tie are unanimous in saying Tech played its greatest game of the year, better even than their 45-0 victory over the South Carolina club that beat Duke. Wrote Morgan Blake, sports editor of the Atlanta Journal: "Georgia Tech came out of the land of shadows Saturday and was a real football team. Tremendous progress was noted and the boys took the train for home feeling better than they have since the first week of the season. They regained the confidence lost in the slaughter at Carnegie Tech, and from now on, will be a tough team to lick."

Freshmen Workout On Muddy Field For Blue Imp Contest

Dummy Practice Carried Out With Good Spirit, in Spite Of Bad Weather

DUKE HAS STRONG TEAM

Despite the fact that the field was rain-soaked and in terrible condition, Coach Enright had his freshman charges out yesterday doing their daily dozen. The weather conditions were not at all favorable for a good hard workout. Yet after a rest of two days and then a rather light workout for the regulars yesterday, the whole squad entered into the spirit of the practice earnestly. Everyone accepted the conditions and went at the business of practice with a will to take in all that the coaches had to give them. They all seem to realize that Duke has a good, strong, team and that they will have to use everything they have to make a good showing.

So with the Duke game ahead, Coach Enright thought it best not to lose any time. He had two teams lined up against each other and both learned the plays. One team played on the offense and the other on defense in a rather lengthy dummy scrimmage. With Barclay, Mullis and Tatum out with injuries, the first team this afternoon showed: Jones and Adair, ends; Strickland and Crane, tackles; McIver and Matheson, guards; Gardner, center. In the backfield there were: Hackney, Phipps, Whitener, and Woollen. The light practice today means that the coaches will work the squad hard and long on the first day that the sun is out, because the Duke freshman have a fine team and as yet they have not lost a game.

Slusser May Annex First-String Position

Rip Slusser, ten-second star, is just a junior among a host of veteran senior ball-carriers at Carolina, but present indications are that Slusser may dispossess Captain Nash of his starting post at right half. Saturday Slusser supplied the punch for Carolina's one touchdown in the 9-7 loss to Tennessee, and Saturday against Georgia Tech the blonde speed-king topped all ground gainers. Slusser made 79 yards, averaging 5 yards a clip, and also handled three of the 14 passes Carolina completed.

STUDENT FEDERATION PLANS EUROPEAN TOUR

Itineraries for the 1931 travel delegation to Europe have been received this week by the New York office of the National Student Federation of America from the London Travel Commission. These tours, composed of and led by students, are a unique way of seeing foreign countries, for, in addition to having student guides, they afford the opportunity of hospitality in private homes and thus a closer contact with the people and countries visited.

There will be several innovations next summer in the arrangements of the itineraries. As in former years all groups start the trip with a week in London and end it with a week in Paris. A separate tour has been planned for Sweden and the Baltic states, obviating a too-hurried glimpse of these interesting countries. In addition there will be several special study groups. Students interested particularly in politics may take the trip to the Balkans, still a center of political instability. It will also be possible for a number of students studying economics and industry to see the parts of Europe where the greatest progress is being made in these fields. Trips to France and Spain, Central Europe, Germany and Austria, and the Latin Countries will also be included. Inquiries about the tours may be addressed to the Travel Department, National Student Federation of America, 218 Madison Avenue, New York City.

It is far easier to be busy than to be thoughtful.—Dr. Hugh Black.

MILLS CONTINUES TO TOP SCORERS ON STATE GRIDS

Branch, Brewer, and Magner Trail High Scoring Wake Forest Flash

Special To Daily Tar Heel

Raleigh, Nov. 4—Despite a shutout of his team in Friday night's game with Temple, Eustace Mills, Wake Forest backfield ace, still leads individual scorers among Big Five teams in the state. With a record of seven touchdowns and one point, giving him a total of 43 points, Mills still maintains his lead over Johnny Branch, Carolina quarterback, and Kid Brewer, Duke halfback.

A touchdown against Georgia Tech Saturday at Chapel Hill gave Branch a total of five six-pointers added to seven extra points, the latter the high number for the state. Brewer scored his sixth touchdown of the season in Saturday's game with Villanova, giving him a total of 37 points with one point after touchdown. Jim Magner, Carolina halfback, runs fourth with 32 points, while Wake Forest's Tex Quillen is next with four touchdowns and six singletons. Murray of Duke, with 25 points holds sixth place, while McCall and King of Davidson round out the eight with 18 points each.

With a total of 99 points tallied this season, Wake Forest still tops the Big Five in the scoring department. Davidson has 96 points with Carolina 3 points behind the Cats in third place. Duke has scored 88 points while State has rung up 51 points. Duke maintains the lead in points scored against them with 28, while Davidson has had 38 points scored against them. Carolina trails the list with 92 points scored by opponents.

Dinner Party at Coker's

W. C. Coker's birthday is the 24th of October, Mrs. John M. Booker's is the 25th, and the wedding anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Charles S. Mangum is the 24th. For several years they have been having a joint celebration of these three important events. This year it was Mr. Coker's turn to be host, and last Saturday evening he gave a dinner party. The guests, besides the Bookers and the Mangums, were Dr. and Mrs. William de B. MacNider and Mrs. W. W. Pierson.

At The Carolina This Week

"Renegades," at the theatre today, is a realistic interpretation of the life of legionnaries in the world-famous French Foreign Legion. The picture, taken from the novel of the same name by Andre Armandy, presents a graphic account of life among the members of this picturesque organization, giving not only the color and adventure of their existence, but also the lesser advertised phases of their work and fighting.

The production, with Warner Baxter in the main role, was supervised by a former legion officer, Louis Van Der Ecker, to insure an accurate depiction.

Thursday's attraction is "The Way of A Sailor," featuring John Gilbert. He is a Gilbert, however, in a role differing from the more polished and sophisticated characterizations that have distinguished his work formerly. This is the first time he has appeared since starring in "Redemption," and in the role of a virile, roughneck sailor the star supplies a portrayal which for his admirers will be novel. Leila Hyams is his leading lady.

Sam Wood did the directing of the photoplay, which was adapted from a sea novel by Albert Wetjen, and as director he has preserved all the color and action, especially in the handling of storm and rescue scenes at sea.

A wide departure from the more conventional type of vitaphone productions is offered by "Liliom," the screen version of Ference Molnar's famous stage play by the same name. Charles Farrell is cast in the leading role while Rose Hobart, a newcomer from the Broadway stage, plays opposite him. The picture, like the play before it, differs essentially from the ordinary course, with the usual action and motivation, of the more average productions, those to which everyone has become accustomed. In revealing the different appeal of this feature Farrell shows notable work, work of a sort displayed in "Seventh Heaven."

A picture in which action and variety abound is "Outside The Law," a story of the San Francisco underworld, which is the feature for Saturday. This picture is a Universal production done on a big scale, with a variety of vivid and unusual scenes secured only with great difficulty. The original story was written by Tod Browning, who achieved fame as director of Lon Chaney's mystery films, and the plot is brought to a totally surprising and unexpected climax. Mary Nolan plays the principal part with Owen Moore playing opposite her.

There were more persons confined in the infirmary yesterday than at any time this quarter. Albert Oettinger, O. Snead, and J. P. Jenrette were suffering from colds; Umberto J. Umana had a cut on the left side of his forehead treated; James W. Ward sustained a sprained ankle; and B. F. James had severe burns on his face and hands dressed.

Joe McCarthy, new manager of the New York Yankees, made his first step in the rebuilding of the Ruppert Rifles into a pennant winner, by cutting loose two of his veteran catchers, Benny Bengough, with the Yankees since 1923, and "Bubbles" Hargrave, obtained from St. Paul last year. McCarthy is making this move to make way for Arnold Jorgens, promising "rookie" receiver, who will share the brunt of the receiving work with Bill Dickey.

COLLEGE PAPERS FACE OPPOSITION FROM CITY PRESS

(NSFA) College Newspapers have gone far since the days of lectures and class appointments with an occasional official utterance by the university authorities when they were simply bulletins.

College editors today have begun to discuss in their columns the big problems which are occupying the world, and they are sometimes finding themselves in difficulties with authorities because of the opinions they express. The Harvard Crimson's editorial on the recent American Legion Convention in Boston is one example. Says the Crimson: "The highest official of what other land would have lent his presence to what, in effect, is merely an excuse for a wholesale brawl, exceeding in its disgusting completeness any similiar spectacle the United States has to offer? Even Boston, with a police commissioner who has been astonishingly vigorous since he has been in power, has seen fit to allow a total relaxation of law and order during the stay in the Hub of the "buddies" of the Legion, those glorious Americans who fought, the slogan says, to make the world safe for democracy, and who have come back to raise hell annually so no one can forget it." The Gastonia strikes of last year also called forth editorials representing all shades of opinion on the problems of labor. This editorial from the California Daily Bruin offers an interesting sidelight on the tribulations of certain college editors.

"It's almost gotten to the place where we are really sorry for college editors. First, a Stanford editor finds himself prepared for the seething cauldron because he dared criticise the political views of the faculty. A second Stanford editor is soundly squelched by President Hoover because he inquired as to how long his university is to be without a president.

Within the past two days every second one of our professional columnists has gone out of his way to take a dirty crack at the Harvard editor who criticised the drunken brawl of the American Legion in the streets of Boston. . . The authority of professional journalism over college writing is a strange thing."

SPANISH LEGEND TOPIC AT LANGUAGE CLUB MEETING

The Philological Club met last night at 7:30 o'clock in the lounge room of the Graduate Club. The paper of the evening was delivered by Professor N. B. Adams of the romance language department. Professor Adams discussed the old legend, famous in Spanish literature, of "The Lovers of Teruel." This legend, it was brought out by the speaker, was probably based on one of the tales from Boccaccio's Decameron, and appeared frequently in Spanish literature from the sixteenth through the nineteenth centuries. A play on the subject by Hartzenbusch is still performed occasionally in Spanish and South American theatres.

NEW PLAY BILL IS PLAYMAKERS' TWENTY-SEVENTH

Presentations Last Three Days Of the Week; Inaugurates Thirteenth Year.

Tonight, Friday, and Saturday, The Carolina Playmakers will present their twenty-seventh bill of original plays in the Playmakers Theatre. The Carolina Playmakers begin the thirteenth year of their existance with this production. And so far prosperity and success have chimed in with their activities. They have had difficulties as any organization will, but each time they have successfully hurdled their troubles and gained in the long run. The recent exodus of Mr. Heffner at first caused some anxiety over affairs which were quickly dispersed when it was learned that Ralph Westerman had accepted the managerial responsibility vacated by him. Added to this piece of good luck came the welcome news that Samuel Selden had returned to the Playmakers after a year's sojourn in New York, and was to assume the position of Associate Director. This is the way the thirteenth year began and from the evidence it seems that luck was with them rather than "again 'em." Of course no one is going to run over thin ice because he has a rabbit's foot around his neck, and maybe there is a little bit of superstition behind the fact that they have painted the theatre instead of going on tour.

The bill consists of three plays. "Samuel Hinkle, Fireman," is a comedy of New England village folk by Joseph P. Fox, of Massachusetts. "The sturdy pride of the women of the Grange and the town fathers is amusingly set forth in the incident of their sending their local fireman, Samuel Hinkle, to the general convention of all the fire chiefs of Massachusetts held annually in Boston."—Professor Frederick Koch.

"Cloey," is a romantic Carolina folk play by Loretto Carroll Bailey, author of "Job's Kinfolks," and a native of Winston-Salem. The play is con-

HOWE SPEAKS TO COMMUNITY CLUB ON POET VIRGIL

Dr. George Howe of the University faculty talked on Virgil at the meeting of the literature department of the Community Club in the first floor social room of the Methodist church on Tuesday evening. Mrs. P. C. Farrar, chairman of the department, presided over the meeting.

Dr. Howe spoke of the period in which Virgil lived as a momentous one in the history of the world. He then sketched the life of the Latin poet and discussed his works, the Eclogues, the Georgics, and the Aeneid. Dr. Howe thought that it was the humanity of Virgil that made his works live in literature for two thousand years and that Virgil was the first in literature to write of common man and the ordinary things of nature. Because of this he was the first great romanticist.

The department will meet again in the social room of the Methodist church on Tuesday November 18 at 8 o'clock. Miss Nora Beust will talk on "Books for Children" and will have books on exhibit.

Argument Heated, But Resolution Condemning Sports Writers Also Fails to Pass.

At the regular meeting of the Dialectic senate Tuesday night a bill to abolish the Carolina Buccaneer was defeated 28-22, and a bill to condemn sports writers for exaggerating the value of football stars was defeated 48-2.

The first bill, Resolved: That the Carolina Buccaneer should be abolished, was upheld by senators Dungan and Rector, and attacked by McIver and Brown. Discussion of this bill was intense and was ended only by a call for a "show-down" from the floor.

The second bill, Resolved: That the sports writers of North Carolina are largely responsible for the inferior condition of the Carolina football team, and that they are, therefore, deserving of condemnation, was debated by Senators Williams and Fleming-Jones for, and Newland, Ramsay, McIver, and Deitz against. Debate on this question threatened at times to become personal but when the vote was taken the bill was decisively defeated. Several senators failed to vote because the bill contained the words "inferior condition." They registered as not voting.

The early part of the meeting was occupied with the election of Senator Charles Rose as seargent-at-arms. Nine men were proposed for membership, George Cocke, C. F. Crum, J. H. D'Alemberte, Marion W. Glenn, John T. O'Neill, J. H. Whitton, Robert R. Reynolds, and Marshall W. Thompson. These men along with four others taken in then formally initiated.

Dean C. T. McCormick of the law school was admitted to honorary membership in the senate.

Infirmary List

Four people on the infirmary list yesterday were suffering from colds; they are: E. P. Cahoon, J. P. Jenrette, Albert Oettinger, and Alex Snead. J. T. Ramsaur was confined with a pain in the stomach. B. F. James was having his face and hands treated for burns, Humberto J. Umana was having a cut on his forehead dressed, and James W. Ward was confined with a sprained ankle.

New Plan Is Inaugurated For Awarding Rhodes Scholarships

Since the state committee will meet December 6 to select the state candidates for Rhodes Scholarships, it might be well to explain the new plan of selection and distribution going into effect this year.

Formerly, two scholars in three years were selected from each state. Four years ago, however, President Aydelotte of Swarthmore College began agitation for a new plan. He worked on the theory that there were not enough candidates in some states to create adequate competition. According to the new plan, each state enters candidates each year. The country is divided into eight districts of six states each. This state is in a group with Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and Tennessee.

Aydelotte discussed the arrangement with old Rhodes scholars, with the Association of American Universities, with the Association of Urban Universities, and with the National Association of State Universities.

The National Association of State Universities was divided in its opinion; the other three groups favored the plan. The trustees of the fund agreed to the proposal for re-arrangement. Philip Kerr, Marquess of Lothian, in an article in the Christian Science Monitor, explained that the Aydelotte plan seemed the means of raising the qualifications in the United States. The Marquess in his capacity of secretary of the Rhodes Trust spent nearly five months in the United States in 1928 investigating conditions that might make amendment advisable.

In May 1929 Parliment authorized an amendment to Cecil Rhodes' will that would in a manner break the will. In July at the celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the fund, over ninety former American scholars discussed the amendment.

According to the amended will, the two best candidates in each state will appear before their district committee, which each state will select the four best of the twelve. The resulting four will represent the district at Oxford University. It is possible for one college or university to furnish all four men. According to the amendment, a student may spend his third year at Oxford, or at another British University, some years after his two at Oxford. With special arrangements, he may spend the third year in any country other than his own.

A number of the provisions remain the same. The yearly stipend of four hundred pounds has not been changed. The general individual qualifications have not been changed. A prospective Rhodes man, representing the United States, must be a citizen of the United States with a five-year domicile, must be unmarried, must have finished his sophomore year in an accredited college or university, and must have passed his nineteenth but not his twenty-fifth birthday by October 1 of the year for which he is selected.

Annual Pharmacy Scholarship And Prizes Reward Excellence

Annually eight awards are given to the students in the pharmacy school who do the best work during the previous year. These awards are given in an attempt to encourage good work among the students as well as to benefit those who are sometimes unable to meet their expenses.

The Bradham prize, offered by C. D. Bradham, of New Bern, is given to the student making the highest general average during the three years' study leading to the degree of Ph.G. The Lehn and Fink gold medal is given annually for excellence in research work.

Besides these two prizes, six scholarships are given. The Howell scholarship of $60 is given for good work during the second year of the pharmacy school. Three scholarships of $75 each are given by H. S. Richardson, of Greensboro, to members of the first, second, and third year classes for excellent marks in scholarship.

Another scholarship of $75 is awarded to a deserving student who will be selected by the dean of the pharmacy school and the donor. This is known as the Council Scholarship.

The Fairchild Scholarship given by S. W. Fairchild of New York City to the high school graduates of the United States who wish to follow pharmacy as a vocation. This scholarship of $300 is awarded on the basis of a competitive examination given to candidates who are high school graduates and who have successfully finished their first year's work in a school or college of pharmacy or department of pharmacy of a university which is a member of the American Association of Colleges of Pharmacy.

Debaters Will Try For Places on Team

The regular meeting of the debate squad in Murphey 201 tonight at 7:30, will be devoted to try-outs for the contest with State College on November 20 and December 9. This will be a dual debate with both schools upholding each side of the question.

Since the debate team from the University of Cambridge has found it necessary to curtail its schedule it is possible that they will find it impossible to engage the University. For this reason, competition for places on the team which will compete against State is expected to be very heavy and keen.

Armistice Program

Armistice Day program will take place next Tuesday in Gerrard hall between the hours of 10:30 and 11:20. The speaker will be Dr. Archibald Henderson, professor of mathematics. All eleven o'clock classes will begin at 11:30.

Bailey Leads in County

According to the results of the votes from two of the precincts of Orange county, Josiah W. Bailey is far in the lead of Congressman Pritchard. The final votes will be received soon and will be published in a later edition of the paper.

Draper Will Speak To Taylor Society

President B. A. Sieder announces that the Taylor Society will hold its second meeting of the year tonight at 7:30 in 103 Bingham hall. Mr. Ed S. Draper, a prominent engineer and land-scape architect of Charlotte, is to be the speaker of the occasion, and his topic is "Southern Textile Mill Village Planning." To illustrate his lecture, Mr. Draper will distribute photographs showing the conditions of certain villages before and after he assumed control. He has designed some of the most attractive mill villages in the South and has some very constructive ideas concerning the needs of mill workers in general.

The local branch is one of the few American student chapters of the Taylor Society, which is an international organization for the furtherance of the principles of scientific management.

POLITICS DEBATED BY PHI ASSEMBLY

Tuesday Night Meeting Given Over to Praise of National Democratic Party.

The discussion at the meeting of the Phi Assembly Tuesday evening took the form, for the most part, of praise for the national Democratic party. The bill tabled from the last meeting, Resolved: That the present business depression in the United States is a result of the high tariff, gave rise to an analysis of the primary doctrines of the two major parties in the United States. Many of the representatives denounced the high tariff as suicidal and unnecessary, but the Assembly was unwilling to go on record as holding it to be the direct and only cause of the economic depression.

The only other bill discussed during the session, Resolved: That in voting the party should be considered rather than the man, became a discussion of party principles. Representative Uzzell opposed the voter who would be an "independent," and lauded the party system. The bill was passed by a majority of one—24-23.

Representative Uzzell, committeeman appointed to confer with the Di Senate representation on the matter of the Mary D. Wright Debate, reported that the Senate had not chosen the subject. The Phi will choose the side when the Di makes its report.

Teachers Will Hear Bradshaw Talk On Freshman Troubles

The eighth annual convention of the north central district teachers of the State Education Association will meet in Raleigh Friday afternoon and Saturday morning of this week.

All of the general sessions will convene in Hugh Morson high school while the departmental programs are to meet in the Tabernacle Baptist church, Christ Episcopal church, and the Sir Walter hotel.

Several Chapel Hill high school instructors as well as those of the University are expected to attend. Dean Francis F. Bradshaw will address the county and city superintendents on "Handicaps That Hinder Freshmen Progress." A. K. King, teacher of history in the Chapel Hill high school, will also address a department.

PROCEEDS OF THE MESSIAH WILL GO TO COUNTY POOR

Benefit Performance To Be Given in Music Auditorium December 15.

Dr. Harold A. Dyer of the music department announces that the second performance of the "Messiah" will be given in the music auditorium on December 15. There will be a performance by the Chapel Hill community chorus, a quartet of professional soloists, and the university symphony orchestra. Professor Nelson O. Kennedy will be at the organ, Mrs. A. S. Wheeler at the piano, and Dr. Dyer will direct.

When given last year on December 16, 1200 persons crowded the Methodist church, the largest assemblage that has ever gathered there. The executive committee of the community chorus, composed of George Lawrence, president; A. J. McHale, vice-president; Mrs. A. S. Wheeler, accompanist; Mrs. T. S. McCorkle, and Billy Hunt, voted to put on the performance this year in the interest of the poor of Orange County.

A small admission fee will charged, with the understanding that all who attend will be contributing directly to the charity fund of the county. The ticket sale will open December 1. The quartet of soloists will be announced at an early date.

The need for charity assistance is greater this year than last year due to the lack of employment. The chorus, numbering 125, voted unanimously to utilize this opportunity to assist the cause. None of the officers, nor anyone connected in any way with the chorus, receives any pay at all. The chorus has been practicing for the last three weeks in the music hall. This organization has retained the best of the vocal talent in the faculty and among the townspeople.

LEGION BENEFIT SHOWS WILL AID LOCAL CHARITY

The Chapel Hill Post No. 6 of the American Legion is sponsoring a movie to be given at the Carolina theatre Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, and again Sunday evening at nine o'clock. Mr. E. C. Smith, manager of the Carolina theatre, has chosen a Ruth Chatterton picture as the offering. The evening performance has been set at nine o'clock so that the showing of the picture will not conflict with church services. As it is against the state law to charge admission on Sunday, a silver offering will be taken at the door.

The proceeds from the show will go to charity. As winter approaches, need for charity becomes greater and greater, and the American Legion hopes to acquire enough money to help needy persons in the township and county.

This movie on Sunday offers a splendid opportunity to the students of the University and the people of Chapel Hill to donate money to a worthy cause; the people who attend the show will derive enjoyment from two sources, first, they will enjoy a fine picture and secondly they will have the pleasure of giving. It is strongly urged that all for whom it is possible attend this show on Sunday.

Playmakers Wise In Abandoning Tour

The decision of the Carolina Playmakers to abandon their annual northern tour because of financial depression throughout the country is a wise move. Such an undertaking would have been a financial gamble and just now no department of the University can well afford to gamble financially.

But aside from the financial risks involved the Playmakers are probably saving their future reputation by abandoning the tour. This season's bill of plays isn't up to what the Playmakers are capable of producing. Loretto Carroll Bailey's "Cloey" is the redeeming feature of the entire bill. And Mrs. Bailey is no longer a student. Nothing could be gained by exhibiting the present bill outside the family.

Of course, the Playmakers might resurrect some of Paul Green's earlier plays, but Mr. Green is now a playwright and these earlier attempts do not portray his true ability. "The No 'Count Boy" has been produced several times—and it is obvious that only skillful actors can portray the true merit of the play.

After all the business depression offers an excellent opportunity for the Playmakers to polish up their technique a little and to re-stock on plays.

Placing The Blame

The Phi Assembly Tuesday evening decided that the present high tariff is not the cause of the present business depression. Of course not. An effect cannot precede a cause, which statement needs no defense. But we do know the cause of the depression, and it is the cause of every depression. And that cause is man's eternal and thoroughly lovable optimism.

You can teach mortals lots of things, but you cannot teach them to grow up. The grown-up, if there were such a thing (there is not), would profit by his experiences. He would never do the same thing twice. But he would become a pessimist. The world is inhabited by a lot of children—some three hundred billion of them. In some ways the children are precocious; in most ways they are grown-up. But they are still children in that they will always have a blind faith in a Santa Claus who will give them something for nothing.

In other words, a man will speculate and speculate again. He will lose and lose again. And then the next generation will speculate and lose. About every twenty years there is a depression. And there always will be depressions, just as long as human nature is optimistic enough to believe it can speculate and get something for nothing.—V. A. D.

cerned with an incident, with the real characters of which the author had close association.

The next and last bill on the program s a farce of Mississippi folk people, written by Arthur Palmer Hudson, a native of that state. With this play Mr. Hudson has conclusively shown that he knows how to turn a simple folk ballad into a highly amusing and hilarious comedy.

The program is as follows:

Samuel Hinkle, Fireman—By Joseph Philip Fox.

The characters:

Samuel Hinkle, Robert Oscar Ludeman; Mrs. Hinkle, Evelyn Brickman; Zeke Hinkle, the son, James S. Queen; Mr. Betts, Evan James Vaughan; Mrs. Betts, Mary Griffith; Abe Kitteridge, Mrs. Hinkle's brother, Gilbert Stamper.

Scene: The sitting room of Mr. and Mrs. Hinkle's home in a small New England village.

Time: A September evening, just after supper.

Robert Proctor, assistant stage manager for this play.

"Cloey."—By Loretto Carroll Bailey.

The characters:

Mrs. Motsinger, Marion Tatum; Cloey, her niece, Mary Ewart; Joseph Hall, a book agent, Joseph Fox; Gracie, a child from next door, Elizabeth Perrow.

Time: Near sunset of a day in early March, twenty years ago.

Thomas White, assistant stage manager for this play.

"Git Up an' Bar the Door"—By Arthur Palmer Hudson.

Thirty-Three Extension Classes Organized With 1,527 Enrollment

The University extension division has just completed the organization of extension classes for the fall term, according to R. M. Grumman, director. Three or four additional classes will probably be organized within the next few days. To date there are sixty-three classes, organized in thirty-three centers throughout the state, with a total registration of 1,527.

Most of the extension class students are school teachers who are working for college credit and for credit to be applied toward raising or renewing their teaching certificates. The courses offered in the extension classes, therefore, are largely professional courses in education, and contribute directly to the training of teachers who are in service. A number of content courses are being offered this year.

Dr. W. J. McKee, professor of education, is in charge of this program of the division, and it is chiefly through his efforts and professional leadership that a sound program of in-service teacher training has been worked out for the state. The University conducts the largest work of this kind for teachers to be found in the entire country.

The members of the extension teaching staff and their centers follow: Dr. W. J. McKee, Fayetteville, Nashville, Whiteville, Vass; Dr. R. W. Morrison, Asheville, Hendersonville, Marshall, Waynesville; Dr. George Howard, Tarboro, Washington, Williamston; Miss Cecilia Bason, Clinton and Faison; Mrs. Grace P. Woodman, Graham, and two other centers to be organized;

Mrs. C. E. McIntosh, Lumberton, Red Springs, Rockingham; Leroy Jackson, Forest City, Shelby, Spruce Pine; Miss Gladys Angel, Wadesboro, Albemarle, Monroe; Edwin M. Steckel, Gastonia.

SCHWENNING PAYS VISIT TO MILLS

Dr. Schwenning, who teaches management courses in the school of commerce, spent last Monday in Camden, S. C., as the guest of H. P. Kendall, president of the Kendall Co. He was inspecting the scientifically managed Waterlee Mills—one of nine units of this company, five of which are in the south. Mr. Kendall was a friend of Mr. F. W. Taylor, and was long ago cognigant of the virtue of his methods. The Kendall mills are proof that they are really practical, since none of them were touched by the present depression and strikes.

Dr. Schwenning found not only the mill itself but the mill village also of interest. The village is truy a model one. It has all modern scientific improvements, democratic control, and roomily spaced houses on winding, irregular streets.

MacDowell's Work Discussed By Club

The music department of the Community Club met in room 3 of the music building yesterday at 3:30 o'clock.

Mrs. G. H. Lawrence, who was in charge of the meeting, sketched the early history of music in America and discussed the works of Edward MacDowell.

A program of MacDowell's compositions was then presented. Some pieces from the smaller suites for the piano were played by Mrs. P. H. Winston, Miss Henrietta Smedes, and Mrs. T. S. McCorkle. The first movement from the Celtic Sonata was on the Ampico piano.

Mrs. L. C. MacKinney, accompanied by Miss Brown, sang a group of songs for soprano, and Mrs. G. A. Harrer, a group of contralto.

This meeting began a series on different phases of Aemrican music. Among the programs there will be some on Negro music, American Indian music, and modern orchestral compositions.

Meeting Changed

The Garden Club will meet in Davie hall on Tuesday, November 25, at three thirty o'clock instead of November 12, as was announced yesterday in the program of the Community Club departmental meetings.

PLAYMAKER WORK INFLUENCES NEW BROOKLYN GROUP

In the current issue of The New Republic, there is a mute testimonial to the work of the Carolina Playmakers. It is in the form of a letter to the editor of that weekly journal of opinion, and it shows that repercussions of Prof. Koch's work are being felt in the wilderness inhabited by the Philistines of Brooklyn, N. Y.

The communication was signed by an alumnus of this university, class of 1930. It follows:

Sir: A little theatre group is being formed to operate on a small, intimate scale. It is purely uncommercial in scope and will emphasize the literary rather than the dramatic. Anyone interested in joining should write me at 700 East Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn.

Signed: Milton Greenblatt.

No chapel was held yesterday morning.

Kiwanians Select Officers for 1931

Coincident with election day the Chapel Hill Kiwanis Club held its annual election of officers for 1931 at the regular meeting of the club on Tuesday evening in the Baptist church.

The officers elected were O. F. Richardson, president; E. J. Sawyer, district trustee; W. O. Sparrow, treasurer; T. S. Howard was appointed to continue as secretary.

The members of the board of directors are Dr. J. P. Jones, Allan Koontz, Giles Wood, G. H. Paulsen, Bernice Fitch, John Umstead and C. A. Hoyle. R. M. Grumman, the retiring president, will also continue as a member of the board.

The club will observe Armistice Day next Tuesday evening with a special program.

Expert on Sleep Here for Lecture

Tonight at eight o'clock at Phillips hall, Dr. H. M. Johnson of the Mellon Institute for Industrial Research, of Pittsburgh, will deliver a lecture on the psychological experiments on the nature of sleep.

Dr. Johnson received his Ph.D. degree at Johns Hopkins and was associated with the U. S. army during the World War as a psychological examiner of aviators. He has been professor of psy- and has been recently connected with the Nela laboratories of the National Electric Lamp Association as a research associate.

Many articles by Dr. Johnson's have been published in Harper's magazine as well as the more technical journals concerning his results with psychological experiments on sleep. His results have been of much interest to the public lately and especially so to the psychologists.

Dr. Johnson comes by a special arrangement between the University and Dr. H. W. Crane of the psychology department.

Carolina And State Play Here Tomorrow

Date For Game Moved Up To Avoid Conflict With Duke-Kentucky

FOUR TAR HEEL ELEVENS WORK IN SCRIMMAGES

Changing of Date for Game with State College Makes Stiff Workout Necessary.

FIRST PRACTICE OF WEEK

Squad Given Rest Monday and Bad Weather Hindered the Workout Tuesday.

The Carolina-State football game, originally scheduled to be played here Saturday, has been moved up to Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock to avoid conflict with the Duke-Kentucky game in Durham Saturday afternoon.

The change comes in response to the wishes of the four institutions and of football fans who want to see both games. Kentucky, traveling a long distance, couldn't be asked to make a Friday date, but Carolina and State, both home institutions, finally found it possible to get together.

The change came late due to the fact that both institutions have rulings that no athletic contest can be played during classroom hours. Special faculty permission had to be secured at both Carolina and State, with provision for adjustment of classes by departments, so the students will lose no time from their studies.

Hard Work Yesterday

Four varsity elevens scrimmaged yesterday afternoon on Emerson and the freshmen fields for more than an hour in the only hard workout for the team before the Carolina-N. C. State game here tomorrow.

Coach Collins had given the varsity a day of rest Monday after the hard game with Tech and only light work was in order Tuesday, so when it was announced yesterday that the day for the State game had been changed, it was necessary for the Tar Heel coaches to hold a long and stiff workout for the whole squad.

Following the scrimmage the elevens ran signals up and down the field to top off the afternoon's work, Coach Collins is placing particular emphasis on offense this week to get the scoring punch in form.

The extensive work yesterday was carried on with Coaches Collins, Cerney, Fetzer, Sapp, and Farris directing the various teams. The lineup of the "first 33" was different from any lineup in previous games, so it was difficult to determine which eleven was first, second or third.

The first team to scrimmage during the afternoon worked on Emerson field against a freshman eleven on driving over touchdowns from the 10 and 15-yard lines by straight line plays. The freshmen held them for downs on several occasions, but the varsity was able to make many scores during the session. Chandler and Slusser did most of the ball carrying for this outfit.

The lineup was: Brown and Walker, ends; McDade and Thompson, tackles; Blackwood and Fysal, guards; Wyrick, quarterback; Chandler and Slusser, halfbacks; and McCaskill and House, fullbacks.

Jim Magner looked better in practice yesterday than he has in several weeks, carrying the ball over the goal four times

By Hugh Wilson

Well, how did that line look last Saturday? Stacked up against a forward wall that would have qualified for any beef trust—and remember, it wasn't all beef, for Maree and Speer have often been mentioned for all-American honors, and Brooke and Jones will be this year—the Tar Heel linesmen seemed, to the writer, at least, to put up about as creditable an exhibition of line play as has been seen in Chapel Hill in the last two years. It is true that Tech outgained the Tar Heels on running plays, but it was well nigh impossible to stop that gargantuan array of backs, led by the bull-like rushes of Hart, Strickland and "Sugar" Cain—golly, what a large stalk he was! One of the greatest improvements was the solidity of the line on kicks and pass plays. Shorty Branch was given plenty of time to get off his kicks, and Jim Magner had lots of time to pick out his men to throw passes to—and how he did throw them!

One hears about talk of dissatisfaction with the progress of the team. Any man with the slightest iota of football brain knows that last Saturday's Tar Heels did not remotely resemble the Carolina team that was held to a 13-7 score by Wake Forest. Georgia Tech played on the field a team generally rated superior to that of last year, which Carolina defeated 18-7. Carolina admittedly was not quite as good as in 1929, but who in the world expects a college to have one of the best teams in the country every year? Even Rockne at Notre Dame has his lean and sallow seasons, and Knute is now generally conceded to be the Dean of American football coaches. One wonders how much football the Charlotte sports writer who forecast Coach Collins' withdrawal knows, and how closely he is connected with the situation at Chapel Hill as it now stands, among faculty, student body, and alumni? One also wonders if said writer may not have friends among the alumni who desire to see the demise of Collins, and takes it upon himself to state their viewpoint as that of everyone?

The student body of U. N. C. is behind Coach Collins to the last man, and may all tiresome, trouble-making meddlers keep their hands off the athletic situation at the Hill!

CATAWBA LEADS N. S. CONFERENCE

Charlie Moran's Indians Continue March Toward Title With Elon Runner-up.

Guilford College, Nov. 5.—As a result of the games over the past week-end within the realm of the North State conference, Catawba is standing out head and shoulders over the rest of the crowd as leading contender for the first championship of this newly formed organization.

Charlie Moran's team up at Salisbury seems to have undergone a complete metamorphosis since he took over the reins at the close of the major league baseball season and due to their hard fought victory over Lenoir Rhyne now seem headed for a clean sweep of the ranks of the small colleges.

Thanks to the work of a mighty fullback, one Pete Williams, Catawba is now the only team eligible for the championship boasting a clean slate. Williams with his Elon cohorts played inspired football to beat John Anderson's Quakers in a night game Friday.

Williams, in his great personal triumph over the Quakers added 12 points to his total which now stands at 45, far ahead of Cheek, of Guilford, who is next with 24. Zaengle, Catawba's scoring threat, made two against Lenoir Rhyne to bring his total up to 18.

Standings of the Teams

Elon	2	1	0	.666
Lenoir Rhyne	1	1	0	.500

Secret Practices Being Held During Week By Wolfpack

Raleigh, Nov. 5—The North Carolina State football team went through a secret practice today for its game with the University of North Carolina, Friday at Chapel Hill.

Head Coach Ray Sermon used practically every man on the squad in the scrimmage.

Only one change was made in the regular team, Bob Cook, replacing Hank McLawhorn in the backfield.

Secret practices will be conducted every day this week.

YEOMANS COMES BACK TO SQUAD

The hopes of Carolina's tennis team to sweep through all their opponents next year were bolstered up recently with the announcement of Coach John F. Kenfield that Ed Yeomans has been reinstated on the team.

The return of Yeomans to the team comes as an agreeable surprise as he ranks high in collegiate tennis circles. He was runner-up to Wilmer Hines last week in the mid-southern open tourney at Pinehurst; he won the Washington, D. C., championship two years ago; and in 1929 annexed the North Carolina Collegiate singles title. As this is his last year in Chapel Hill, he is fighting hard to play the best tennis of his career, and his opponents the following spring are expected to suffer heavily at his hands.

The team travels to Charlottesville, Virginia, in about three weeks to avenge its defeat at the hands of the Virginians last fall. Predictions point to a certain victory for the Tar Heel net men, and some go so far as to predict a washout for the home team. They give as their reason the lineup of Hines, Yeomans, Wright, Liskin, Hendlin, Abels, and Graham.

CROSS COUNTRY PLANS CHANGED

Duke and Carolina Harriers Meet in Stadium Saturday at Eleven O'clock.

Coach Ranson's boys are working out in earnest for the coming meet with Duke University Saturday, November 8, in Durham. Naturally enough, the intermittent rains during the first of the week have slowed workouts up a trifle, but the hill and dalers have since been on the grind, and in a great big way.

As was generally thought, the meet was to have been staged during the Kentucky-Duke football game, with the finish being timed to occur at the half. Now, according to official notice, the time of the contest is to be at eleven o'clock in the morning at the Duke athletic field.

The Blue Devil turf-pounders have engaged in two matches so far this season, competing with

Stiff Scrimmage Yesterday in Preparation for Blue Imp Tilt.

After a comparatively easy week so far, the freshman squad was sent through a stiff, rugged workout yesterday. They are busy priming for the coming game with the highly touted Blue Imps of Duke. The game is to be played next Tuesday in Durham and is expected to be even more interesting and exciting than the one the two freshman teams played last year. Each team has its group of individual stars and the question comes down to which team can work together more. Although the Tar Babies have nowhere as impressive a record as the Blue Imps, they can be counted on to offer stubborn opposition and possibly come home with the vicotry.

The fact that everyone is working hard for the coming game was proved yesterday by the way the team that was scrimmaging the varsity came back after a rather bad start and threw the hard running Tar Heel backs for losses repeatedly. The defensive work of the freshman team that went against the varsity yesterday was outstanding. It was only with difficulty that the Tar Heels could put the ball over from the ten yard line. The lanky Strickland at left tackle, fighting desperately for a chance to start the Duke game, broke through many times and, with his long arms, cut down the runner. Jones, the left end, was in there making some fine tackles and breaking up the varsity interference as well. Blythe, a newcomer at right guard, played a very creditable game, as did Gardner and Crané, at center and right tackle respectively.

Behind the line Hackney was in on every play. His backing up of the forward wall was excellent. Many times he was up on the line of scrimmage like a flash and stopping the runner whose interference had been spilled, Whitener, Hackney's running mate, was doing the same thing. They both played very well. The whole freshman backfield was so anxious to stop the varsity rushes that they entirely neglected their pass defense.

Coach Enright had no comment to make after the play except to remark that his defense was good, very good in fact, but that the offense was weak. The reason the running attack is weak is that no time has been available for the perfecting of one. The squad is always called upon to help the varsity and in these numerous scrimmages it only gets a chance to show its defense ability. However, a week is left before the Duke game and the coaches will work hard on their attack between now and then.

There are still quite a number of injuries that are keeping several men out of active play. Weisker, backfield ace, is still out with his lame knee, but he expects to be ready Tuesday. McIver and Barclay, regular guards are still resting their injuries. Shore, another guard who shows great promise, is out also but is to be back soon.

The first Tar Baby team that put up such a good defensive game yesterday, was composed of: Adair and Jones, ends; Crane and Strickland, tackles; Blythe and Matheson, guards; Gardner, center; Woolen, Phipps and Hackney were in the backfield. As will be noticed there are several new faces in this lineup, and the regulars who have been forced to remain idle will have to work hard to get their positions back if they want to play against the Blue Imps.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

With a splash that deluged the hopes of thousands of grid fans about the country, last Saturday's football dope bucket overturned to spill out some of the most startling upsets that Old King Football has seen in several moons. No less than seventeen major ties were recorded, at least ten of them reversing forecasts of lop sided scores.

An alert N. Y. U. eleven with ragged formations and a makeshift lineup toppled Carnegie Tech, conquerors of Georgia Tech and several similarly powerful teams, to the merry tune of 20 to 7.

While this was going on, in another part of the country Columbia registered an astounding defeat over Cornell, ten to seven, upsetting a team that was favored to win by a handful of touchdowns. Not far away, Dartmouth and Yale fought into the dusk of a long New England evening vainly trying to score. Fordham, the only team in the country to travel thus far with an uncrossed goal was scored upon by a grim fighting group of mountaineers from West Virginia. Although the West Virginians were unable to down the strong New Yorkers, a safety scored in the early moments of the game broke Fordham's perfect record, 18 to 2.

Down in Savannah, the capable Jack the Ripper Roberts ripped and tore his way through a stubborn Florida line but was stopped repeatedly from scoring. The game ended Georgia 0, Florida 0, a game that Georgia should have taken hands up.

In Dixie, Alabama, our pick to win the conference, defeated Kentucky 19 to 0, eliminating a stubborn contender for southern honors.

It was certainly a hectic day for the football caster, and a worse one for several dozen coaches. With a number of big battles scheduled for this Saturday, footballdom in general is hoping and praying for a less disastrous week-end.

Carolina's' game here with State will fail to held the limelight as much as the Kentucky-Duke encounter at Durham. Beaten once, both teams will meet in a "consolation" battle, but one which may have some effect on the southern conference should Alabama and Georgia both fall before the consummation of the season. Although Kentucky seems to have the edge, we could hope for nothing better than a Blue Devil victory. Duke, upon whom has fallen the brunt of flashing the name of North Carolina football over the country this season would profit in national circles should they upset the invaders. And then, too, Kentucky would be just another scalp on Carolina's belt if we figure the results of a little game on December 6 correctly.

Sigma Zeta Gets 6-0 Win

Sigma Zeta defeated the Chi Phi's by a score of 6-0 when Edwards, Sigma Zeta back, intercepted a pass and ran fifty yards for a touchdown behind good interference by Alston.

A.T.O.'s Defeat Sigma Nu's

In the most important and by far the most thrilling game of the afternoon, the A.T.O.'s defeated the Sigma Nu's by a score of 8-7 in first downs, after the Sigma Nu's had tied the score at 6-6 on a long pass to Dameron behind the goal. The extra point was declared illegal as Dameron caught the ball in the end zone. The A.T.O.'s score came when an attempted pass fell into the arms of McLaughlin, much to his surprise. He hesitated for a few seconds and then amid the shouts of his teammates ran across the goal for the A.T.O. touchdown. This win leaves the D.K.E.'s and A.T.O.'s tied for top place with four wins and no defeats, and leaves the Phi Gam's and Beta's tied for second with three wins and no defeats each

S.A.E.'s Forfeit

The Delta Psi's went up a notch in the intramural standings to tie for second place when the S.A.E.'s failed to appear for their game with the former.

Sigma Phi Sigma Wins

The Sigma Phi Sigma's defeated the Lambda Chi Alpha's by a score of 13-0 yesterday afternoon.

Theta Chi Defeats Chi Psi

The Theta Chi's defeated the Chi Psi's by a score of 20-6. At no time was the outcome uncertain.

Phi Delta Wins First

The Phi Delta Theta's defeated the Pi Kappa Phi's for their first win of this season. This game left the Pi Kappa Phi's in undisputed possession of the cellar with no wins and seven defeats. Tucker's fifty yard run for a touchdown after intercepting a pass was the high spot of the game. Fonvelle and Brower scored the other touchdowns for the Phi Delts.

the Navy, and Washington and Lee University. The Duke boys unfortunately "caught" the worst end of each meet, losing to the above-mentioned schools by decisive margins. From rumblings over the Duke campus, it is understood that they are planning to take the boys from the "Hill" into camp, as they have had quite enough of the smaller end of things in a cross-country way.

Heizer, a steady, flashy, consistent runner is the best bet of the Methodists. As captain of the Duke squad, a great amount of confidence is placed in him by his classmates, to win for their Alma Mater this coming Saturday, and the boys of the Blue and White are cautioned to watch him.

As a matter of history, Duke is one of the two teams to defeat Carolina in a dual meet within recent years. In 1928, before Duke entered the Southern Conference, the Devils won a meet participated in by both the varsity and freshman teams. Carolina won the Southern Conference tournament the same year in spite of the loss to Duke, as the Blue Devils were not a contender in the race for conference honors. Carolina came back strong last year to pile up a 21-39 win on the Imps in their annual meet. The freshman squad from the "Hill" repeated with a convincing win the same day, winning 23-33. (Low score winning.)

When the boys from the two institutions lineup for the crack of the pistol which will start the meet, only two old Carolina men will be in the Blue and White ranks. These men are Captain Cliff Baucom and Jack Farris. Meade, the boy who won the cake race this year will be shape for the meet Saturday, and will lend a decided amount of strength to the Tar Heels. The other men who will likely run against Duke are: Jensen, Jones, Cordle, Hubbard, Lumpkin, Pratt and Watkins.

during a regular scrimmage with another freshman team on the yearling field. The play of this outfit was very good and the Tar Babies were unable to make any noticeable gains on offense. McNeill and Daniel, fullback and halfback respectively, also showed up well in the scrimmage. McNeill intercepted a freshman pass and ran some thirty yards before being downed.

On this eleven were: Parsley and Davis, ends; Rose and Hodges, tackles; Newcombe and McIver, guards; Koehl, center; Moore, quarterback; Magner and Daniel, halfbacks; and McNeill, fullback.

Gilbreath, center; Philpitt and Dunavant; guards; Cowper and Crew, tackles; Bridgers and Nichols, ends; Patterson, quarterback; Maus and Erickson, halves; and Houston, fullback worked against the frosh on Emerson field after the first outfit retired. Maus and Erickson hit their stride in this session and took the ball across the goal several times.

Line play throughout the afternoon was not up to the standard of the performance in the Georgia Tech game, but they opened up enough holes for the backs to rip off long gains during the afternoon.

The last eleven to get into the scrimmage of the afternoon was composed of Henry and Alexander, ends; Daniels and Smith, tackles; Kerr and Oliverio, guards; Allen, center; Ferrebee, quarterback; Frazier and Croom halfbacks; and Thompson, fullback.

in 1924, 1925 and 1926 and represented the south in the California Rose Bowl in 1925 and 1926.

Florida was the first conference team to defeat Alabama in 1927 after the long string of victories. The past two years have seen Alabama drop from the top and yet remain always a threat and 1930 finds the "Big Red" team challenging for the front position again.

In the five games played between the teams since the conference was organized in 1921, Florida has won three and lost two.

Florida displayed great defensive strength by holding Georgia's ripping backs to a scoreless tie last week and it's no secret that Coach Charles Bachman plans to play the same defensive game against the Tide.

Tulane continued its preparation for Auburn today with a thorough workout. Although not taking the Plainsmen lightly, Coach Bernie Bierman admittedly is pointing his charges for the make or break affairs with Georgia the following week.

Georgia worked out against N. Y. University formations in the next to last practice before the Bulldogs entrain this morning for the metropolis. Coach Harry Mehre looks upon this game as even harder than the Yale engagement.

Both Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, and Dan McGurgin, of Vanderbilt, have intimated they will present changed lineups as these teams meet on Grant field in Atlanta Saturday. Quarterback Dunlap is definitely out of the Tech lineup while McGugin plans several shifts in the Vanderbilt line.

Duke with five straight victories since its early season defeat by South Carolina, hopes to continue its winning ways against Kentucky at Durham. Coach Jimmie Dehart regards the Kentucky game as the hardest of his schedule and is working over time preparing his men for the Wildcats.

HOLY GRAIL WILL SPONSOR SECOND DANCE OF SERIES

Trio of Dances for Fall Quarter Have Been Scheduled.

The Order of the Grail will offer its second dance of the current season tomorrow night in the gymnasium. The dance will begin at nine o'clock lasting through twelve. The music for the occasion will be furnished by Ty Sawyer's Buccaneers.

The first Grail dance was given October 28. Three dances were scheduled for this quarter. The third one will be given December 6 after the Carolina-Duke game. The Grail made every effort to give a dance after the Tech game, but because of the precedent established by the German Club and the Faculty Committee, no dances can be given on the Hill after the home-coming game.

Regular German Club regulations will be in effect at the dance tomorrow night, violations of these rules are to be punished. Freshmen are reminded by the German Club committee that they will not be allowed to attend. All men found guilty of violating this rule will not be permitted to attend Grail dances during their sophomore year.

The gym will decorated in the University colors. Accomodations are being planned for a large crowd, as there will be two football games in this vicinity this week-end—the Carolina-State game and the Duke-Kentucky game in Durham. Chaperones have been selected for the dance.

EPISCOPAL HEAD BANQUETS CHOIR

The Reverend and Mrs. Alfred S. Lawrence honored the choir of the Chapel of the Cross Wednesday night at supper served in the parish house at 6:30.

Following a three course dinner, the Reverend Mr. Lawrence made a short talk in which he expressed his gratitude for the faithful service the organization has rendered during the past few months. Several members rendered musical selections. Mrs. C. T. Murchison, accompanied by U. T. Holmes, Jr., at the piano, sang two classical songs. Holmes then played and sang two Italian songs. Lawrence followed with two comical selections on the piano. Kennedy, organist of the church, accompanied Mrs. L. C. MacKinney in two pieces. This program finished the choir sang several old favorites.

Mr. Graham has been a chronic sufferer from appendicitis for some time, it is stated, and his condition is not serious. He was still held for observation Thursday.

Afternoon Classes and Labs Canceled

The Athletic Council recommended that the State game be played on Friday to avoid conflict with the game at Duke. The State College authorities approved the change. Accordingly the dean of the college, acting under instructions from the President, consulted the departments which the schedule shows are chiefly involved. With the consent of these departments the President decided to suspend all classes and laboratories for Friday afternoon as an expression of courtesy to Duke and her guest, the University of Kentucky.

Glee Club Members' Enthusiasm Forecasts Very Successful Year

By Robert Novins

With one hundred and fifty candidates out for the Glee Club prospects for a successful season seem very bright to the officials of the organization. Twenty-six of the thirty varsity members of last year's southern champions club have returned. The remainder of the squad is composed of new students and a few of last year's members who failed to make the varsity. The best talent in years has been discovered in this new group and everyone is expected to put up a hard fight for a place on the varsity.

The intense enthusiasm and interest manifested in the club predicts an extremely successful year, officials say. Members of the club attend every meeting, conserve their voices, and follow a training almost as strict as that of the football team, and there is absolute co-ordination and harmony existing among the members and the director of the club.

In the past the Glee Club members have followed the instructions and suggestions of Professor H. S. Dyer so well that at the end of the year they have practically received a year's voice training.

The Glee Club is one of the very few North Carolina activities that draws as its members students from every department of the University.

Last year's Glee Club was considered the best that the University has ever produced. It won first honors at the southern inter-collegiate Glee Club contest at Greenville, S. C., where 14 colleges participated. These colleges were scattered all over the Southeastern states from the University of Virginia on the north to the University of Florida on the south, and from the Atlantic Ocean on the east to the Universities of Alabama and Tennessee on the west. The club also placed in the National Glee Club contest at New York City.

The officers of the club have prepared an extensive program for the coming season and expect an enjoyable, profitable year.

ANDREWS OFFERS HUNDRED DOLLARS FOR PRIZE SONG

Raleigh Alumnus Hopes to Stimulate Search for Suitable "Alma Mater."

A. B. Andrews, prominent Raleigh lawyer, has offered prizes amounting to one hundred-seventy-five dollars for the music and twenty-five for the words of a new Alma Mater. Manuscripts for competition should be submitted to the music department on or before December 1 for the words and on or before January 1 for music.

The words will be available to those wishing to submit musical compositions shortly after the contest closes. The competition is being sponsored by the Alumni Review.

The new song is not to replace Hark the Sound, but is to supplement it. Carolina needs an original song all her own and suitable for all occasions, for Hark the Sound is intercollegiate and belongs to several hundred schools and colleges over the country, according to local musicians.

The committe in charge of the contest is composed of J. M. Saunders, chairman, Secretary of the Alumni Association; W. H. Yarborough, editor of the Tar Heel; R. C. Greene, president of the Student Union; S. A. Lynch, Jr., president of the

SINCLAIR LEWIS AWARDED PRIZE

Winner of Nobel Prize Names Wolfe as America's Most Promising Author.

For the first time, the Nobel prize for literature was awarded this year to an American author in the person of Sinclair Lewis. This coveted award is worth about $47,000, and is given on the basis of the excellence in work—for the most distinguished work of an idealistic tendency.

The creator of Babbitt turned down the Pulitzer award in 1926, given him for his book Arrowhead, but indicated that he would accept the Nobel prize because the latter is an international award with no strings attached. The Pulitzer prize, on the other hand, is for the American novel published during the year which best presents the wholesome atmosphere of American life and the highest standard of American manners and manhood. According to Lewis, this suggests not actual literary merit but an obedience to whatever code of good taste that may chance to be popular at the moment.

Lewis intends to support a well-known young American author and his family with the prize money, and allow his protege to continue his writings. For modesty's sake, he withheld the young author's name but said his initials are S. L.

The American author with the greatest future, according to Lewis, is Thomas Wolfe, graduate of the University of North Carolina, whose first book, Look Homeward, Angel, won him the Guggenheim scholarship last year.

Another American, Theodore Dreiser, was also considered by the Swedish Academy for the award, but the selection of Lewis was anticipated.

PHARMACY BOARD WILL MEET HERE

State Directors Will Conduct Examinations for Pharmacists On November 18.

The fall meeting of the North Carolina board of pharmacy will take place in Chapel Hill on November 18 to conduct examinations for applicants for licenses as registered and assistant pharmacists. The examinations will be given in Pharmacy hall.

The members of the board of pharmacy are: Dr. E. V. Zoeller, of Tarboro, president; F. W. Hancock, Sr., of Oxford, secretary-treasurer; and I. W. Rose, of Rocky Mount, J. G. Ballew, of Lenoir, and C. P. Greyer, of Morganton.

Dr. Zoeller in 1922 received the only honorary degree of doctor of pharmacy that has ever been conferred by this University. Dr. Zoeller and Mr. Hancock, who is the father of the recently elected congressman, F. W. Hancock, Jr., from the fifth district, have two of the longest records of service in the country as members of a state board of pharmacy. Since 1892 Dr. Zoeller has been a member of the board and since 1894 president. Mr. Hancock has served thirty-eight years on the board and thirty-three years as secretary-treasurer. Mr. Rose is an alumnus of Carolina, having graduated from the school of

PLANS ANNOUNCED FOR FALL DANCES BY GERMAN CLUB

Weede Meyer Will Play for Autumn Set in Gymnasium, November 28 and 29.

John Bullock, president of the German Club, announced yesterday that the Thanksgiving dances will take place Friday and Saturday after Thanksgiving, November 28 and 29, with Weede Meyer's orchestra of Huntington, West Virginia, playing.

The dances are scheduled for Bynum Gymnasium this year, since the Virginia game will be played at Charlottesville. It has been the custom of the German Club to stage the dances in Swain hall when the Thanksgiving game is played at Chapel Hill because of the unusual number of visitors. With the game played in Charlottesville less visitors are expected.

Decorations will be provided by a local firm. Thanksgiving colors will be featured.

Bullock stated that the German Club negotiated with several orchestras before engaging Weede Meyer. This orchestra, he said, has played at the University on a number of occasions in the past and according to reports has a much improved group of players this year.

Clyde Dunn has been elected leader of the set. He will be assisted by Edward Wood and Henry Anderson. The sophomore hop which is one of the features of the Thanksgiving set will be led by Robert Carmichael assisted by Arlindo Cate and Elliott Newcombe. There will be two dances Friday and three Saturday.

Cards for the dances will be available next week, Will Yarborough, treasurer of the club, states. He said that there were about twenty vacancies in the club's membership which are open to all members of the upperclasses. Applications for membership must be accompanied by a check for ten dollars and should be sent to him at the S. A. E. house.

The assessment for the set will be five dollars and the yearly dues twelve.

DINNER TO OPEN ALUMNI MEETING

Opening with dinner at the Carolina Inn, the annual Alumni Assembly will convene here December 5, on the eve of the Carolina-Duke game. The conference will last through the following day. Various officers of the organization are to speak at the opening session, and an open discussion of University administrative problems will take place. The regular business meeting of the Assembly will be held the morning of December 6.

The Alumni Assembly is composed of representatives from alumni clubs over the state, and officers of the various class organizations.

Preservation of the Campus' Beauty

About this time each year we take upon ourselves the task, or rather duty, of giving a warning word about walking on the grass. It would seem that such a thing would be unnecessary, considering the fact that the campus is covered with walks and paths. These paths, although they are not arranged in many places to the best advantage, on the whole are well planned, and one does not have to go very far out of his way to reach a certain destination in confining himself to the walks.

The campus growth has cost a good deal of labor and expense. In fact little has been spared in making Chapel Hill, and especially the University campus, beautiful. The campus is widely known for its natural beauty, and much of this reputation is due to the care of the grass. Already this year the persistence of some persons in making short-cuts has caused several eye-sores. A few weeks more of using unplanned by-paths will necessitate re-sodding of these places.

After all, the walks are designed primarily to promote efficient handling of traffic. We think the paths are adequate and that there is no excuse for not using them. The request of the campus authorities that the grass be protected is indeed a slight one and requires little sacrifice to be complied with.

—B. M.

All New York needs to get its volcano in full action is to find the missing Crater.

Regarding Ex-Cathedra Pronouncements

The campus may find that we, in our bursts of enthusiasm, sometimes presuppose an infallibility we do not possess. We make our pronouncements in voices that, we fondly trust, seem to proceed ex-cathedra. We define campus sentiments and opinions and imply that those definitions are final. But sometimes our individual authoritative voices are not the voice of even the staff. They are purely and simply personal opinions.

We of the staff are no more exempt than the rest of the campus from error. And we are not so inspired and guided by Providence as to be above error. We are fallible and questionable. Sometimes our pronouncements are erudite; sometimes merely emphatic. The campus is always free to employ the journal's open forum to present new ideas or counter ideas.

The campus may feel that the staff has a means of expression all its own. But the staff is no hierarchy meeting in council to publish its definite and indisputable decrees. The staff is the body having the responsibility of the campus newspaper. But the newspaper is a campus newspaper. And all of this is simply a plea to the campus to use the Daily's open forum.—V. A. D.

OPEN FORUM

DISDAINS BUCCANEER!

To the Editor:

At first, I was quite amused by the furor the Buccaneer created in the Open Forum; soon the amusement changed to wonderment when I saw that all the letters were censuring ones, for most of the comments that I had heard concerning the magazine were laudatory. Then I realized that the majority of the students read the Buccaneer, enjoyed a laugh at its humorous properties and then forgot it; their lives were enriched for a transient moment by laughter, and the joyous moments of life are rare, so why deny them this innocent, yes innocent pleasure.

Agnes Repplier says in her essay, The Mission of Humour, that the mission is reforming by showing the ridiculous side, and she is partially right; therefore if the Buccaneer creates a revulsion in C. A. R. to all writings not fit for a "self-respecting" student, as he intimates, it has performed its mission. I agree with W. R. for ridding himself of the girl; she has been asleep for forty years if she is insulted by the Buccaneer.

As for censoring, which subject arose naturally in this situation, it has its place in life, just as the mosquito has: if it were not for censoring, the American reading public would be less aware of that sparkling, facetious novel, Jurgen, or a modern masterpiece, The American Tragedy.

Undoubtedly, some of the jokes in the Buccaneer should have been omitted, they were merely dull. But as Grouche Marx once sententiously remarked "They can't be good all the time." —L. S.

WHY THE DELAY?

To the Editor:

Although since at least as far back as early in October there has been agitation from fans, sports scribes, and others for a transfer of the date of the Carolina-State game to prevent conflict with the one in Durham, the persistent answer has been: "impossible." Reasons given were that regulations of both schools forbade athletic contests during class hours. Yet two days before time for the game, announcement is made that arrangements have been effected whereby the shift will be allowed. After plans have been fully made by those expecting to attend the contest, the shift is made known (presumably for the benefit of those expecting to attend, but obviously on account of a very limited demand for tickets), leaving barely enough time for the altering of week-end arrangements.

Breaking of rules seemingly having become not so unusual in connection with football, we do not take issue with the act itself; but we do fail to see the necessity of delaying until just prior to the game for doing so. As for having athletic contests during class hours, many are the afternoon classes we have foregone the pleasure of in favor of a baseball game. If we must play "second fiddle" to Duke in order to bolster the gate receipts, why not admit it in the first place, and prevent unnecessary confusion?

ANOTHER FRENCH TOUR THIS YEAR

The annual University of North Carolina residential tour to France, under the auspices of the University extension division and directed by J. A. Downs of the romance language department, will be conducted again next summer for the fourth successive year.

College credit courses will be offered in French composition, conversation, and French literature. The students will establish residence for a period of one month in Grenoble, where they may pursue additional studies at the Universite de Grenoble.

An itinerary of travel on the continent and in England has been arranged, including, in addition to the residence period in Grenoble, stops in Paris, Geneva, Interlaken, Munich, Heidelberg, and a trip along the Rhine. Those not interested in the study feature of the tour and desiring the optional Italian extension at normal cost will have the opportunity to visit Rome, Naples, Venice, Florence, and Milan. After the stay on the continent, the party will spend a short stay on the Isle of Marken in the North Sea, en route to England, where a few sightseeing days in London will be followed by a journey to the Shakespeare country.

November Alumni Book List Ready

The November list of books for the Alumni Book Club which will appear in the next edition of the Alumni Review have been announced by the alumni secretary. Beginning with the October number of the publication this feature of the Alumni Book Club was begun, and from reports thus far seems to be quite successful.

The plan is that all subscribers of the Alumni Review by sending thirty-five cents to the Extension Division Library, of the University, can receive one of the books on the list for that month. By sending in three dollars the subscriber will receive ten books, which will be sent him once each month.

The books of the month are: History of Modern Culture, by Smith; Crucibles by Jaffe; Desert Islands by De la Mare; Mahatma Gandhi by Andrews; Man and His Universe by Langdon-Davies; Shepherds in Sackcloth by Kaye-Smith; Memories of an Infantry Officer by Sassoon; Story of San Michele by Munthe; and These Earnest Victorians by Wingfield-Stratford.

Williams In Chapel

Professor Horace Williams, head of the department of philosophy, will speak this morning during chapel period to the sophomore assembly on an unannounced subject.

WELFARE WORK WILL CALL FOR GREATER FUNDS

George Lawrence, of the county welfare department, and W. J. Cerney, head U. N. C. backfield coach were the principal speakers at the regular Wednesday night meeting of the Chapel Hill Rotary Club on a program directed by E. Carrington Smith, manager of the Carolina Theatre.

Lawrence spoke to the local group about welfare work in the county and stated that a large amount of money is needed to care for mill families since the factories in this section are not under operation. The farmers, Mr. Lawrence said, are in somewhat better financial shape due to the fact that this has been a successful season for crops.

Following Mr. Lawrence's address, the club went on record as being willing to back a special moving picture show November 23 to raise money for welfare work.

Coach Cerney spoke on the purpose and work of football scouts. These men attend games to be played by teams that their teams will meet the following week and learn plays for use in practice.

Sleep Expert Reads Paper to Alpha Psi

The Alpha Psi Delta psychology fraternity was addressed Wednesday night at its regular monthly meeting by Dr. H. M. Johnson, who is in charge of the Simmons Research on Sleep at the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research at Pittsburgh. He was introduced by Dr. H. W. Crane.

Dr. Johnson first read part of a paper he had presented before a ministerial association of Pittsburgh, in which he showed that behaviorist psychology offers no opposition to the ideals maintained by the ministerial profession, but that many ministers have incorrect notions of the psychologists, ideals and methods.

The more formal part of his address was on the subject: "The Logical Structure of Three Psychological Systems." He pointed out three axioms which seem to be accepted in scientific work in general and which are at the basis of some contemporary psychological theories. Dr. Johnson stated his own adherence to objective or behaviorist psychology.

New Photographic Formula Is Found

Berlin, Nov. 5.—(IP)—Reduction of a photograph of a book page to an area of one one-hundredth of a square millimeter, and then re-enlargement of the photograph to normal size, has been made possible by the discovery of a practically grainless film formula by Professor Goldberg, a German photographic chemist.

The reduction is accomplished by photographing through an inverted microscope on to a film covered with silver emulsion.

By the new discovery, it will be possible to photograph at least 100 novels in full on one postcard, and then make it possible to read page after page on a projector screne.

The invention is believed to hold great value for espionage agents, who may slip through the line of battle with an entire plan of battle inscribed on a bit of paper less than a square millimeter in size, tucked under a fingernail or pasted to the scalp.

It is also believed to be of value in enlarging technical photographs of microscopic life.

We wish the time of the next presidential election would hurry along so the Republicans would get busy and make business better.—Judge.

ESTELLE COMES BACK AS SIREN IN "LILIOM"

When the movies first began to talk, Estelle Taylor was one of the few players who realized that there was a great deal more than the mere speaking of lines to acting in talking pictures. She immediately went into retirement for two solid years and studied voice culture to assure herself of a place in the takies as prominent as the one she occupied on the silent screen.

The reward for her wisdom and her efforts was the featured role of "Madam Muskat" in Charles Farrell's latest Fox Movietone, drama "Liliom." This role is made to order for Miss Taylor who will be recalled as "Miriam," in "The Ten Commandments" and as "Mary, Queen of Scots" in Mary Pickford's "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall."

In this screen adaptation of Molnar's famous play which Frank Borzage directed, Farrell, plays the role of "Liliom," the carnival barker. Rose Hobart, H. B. Warner and Lee Tracy are also featured. "Liliom" opens its engagement today at the Carolina Theatre.

Tar Heel And Wolfpack Football Teams Ready For Annual Contest

Both Teams in Good Physical Condition for Renewal of Ancient Rivalry.

KICK-OFF TO BE AT 2:30

Governor Gardner to Head Large Raleigh Delegation Here For Game.

In good physical shape and set for a tough fight, football teams of the University of North Carolina and State College are set to renew their ancient rivalry in Kenan Stadium this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The State College team is expected to arrive here by bus shortly after noon, and will go immediately to the field house at the stadium to rest until time for the game.

The final workout for the Tar Heels was held yesterday afternoon on the freshman field with five teams running back kick-offs. The first and second elevens retired to the stadium where they put on the finishing touches to preparations for the game with a snappy signal drill.

The Tar Heels, with their improved line and versatile veteran backs, ruled the favorites in the speculation last night, but there was nothing approaching overconfidence in the Carolina ranks.

Carolina's Senior gridders and Carolina's supporters know that State always plays its best game against the Tar Heels and remember 1928—when the Tar Heels were doped to beat State by two touchdowns, but did well to get a 6-6 tie from an inspired Wolfpack.

The rival coaches reported injury lists as low last night, only halfback Gorham being out for State and tackle Underwood for Carolina. As a result, both squads expect to throw everything into this important Big Five battle.

Governor O. Max Gardner, a former football star at both state institutions, is to head a large delegation of fans from State College and Raleigh, and a sizeable crowd is expected.

Probable lineups were announced last night as follows:

Army and Navy Charity Football Game Proposed

New York, Nov. 5.—Proposals for post-season college football games for the benefit of unemployment relief, fast accumulating yesterday have attracted widespread support and interest, especially insofar as they involve the possibility of Army and Navy patching up their differences to aid the common cause.

Chicago and New York, as well as Philadelphia, are prepared to bid high for a post-season benefit game between the rival football forces of West Point and Annapolis, despite the "many difficulties" which Secretary of the Navy Adams said would have to be overcome.

COLLINS MAKES MANY COMMENTS IN B. C. REVIEW

Wolfpack Captain, Guest Speaker, Says Tech Is Pointing For Carolina.

"DOC" SERMON SPEAKS

Collins Sends Free Pass to Juvenile Supporter of Tar Heel Team.

The weekly B. C. Sports Revue broadcast from station WPTF at Raleigh, was a short and snappy affair last night. Coach Chuck Collins had a greater number of questions from inquiring fans than he could possibly answer in twice as long a time as is allotted to the "gridiron interlocutor."

Mack Stout, Captain of the N. C. State Wolfpack, talked very briefly on the spirit of State supporters. "The support is one-hundred per cent better than it was at the beginning of the season. The alumni of the college are 'sticking up' for their alma mater in a great big way, now that the team is showing a new brand of football. Of course, the alumni were back of us all the time even though we were losing one game after another, but since we've gotten back in the way of things, they are backing us to the limit," said Captain Stout. He averred that State is going to give Carolina one of the best fights of the season, and that his team is coming to the "Hill" this afternoon to fight to the last minute.

"Doc" Sermon, newly-selected mentor of State College's football squad, eulogized briefly on the phase of the field goal in modern football. "The field goal has given way to other methods of scoring, as the wide end run, or the pass, lateral and forward, the more frequent line bucks, the fake reverses and fake punts." Taking Coach Sermon's opinion as correct, we have the facts that the reason for the replacement of the field goal by other plays is that the field goal is not liked by the general public." They prefer the man-to-man game any day," says Sermon.

The present average age of college athletes is 21 years, while the age of yester-years was 23, explains the State coach. Football has advanced to the "nth" degree within the past few years, declares Sermon, and the next decade will see it at its peak, although it will always be the sport of America.

Following up the talk of Coach Sermon, of State, Chuck Collins answered a number of the many questions which poured into the station during his last appearance over the air. Among them was one as to whom he considered the best quarterback in the South. Chuck replied that this distinct honor, in his estimation, lay between three men; Downes, of Georgia; Dodd, of Tennessee; and Branch, of Carolina.

Another query was: "Why does a team run the ball out of bounds when the said team is near the sidelines?" "It is better to lose a down," says Chuck, "by running the ball out of bounds when a team is close to the line, because the opposing team clearly sees that their opponents have no choice to follow except run one way, and a wide end run at that, and can easily smother the play. While if the ball is in the middle of the field, although it cost the offensive team a down to get it there, it can be run many more ways

THREE STARS IN THE STATE LINE

Here are three reasons why the Wolfpack forward wall will be hard for the Tar Heels to pierce this afternoon. Captain Mack Stout, who holds down a guard position hails from Sanford, and is a sophomore. Stroupe, right tackle, is a luminary in the Pack line along with "Red" Espey whose ability to get down under punts from center is an established fact with State opponents.

EX-NAVY CHAMP WORKS OUT HERE

Varsity Boxing Program Getting Under Way as Squad Grows.

Jake Denning of Durham, former light-heavyweight champion of the U. S. Navy moved over to Chapel Hill Monday to begin work for his fight on November 11 with Bobby Godwin. Denning has been working with John Warren, Obie Davis, Platt Landis, and Hugh Wilson, using his speed to advantage.

With Denning came Willie Parrish, Durham lightweight, who has been making an enviable record over in the Bull City. Parrish had his hands full Wednesday when he worked with Marty Levinson, and Cecil Jackson of the varsity. He topped off his workout with a three minute scramble against Paul Hudson, a promising freshman. All three of the Carolina boys showed ability, especially Levinson, who went into his heavier opponent and slugged with both hands to good effect.

The boxing squad has grown larger, and action is becoming more spirited as the varsity men begin to come out and get into shape. The work of Livinson and Boring of the varsity, and Guthrie of the freshmen has been attracting considerable attention all year. Guthrie is a rugged middleweight and is coming along fast. He has speed and a valuable left hand to help him along as well as an ability to absorb punishment. Boring and Levinson may replace non-competing varsity men in the bantam and featherweight class respectively, since Vaughan and Sheffield, veterans, may not find time to work this year.

The welterweight class still continues to attract attention due to the large squad of men competing and the uncertainty of the final assignment. Jackson, Holderness, and Gatling are the outstanding candidates at present.

The fossil of a remote ancestor of the common morning glory, that bloomed twenty one million years ago, and the feather of a bird of the same period have been discovered by the Field Museum geological expedition in the vicinity of Florissant, Colorado.

GREGSON IS LOST TO WAKE FOREST

Stellar End Out Permanently on Injuries from Temple Game.

Wake Forest, Nov. 5—The name of "Ray Gregson," a frequent entry on the Wake Forest casualty list during the 1930 grid season was recorded permanently today when it was learned that the stellar end will be lost for the remainder of the year to the Deacons.

Gregson sustained a broken nose and new injuries to a previously hurt knee in the Temple game last Friday night. A shoulder injury, the seriousness of which has not yet been ascertained, is listed as the most prominent of the end's injuries. A thorough examination to be conducted tonight is expected to reveal the possibility of a fractured shoulder.

Ten thousand students have enrolled in Columbia University's 1930-31 correspondence school.

PACK SHARPENS CLAWS FOR TAR HEEL ENCOUNTER

Strong Line Is Sole Boast of Invading Eleven.

North Carolina State's Wolfpack has been sharpening its teeth and claws all week in an effort to have them ready for their old rivals, the U. N. C. Tar Heels. So far the Techmen have had a very poor season. Johnny Van Liew did not have any success in whipping a green bunch of sophomores into a winning combination. "Doc" Sermon took over the reins and State's game has improved a little. The State coaching staff believes that the West Raleigh aggreation will be in their best form of the season against Carolina.

Potentially speaking, N. C. State has a very good line. "Red" Espey is a heavy built center, who has a habit of breaking into the other team's backfield. He is well supported on both sides by Mattlack and Captain "Mack" Stout, left and right guards respectively. Stout is one of the best guards in the state, and a candidate for All-State honors. At the tackle posts Sermon has a pair of sophomores in Cobb and Stroupe. These are heavy, fast fellows, with a lot to learn about playing their positions. "Coon" Silver, veteran left end, is one of the best wingmen in the State. At right end is another second year man, Nelms. Duke, Leforte, Greason, and Sitz are all good reserve men for the forward wall.

HEALTHY SLEEP DEMANDS OFTEN POSTURE CHANGE

Subject Should Alter Position Twenty-four Times Says Expert.

Dr. H. M. Johnson, head of the Simmons Institute of Sleep, of the Mellon Institute, Thursday evening in Phillips Hall outlined the results of experiments on 150 subjects covering three years. He explained that about twenty of the 150 were nervously or otherwise mentally deranged, that one group was tubercular, and that about seventy-five were normal. At the University of Minnesota twenty small children were observed, and at another university, thirty athletes. Dr. Johnson said that an observation of a few days would never suffice, but that instead from three months to two years were employed. The usual experiment on an individual covered from two months to nine.

Johnson explained that the purpose of the observations was to determine how long a sleeper maintained each position, and how the intervals varied with the subject and with the particular bed. The method was to attach a recording instrument to the bed, or in many cases to photograph the various postures with a motion picture camera.

The primary conclusion Dr. Johnson reached as a result of his experiments were: that "It is abnormal for a healthy sleeper to lie in any one position for a long time, and that the most restful sleep is normally interrupted from between twenty-five and fifty times in a night of eight hours."

MACALUSO TOPS ROBERTS' SCORING

Colgate Back Has Scored Seventy-Eight Points This Season.

Failing to tally in Saturday's Georgia-Florida game, Jack Roberts, Bulldog backfield ace has had his national scoring lead surmounted by Len Macaluso, Colgate flash, who obtained one touchdown and two extra points for a total of seventy-eight Saturday. Although Roberts still leads the nation in touchodwns scored, an aggregation of eighteen extra points tallied by Macaluso puts him in the lead by a margin of six points.

Leaders in each of the nine major conferences, touchdowns, extra points, and total points follow:

NAVY WILLING TO PLAY ARMY TEAM

New York—The Daily News today quotes Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, head of the United States Naval academy, as saying the Navy is willing to meet the Army in a post-season game for the benefit of the unemployed.

"Navy considers it a privilege and duty to aid the suffering citizens of this country. We are willing and eager to assist in any way possible. If a game with the Army can be arranged or is ordered by President Hoover as commander-in-chief, Navy will be pleased to play its traditional rival," said Rear Admiral Robison, according to the Daily News.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

Jack Bessen

This Saturday the East will celebrate "Intersectional Week," no less than six games between teams from different parts of the country holding plenty of thrills in store for the fans. New York has been singled out for two of these game, New York University engaging the Georgia Bulldogs and the "Illini" meeting the Army. So far this season, Georgia has kept its slate clean of defeats although the Florida "Gators" held the smashing Bulldogs to a scoreless tie. The Violets have not been so fortunate, losing a game to their metropolitan rivals, Fordham, 7-0. Last week Coach Meehan's charges came back to defeat a highly touted Carnegie Tech eleven, 20-7. It is to be remembered that the Scotchmen swamped Georgia Tech earlier in the season. By virtue of the defeat of Carnegie Tech, the writer picks the New York team to repeat its last year's triumph over the Southerners.

The Army has yet to taste defeat this year, although they held a strong Yale team to a 7-7 tie, and it is probable that Illinois will not mar this record. The westerners have lost but one game, that to the Wolverines of Michigan.

An undefeated Michigan eleven will invade the Harvard Stadium prepared to keep its slate clean. Last year, at Ann Arbor, Harvard bowed to the Wolverines by the slim margin of two points; the westerners have been greatly increased in strength, while the Crimson has lost many valuable men. It looks as though the smashing tactics of Michigan will be too much for Harvard to overcome.

It appears as though Pennsylvania has bitten off too great a piece to chew in scheduling the Notre Dame Ramblers to celebrate their "Homecoming Day." The Irish have every bit as great a team as last year, while the easterners have only had fair success with their opponents. Notre Dame should take everything but the stadium.

Ohio State will come to Baltimore to play an inspired Navy eleven. After an upset by Duke, the Tars came back to rout a strong Princeton team, 31-0. While Ohio State has played some good game, they haven't caused any Big Ten coaches to turn gray. One vote for the navy.

The last intersectional game will be played at Detroit, with the powerful University of Detroit team facing the best team in the East, Fordham. West Virginia has been the only team to score on the Rams this year; among the Bronx team's victims are listed New York University, Boston College, and West Virginia. The high scoring Detroit team has met defeat but once, losing a close game to Iowa. Fordham should win by two touchdowns.

Bradshaw Stresses Initiative In Talk

Mr. F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students, gave a very interesting talk yesterday morning during chapel hour on one of the discussions that grew out of the freshmen conferences that have been held on the campus and throughout the state recently.

He consolidated in this talk the need to the new men of good nerves, initiative, courage, and above all intelligence and determination.

Coker to Speak

Dr. W. C. Coker, professor of botany, is going to speak next Tuesday night before the Mitchell Society on "Some Interesting Early American Naturalists."

ONLY TEN TEAMS UNDEFEATED AND UNTIED TO DATE

List May Be Reduced Saturday As Prominent Intersectional Battles Loom.

Out of the list of several hundred major football teams that began the season with an unblemished record last month, only ten undefeated and untied remain. Fordham, sole possessor of the title of unscored-upon lost that honor last Saturday by virtue of a safety scored upon them by West Virginia. The unbeaten and untied teams are:

East—Fordham, Western Maryland, Alleghany.

West—North Western, Notre Dame, Marquette.

South—Alabama.

Far West—Oregon, Utah, Washington State.

This number will probably be greatly reduced over the week-end when several of the group clash in important intersectional games.

Alabama and Notre Dame are in the limelight with the most impressive number of victories. In Pennsylvania, Notre Dame will find a tough assignment, Saturday, while Alabama will be hard put to down Florida. In the Far West, Oregon is favored over the University of California, after having clipped off a half dozen formidable aggregations on the coast.

SHIFT HIGH GAME TO ONE O'CLOCK

Aberdeen-Chapel Hill Tilt Is Changed to Permit Attendance At State Contest.

High School authorities have shifted the time for the Chapel Hill-Aberdeen football game to one o'clock this afternoon to enable fans to attend the Carolina-State clash. The two high school teams will meet at Emerson Field according to present plans.

The game will be a hard-fought one, as both teams are in excellent physical condition. Chapel Hill has been scored on but once this season, in the game with Smithfield when the score was 7-0. Of the other four contests, the local squad won three and tied one. Aberdeen has likewise gone down once this year, but still has a good record.

Coach Brookbank of the local outfit, believes that Coach Faust's men outweigh his, but is nevertheless exteremely optimistic, because of the noticeable recent improvements in his squad. Mann, who replaced Paul Pendergraph at center when the latter was badly injured in the game with Apex, is doing fine work, and so, adds to the prospects of his team. Dashiel's improved punting will undoubtably add to the winning of the game.

Tracksters Work in Tin Can

On account of the recent rainy spell, the University's pole vaulters and high jumpers have started using the indoor vaulting and jumping pits at the Tin Can.

The rest of the fall track squad is working out as usual, and the sprinters and hurdlers will soon begin their indoor practice. The fall track squad will work in the Tin Can when the weather does not permit outdoor practice.

REVAMP GEORGIA TECH BACKFIELD

Captain Dunlap Out Following Injuries Sustained in Carolina Game.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 6—Injuries suffered in the North Carolina game at Chapel Hill last Saturday have necessitated the reorganization of the Georgia Tech backfield, Yellow Jacket grid mentors stated yesterday. The new backfield will include Barron and Flowers at the halfback postions, McArthur at quarter, and Cain at fullback. The former backfield was built around Captain Earl Dunlap whose withdrawal has been necessitated by added injuries sustained in games during the last two weeks.

with greater chances of results."

Some rabid football enthusiast who, it seems, cares only for glory of the game, asked Chuck in a questionnaire why the states of North Carolina, Virginia, and South Carolina did not get together and form a tri-state league. This question, although asked sincerely, shows that the questioner wants only glory from football encounters, caring nothing for the best details of the game. Very fittingly, Collins answered the superficial question in a witty manner. He wanted to know if a league formed by the barbers, haberdashers, clothiers, drug-store shieks wouldn't be all right to play Carolina for the championship of Chapel Hill. Maybe, says Chuck, we might be able to induce the Chapel Hill high school team to play Carolina a post-season game. I'm sure this would be a big attraction, and would cause great ferment in football circles. The Duke coach came in for a few witty but complimentary remarks from the Carolina mentor, also.

A lucky break for an inspired Carolina fan had its share in the program, as Collins announced that a free pass to the Duke-Carolina game would be sent to a boy listener because of his highly interesting letter in praise of the "Big Blue" team. This boy, who lives in Durham, wrote Chuck a letter saying that when the day of the annual classic between the two antagonistic rivals took place, he would be looking through a hole in the fence, "pulling for Carolina." And now the boy is to get a free trip to the game at the favor of the Tar Heel coach.

In the backfield State has practically no seasoned material. "Sparky" Adams, quarterback, is the only veteran. Adams played on the team that tied Carolina in 1927. The Techmen were State champs that year and had such players as Fred Vaughn, "Bad Bill" Metts, "Jack" McDowell, "Bob" Warren, now backfield coach at State. "Dink" Dellinger and "Hank" McLawhorn fiill the halfback positions. At the fullback post the Wolfpack presents two fine sophomore prospects, "Jeff" Jeffery and Sam Gurneau. Gurneau is one of the hardest line plungers on the team as well as a good defensive back. "Snoozy" Morris, a capital city product, is "Sparky" Adams' understudy. This boy is improving with experience, and should give the Tech followers hope for better days.

Coach Sermon has been pointing his boys for this game with North Carolina today. A win over Collins' charges would go a long ways towards redeeming some of State's early season losses, and Captain Stout's men can be counted on for a hard game in Kenan Stadium this afternoon.

WILLIAMS TALKS TO SOPHOMORES ON MEDIOCRITY

Says That University and College System is Feudal in Its Narrow Outlook.

Professor Horace Williams, head of the department of philosophy, yesterday morning spoke to the sophomore assembly during chapel period on the theme that the age in which we are living will be known to future generations as an era of mediocrity.

Professor Williams stated that as of old, this age is one of feudalism. In the Rennaissance, the school began to take over the guidance of the public, displacing the church. The school conscious of its strength became feudalistic. Today the University does not function as a university, as it does not touch the student wholly. As a great oak can not be grown rooted in a box so it is that a great man does not appear in the confines of a narrow process. There is a day of collapse in our economics. Not a voice is heard pointing the way forward. We seem to have discontinued the breeding of statesmen.

The professor said that America seemed to believe that it must meet every crisis by appointing a committee. That in itself is an admission of mediocrity. Imagine Euclid, William Pitt, Bismark, and even Jesus himself appointing committees to report on their various problems, and the student will note the complete absurdity of the idea of a committee for everything.

The Feudal period was so mediocre that it is called the Dark Age. It was destroyed by the crusades, but what was accomplished except the giving birth to a new species of man?

The college is Feudal in its process. Only in athletics does the University touch its sons,

Student Secretary To Visit Lutherans

Dr. Mary E. Markley, student secretary, of the board of education of the United Lutheran church, will address the Lutheran Student Association at the eleven o'clock service tomorrow morning in Gerrard hall.

Dr. Markley has had considerable experience in working with students, having taught English for ten years, and having served in her present position since 1919. She has traveled extensively in continental Europe and Great Britain, and has recently completed a trip around the world, spending considerable time in Japan, China, and India. Through her addresses based upon wide experience and extensive study, she has made distinct contributions in the fields of Christian education and missions.

Community Club Will Meet Monday

The health department of the Community Club, under the direction of Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge, did not meet on Friday as scheduled, but will meet on Monday afternoon, November 10, at three-thirty o'clock at Mrs. Breckenridge's home, 738 E. Franklin street.

The members will mend the clothes which have been collected at the "M" System store and will have them distributed to the poor.

DEBATING TEAMS PICKED FOR MEET WITH STATE MEN

At the regular meeting of the debate squad, Thursday night, J. C. Williams and C. A. Shreve were picked as the negative team, and R. A. Merritt and D. M. Lacy were picked as the affirmative team to compete in the dual debate with State College. The negative team will engage the State debaters here November 25th, and the affirmative will compete in Raleigh December 2.

The decision in this debate will be by the "shift of audience" vote. The question for the debate will be "Resolved, That the nations should adopt a policy of free trade."

UNIVERSITY MEN PLAN BROADCAST

Under Leadership of Red Greene Campus Activities Men Are to Speak Over WPTF.

Red Greene, president of the student body, has secured permission from WPTF to have fifteen minutes each Wednesday afternoon between the hours of 5:15 and 5:30 for the use of Student Activity Feature Programs. The primary purpose of these will be to let the people of the state know what Carolina students do in their spare time. A particular effort will be made to get as many high school students as possible to listen in so that they may possibly get some helpful ideas about the organization and function of the University's various extra-curricular activities.

Greene has appointed on a committee to aid in arranging programs the following men Mayne Albright, Jack Dungan, Pat Patterson, Ed Hamer, Will Yarborough, John Idol, J. A. Williams and John Lang. Ed Sheidt and Mr. Morgan Vining are acting as advisors to this committee.

The program for the next few weeks will be as follows:

Nov. 12—Red Greene will give a survey of the growth of outside activities on this campus and their significance in the history of the University. At the same time he will give a general description of all activities on the campus.

Nov. 19—Ed Hamer, president of the Y. M. C. A., will describe that organization together with its functions.

Nov. 26—Archie Allen, president of the Athletic Association 1929-30 and assistant boxing coach, will talk on the athletics at this school.

Dec. 3—Either Jack Dungan or Will Yarborough will give a survey of publications.

Ed Sheidt is sending out notices to principals of all high schools in the state to have them announce to their students the time and subjects of these talks. A great deal of interest has been shown here, both among faculty members and student leaders; WPTF seems to think that this will make a tremendously interesting program and is giving its full support to those sponsoring it.

Grisette in Charlotte

Library Exhibits Manuscripts As Part Of Vergil Celebration

Additional Vergil material from the Hanes Foundation for the study of the origin and development of the book is being displayed in the first floor corridor of the University library in the exhibit case nearest the main entrance. These books are displayed as part of the University's celebration of Vergil's 2000th birthday.

Probably more Vergil manuscripts and other material nearly contemporary with the poet's life exist in a good state of preservation than for any other Latin poet. Among these, one of the most interesting is an authentic portrait of the poet, drawing from the first century A. D. a facsimile of which is on display. This portrait is done in mosaic which may account for its excellent state of preservation.

Three facsimilies of an early 9th century manuscript show in what form Vergil's works were transmitted to modern times. This manuscript now in Berne, Switzerland, contains the Bucolics, Georgics, and the Aeneid. It is written in the Carolingian hand, which is called after the Emperor Charlemagne, because of his support of a writing school and scriptorium at Tours. The first page of the Eclogues is very unusual, being chiefly occupied by a large and highly ornamented capital T. The first lines of the poem are written close up under the right-hand arm of this capital letter.

A facsimile page from the Koberger edition of Vergil's works, published in 1492, shows how early German printers produced the poet's works. A series of three books show how Italian publishers presented Vergil's work to readers in the early part of the 16th century. These books are illustrated with woodcuts describing the various scenes in the poems. The books are open to the incident of the Trojan horse where the monumental wooden horse is being drawn into Troy by the inhabitants of the city. One book shows a woodcut of Aeneas' voyage away from Troy. The ships are depicted in the midst of a storm blown up at the request of one of the gods. This picture is somewhat more realistic than others, showing, as it does, a Trojan sailor in the throes of seasickness.

The Aldine Vergil of 1501, a facsimile of which is on display, is the first example of the use of the Aldine italic type. This type was modeled after the informal handwriting of the day, rather than the monumental and formal manuscript hand. The facsimile is from a highly ornamented copy of this edition, the border of which was painted in by hand. A relatively modern edition is that published by Charles Baskersville of Birmingham, in 1757. This book, an original copy of which is on display, is one of the landmarks of typographical history. Baskerville set out to print one of the most beautiful books possible for a printer to produce. He spent three years in the task and astonished Europe by the unusual restraint of his design. Unfortunately, less care was spent on the text of the poem than on the printing of it, so that it is not an important edition for anything but appearance. This is the first publication from this press.

"Purely Feminine College Is Holy Terror", Writer Declares

"The girl whose ambition and aim is to charm is still the winner with men. And, believe me, she rarely a college graduate," declares Nina Wilcox Putnam in the December College Humor. "I am particularly prejudiced against colleges run strictly for women, but feel that there is a lot to be said in favor of coeducational institutions. In fact, the worst that can be said against the latter is that a coeducational institution throws people of opposite sexes, who are still pretty young for the task, into a lot of grown-up situations which they are really not capable of handling.

"But the purely feminine college, run by women for women, is a holy terror, to my mind. To me it seems to do something awful to a girl. It's a completely false world to begin with, because women are basically rivals all through their lives and do not herd together naturally and impersonally as men do. Therefore a vast campus simply crawling with females who ape the independence of men without achieving the solidarity of men is to me a false and pitiful thing. And attendance at such a college more often than not leaves a girl hanging midway between intellectual snobbery and a practical education in living, without achieveing either. Of course in the case of a girl who is deliberately planning a career to which a special course of study is essential, my verdict is entirely different. She must, of course, go to college.

"But for an average girl who intends to make marriage her chief business—and, thank heaven, they are still in the majority—to waste four precious years that ought to be devoted to romantic adventure, at a college which offers contact with only her own sex, seems tragic. And what's more, the experience is often mighty unhealthy for her whole point of view on sex.

"Some wise author, I'm not sufficiently educated to remember his name, once pulled a splendid gag to the effect that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. And that's how I feel about the knowledge a girl gets at a female college. What's the value of a smattering of the classics, a course in trig, or a sentence or two in a dead language, all of which is soon forgotten, as against the good, red hot warming-up for the business of Life which a girl gets out of normal social contacts during the four years which she averages before marriage and after school? Why waste that precious interval by putting a girl away in a sort of home for grown-up female orphans where life is artificial to the nth degree and bears no relation to her real future?

"Let's keep college for the grinds and let our marriageable daughters strut their stuff at home. And if a girl wants an occupation, let her get a job of work. Any work, practically, will teach her more in a month that will be of real value to her than she'll pull out of four years at Wreckem College."

M'KIE STRESSES LOCAL DEADLINE FOR ANTHOLOGY

As was announced some time ago, Harper and Brothers is to publish an anthology of American college verse under the editorship of Miss Jessie C. Rehder, of Columbia University. The plan as announced by Miss Rehder is to include two poems from each of one hundred American colleges and universities.

The local deadline for contributions is November 15. Professor George McKie, of the departments of English and public speaking, is in charge of the secretarial end of the enterprise. To be considered in the selection of the two poems to be submitted from Carolina, contributions must be in Professor McKie's office, 210 Murphey hall, by the above deadline date. Poems submitted must not be longer than thirty lines.

BOST ANNOUNCES BOOK ON SULPHUR

Volume Is First of Its Kind to Be Published, Covering Field of Sulphur Compounds.

Dr. Bost of the chemistry department of the University has just announced a book entitled "A Bibliography of Organic Sulphur Compounds." His co-authors are Dr. Parry Borgstorm of the Naval Research Laboratories, and Dr. D. F. Brown of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey. The book is sponsored by the American Petroleum Institute and is printed by the Lord Baltimore Press. The volume is the first of its kind ever to be published and covers the entire field of organic sulphur compounds from 1871 to 1930. The book grew out of a trend of research in organic sulphur compounds particularly with reference to petroleum. Until the last few years very little was known of the nature of the sulphur compounds found in petroleum. It gives a survey of the literature of these compounds in which their occurrence, method of preparation, various reactions, and methods of detection are noted. It classifies the organic sulphur compounds into thirty classes, and arranges abstracts in alphabetical order with reference to authors.

In addition to covering the literature as stated above, the book also covers abstracts of all United States pertaining to the removal of sulphur compounds from petroleum. These abstracts were obtained from the original patents in the Patent Office in Washington. Dr. Bost also has a research project sponsored by the American Petroleum Institute in which two fellowships have been established for the investigation of complex organic sulphur compounds which are found in petroleum. There are only two universities in the south which are awarded these fellowships.

Dey Requests Acknowledgments

Some time ago Dr. W. M. Dey, chairman of the faculty committee on fraternities, sent to all fraternities a letter stating scholarship requirements for the initiation of pledges and requesting an acknowledgement of its receipt. He has received no acknowledgements and requests that those to whom letters were delivered let him know as soon as possible.

WILL CELEBRATE TWELFTH ANNUAL ARMISTICE DAY

Principal Address Will Be Given By Dr. Henderson In Gerrard Hall, November 11.

Tuesday at chapel period, which will last from ten-thirty until eleven-thirty, the entire University, together with the faculty, will meet in Gerrard hall for the twelfth annual commemorating exercises in celebration of the signing of the armistice which ended the World War.

The program will be in charge of the University administrative officers and the Chapel Hill post of the American Legion, commanded by Paul Robertson.

Eleven o'clock classes, it has been announced, will not meet until eleven-thirty, making it possible for the entire student body to attend. While it was announced that attendance upon this function would not be compulsory, it has been the custom for practically the entire student body and faculty to attend.

The speaker of the occasion will be Dr. Archibald Henderson. The invocation will be delivered by Reverend W. D. Moss of the Presbyterian church. Then the convocation will sing the national anthem. This will be followed by a roll call of the University dead, to be read by Dean A. W. Hobbs, of the college of arts. The roll call of the dead of the Chapel Hill post of the American Legion is to be read by Post Commander Paul Robertson. Taps will be sounded by George H. Lawrence. At eleven o'clock, at the time at which the armistice was supposed to have been signed, a two-minute pause will take place during which the audience will stand bare-headed.

Henderson's address will be followed by the benediction. Martial music will usher the audience out of the building.

FAMOUS CHEMIST PAYS VISIT HERE

Dr. Charles W. Dabney, internationally known chemist, is visiting friends here and doing some work in the library. He is stopping over for a few days on his way to his winter home in Florida.

Dr. Dabney has written a number of books, chiefly in the fields of science and education. He has been president of the universities of Tennessee and Ohio though he is not now connected with any school. He was also state chemist of North Carolina for several years in the latter part of the nineteenth century.

Zimmerman To Speak At Cleveland Meet

Dr. E. W. Zimmerman, professor of economics, is to read a paper on international economics problems at the next meeting of the American Economics Association, the program of which has just been published. The meeting is scheduled to be held at Cleveland, Ohio, December 27-30. Since this is a nation-wide institution it is considered quite an honor to be placed on the program.

A New University Song Is Desirable

An attempt is being made to secure an original song for the University. Half-hearted attempts in the past to secure such a song either have died prematurely from lack of interest or have been shelved for future reference.

The present attempt is likely to succeed. Mr. A. B. Andrews of Raleigh has provided the necessary incentive with his offer of two prizes totalling one hundder dollars. One prize of $75 is offered for the best words, the other of $25 for the most suitable music.

Hark the Sound is a variation of the well-known tune of Amici. The tune is probably the most common of all Alma Maters. Girls vary the words slightly and shrill them during commencement exercises. Prep and high school boys insert a number of "fights" and sing the song before their big games. Alumni and students combine to maltreat it for the benefit of wavering teams. And until replaced by the Maine Stein song, it was a favorite of the Saturday night drunk.

Rudy Vallee hasn't attempted to croon the song yet but every jazz band in the country uses some variation of it. Dancers may jump up and down or waltz to the tune. Altogether it is rather versatile.

Another song is necessary. Those who possess a talent for writing music or songs should bend their efforts toward a worthy cause. Not only will they do the University a service but will be rewarded for their efforts.

Newspapers and Better Business

The press of the state is lending an unsteady hand in the hopeful gesture now being made to bolster up the economic optimism of North Carolina, thereby relieving business depression in the state. Editorials, news articles and "house ads" preach a doctrine of better business. Typical slogans include that one of Governor Gardner's, "Live-at-Home," "Business is Good," "Panic, Did You Say?," "Buy Now and Save," etc.

Whether this movement will have any beneficial effect is purely a matter of speculation. It is a safe assumption that a better business spirit will eventually result, for evidences of this are already seen, but it is hardly reasonable to expect anything more tangible than that.

However, an innovation recently made by one of the Durham papers can be depended upon for actual relief of unemployment—the major problem of the times—if its move is followed up by other publications. It was announced last week by the publishers of the Herald-Sun papers, that their classified columns would be thrown open to unemployed job-seekers free of charge. Rendering this assistance costs the newspaper little; its value to the city and state is, no doubt, potentially immeasurable.—E. C. D., Jr.

POET TO MAKE RADIO ADDRESS

The only public address to be made in America by Sir Rabindranath Tagore, famous poet and philosopher of India, will be made under the auspices of the National Student Federation of America over a nation-wide network of the Columbia Broadcasting company, Monday evening, November 10, from 8:30 to 9:00 o'clock.

On account of his illness all public engagements of the renowned Indian figure have been cancelled in this country. It was only by a special arrangement of private wires to his hotel room in Boston that he consented to make any public utterance.

His lecture will be addressed to the youth of America and will be in the nature of an interview. Chester S. Williams, executive secretary of the Federation, will propound questions reflecting serious student interest. They were obtained in a recent survey made by the Federation in selecting vital questions for the four international debating teams which are speaking before American universities this fall.

Included in the radio conversation will be such questions as the following: To what source shall the student youth go to seek real truth? What do you feel is the cause for the great social unrest in the world today? Can we spiritualize the machine or rather find a spiritual significance in a machine-dominated world? Do you think the force of religion is waning? Is the struggle of subect peoples the result of a more widespread education and enlightenment? What will be the effect of the gigantic experiment in mass education upon the promotion of social justice and world peace? It Mahatma Ghandi and leaders who base their appeal on a "soul-force" or "love-power" getting strong young followers, or are they prophets crying in the wilderness?

Git Up an' Bar the Door
By Arthur Palmer Hudson
A Farce of Mississippi Folk Life.

The Carolina Playmakers inaugurated their thirteenth year with the presentation of their "Twenty Seventh Bill of Original Plays" at the Playmakers Theatre Thursday evening. Following their now well established formula, a folk tragedy was sandwiched between two equally folkish comedies. The use of the comedies in this manner is evidently for the purpose of first warming the audience to the players and then leaving "a good taste in their mouths." If such is the case then only the last play succeeded in accomplishing the desired psychological effect, for despite the fact that the gallery gods were anxious to enjoy the humor of New England folk life, they found little cause for laughter during the first play.

The cast must bear the greater part of the blame for the failure of Samuel Hinkle, Fireman to get across although the play itself is exceedingly weak and shallow. James S. Queen as "Zeke" and Evan James Vaughan as "Mr. Betts," gave very creditable interpretations of the characters and were responsible for most of the humor which the play contained. Had Mr. Vaughan varied his action so that it would have consisted of something more than giving a line and then slapping his knee as he gave a chuckling little laugh, he could have done an able bit of characterization. Evelyn Brickman in the role of "Mrs. Hinkle" did not look nor act the part of a mother of a grown son. Properly cast, she should be a valuable addition to the wearers of the mask. Robert Oscar Ludeman in the title role gave the poorest performance of the evening. Unfortunately his voice carriage, and appearance were those of an awkward youth covered with grease-paint and wearing comic clothes. In the reading of the speech which he was to give at the Fireman's convention, the one piece of real humor in the play, he failed miserably. The casting committee is as much at fault, if not more so, than Mr. Ludeman for his sad plight. The other characters failed to make an impression.

Once again a Chapel Hill audience is privileged to see a play by Loretto Carroll Bailey. Had Cloey been written before Job's Kinfolks, it would probably have brought the authoress as much fame as did her first play. Cloey is a play of contrasts and conflicts. It is a scene from what should be a three-act drama. Too much preparation is necessarily used in order to explain the background which should have been revealed in a previous act. Should Mrs. Bailey decide to write it into a three-act play, it is suggested that she forget her folk training and let her characters speak the correct English which rightfully belongs to such people.

The set for the play is the most realistic yet produced by the technical staff. As one person was heard to remark, "You feel as if someone really lives in that room." The staff deserves even more commendation when it is known that all of the properties, with the exception of a few pieces of furniture, were made in their shop expressedly for the play. The lovely oil portrait hanging over the mantel was painted by Miss Tatum; and the natural looking shelves of books are in reality only a half an inch thick. The whole set is a work of art and the guiding hand of the artist, Samuel Selden, is everywhere apparent.

Marion Tatum Played "Mrs. Motsinger" as ably as could be expected from anyone not on the professional stage. This woman of fifty, who is still young, is too deep and subtle for anyone but an experienced actress to play properly. Mary Ewart interpreted the title role with understanding. While lack of stage experience made the delicate shadings of voice and action necessary to the role difficult, she, nevertheless, gave a very admirable performance. The movements of her hands while setting the table were especially good. Joseph Fox as the book-agent with poetic aspirations was well cast. Elizabeth Perrow in the minor role of "Gracie" was fair but her drawl would have become unbearable had she been on the stage for any length of time.

Git Up an' Bar the Door furnished the unexpected. The whole spirit permeating the play is unlike anything heretofore furnished by the Playmakers. For some reason one is made to think of Ralph Roister Doister or Gammer Gurton's Needle. It is a farce, true enough, but a farce of the Elizabethians, tinged with a subtle humor and freedom which makes one chuckle throughout the play. It is a relief to find a folk play having a delicate and sly humor. An author has at last portrayed a dirt farmer and his wife as human beings who enjoy themselves in much the same way that people do in other walks of life.

Marjorie Good as "Ritt Parsons" gave the most superb performance of the evening and an appreciative audience expressed its approval with enthusiastic applause. It is to be regretted that such a delightful character appeared for so short a time during the play. Charles Elledge interpreted "Burros Stubb" excellently ,and supplemented the humor of the character with that which is his own by nature. Bess Jones Winburn was very good in the part of "Jenny" although her dialect was poor. Fortunately, the plot demanded little of her voice but a great deal of her ability to pantomine, and in the latter field she is excellent. Kent Creuser, Peter Henderson, and Lubin Leggett as the Nolan Gang all over-acted, over-talked, and over-swaggered. Mr. Leggett acted drunk enough on one or two drinks of Stubb's whiskey to have had a quart of white lightening. Had these three parts been played with a little more restraint, Get Up an' Bar the Door would almost have been a perfect comedy.

On the whole the Twenty Seventh Bill was entertaining, and one should expect no more from an organization whose aims are the promotion of the experimental theatre. It is a commendable ambition, this desire to preserve the native drama, for as Dryden said, "There's a dearth of wit in this dull town, while silly plays so savourily go down."

stated Professor Williams. In athletics the best man wins, but what does he win. One must go to the crusades to find a parallel to athletics. Fifty thousand people watch twenty five play. No one of the fifty thousand will ever do what the twenty five do. What do they want? Just this: the Crusades destroyed the Feudalism of the church; athletics will destroy the Feudalism of the college. It will ask for a university man rather than a departmental man. There is an ideal of character encompassed in all manly sports that is higher than any departmental interest. This was illustrated most recently when criticism that did not come forth when the coach disciplined a member of the team did not come forth when he modified his discipline.

In conclusion, Professor Williams stated that behind this mediocrity looms a finer devotion to ideas and to standards if one would only take advantage of them, and that he envied each and every student today.

Scientific Tests Of Mental Growth Being Performed

Folkstone, England, Nov., 9—(IP)—Elimination of examinations may be possible if a new scientific method testing the mental growth of school children, now being tried out by educators, proves successful.

Children are asked to tell what is wrong with a number of absurd statements, and if they give correct answers, their mental ability is said to have been proved.

One of the brain twisters which these same educators would try on adults to see if they are "superior," is as follows:

"A mother sent her boy to the river to fetch seven pints of water, giving him a three-pint and a five-pint measure to carry it in. How could the boy measure exactly seven pints of water without guessing at the amount? Begin by filling the five-pint measure."

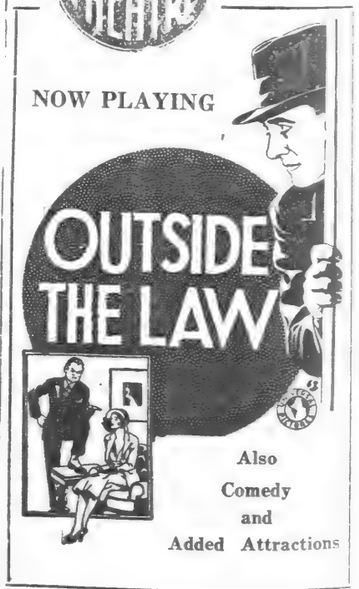
WOMEN ALUMNAE WILL STUDY AT THIRD SEMINAR

Greensboro, Nov. 8—North Carolna colleges' third seminar, directed by the alumnae association of the state institution for women and scheduled to be on the campus November 21 and 22, early attracts considerable interest, according to those in charge of advance arrangements for the event which is expected to bring to the college several hundred former students.

Alumnae are expressing especial interest in the nature of the program, one designed to be both entertaining and instructive. "Modern Literature," the title of the whole of the two-day study, is to be discussed under various headings by Dr. Stanley Williams ,of Yale university, Dr. W. C. Smith, of the college of arts and sciences at the state institution, and A. C. Hall, Miss Martha Winfield and L. B. Hurley, members of the department of English at the local college.

A dinner, a luncheon, a tea and an excursion by automobile through the city are departments of the seminar designed to entertain the visitors.

Dr. Smith is director of the approaching seminar.



AFRICANS WILL WRITE TO AMERICAN STUDENTS

A letter has been received from the South African Union of Students listing the names, ages and chief interests of fifty South African students who would like to correspond with Americans or Europeans studying in the United States. They are particularly interested in the latter, because they feel that these students can offer a very interesting evaluation of the American people and their culture as seen from a European viewpoint. The Central office of the National Students Federation of America will be very glad to make the contacts between this group and any students who would like to correspond with the South Africans.

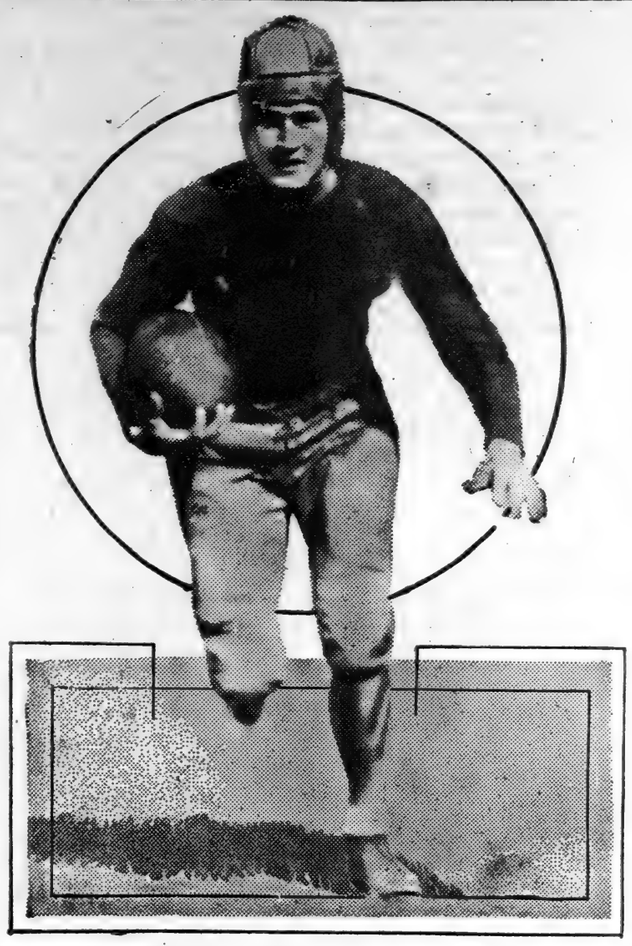
The University of North Carolina Tar Heels in Kenan Stadium here yesterday afternoon ran up a total of 20 first downs and allowed only five to their ancient rivals, the N. C. State Wolfpack, but failed to show any drive when within the 20 yard line and barely eked out a 13-6 victory. Ten thousand people saw the game.

The Tar Heels had things their way throughout the first half, running up 13 first downs to none for the 'Pack, but returned after the intermission to be held closely throughout all of the third quarter. The final period went the Tar Heels way, but inability to drive within the 20 yard line kept them from scoring on two occasions during the period.

Blocking by the Carolina line was not up to the standard of the performance last Saturday against Georgia Tech. Although it opened many wide holes for the backs during the first half, it allowed the Tech forwards to sift through and smear play after play during the last two quarters. The Tar Heel backs quite often were slow at getting off when within scoring distance also.



Captain Nash Stars

Captain Strud Nash came out of a slump in which he has been all season and played a great game at right halfback.

During the first half it was Nash, with splendid interference by line and backs, versus State. The Tar Heel captain made both of Carolina's touchdowns and ripped off gain after gain. Nash took the ball 19 times for a total gain of 76 yards, and received three passes for 70 more. He was running up to his old form yesterday— fast, elusive and

Since the Tar Heel-Wolfpack game was moved up a day ahead of schedule in order to avoid conflict with the Duke- Kentucky game in Durham today, this game will be omitted from the star gazing list.

Over in the Bull city Duke grapples with Kentucky in a catch-as-catch-can fight. Coach Harry Gammage has a far better team than the Alabama game would indicate. The Wildcats have such stars as Captain "Floppy" Forquer, Williams, and Andrews in their forword wall. Kentucky's line is heavier than Duke's. In the backfield the Blue Grass State presents "Shipwreck" Kelly, Tom Phipps, and Ellis Johnson. All three of these boys can carry the ball in great style, and the Dukemen will be kept busy trying to keep them in check. Duke has a well balanced team that, with one exception has been clicking well all season. Bill Murray, "Buzz" Rosky, and "Fat" Adkins are the main cogs in De Hart's team. The Kentucky boys lost the ball twice within 'Bama's 12-yard stripe on fumbles last Saturday. Any team that has that much drive and punch should topple the high flying Blue Devils. The odds are very much against the Millionaires as their team is inferior to the Wildcats in almost every department of play.

Down in Gainesville, Florida, two great teams meet in a game that will have an important bearing on the Southern Conference championship. Alabama, fresh from victories over Tennessee, Vanderbilt, and Kentucky, will battle a fighting Florida eleven that upset the dope last week by holding Geor-

TAR BABIES HARD AT WORK ON IMP BATTLE TUESDAY

Frosh Gridders Show Improvement In Clash With Varsity Reserves.

Coach Enright had his freshman charges out Thursday night till the moon had risen high in the sky. He is not taking this coming game with the Blue Imps as any joke and is working his men as much as possible. The first eleven Tar Babies took the field against the varsity reserves in a lengthy scrimmage and came off the turf with a 6-6 tie. Although the score was tied the play was all in the reserves' territory and the freshmen had the upper hand throughout. The game with Duke is next Tuesday at Durham. The Tar Babies had a holiday Friday to watch the State game but Coaches Sapp and Farris will have them out this morning at eleven o'clock for a short session. Coach Enright will not be here this morning but will be back for the final practice Monday afternoon.

At the beginning of the workout Thursday afternoon the first team had a snappy signal drill and their attack seemed to be getting under way a little smoother as a result. As has been said several times, the Tar Babies have all that could be asked for in the defensive line, but they must improve their attack.

The Tar Babies scored early in the scrimmage against the reserves and then were held on the three yard line. The reserves, after many attempts, finally succeeded in crossing the goal. But it was only after they had repulsed a stubborn freshman defense. The whole Tar Baby team seemed to be playing inspired football. The line functioned better on the offense and broke through the enemy line to nail their backs for losses and no gains repeatedly. This was the second day in succession that their play of this calibre and, if they continue to show this marked improvement in spirit, they will certainly give Duke something to worry over.

The chief trouble Thursday with the offense was the excess time the backfield took behind the line of scrimmage. The forward wall opened up tremendous holes but they were closed before the ball carrier could reach the line of battle.

In the scrimmage Thursday the work of Gardner, at center, was the outstanding point. Along with him Shore, stumpy little guard, played well. In the backfield Hackney continued to play well. His line thrusts carried more power and his defensive work also stood out. Phipps

F. T. "DINK" DELLINGER
N.C. STATE WOLFPACK

Dink Dellinger played a consistent game for the Wolfpack yesterday, being active on pass defense and in advancing the ball. He returned Blackwood's kick-off late in the first quarter for seventy yards. The only other long run of the game was Gurneau's 76-yard dash for a touchdown after intercepting Magner's pass in the second period.

HILL HIGH HANDS ABERDEEN LOSS

Nineteen to Zero Win Yesterday Gives Local Team Impressive Record.

Chapel Hill high school downed the Aberdeen squad 19 to 0 at Emerson field yesterday afternoon. Although the local team was handicapped by being outweighed by the visitors and by the loss of the regular center, Paul Pendergraph, it steadily broke down the opposition.

In the first quarter, King scored a touchdown. McKnight and Prouty fought their ways across the goal line the following quarter, and Stone made an extra point. The Aberdeen squad "bucked-up" in the second half and prevented Chapel Hill from scoring a fourth time. At one period toward the close of the game, Aberdeen reached Chapel Hill's five yard line, but two fumbles followed by an incompleted forward pass, turned the tide in favor of the locals.

King, Prouty, and Mann did exceptional work.

WILDCATS SAID IN POOR SHAPE FOR DUKE GAME

All But Three of Kentucky's Regulars on Casualty List for Blue Devil Contest.

Special To Daily Tar Heel

Durham, Nov. 8.—An injured list that included virtually everyone but the water boy and a third string left end was seen here today as a substantiation of the fact that the invading Kentucky Wildcats will send a scrub eleven against Duke today.

Veritable anhiliation at the hands of the Crimson Tide of Alabama last week was the last straw to send the Wildcat squad into splints and bandages for the remainder of the season. Following a workout in Asheville Thursday afternoon, Coach Harry Gammage stated that only three regulars, Forquer and Rose, guards and Wright, right tackle will start against the Blue Devils.

With the exception of Moon Mullen, the Duke squad appeared in perfect condition, Mullen's injured knee, however, was said to be improved and the midget quarterback may be in the starting lineup.

While Kentucky's starting lineup is uncertain there will be no change in Duke's starters, who have opened in Duke's past five victories.

The Wildcats spent Friday afternoon on the stadium field running through final signal practice and formations.

DEACONS POINTING TO PRESBYTERIANS TODAY

Asheville, Nov. 7.—With Ray Gregson, star end, indefinitely out of the game from injuries, the Wake Forest Deacons went through light practice today in preparation for their match here omorrow with Presbyterian College.

Gregson, who already had been on the casulty list several times received new injuries in the game with Temple last Friday in Philadelphia. The Sanford boy's shoulder was believed fractured.

Coach Pat Miller, in scrimmage yesterday, shifted Gardner, a guard to end on the number two team, indicating he might get the call Saturday. Green and Brogden held down the end posts of the number one team.

Hamlet Meets Apex

Hamlet and Apex high schools will meet in Sanford this afternoon at 3:30 in a game to decide the championship of group four in class B series.

Both teams have been scored on once this season. Chapel Hill high school defeated Apex 13-0 and Hamlet won a game 7-6 from Presbyterian Junior College.

TAR HEELS WIN OVER N. C. STATE COLLEGE BY 13-6

shifty, shaking off would-be tacklers many times.

It seemd to be the day for Carolina's seniors to get going, for Jim Magner and Henry House shared with Captain Nash in gaining ground during the afternoon. Magner carried the ball four times, advanced the ball 32 yards, and hurled many accurate passes. House had a good average, hitting the line ten times for 37 yards.

Dellinger and Gurneau

Honors in the State backfield go to Dink Dellinger and Sam Gurneau. These two men made the colorful and spectacular runs of the day. Dellinger took Blackwood's kick-off on his 10-yard line late in the first period and raced through the Carolina team for 70 kards, being overtaken by Pete Wyrick on the Tar Heel 20-yard marker. Gurneau intercepted Magner's pass in the second period on his 24-yard line and raced 76-yards for State's only score. Perfect interference by cohorts kept the Tar Heels from getting anywhere near him until he had crossed the goal line.

Gurneau backed up the Wolfpack ably and Dellinger was a consisent threat in the Wolfpack backfield on many scrimmage plays. "Sparky" Adams played a good game at quarter for the Wolves also.

The State College line came up to predictions many times, holding the Tar Heel backs for no gain when deep in their own territory, and often playing in Carolina's backfield to throw the ball carriers for losses. Captain Mac Stout played a nice game at guard, and Milo Stroupe and "Red" Espey also showed up well. The Wolfpack ends, Coon Silver and Allen Nelms, kept the Tar Heels from making any substantial gains around the flanks.

When the game was almost over Nelms took a pass from Morris and raced to Carolina's 14-yard line before he was downed. It looked at first as though he would get away, but the Tar Heel backs finally succeeded in overtaking him.

Red Gilbreath played a nice game at center for the Tar Heels making his passes accurate and covering his territory well on defense. Ned Lipscomb was in the game for only a short time, but he kept up his usually good work. It was a real battle in the middle of the line, with the Tar Heels' star centers pitted against State's Red Espey. Both pivot men gave each other plenty of trouble as was evidenced by passes to the ball carrier.

Irwin Walker and Aubrey Parsley looked good on the flanks for Carolina, playing off the interferers many times and nabbing the ball carrier. Parsley caught a pass from Magner in the second quarter for a 15-yard gain and blocked Greason's kick on State's 25 yard line in the same period.

Bands Perform

The Carolina and State bands paraded up and down the field between the halves, with both drum majors trying to see who could do the fanciest stepping. The Tar Heel band "goose-stepped" to a slow march for a part of their time on the field. Dad Price, the jolly director of the Wolfpack's band, stood out from the State musicians in his white suit with red trimmings. Combinatons of blue and white for the Tar Heels' band and red and white for State's made a very colorful sight on the field.

The Game by Periods

Blackwood kicked-oof for Carolina to Adams on his 5-yard line, who returned it to his 25. Failing to gain on two plays, Jeffrey punted to Nash, who received the ball on his 42 on a fair catch. Carolina with Nash doing most of the ball carrying, marched to State's 18, but lost the ball on downs. Keeping deep in State's territory throughout the whole of the period, Carolina pushed the ball over with Captain Nash carrying it across the goal line. Blackwood's placement kick was blocked by Nelms and Stroupe.

Blackwood kicked-off to Dellinger, who received the ball on his 10, and raced through the Carolina team for 70 yards, finally downed by Wyrick. On four plays State gained only five yards and the ball went over to Carolina as the quarter ended.

On the second play of the second quarter, Maus punted to Adams on Carolina's 44. State attempted a pass on second down and Captain Nash intercepted it on his 30, returning it five. Nash lost two, gained five, and then took a pass from Magner on State's 45, and ran to State's 28 before being downed. On four plays Carolina was unable to gain and the ball went over to State. On third down Gurneau punted; Parsley blocked it, but State recovered, and punted again. This time the punt went high for only 16, and Branch received it on State's 40. Magner went around end for 24, and after three more plays Nash carried it over for Carolina's second touchdown. Branch dropkicked for the point.

Blackwood kicked-off to State and Cobb returned the ball 12 to his 35. On second down Gurneau got off a bad punt for only 8 yards, and it was Carolina's ball on State's 35 yard line. Magner on the first play was rushed badly by the State line, and passed into the arms of Sam Gurneau, who took the ball on his 24 and raced the 76 for State's only touchdown.

Gurneau got off a nice placekick, which looked as though it would be good, but it hit one of the uprights on the goal post and went wide.

Carolina drove down to State's 16 but lost the ball on downs. Greason punted out to Branch who was downed in his tracks on his 40. The half ended with the ball in Carolina's possession on State's 46, after Branch and Magner had made it a first down.

Second Half

Throughout the whole third quarter Carolina was on the defensive, kicking out after State drove the ball to the 32 yard line Only once during the quarter did Carolina have the ball in State territory, and that was in the opening minutes of play. First downs during the quarter were Carolina 2; State 3.

In the final quarter Carolina threatened three times, but each time lost the ball on downs. Greason did some good punting during the period to make up for the poor kicking of Gurneau in the first half. Early in the quarter Stuart Chandler carried the ball from State's 32 to its 12 on three plays for Carolina's best offensive effort in the quarter.

Late in the quarter State took the ball on its 20, and Sharpe ripped off 18 through the line; Morris threw a pass to Nelms who finally was downed on Carolina's 15, but the Tar Heel line held and the ball went over. The game ended with the ball in Carolina's possession on State's 33 yard line first down and ten to go.

made several nice gains and continued to improve his passing. It was a pass from him to Hackney that netted the score. Woollen, quarterback, played much his best game of the season. His choice of plays was better, and he was running harder. The team that took part in the tussle included: Adair and Jones, ends; Crane and Strickland, tackles; Matheson and Shore, guards; Gardner, center; Woollen, Phipps, Hackney and Whitener, formed the backfield. Although no definite selection has been made as to the starting lineup against Duke, it is highly probable that this will be the coach's choice.

gia's powerful team to a scoreless tie. Led by the all-Southern guard, Bob Steele, the 'Gators will present a lighter but faster line than Wallace Wade's seven separate mountains of bone and muscle. In Captain "Red" Bethea and Ed Sauls the Floridians have two of the brainiest backs in the South. It was Ed Sauls who prevented the Georgians from winning by a safety. Sauls was rushed on an attempted punt from behind his own goal line and grounded a pass. On the next play he punted out of danger. Coach Bachman's boys may take to the air and beat the Crimson Tide. However, Alabama is favored to win on sheer man power alone.

Georgia goes North to tackle the New York University Violets at the Polo Grounds. The Violets will be anything but easy picking for Georgia. Last Saturday "Chick" Mebane's club downed a strong Carnegie team, 20-7. Dick McNamara and Joe La Mark ran roughshod over the Scotchmen to score N. Y. U.'s three touchdowns. So far the Violets have only wilted once this season. Fordham, the only unbeaten team in the East, took advantage of a fumble to eke out a one touchdown victory. The long trip and the change in climate will handicap the Bulldogs. At any rate, the burden of the proof is on the team from the far South.

Hopping back down South again we find Georgia Tech playing host to Vanderbilt in Atlanta. Alexander's men have steadily improved. They put up a hard, grinding scrap against North Carolina a week ago. "Jap" Hart, Strickland, and Cain all found themselves in the Tar Heel game and will be hard to stop from now on. The left side of Tech's line is a stone wall, but the right side is a little weak. Vandy, with a bunch of sophomores who don't know how to lose, should nose out Tech for a win, as the Commodores have one of the best balanced offensive and defensive teams in the conference.

Tulane's Green Wave will probably flow over the Auburn Plainsmen. One of the big surprises of this year has been the sensational come back of Auburn. The Plainsmen gave both Florida and Georgia Tech bad scares before bowing to them. Tulane has Jerry Dalrymple, all-Southern end, Elmer McCarse, John Scafide, and Jack Holland in the line. They should come through this game undefeated, but watch out for next week.

Wake Forest's Deacons will have their hands full against Presbyterian College. The Blue Stockings licked North Carolina State College last week. However, the Demon Deacons are a heavier and more powerful team than Presbyterian College and should come out on top.

Notre Dame's Fighting Irish meets a strong Pennsylvania team before a capacity crowd of 78,000. All of the seats were sold out last week. Rockne's men are favored to win although the Keystone eleven boasts the finest backfield in the East. Penn's great backfield is composed of Walt Masters, quarterback; Bill Groupner and Dick Gentle, halfbacks; and Carl Perina, fullback. It should be a great game, and the Ramblers will be forced to exert themselves.

At Blacksburg, Virginia the Virginia Cavaliers and V. P. I. meet in a death struggle. These Virginia elevens fight mighty hard among themselves for the championship of the state. Virginia has improved steadily since the season opened and have a chance to pull an upset by winning from the Virginia Poly team.

Davidson should win over Wofford, although the Terriers gave Duke a close game. Clemson and Tennessee should have little trouble with V. M. I. and Carson-Newman, their respective foes. The South Carolina-Furman game is a toss up; Billy Laval's squad has the edge on paper. Harvard is the underdog against an undefeated Michigan gang; John Harvard may tweak Sam Michigan's nose good and proper if the mid-Western boys take any naps in the Harvard stadium. Army has a slight edge over Illinois in their tussle at the Yankee Stadium. Fordham's Iron Men should continue their winning ways against Detroit University.

YALE PROFESSOR EXPLAINS CAUSES OF INTOXICATION

Henderson Gives Unusual Definition of Intoxicating Liquors.

Professor Yandell Henderson, of Yale University, recently published an article in the Yale News, in which he gave a novel definition of intoxicating liquors. According to Professor Henderson, "no beverages in common usage may be considered an intoxicating liquor if less than eighty cubic centimeters of alcohol are taken into the body in an hour."

Professor Henderson stated, "by an intoxicating beverage is understood one which contains such a percentage of alcohol that the amount of it that a person would consume, in its ordinary use, would induce either a marked temporary disturbance of physical condition and behavior or cumulative ill effects of alcohol on a person is the length of time over which the alcohol is consumed. This, in turn, depends largely upon the degree of dilution of the alcohol in water, which is contained in most beverages. No beverage which in common usage is drunk only in such amounts that not more than the equivalent of eighty cubic centimeters of absolute alcohol is absorbed into the blood in an hour can properly be denominated intoxicating.

"The teaching of physiology and toxicology teaches that the definition of an alcoholic beverage as contained in the Volstead Act excludes from use practically all non-intoxicating beverages. Thus, most persons who desire to drink alcohol at all must make use of those beverages, such as whiskey, gin, and half-diluted crude alcohol which are highly intoxicating."

Freshman Cabinet Will Hear Farris Tomorrow Night

All of the cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. will meet Monday night at the usual time and place. The Freshman Friendship Council meets in the Y parlor on the first floor while the sophomore, junior and senior cabinets meet in the parlors on the second floor at 7:15.

The freshman cabinet will be addressed by Ray Farris, ex-president of the Student Union and former star football player. Possibly a musical program will be rendered. The Friendship Council is progressing rapidly. The last two meetings had 85 attendants. Edwin Lanier is the adviser.

The sophomore cabinet is directed by Bim Ferguson. It is also doing good work.

H. F. Comer is the advisor for the junior-senior Cabinet. Dr. English Bagby, professor of psychology will address this group Monday night. The senior cabinet will continue their plans on the Human Relations Institute from now until the Spring.

DEMOCRACY FAVORED ON HARVARD CAMPUS

Cambridge, Mass.—(IP)—Democracy, an unknown quantity on the Harvard campus for many a year, is about to be introduced on that campus, if efforts being made by President Lowell and the other administrators are successful.

Staff Meeting

At seven o'clock tonight there will be the regular meeting of the staff of the Daily Tar Heel. Editors will meet at seven, and reporters at seven-fifteen. Mr. Bob Madry, director of the University News Bureau, will address the meeting. Mr. Madry served on New York newspapers and as a correspondent in Paris and abroad.

Several members of the staff, both reporters and editors, are reminded that they missed the meeting of the staff last Sunday night and thus endangered their position on the staff. The editorial-writers will meet at six forty-five.

ALDERMEN SEEK TO AID JOBLESS

Several Plans Suggested for Relief of Unemployment Situation Here.

The problem of finding employment for men in and around Chapel Hill during the coming winter will be discussed by the board of aldermen at its meeting Wednesday night. Several plans for the relief of the unemployment situation have been submitted, and Mayor Council invites all who have suggestions to offer to come and join in the discussion. The mayor declared that the municipal government cannot aid the situation by direct grants of money, but it can serve as an organizing force to provide for some means of work for those who are able and willing to do it.

Members of the faculty, realizing the seriousness of the unemployment situation, have submitted plans for relief. One plan is to employ men to plant trees along bare stretches of streets and highways.

Another member of the faculty suggested that the town organize a body, aided by private subscriptions, which will be able to provide the unemployed with jobs of civic interest. He suggested that rubbish heaps should be done away with, thus beautifying the town and providing work at the same time.

A national movement, headed by Colonel Arthur Woods, has been suggested as a remedy for unemployment here. Mayor Council urges that everybody who needs improvements to his home or place of business have them made now if possible.

CIVIL SERVICE OFFERS GOVERNMENT POSITIONS

North Carolina has received less than its share of appointments in the apportioned departmental service at Washington, according to the United States civil service commission. Therefore a number of governmental positions are open to state residents.

The civil service has announced open competitive examinations as follows:

Geologist, reservoir and dam site investigators, bureau of reclamation, for duty at Denver, Colorado; principal agricultural economist (foreign competition and demand), bureau of agricultural economics, for duty in Washington or in the field; toxiologist, bureau of chemistry and soils, for duty in Washington or in the field; associate civil service examiner in education, bureau of education and Indian field service.

DEAN OF UNIVERSITY FACULTY HERE FOR FORTY-FIVE YEARS

Walter Dallam Toy, Sr., Has Watched University Since Its Organization and Is of the Opinion That the New University Is Better.

"I was familiar with the University in the years following reorganization and have followed its progress with great interest," said Professor Walter Dallam Toy, senior member of the University faculty in point of service in an interview yesterday. For forty-five years an active professor in the University, Professor Toy has seen the institution grow and change from year to year and says this about it, "While enjoying memories of the days when Chapel Hill was a simpler place, I am in thorough sympathy with the new University as we have it today, and I expect the University to be further developed and enlarged to a position of even greater service, not only to the state but to our country as a whole."

Professor Toy was born in Norfolk, Virginia, in 1854, and received there his preparation for college. He became a student in the University of Virginia and was graduated with the degree of Master of Arts in 1882. Immediately after finishing his course, he sailed for Europe where he remained three years studying in the Universities of Leipzig and Berlin. He also spent some time in Paris.

In 1885 Professor Toy was elected to the chair of modern languages at the University of North Carolina. Later, on the division of these languages into Romance and Germanic, he became head of the department of Germanic languages, the position which he still holds. During the period of forty-five years since that time Professor Toy has made several trips to Europe, spending eighteen months in Germany on the latest trip.

Professor Toy was one of the charter members of the Modern Language Association of America and of the Philological Club of this University. He is also a member of the American Dialectic Society and of the North Carolina Historical Society. He is a member of the Chi Psi fraternity, and has been for many years secretary of the faculty and an active member of several committees and boards.

Professor Toy has contributed articles to professional journals among which is the "Modern Language Notes." He has also edited texts which are widely used. Among these are "Die Journalisten" of Gustav Freythe and Moliere's "Les Precieuses Ridicules."

Former U. N. C. Professor Finds Use For Slash Pine

Slash pine, which is found in abundance throughout the South but is considered a waste product, will bring vast wealth to this section if the invention of Charles H. Herty, former member of the University's faculty, and once president of the American Chemical Society, is as successful as experiments have indicated.

Herty's invention was first announced at a luncheon of the Atlanta chamber of commerce last week when the inventor displayed samples of white newsprint paper made from standard quality slash pine.

The inventor's standing as a chemist gives much faith in the invention. Several years ago he invented an improved process of extracting turpentine from pine trees which brought him fame and wealth.

In a despatch from Atlanta the New York Herald-Tribune calls Herty "a chemistry Aladdin." The despatch says:

"He made his discovery public without reservations and proposed that Southern business men make use of the knowledge to enrich the South. 'Southern pine has long been used to make paper of a yellow variety,' Mr. Herty says, 'but not to compete with the high grade sulfite process newsprint and white book paper made from spruce'."

The new paper was made of the one variety of pine supposed to be the least capable of producing regular newsprint.

The Raleigh Times, commenting upon the invention. says: "The slash pine is a tree of peculiarly rapid growth. Those long-sighted men who have given consideration to the problem of reforesting the South, and redeeming the wastes created by lumbering and subsequent fires in the pine regions have been hopeful of this slash species for a number of years.

"If it should become a major source of newsprint paper," the Times continues "it might work a veritable revolution in many parts of the Southern states. In North Carolina are millions of acres of land, now idle, practically abandoned by their owners and producing next to nothing in taxes to the counties in which they lie. The future of these lands is to be reforested in their natural growth of timber, or with slash pine, readily adaptable."

WILMINGTON WOMAN WILL TEACH CONTRACT BRIDGE

A series of contract bridge lectures will be given by Mrs. Haskell Rhett, of Wilmington, at the Gorgon's Head lodge under the auspices of the Pattie Battle Circle of the Episcopal church at eight o'clock on the evenings of November 10, 12, 13, 17, 19, and 20.

Mrs. Rhett will teach the forcing system under which contract is rapidly becoming standardized since all authorities have adopted it.

Anyone interested in these lectures should see Mrs. Dougald MacMillan.

CHANCES OF DEATH BY PNEUMONIA REDUCED

Washington, Nov. 8.—(IP)—Lobar pneumonia, which causes thousands of deaths annually in the United States, has been attacked with a great deal of success; the death rate from bronchial pneumonia has been greatly reduced, and marked success has been achieved in relieving the suffering from arthritis and cases of muscular inflammation, according to staff physicians, by an electric treatment which has been worked out and applied at St. Elizabeth's Hospital for the Insane, a government institution here.

Lectures Here

George H. Wright, prominent member of the Asheville bar and leading real estate lawyer of western North Carolina, whose recent lectures on "Abstracting Land Titles" at the University law school aroused enthusiasm among the students and faculty.

CAMPUS RADICAL TRIED BY STATE

Milton Abernathy Brought Before College Student Council For "Cheating Story."

"The game of cheating at North Carolina State College is not equalled by any other sport," wrote Milton A. Abernathy, State junior, in a story which appeared in a Raleigh newspaper last Sunday. Yesterday the State College student council was trying Abernethy on a charge of reflecting on the student body and injuring the reputation of the college.

Though the "court" before which the young campus radical is being tried is composed of the student council, the college faculty is taking an active part in the proceedings. Members of the faculty committee are advising the council, and Dean Carl Taylor, of the graduate school, is representing Abernethy as his "attorney."

Abernathy's article was based on the master's thesis which Professor William N. Hicks wrote from confidential questionaires answered by the students in 1928. Whether or not the young man's accusers contend that he did not stick to the facts is not shown in the charge. However, Louis H. Wilson, the "prosecuting attorney" in the case, said that the facts of the thesis were "misrepresented" rather than falsified. It is the plan of the Abernathy defense to go through the article, paragraph by paragraph, and ask if each is not in accord with the thesis written by a man on the college faculty. The thesis is on file in the State College library.

The student body or rather the student council seems determined to punish Abernathy for making such broad statements concerning cheating, while the faculty and especially President E. C. Brooks and Dean Taylor are inclined to believe that the student is guilty of no serious offense.

Freshman Election

There will be no election of freshman class officers this quarter, according to "Red" Greene, president of the University Student Union, because the freshmen will be better acquainted with each other later on. The election of officers will take place some time in the winter quarter or at the beginning of the spring quarter, President Greene announced.

EIGENSCHENK IS TO PLAY ORGAN FOR DEDICATION

Audience Is To Take Part in Ceremony with Responsive Reading.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday of next week will see the dedication of the much discussed Music Auditorium, which has been under construction since spring of the last University year. As has been announced, Edward Eigenschenk, is to be the recitalist, especially imported for the occasion.

The audience is to take part in the dedication ceremonies by repeating a responsive reading, while President-elect Graham is scheduled to accept the organ in the name of the University, provided his physicians will permit his attendance at the event. Mr. Graham is under observation as a result of an acute appendix condition.

In the first half of the program, which is to begin at 8:30 both Friday and Saturday, and at 4:30 Sunday, Gigout's Grand Choeur Dialogue, Widor's Scherzo (Fourth Symphonie), and Widor's Finale (Fourth Symphonie) will be the numbers played.

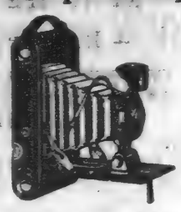
Six selections will be interpreted in the second half of the program. This section will include: Canyon Walls by Clokey, Sketch in D Flat by Schumann, Seraphic Chant by Moline, Divertissement by Vierne, Reverie by Dickinson, and Toccato (Fifth Symphonie) by Widor.

Three Speakers And Football Game On Current Week's List

Three addresses and a Playmaker reading, all open to the public, lead the calendar of events for the week. In addition to these the Carolina freshman football team will meet the Duke first-year team here.

Monday night Colonel J. W. Harrelson, director of the state department of conservation and development, will speak before the North Carolina Club when that organization meets at 7:30 in Bingham hall. Colonel Harrelson's topic will be "The Land Resources of North Carolina."

The freshman game will take place in Kenan stadium Tuesday afternoon as a part of the annual Armistice Day celebration. Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the University's mathematics department, will speak in Gerrard hall at 10:30 at the official observance of the day.



Tuesday night at 7:00 p. m., Craft, chief engineer of the Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph company, Atlanta Georgia, will address the local section of the Taylor society on the "Budget Plan of the Bell System." The society will meet in Room 103, Bingham hall.

Paul Green will read his own play, "Tread the Green Grass" at 8:30 Sunday night in the Playmakers Theatre. Lamar Stringfield, director of the faculty orchestra, will play his music written for the play.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

This Buccaneer Business

Now that the plight of the Carolina Buccaneer has been fairly well thrashed out in the columns of the campus Daily what have the numerous discussions amounted to? Not very much, it is certain. The campus comic is still intact, and there is little reason for believing that there will be any change of editorial policy. The local humorous publication's claim to existence is one which cannot be refuted; namely, it reflects student conversation.

The Buccaneer is all right in its place. It is, of course, not intended to be sent to one's grandmother or one's aged father. A student would hardly enhance his good standing by supplying his favorite girl with copies of the comic.

'Tis a good thing that hot air is light and, therefore, rises. Otherwise, we'd all be smothered to death on this campus.

Speaking of true statements that are hard to believe, "Prof" Koch told his 8:30 class the other morning that it was worth one's time to come all the way from New York City to get one glimpse of the North Carolina wren.

Although analogies are in rank disrepute as a means of proving a contention, we feel that L. C. MacKinney (teacher mediaeval history) said something worthy of note when he spoke thusly to his class Friday morning: "Gentlemen, mediaeval history, women, and fleas are very much alike; you can't get hold of either of them."

'Tis rumored that the Spanish government is making an attempt to popularize American methods of advertising in that country. Such an attempt might not be a bad idea right here in the United States.

DUTCH STUDENTS LEAD FREE LIFE IN UNIVERSITIES

Member of Dutch Student Union Describes the Colleges of Holland.

The organization of the Dutch students is explained in an article addressed to the National Student Federation of America by C. M. Nienhuys of the Dutch Student Union.

"Briefly, every university and college has its own student life and customs. There are more than 11,000 students, distributed over six universities and four colleges in Holland including Utrecht, Leiden, Amsterdam, Delft and Groningen.

"Each university town has its own character and recruits its students from certain districts and communities. In Utrecht, many sons of the land-owning nobility of Holland are studying. Leiden has more Dutch aristocracy, and Croningen has many Groningen and Frisian gentlemen-farmers' sons, whilst Amsterdam is conspicuous for its students from intellectual circles and from the commercial milieu, having moreover, a strong Jewish element in its student world.

"The organizations which comprise all the students in the five academies are the faculty-corporations which regulate for the student his studying opportunities. They are so-called professional corporations (vakvereeningingen), organizing scientific lectures, outings, announcements of dates, etc.

"Nowhere is such a free and easy studying regime to be found as in Holland. No obligatory college attendance, no examinations after fixed terms of study, nor enforced interrogatories. Certainly, this carries with it a great danger for spirits too fond of liberty. However, the selecting influence is of more value.

"In the same way the student is given much more freedom in shaping his life outside his studies, for there are no compulsory clubs or boarding establishments of which he must be a member. There are, however, 'corps' in which a student may become affiliated. They are a powerful corporation which sway the student's code of morals and pass it on from generation to generation. Their social life culminates often in beautiful clubs where all the 'solemn' happenings of student life are celebrated.

"As a reaction against the 'ragging' (groenen), which was sometimes too severe, 'bonden' (clubs) sprang up in the eighties with more democratic tendencies, where also lady-students were admitted.

"Especially in Utrecht, Leiden and Amsterdam they are well to the fore. They too know the social club-life. Between them and the corps the relations are, as is only natural, not 'loving,' and they sometimes give vent to them at nocturnal encounters."

At the Carolina This Week

The Carolina theatre offers this week a well-balanced series of pictures containing especially such stellar attractions as "The Big Trail," which has been spoken of as "the most important picture ever made," and "Tom Sawyer," Mark Twain's well-known story.

Monday's attraction is "The Big Trail," a production of especial significance not only as an entertainment but also as a motion picture with a colorful and authentically historical background. Laid in the days of the American pioneer and picturing the great trek across the west before even the days of the frontier, "The Big Trail," starring El Brendel, Margaret Churchill, and Tully Marshall, provides entertainment on the scale of the celebrated "Covered Wagon" and productions of that type.

Coming to the theatre Tuesday is "The Lottery Bride," screen musical comedy done on a lavish scale and directed by Arthur Hammerstein among whose stage successes were such hits as "Rose Marie" and "High Jinks." The music and lyrics were composed by Rudolph Friml. Jeanette MacDonald, Joe E. Brown, and Zasu Pitts lead the cast, while the film has a magnificent technicolor sequence.

The attraction Wednesday is Grace Moore in "A Lady's Morals," a picture which is one of the latest releases from the producers and which has not yet appeared on Broadway.

Thursday's picture should possess an appeal for everyone, at least for all those who have known of Mark Twain and of his immortal creation, Tom Sawyer. Tom Sawyer and all his host of friends and relatives and enemies will parade in "Tom Sawyer": Aunt Polly, the disturbing Becky Thatcher, the schoolmaster,—and of course Huckleberry Finn. The action transpires just as it does in the book; the characterization is faithfully reproduced; the picture, in fact, is a visual reproduction of the original story, and with Jackie Coogan as "Tom" and the inimitable Mitzi Green as his sweetheart "Becky" a big success has been scored.

The comedy-drama "Fast and Loose" is the feature Friday. Carol Lombard, blonde star of many photoplays, and Frank Morgan star in this production.

The bill this week closes with "The Pay Off," which will be seen Saturday. In this picture Hugh Trevor, playing the role of the "heavy" or villain, shares honors with Marian Nixon and Lowell Sherman as leaders in the cast. Sherman also directed the attraction, which is based on an original story by Samuel Shipman.

A much-heralded attraction, Amos 'n' Andy in "Check An' Double Check," is coming to the theatre November 17 and 18.

CAVALIERS POINT TO HOME GAME WITH W. AND L.

Game Will Be Sixteenth Contest Between Two Virginia Institutions.

University, Va., Nov. 8,—After taking part in three homecoming celebrations on foreign football fields the Virginia varsity can now settle down to prepare for its own "Big Home Game" with Washington and Lee next Saturday afternoon on Lambeth Field.

This will be the sixteenth gridiron game between the Generals and Cavaliers. Their first formal football contest was in 1890. Since 1922 they've alternated home and home games every year.

The Cavaliers took the games from 1890 to 1907 when the Generals were victorious for the first time. Virginia also won the contest in 1922 that marked the renewal of gridiron relations. Then W. and L. teams coached by Jimmy DeHart won three years in a row, after which Earle Neale coached three University of Virginia teams to victory. Last fall was a 13-13 tie.

Generals and Cavaliers will each put into the game one back of the highest quality. Monk Maddox of Lexington and Bill Thomas of Charlottesville are both skilled enough in gridiron ways to make places on any team in the nation.

State To Inaugurate First Intercollegiate Ring Squad

A squad of sixty-four is at work at State College training for the coming boxing season which will see State's debut in official boxing circles. The squad is composed chiefly of freshmen to date but a number of varsity men is expected to report at the conclusion of the football season since several members of the football squad are outstanding ring prospects.

Although this will be State's first official boxing team, experience is not altogether lacking since several of the men fought on last year's regimental team in R.O.T.C. camp. Captain Sam Dimeo, Grey, Bowens, Nance, Bennett, Hall, and Rhyne are among the most outstanding candidates at present while others are showing unusual improvement in their daily workouts.

LEADERSHIP FRATERNITY TAPS SIX AT DAVIDSON

Six campus leaders, all members of the senior class, were tapped Tuesday at Davidson College by Omicron Delta Kappa, national honorary fraternity, when practically the entire student body witnessed one of the most impressive ceremonies of the college year.

The election to Omicron Delta Kappa, national leadership fraternity, is considered one of the greatest honors wherever this fraternity has a chapter.

The men tapped Tuesday were Thad Brock, of Barium Springs; R. M. King, of Nashville, Tennessee; J. D. McCall, of Salisbury; A. B. McClure, of Rabun Gap, Georgia; A. W. McLean, of Lumberton; and C. A. Sisson, of Winona, Mississippi.

Carolina Students Entered In Contest

Two graduate students who are now studying at the University are among the eight graduates of Wake Forest College who will represent that institution in the Rhodes scholarship contest to be held in the state December 4. These boys are C. E. Poovey of Hickory, and C. A. Madry of Durham.

The other graduates representing Wake Forest are: O. T. Binkley, Harmony, now at Yale; M. L. Griffin, Monroe, now at Tulane; G. B. Snuggs, Albemarle; T. D. Kitchin, Jr., R. N. Simms, Jr., Raleigh, all at Wake Forest; and R. B. Davis, Burgaw, at the University of Virginia.

Collegiate Customs Are Adolescent Says Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin

Washington, D. C., Nov 8.—(IP)—"Coonskin coats, college caps and collegiate slang are remnants of the irresponsible days of adolescence that must be put aside upon entering college," Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the George Washington University, told members of the freshman class here this year.

"Don't confuse the burning of gas with the burning of midnight oil," he said. "You may go further overland on the former, but it won't get you as far on the road you are to travel while in college. Loafing is a disease, a malfunctioning of worthwhile energy. Choose as your friends those who are going somewhere, and go with them."

Medicine Taught With Strip Films

Philadelphia, Pr., Nov. 8.—(IP)—Strip film photography has been adopted by the School of Medicine at Temple University here as the best method of teaching medicine.

Strip film photography is different from motion pictures in that it consists of the making for projection purposes of single photographic exposures, usually in series, on strips of standard motion picture film.

The camera used at Temple is small enough to be carried in a man's coat pocket.

People With Cold Hands Can Be Eliminated

Kansas City, Nov. 8.—(IP)—That by cutting two little nerves that lie along the spines of persons whose hands and feet are cold, the cold and clammy handclasp can be eliminated, was the information conveyed to the Southwest Clinical Conference here by Dr. L. G. Rowntree, of Rochester, Minn.

Persons with arthritis or bone fever also may be benefited by the operation which increases the blood supply in the afflicted regions, Dr. Rowntree told the conference.

Blue Devils Triumph Over Kentucky Squad By Count Of 14 To 7

GALLOPIN' BILL MURRAY IS STAR IN DUKE VICTORY

Blue Devils Count Touchdowns In First Two Periods; Pass Gives Wildcats Sole Score.

By Don Shoemaker

Durham, November 8. — A long-necked, sandy-haired boy with a stride like a kangaroo and a pair of hips like an eel, traveling under the cognomen of Bill Murray, tamed a snarling pack of Kentucky Wildcats in the Duke stadium here today as the Blue Devils romped to their fifth victory of the season, 14 to 7. In the wash of the Murray wake and on to the reefs sailed "Shipwreck" Kelly, Kentucky's only scoring hope, with a badly injured side that kept the stellar back on the bench during the greater part of the game.

Pushing across a touchdown in each of the first two periods, the Blue Devils led their northern visitors by two tallies at the end of the half, but came back in the third period to see a resolute and rejuvenated Kentucky crew pass for a touchdown and hold the ball deep in their territory for almost another. Within the shadow of the Duke goal, a doughty Blue Devil line held back charge after charge, and the Wildcats saw their last offensive threat fade into oblivion.

Offensively alert on the first play, Toth hurled a long pass over the head of Kid Brewer to Myer, sucking in the Duke offense that anticipated a line plunge. From then on until the whistle blew, Wildcat offense assumed the import of a litter of Persian kittens. Receiving the ball in midfield after an exchange of punts, Kid Brewer and "Gallopin' Bill" Murray ran the oval to the Kentucky thirty-yard line, but their scoring stopped when Williams intercepted a Duke pass on his twenty-one yard line.

On the following play, an attempted off tackle plunge, Urbeniak, Kentucky halfback, fumbled on the line of scrimmage to Mason. In his characteristic "hobbled mare" stride, Murray swept the left end of the Kentucky line to score from the twenty yard line.

After an exchange of punts in the second period, Brewer and Murray pounded the Kentucky forward wall to the ten-yard line where Brewer carried the pigskin over after two short line stabs.

A rejuvenated Wildcat eleven took the ball after the half and penetrated deep into Duke territory. Playing for the breaks, the Wildcats took advantage of Murray's fumble on his own twenty-five yard line as he attempted to punt out of danger on the fourth down. Richards knifed off tackle for seven yards and Toth took to the air and hurled a perfectly timed pass to Andrews, Kentucky left end, who received the ball over the goal. Cavanda added the point for a 14 to 7 count in the opening minutes of the final period.

The remainder of the game saw Kentucky in scoring position on several occasions, but the Duke aerial defense tightened and the final whistle saw the ultimate losers vainly trying to pass for a score.

Frequent booting resulted in several sensational plays. Kicking from the fifty yard line, "Bo" Myer, stocky Kentucky quarter, booted the ball out on the six inch line to place the Duke punter in a hole. Murray ran back several punts for sen-

U. N. C. SUPERIOR TO DAVIDSON IN 33-YEAR RIVALRY

Tar Heels Have Won Twenty Games to Wildcats Four and Four Have Been Ties.

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 8.—The University of North Carolina and Davidson College next Saturday renew a gridiron rivalry that has existed for 33 years. Twenty-eight contests have been played during that time, with the Carolina Tar Heels having a decided advantage over the Davidson boys. In those years, the University elevens have rolled up over four times as many points as Davidson. To be exact, Carolina has 325 points, compared to Davidson's 75.

Only four times in all those years has Davidson been able to take the measure of the Tar Heels, and four of the tilts have ended nothing-all. This gives Carolina a total of 20 games won. With the exception of two years, the Carolinians have never defeated Davidson over three touchdowns.

MEXICAN STUDENT WINS DAVIDSON'S FIRST CAKE RACE

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 8.—R. C. Morrow, of Zituacaro, Mexico, won Davidson Colleges' first annual cross country cake race for freshmen here yesterday afternoon when he came in at the head of a field of 45 contenders. His time for the one and seven-tenths miles course was 10 minutes, 30 seconds. John Lafferty, Rome, Ga., came in second, and L. W. Pratt, Louisville, Ky., was third.

Herb Nelson Proud Possesor Of Ball Used In State Game

Herb Nelson, star end on the Carolina football team, who was been confined to his bed in Watts hospital since the Wake Forest game, is the proud possessor of the football used in the Carolina-State game Friday. It was presented to him after the game by Captain Strud Nash, and sits enthroned today on his dresser in the Durham hospital.

Herb was able to get out of the hospital Friday long enough to view the game from the field house, but had to return to his bed where he will be confined for two more weeks.

Herb has been quite ill since he was confined to his bed the last of September, but now he is rapidly on the road to recovery, and is expected to be on his feet again soon. He has lost a great deal of weight during the course of his illness, but is rapidly regaining weight, and seems very anxious for the 1931 football season to come along when he hopes to be back in shape and playing at left end for the Tar Heels.

In spite of his illness he has been following the Tar Heels through every game so far, and is keenly interested in the progress of the team.

Hard Work Ahead For Tar Heels Preparing For Davidson Contest

Sizeable Group from Carolina Team Witness Duke-Kentucky Game.

TWO REGULARS INJURED

Slusser's Leg Is Cut and George Thompson Receives Injury Above His Eye.

The Tar Heels were idle yesterday after the game with the N. C. State Wolfpack and a sizable group of them went over to Durham to see the Duke-Kentucky game. Things, however, will get started in the Tar Heel camp again tomorrow afternoon, and it is expected that there will be hard work ahead getting ready for the Davidson Wildcats at Davidson next Saturday.

In spite of the fact that the Tar Heels will be conceded the edge over Davidson, they will all be aware of the fact that Monk Younger is always after their scalp, and that their showing against State College Friday was not very impressive.

Coach Collins was in Durham yesterday attending the Duke-Kentucky game and could not be reached, but it is believed that he will send the team through a week of extensive and intensive training. Monday, as usual, probably will be taken up with light work to limber up sore muscles, and a short scrimmage for the "iron men," but Tuesday should see the Tar Heel camp busily engaged in drills at blocking, tackling and signal drills. The second team may be pitted against the freshmen in scrimmage.

The coaches seemed to be of the opinion that Carolina's inability to gain against State when within scoring distance was not the fault of the line or the backs, but to a general lack of coordination in the attack. Scrimmage last week was concentrated on power plays from the 10 to 15-yard lines, and it is not at all improbable that similar drills will be held again this week.

The State game left the Tar Heels with several of their regulars injured. Rip Slusser, when tackled outside the sidelines in the game, received an ugly cut on his leg which had to have several stitches taken in it. Coach Bob Fetzer said that he did not see how Slusser could get back in shape for the Davidson game but expects that he will be ready for the Thanksgiving classic with Virginia.

George Thompson received a cut above his eye, which also required stitches to close the

SUBSIDIZING OF ATHLETES IS ON MARKED DECLINE

New York, Nov. 8.—The year that has elapsed since publication of the Carnegie Foundation's famous "bulletin 23" on college athletics has seen considerable progress in remedying abuses, particularly the recruiting and subsidizing of athletes, Dr. Howard J. Savage, principal author of the bulletin, said today.

At the same time Dr. Savage stated emphatically that the foundation did not claim credit for the changes but merely noted them.

While little has been heard from Dr. Savage and his associates on the subject of college athletics since the senatorial results of their study were made public on October 24, 1929, they have been far from idle.

Antics of Drunk Fan Amuse All

A football fan, whose identity could not be learned, became too full of spirit at the State-Carolina game here Friday and wandered onto the field with the idea that he could hear the music of the State band better.

Once there, the martial music became so attractive that the fan decided that his duty was to make a solo march behind the band. This he did until the Chapel Hill officers made up their minds that he did not belong to the between-the-half procession, and ushered him, protesting, off the field.

Friends of the man convinced the officers that they could better take charge of him and all disappeared into the crowd, where the bands would not be so attractive.

In an effort to offset the habit of becoming "music listeners" engendered in youngsters by the radio and player piano, school authorities in New York are setting up courses in music, to develop "players of music" among children.

FIVE FRATS LEAD IN FINAL STAGES OF INTRAMURALS

Ruffin and New Dorms Leading Dormitory Race; Ruffin Favored to Win Title.

The various clubs are taking their last wild swings for the championships and the leaders are strictly on the defensive to hold their coveted positions in the last week of the intramural tag football. At the end of the week Mac Gray and his assistants will declare the leaders of both the fraternity and the dormitory races and the play-offs will be held to decide the teams that will battle it out for the campus title.

Ruffin has practically put the dormitory title under lock and key when they toyed with the touted New Dorms outfit. Ruffin shoved across three touchdowns besides holding New Dorms scoreless. There still remains a potential stumbling block. On Thursday Ruffin squares off with Aycock, an outfit that has taken plenty but still carries a dangerous punch. With Longest throwing passes and Potter dragging them in, Ruffin has something to look forward to. Potter has shown mean ability to pack the ball in a broken field.

As usual the dopesters picked a bad one in the fraternity contest. Sigma Nu, which was expected to clean up, was defeated twice last week. The Kappa Sigs sneaked up from twelfth place and put across two touchdowns before the final whistle blew. The A. T. O.'s stayed at the top by whipping the same club.

The Dekes and the Betas will fight it out on Friday for the

TAR HEEL CROSS COUNTRY TEAMS WIN OVER DUKE

Varsity Wins 18-37; Freshmen, 24-35, as Baucom Sets Course Record.

Led by the record breaking performance of Captain Cliff Baucom, the Tar Heel cross-country team scored an overwhelming triumph over Duke, 18-37, yesterday at Duke. Heizer, who placed third for Duke, was all that kept Carolina from making a perfect score.

In completing the four and a half mile course in 23.05, Baucom bettered by five seconds the course record held by the Duke ace, Heizer. Baucom's performance was all the more noteworthy, since he was practically running on one leg. Captain Baucom injured his leg in the V. P. I. meet two weeks ago and it has only very slowly responded to treatment. In addition to Baucom, Jensen, last year's star freshman runner, suffered from stomach trouble, and as a result placed sixth.

The men broke away clean, with Baucom in the lead, who kept up that all the way. Jones and Heizer fought it out for second position, with the Carolina man triumphing. Hubbard, Cordle, and Jensen then finished almost hand in hand to complete Carolina's scorers. Flinton was the second Duke man to finish, placing seventh.

The Tar Babies, who ran the preliminary race, had almost as easy a time with the Blue Imps as the varsity, winning 24-35. Miles, Duke, ran a good race, covering the two and a quarter mile course in 14.15, to place first. Not far behind was Grover, Carolina, who finished in 14.40.

Raleigh Defeats Durham To Top Eastern Section

Goldsboro Vanquishes Wilmington To Assume Second Place While Winston-Salem Drops To Greensboro In Western Division.

Continuing in the high school state championship race sponsored by the University, Raleigh defeated Durham high school 12-0 Friday to remain the only undefeated class A team in the eastern division. This win was Raleigh's fourth straight victory in the conference.

Raleigh's touchdowns came as a result of an intercepted pass, and a beautiful forty-nine yard run by Frazier, Raleigh end, after catching a pass. Penalties totalling 100 yards were called on the Raleigh team and the game was played on a very rough field.

Fayetteville and Wilson, also in the eastern division, played to a 0-0 tie. The game was bitterly contested, though neither team seriously threatened to score.

Goldsboro topped Wilmington 7-6 to give them second place in the standing of the clubs. Goldsboro scored in the first quarter in this tight battle and Wilmington scored in the last few minutes of play.

In the western division Greensboro knocked Winston-Salem from the top position by beating them 2-0 in the second quarter as the result of a blocked kick.

Salisbury, hitherto undefeated, lost to Statesville but this is not a conference game and so will not count.

Charlotte remained the only undefeated team in the west with its 30-0 victory over High Point. Funderburk, Charlotte quarterback, was the star of the game.

In the eastern Class B conference Henderson defeated Oxford 13-6 and Apex trimmed Hamlet 22-0. Apex now takes the title of group four of this division.

Third of Students Have Athlete's Foot

The fact that thirty-seven and a half per cent of college students have athlete's foot has been revealed by a recent survey made by investigators from the department of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine of the University of Texas and the Health Service of the University of Chicago.

Examination was made of three groups of students at the University of Pennsylvania, the first group composed of 278 men, the second of 181 women, and the third of 220 men. It was found that forty-six per cent of the first group, thirty-two per cent of the second, and thirty-five per cent of the third had athlete's foot.

Athlete's foot is a form of ringworm caused by a fungus which attacks the skin between the toes and causes blisters and the shedding of bits of skin. When these particles are shed in locker rooms, swimming pools, and gymnasiums they adhere to the feet and spread the disease. Many students do not know that they have athlete's foot and thus the possibilities of spreading the disease are increased.

The results of the survey led to a plea for strict examination of students in all colleges in order to prevent spread of the disease, and sterilization of college swimming pools and gymnasiums.

Directors of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce are reported to be planning to bring a million dollor suit against publishers of geographies making "scandalously and damagingly untrue descriptions of West Texas territory."

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

THURSDAY

Old East Forfeits

The Question Marks won their game Thursday afternoon by default when their opponents, Old East, failed to put in an appearance on the field.

Dekes Take Zetes

Delta Kappa Epsilon won a thriller over Zeta Psi by the score of five to four in first downs in one of the hardest fought games of the season. It was a hotly contested affair from start to finish and the outcome was uncertain until the last ten seconds of play. Chatham and Craig were the stars for D. K. E., while the big gains for Zeta Psi were made largely by Snow and Barber. This leaves D. K. E. topping the list with eight games won and none lost.

Aycock Wins Over Carr

In a game composed mainly of line plays and runs Aycock was the winner over Carr by the score of three first downs to two. This game is worthy of mention in view of its close, hard play throughout. Both teams fought hard in every moment of play and displayed an excellent brand of football.

Double Forfeit

A double forfeit occurred when both Mangum and Graham, scheduled to play Thursday afternoon, failed to show up.

Lewis Loses To New Dorms

In the first quarter of a lively game between New Dorms and Lewis a bad pass from the "J" center resulted in a fumble and the runner being tagged behind his own goal line. Lewis held the Dorms scoreless after the gain of two points until the last quarter when their opponents ran wild. Touchdowns were made by Shoats and Ferguson on intercepted passes. Hampton also scored a touchdown when he got loose on an end run. Crutchfield played a steady game for Lewis. The final score was 20-0 for New Dorms.

Phi Sigma Kappa Defeats K. A.'s

Phi Sigma Kappa showed fine form in winning a decisive victory over the Kappa Alpha's. A pass from Teachey to Thomas in the second quarter resulted in a touchdown. The extra point was successfully kicked by Thomas, thus chalking up the total of 7-0, which was the final score. The Phi Sigs showed an excellent passing attack during the entire game. This was their sixth game in the series and none of their opponents have crossed their goal line or scored on them yet.

Intramurals

All games scheduled for Friday in the intramural tag football league were postponed due to the advancement of the Carolina-State game, which was changed from Saturday to Friday to allow football fans of this state to see both the Carolina-State game and the Duke-Kentucky game, both of which were scheduled for Saturday. All games postponed will be played off at a later date.

Dr. Herman Schneider, president of the University of Cincinnati hopes to eliminate many of the complexities of university organization by providing for five major university divisions. Davidson Ready for Game With Wofford

Davidson, Nov. 8.—The Davidson football team ran through a short signal practice here this afternoon, and then retired to their rooms to await the opening of the game with the Wofford Terriers tomorrow.

From observation this afternoon, it seemed evident that three new men would start Saturday's game, i. e., men who have not normally been in the original lineup. This trio will be Doc Mathis, at guard; Skinny Pearce at end, and Don McQueen, at full. They will replace Parker, Proctor and Brohard, respectively.

It is thought that the Davidson team will present a smooth offense to the Wofford Terriers Saturday afternoon as much of the time has been spent in offensive preparation. At the same time, they have perfected a strong defense against the Methodist plays, and will endeavor to play airtight football.

Baldy Williams, freshman was not badly injured yesterday afternoon as at first thought. He was back in uniform this afternoon after an over-night stay in the infirmary.

State Forester to Lecture On Highway Beautifications

J. S. Holmes, State Forester, will give a lecture on "Highway Beautification" here in the Carolina theatre next Sunday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock.

A member of the North Carolina Social Service Conference, which is making a special study of highway beautification this year, Mr. Holmes will tell of what the State has done along this line and show how Chapel Hill, as a community, may help. He will outline a beautification program. The lecture will be illustrated with a number of lantern slides and a film entitled "What Is Happening to the American Landscape."

Mrs. Russell M. Grumman, president of the Chapel Hill Community Club, will introduce the speaker.

State College Band To Honor March King

When John Philip Sousa appears in Raleigh with his band next Friday he will probably be greeted by the strains of his famous march, "Stars and Stripes Forever," played by the N. C. State College band. It will be "Sousa Day" in Raleigh, and the famous March King will present a concert that night in the Broughton high school.

Sousa's compositions are known the world over, but there is one especially that has endeared him in the hearts of State College students. It was he who composed the music for the song of their old alma mater, "Old State College Keeps Fighting Along," the words being written by Hardy Ray, of Raleigh.

The State band will greet Mr. Sousa at the Union station and escort him to the hotel. He has invited them to be his special guests at his concert.

Committees from the Raleigh Shrine Club, the American Legion, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Merchant's Association will also meet the Sousa train.

Yellow Light Distracts Flies

New York, Nov. 8.—(IP)—That the common house fly has a preference for white light, and that he will not go near a room where there is a yellow light, has been discovered by scientists.

A firm of jam manufacturers in England first noticed the fact when they found that flies, attracted to a room where jam was stored, stayed outside the room in the corridors when yellow panes were placed in the room's windows, and that when yellow glass was put in the corridors, the flies left altogether.

Teachers vs Research Workers

New Brunswick, N. J., Nov. 7—(IP)—That teachers are due to receive the same rewards as research workers, is the opinion of Professor Parker H. Daggett, dean of the school of engineering at Rutgers University here.

"The latter," he says, "not infrequently makes the front page of the newspaper; the former is all too often damned with faint praise."

right to enter the playoffs. The teams are evenly matched but the dopesters are laying any thing better that even money to come out on top in the playoffs.

The T. E. P. house, a team that carries a strong running offense besides the usual passes, will play Phi Gam, another undefeated team, on Friday. The T. E. P.'s are believed to have the edge. The A. T. O.'s according to the scorekeepers, have just one game against the Lambda Chi Alpha which if they win will put them in the playoffs.

The championship contest for the campus title should be run off the latter part of next week at a date to be set by Mac Gray. The standings are as follows:

Nichols, another Duke man, copped third, but that ended Duke's scoring for awhile, Mead, McRae, Sullivan, and Farr, finishing in that order.

The Duke meet closed the regular competitive season for the Tar Heels, and the squad will devote all their attention to the coming Southern Conference meet, which will again be held in Chapel Hill on November 22. Although the Tar Heels engaged in only two meets this year, these were with powerful Conference opponents, and Carolina emerged victorious in both meets, defeating their last year's sole conquerors, V. P. I., 27-29, and repeating their triumph of last year over Duke.

wound. With careful attention to the injury and light work for him this week, he should be back in the lineup at Davidson.

June Underwood got into the State game for a few moments but was unable to do much with his injured hand, which had to be heavily padded. He probably will see action against Younger's Wildcats, but his injured hand will be a handicap to him for at least another week.

UNIVERSITY WILL DEDICATE MUSIC HALL ON FRIDAY

Initial Performance to Be Repeated on the Next Night.

Dedication ceremonies for the University of North Carolina's new music hall, which has an auditorium seating 900 and a Reuter organ built by the celebrated European house of Cassivante at a cost of more than $30,000, will be held the evenings of November 14 and 15, according to a program announced today by Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the University department of music.

Edward Eigenschenk, well-known organ soloist of Chicago, will play the dedication concerts. The program will be given for the first time November 14 and will be repeated the next evening in order to accommodate all ticket holders. Because of the limited seating capacity of the auditorium only holders of tickets will be admitted. In addition to Mr. Eigenschenk's concerts, the University Glee Club, Band, Symphony Orchestra, and Oratorio Society will take part in the ceremonies.

The music hall is the building which formerly was the old University Library, and the auditorium is in a wing that has been added. There are administration offices, classrooms, studios, seminar and practice rooms.

Complete renovation was necessary to meet the needs of the University's rapidly growing department of music. Rooms have been made soundproof, the building has been re-decorated throughout and an entirely new and more beautiful entrance provided, with winding stairways leading to the balcony above.

The stage of the auditorium has been designed to seat a chorus of 300 and an orchestra of 60 pieces with ample space for pianos and organ console. Equipped with an electric elevator the organ console may be placed in any desired position

Di Will Consider Freedom of Speech

At the Di Senate meeting tonight in New West building at 7:00, three bills will be brought up for discussion. These are: Resolved: 1. That no college is justified in interfering with the right of free expression by its students. 2. That there is a necessity for a strong third party in the United States. 3. That campus political parties should conduct open campaigns, publishing lists of candidates and issues.

Bertrand Russell Criticizes Men

New York, Nov. 10.—Writing in the Parents' Magazine, Bertrand Russell British philosopher, declared that men are losing their paternal instinct.

In old times, Russell argued, men wanted children to protect them in their old age, to carry on their name and to possess them for their own sakes.

Now, he said, old people are protected by police, families move about from town to town and lose the urge to carry on their own line, and men are regarding marriage less seriously, so that the sense of possession is lacking.

Students To Meet At Mount Holyoke

Students and leaders of student relief and self-helf representating twenty-five or more countries in both Europe and Asia will meet for the first time on American soil at Mount Holyoke College September 1, 1931 for an eight day conference, according to the plans announced by Marjorie Marston, chairman of the American Committee of International Student Service.

The plans for the reception of foreign representatives are already under way. A group will arrive in August to spend the month at various summer student camps and industrial study groups. The conference will include a presentation of American student life in all of its various phases, sports, music, drama, etc.

The American Committee of International Student Service which will arrange for the reception of delegates will be entirely separate from the National Council of Christian Associations this year. The Harmon Foundation has donated office space to the committee, which will be the location of the new head-quarters.

Projects in international student service cover student needs in China as well as those in parts of Europe this year, and will require a budget of more than $59,000.00.

NORTH CAROLINA SHOWS LITTLE POSSIBILITIES OF OIL AND GAS

Prouty Expresses Opinion As To Petroleum Deposits in the State, Giving Detailed Analysis.

By Dr. W. F. Prouty
(Professor of Stratigraphic Geology, University of North Carolina)

There has been so much speculation about the possibilities and probabilities of petroleum in North Carolina that I think it would be worth while to spend a few minutes considering the subject from a scientific standpoint:

It is now a well recognized fact that commercial quantities of oil and gas originate only from the buried remains of organisms, either plants or animals, but largely plants. Such organisms are preserved in large numbers and volume only in basins of sedimentation such as lakes, sounds, bays, and seas. It is also a well recognized fact that plants are vastly more important in the origin of petroleum and natural gas than are animals. Plants which are preserved in fresh water deposits change for the most part into the coal series (peat, lignite, bituminous coal, and so on). On the other hand plant and animal remains that are buried in sediments permeated by salt water, gradually decompose giving petroleum products.

Of the three different kinds of sediments: sandstone, shale (clay-stone), and limestone, only shale contains plant remains in any great amount. We, therefore, must come to the conclution that of the various kinds of rocks in the earth only the limestones and the carbonaceous shales, which have been formed in association with salt or brackish water are capable of yielding commercial quantities of petroleum products.

All rocks in the earth are subjected to a certain amount of heat and pressure. This heat and pressure causes the natural distillation of the petroleum products. The greater the heat and pressure and the longer the time of its application the greater the distillation and the higher the percentage of the original petroleum (kerogen) that is changed to lighter petroleum products and gas. In the older and metamorphic rocks there has been such high pressures and such great heat that all original petroleum has been cracked into gas and has escaped.

In petroliferous rocks where change (metamorphism) has been less intense, the naturally distilled oil and gas has been largely driven from the fine textured clay, shale or limestone and has accumulated in the pores of the adjacent rocks, from here it may migrate by gravity or movement of underground waters to natural domes or arches in the porous beds. These are usually in the sands or sandstones but may be in porous rock of any kind.

If we study the distribution of the rocks in North Carolina we shall see that the Piedmont and Mountain sections are almost completely made up either of igneous rock, which has no petroleum, or highly metamorphosed rocks which cannot now have petroleum products, if they ever had them, on account of the great heating and compression which they have undergone.

The portion of the state not included in the above classification is the Coastal Plain Arch and that of the Triassic Sediments in the Deep River, Dan River, and Wadesboro Areas. The Coastal Plain deposits form a veneer chiefly of sands, clays, and marls over the buried rocks of the Piedmont type. The Coastal Plain deposits are about 2000 feet thick at the coast and

Tablets From Old Memorial Hall To Adorn Lobby of New Building

Atwood and Nash, University architects, have announced that the new Memorial hall will be completed some time in January. The building is of red brick trimmed with limestone; at the front of the new auditorium is a row of columns which support a limestone balcony.

The walls of the lobby will be ornamented with pilasters and with tablets taken from old memorial; the floor will probably be paved with marble blocks. The stair wells and the mezzanine lobby will contain the remainder of the tablets saved from the walls of the old auditorium; in addition, the side walls near the stage will be ornamented with the roll of the men from the University who died in the Civil War.

From the cornices of the ceiling will rise a large cove around which will be placed lights which will serve to illuminate the auditorium; however, one chandelier containing eighty lamps will be suspended from the center of the ceiling to augment the light from the indirect system of the cove lights. The ceiling will be made of acoustical plaster and will be fitted with four ornamental ventilating grills. The side walls will converge to a forty-foot wide proscenium.

The balcony will contain 600 seats every one of which will have a full view of the stage. The floor of the building will be made of some sound deadening material and will curved in every direction so as to form a bowl; the purpose of this design is to enable all of the 1200 seats to be placed so that each chair will command a view of the stage.

A booth for the projection of moving pictures, which has been wired for sound, will be at the rear of the auditorium. There will be a very large stage, forty feet wide and thirty feet high; the stage will be rectangular but will have rounded corners. An ornamental cornice will be placed around the edge of the proscenium and a plaster seal of the University will be put at the top. The windows of the building will be equipped with Phoenicians blinds. The entire building will soon be painted and the same color as South building. To leave the new hall as it stands would be to put it out of harmony with the group of buildings surrounding it. After new memorial is painted, it will carry out the motif of age which is shown by Gerrard hall, South boulding, Old and New East; and Old and New West.

Freshmen Told Not To Worry Over Work

Dean F. F. Bradshaw spoke to the freshmen at chapel yesterday morning on the principle problem, as he saw it, facing those of the freshmen class that have had conferences by their own request with him recently.

The question of whether or not to make changes in their schedules which had proven discouraging according to Dean Bradshaw the perfectly normal question that always faces every freshmen class in the middle of the first quarter. He advised each man to discontinue worrying.

The Dean said that in his opinion the best time to recognize their mistakes was not in the middle of the quarter but at its end. At the present they ought to strive as best they might to make up any deficiency, never lay down on the job but continue fighting, and a satisfactory result must come of a necessity.

DEPRESSION HITS WORK STUDENTS

The once "cloistered" college is today getting experience of trade depression and and unemployment at first hand. Many students accustomed to earning part of their expenses are up against a bleak outlook for the year owing to the sharp decline of jobs in the summer, and the drop in prospective part-time work now available.

Students have made their way into some businesses in droves. The department stores in New York City employ hundreds of college girls on Saturdays and at rush seasons as extra clerks. Theatres call for batches of college men as "supers." Post offices engage them as extra clerks at busy seasons. Libraries employ them regularly, and large companies use them as filling station attendants, extra factory hands, train conductors, and statisticians.

Although the earnings of students last year amounted to over $26,000,000, the break-down of many industries in which students previously earned considerably, has placed a great hardship on many.

Mills To Be In Greensboro

Dr. R. C. Mills, of the commerce school, will speak to the students of the Greensboro College for Women Friday at the chapel hour. He is to talk on "Australian University Life." Mills, who is a Carnegie exchange professor from Australia, has made several such addresses here.

Milton A. Abernathy, State College junior, and the College's student council gained front page space in the Raleigh newspapers last week. Abernathy was tried by the council for writing that "the game of cheating at North Carolina State College is not equalled by any other sport." According to reports the council contended that the writer's statement reflected on the students and injured the college's reputation.

We think that instead of trying Abernathy for his article which perhaps did reflect on the students, the council would have been wiser to have asked Abernathy for facts. An investigation of conditions and a frank acknowledgment that he was correct or a statement that an investigation had been made, and that Abernathy was incorrect would have done more to save the College's reputation than the trial. If Abernathy does not think that the students are honest he is to be admired for saying so. If he has facts on which he charges that cheating is prevalent at State then it is an admission of weakness on the part of the council to attempt to dodge the issue Abernathy raised by conducting a trial.

Acceptance and Praise of Man

It is always dangerous to make a false assumption and to base an entire creed on that false assumption. And yet pacifists, than which no other men alive are more consummate fools, do exactly that over and over again. Their purpose is to prevent war, no doubt. And their excuse for making the attempt is based on the false assumption that all men are at heart altruists, and that if their better natures are appealed to, that altruism will take precedence over any other sentiment. And in their enthusiasm they become even more flattering to the human race—they say that altruism will replace every inferior emotion.

They believe, in short, in the brotherhood of man. And all men may be brothers, but there is dissension in the family. There are squabbles, always have been squabbles, and always will be squabbles. And squabbles often become what are so odious to pacifists—wars. And always will. Men are innately selfish. Pacifists are fools in that they will not accept that fact. And they are unable to see that there is no point in preventing wars, that wars are rather glorious.

There is no particular point in initiating a war. But it is rather glorious than otherwise to further it. And then when there is no occasion for more fighting, it is beautiful to quit like a race of gentlemen—until the next time. In celebrating Armistice Day, we recognize war; we are not pacifists. But in celebrating Armistice Day, we should celebrate as much the war as the ending of the war.

—V. A. D.

Rumors Of War

Today the nation celebrates the signing of the armistice that ended the greatest war in history and even now, a short twelve years afterward, "rumors of war" are again heard: President Hindenburg of Germany witnesses the largest mobilization of troops in that country since the war; similar events take place at the American Legion convention in Boston and at the King's Mountain celebration—and the crowds at both places cheered madly; armaments and methods of war-time destruction are being increased and improved in every European country; in the United States, R. O. T. C. units, C. M. T. C. camps and military schools have large enrollments; even in Chapel Hill, there is a troop school which makes a study of military strategy; Mussolini, now nearing the completion of Italy's reconstruction, looks about "for more worlds to conquer"; Soviet Russia, proud of its growing strength, also waxes ambitious; an eminent student of world history declares that war now threatens in the Near East; a German socialist, whose party is building up a powerful majority, rises in the midst of a debate in the Reichstag to shout out his preference to war rather than to paying the burdensome allied debt, and so it goes.

What will be the outcome? Is another deadly conflict in the offing? Will commercially-minded militarists, pseudo - patriots, again lead a blind and spellbound populace into another war worse than the last one? Will the youths of today, educated in the horrors of the recent combat allow, themselves to be literally talked into fighting another useless war? It all depends upon the activity of the pacifists in combatting the militaristic spirit.

Modern day educational trends are opposed to war as a means of settling international disputes. Most student organizations in this country and many of those in other lands are strictly pacifistic. Travel, studies in international culture, improved means of inter-continental communication, and the exchange of students between the nations is building up a world fellowship that is opposed to militarism. If these combined forces are successful in their activities, there will be no major conflict between the nations. If not (and this is the most likely probability) war is inevitable. No doubt, it will take one more season of horror like the last one to convince people of the futility of fighting, but "experience is a hard teacher."—E. C. D., Jr.

O. Henry "Yellow"?

New York—(IP)—That William S. Porter, who wore under the pen name, O. Henry, was known to have a "yellow streak," is the statement made here recently by Miss Blanche Colton Williams, head of the English department at Hunter College, who is a short story critic, and who annually conducts the O. Henry Memorial Short Story Contest.

thin to a feather-edge along the Fall-Line, which runs a little east of Raleigh. The Coastal Plain sediments are to a considerable degree made up of marine sands, clays and marls, but in these deposits there is a relatively small amount of both carboniferous material and fossiliferous limestone so characteristic of the oil producing fields in different parts of the country. It is logical to conclude from the facts that while it may be possible to get small production or oil shows locally from these sediments, such would seldom be the case and that commercial quantities of oil can be gotten from the Coastal Plain sediments in this state is very improbable.

There yet remains for discussion the areas of the Triassic Basins. The sediments in most parts of the Triassic were put down by streams on the land or in relatively shallow water basin. The sediments are largely sandy. Such material could not yield petroleum. For limited areas of the Triassic basins there are thin carbonaceaus shale beds and lenses which, on destructive distillation, yields a fair amount of petroleum products. There are also some coal beds which will yield petroleum products when properly treated, as will all bituminous coals. Both the Triassic coal and shale were deposited in fresh water or slightly brackish water lagoons. If these carbonaceous shales have yielded petroleum it must have been in small amounts and since the structure of the rocks is such as not to "pond" the oil, if produced, there seems to be again practically no chance of getting oil from any of the known Triassic areas.

It is barely possible that somewhere under the coastal plane deposits there may be buried Triassic basins containing carbonaceous shale which were deposited in brackish or salt water lakes of Triassic time. Such deposits might yield a little petroleum. The presence of such buried deposits is, however, problematical and their possibility of yielding petroleum equally as problematical.

To sum up, then, we may say that most of the state has no petroleum possibilities and the remainder practically none.

"BLACK GENESIS" READ FOR N.C.C.W. AUDIENCE

Greensboro, Nov. 10.—Samuel G. Stoney, of Charleston, South Carolina, co-author with Gertrude Matthews Shelby of Black Genesis, completed last Friday a series of lectures at North Carolina college, this city, in which he used the stories in that volume and other subjects as the basis for interesting comments.

Before two large audiences at Aycock auditorium Mr. Stoney read extracts from Black Genesis. Short addresses before classes in American literature, novel and news-writing were a part of his engagement at the state institution for women. His last talk was made to members of the Quill club, writers' organization.

In dormitories as well as in the gym ...beware of "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

THE man who's making his "M. A." as well as the man who's making the team—the fellow whose foot-work is from class to class as well as the bright boy who can foot it in 10 seconds flat—any one or all of them stand a good chance of having that ringworm infection commonly known as "Athlete's Foot." In fact, 50% of the men in universities as widely separated as those of Pennsylvania and California have caught it, according to authoritative reports. "At least half of all adults suffer from it at some time," according to the U. S. Public Health Service.

The symptoms vary, but all are traceable to one germ, tinea trichophyton by name. Sometimes it starts with redness between the toes and i-t-c-h-i-n-g. Again, tiny blisters appear; or it may show itself in a thick, moist skin condition; or dryness with little scales.

It lurks in the very places where we all go for cleanliness and health—on the edges of swimming pools and showers—in gymnasiums—on locker- and dressing-room floors. In spite of modern sanitation (you have to boil socks 15 minutes to kill it) this fungus parasite infects and re-infects bare feet almost any time they come in contact with damp floors.

Absorbine Jr. kills the germ of "ATHLETE'S FOOT"

Tests in a famous New York "lab" have revealed that Absorbine Jr. penetrates flesh-like tissues deeply and that wherever it penetrates, it KILLS the ringworm germ.

It might not be a bad idea to examine your feet tonight. At the first signs of the symptoms mentioned, douse on Absorbine Jr. And keep a bottle handy in your locker as a preventive. Use it after every exposure of bare feet on damp floors. At all druggists—$1.25. W. F. Young, Inc., Springfield, Mass.

WEEK OF WORK ON OFFENSE FOR TEAM UNDERWAY

First Eleven Scrimmages Against Reserves to Remove Rough Spots in Attack.

INJURY LIST DECREASES

Rip Slusser, George Thompson and June Underwood To Be Ready for 'Cats.

A week of football practice which promises to be stiff and last until dark every day got underway yesterday afternoon on Emerson field when Coach Chuck Collins sent the Tar Heels through a long session at correcting the rough spots in the offense.

Signal drills by four teams took up more than half an hour, and the first team scrimmaged a reserve eleven at Kenan stadium to top off the afternoon's work.

The scrimmage at the stadium was concentrated on going down under punts and on running plays from within the thirty yard line. Coach Collins said that much of the work this week would be on carrying the ball over from within the twenty and thirty yard lines, because of the fact that scoring punch has been badly off in the last three games.

The first team lineup yesterday showed: Brown and Walker, ends; Hodges and McDade, tackles; Fysal and McIver, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarterback; Magner and Nash, halfbacks; and House, fullback.

During the afternoon Coach Cerney took the backs and ends over in a corner of the field and sent them through a short and brisk drill on taking on ends. Blocking was emphasized for tackles and guards during the afternoon also.

The Tar Heels' injury list last night was shortened when Trainer Chuck Quinlan announced that Rip Slusser's injury to his leg is coming around nicely and that he will be able to play in the Davidson game should he receive the call. George Thompson's cut over his eye is not causing him a great deal of trouble, he being out for practice yesterday. June Underwood should be back in shape for the Davidson game also, since his hand injury is getting along nicely. These were the only casualties on the injury list after the State game, and unless someone is hurt during the practices of the week, the Tar Heels will be able to hurl their full strength against the Presbyterians.

CATAWBA HOLDS LEADERSHIP OF N. S. CONFERENCE

Guilford College, Nov 10.—Standing of North State conference teams remained unchanged this week as Guilford and Elon scored victories over Lenoir-Rhyne and High Point respectively, while Moran's Catawba Indians were walloping an outsider. The Salisbury team remains in the lead with three victories and no defeats.

Guilford and Catawba meet this week in what promises to be one of the best games of the North State conference season. This contest is booked for the Greensboro Memorial stadium and is to be played Saturday afternoon. Catawba, by virtue of her outstanding showing in games to date, rules a big favorite to down the Quakers in this game.

Williams continues far in front of other scorers in the conference with 8 points added to his previous mark of 45. Tom Cheek added seven against Lenoir-Rhyne to bring his total up to 31 to hold second place by a

FOOTBALL

By K. C. Ramsay

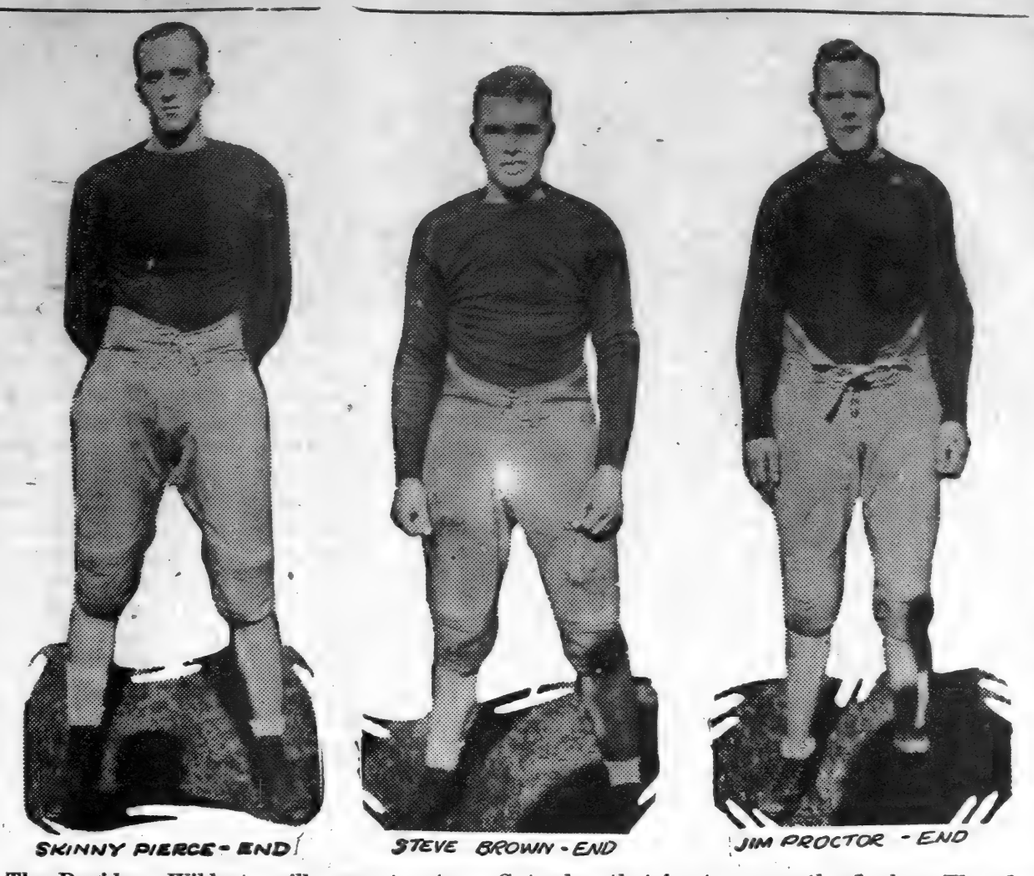
CAROLINA'S VICTORY OVER State College admittedly was quite unimpressive. Any team's showing is unimpressive when it gains consistently at midfield and fails to come through when the opponents have their backs to the wall, but there is no denying that the Wolfpack has a stubborn, fighting and aggressive line. Red Espey, Captain Mac Stout, Coon Silver, Charlie Cobb and Milo Stroupe would give any man a fight for his position.

Nevertheless the fact remains that the Tar Heels are lacking in scoring punch. Coach Collins sent his charges through a long scrimmage last Wednesday at running over touchdowns from the 10 and 15-yard lines on power plays. The very same drills on power plays probably will take up a large portion of the menu for the Tar Heels' work this week. There is a difference in being kept away from the goal line by the heavy, bruising and powerful line of Georgia Tech and, being treated in a similar fashion by the Wolfpack line, which is admittedly lighter and as a whole unseasoned.

ONE TAR HEEL IMPRESSED the crowd at the game in spite of the fact that the team's showing was not so good. Captain Strud Nash was in there Friday to make up for a rather poor season so far, and when he retired from the game at the end of the third quarter, the Wolves were aware of the fact that he had romped all over them. The Tar Heel captain has hit his stride, and we believe that this means trouble for Davidson.

Our barrister seemed to be dissatisfied with the showing that he has made so far this season, for Jim Magner's passes have never been more accurate than they were last Friday. Eight yards per try is good ground gaining, too.

WE SAW THE DUKE BLUE Devils, or rather Gallopin' Bill Murray, as our fellow staff writer calls him, race around Kentucky's ends for the 14-7 victory. We have seen Duke give two stellar performances this year, and will say right here that they have a great ball club over there. State, Wake Forest, and Washington and Lee should cause the Blue Devils little trouble for the next three weeks. According to information received over THERE last Saturday their last game of the season also will cause them little trouble.



THE TEAM WHICH DEFEATed the Tar Heels 26-0 seems to be just as strong as it was said to be early in the season. Many lost faith in the Georgia Bulldogs when they were tied by Florida, but their impressive victory over N. Y. U. puts them and Southern football even more to the front. They should be able to handle Tulane's Green Wave this Saturday, and their Thanksgiving booking with Alabama will be a great game, even though the Crimson will be conceded the edge.

DAVIDSON COLLEGE WILL be putting everything that they have against the Tar Heels this Saturday at Davidson, and they seem to have a rather strong eleven. Their victory over Wofford was quite impressive, defeating the South Carolina Methodists by 13 to 0. This was only an extra point short of the drubbing which the Duke Blue Devils handed the Terriers a few weeks ago when they dedicated their new athletic field at Spartanburg.

THE THANKSGIVING GAME with Virginia, comparing the two teams to date, should go to

WILDCATS HAVE TRIO OF STELLAR ENDS

The Davidson Wildcats will present a team Saturday that is strong on the flanks. They had so many good ends at the Presbyterian institution that they moved a star flankman from last year, Thad Brock, to a guard post. The trio of ends shown above are Steve Brown, Skinny Pierce, and Jim Proctor.

TAR BABIES TO PLAY BLUE IMPS AT DUKE TODAY

Carolina Freshmen Ready for Armistice Day Contest With Duke Yearlings.

Last night eleven Tar Babies went off the freshman field after a spirited drill, with a strong determination to do what no other team has been able to accomplish this year; cross the goal line of the Blue Imps. The game is to be played today in Durham as part of the Armistice Day celebration and promises to be a hard fought and very exciting game. It will be remembered that last year the Blue Imps won by the slender margin of a safety, in a game packed with thrills. The Tar Babies of this year are out to avenge this defeat and will put all their energy into annexing a victory.

The Duke team has been schooled in the Wade system, being coached by two former Alabama players. These two coaches were sent by Wade to get his system started and, from the success they have had so far, seemed to have done their job. They have not only won all their games to date but have kept their goal line uncrossed. They are just as determined to keep the slate clean as the Tar Babies are to mar it, so a real fight will be on hand.

The Tar Babies will have lunch tomorrow at eleven o'clock at Swain hall and will leave here from Emerson field. The game is scheduled for two-thirty.

The Carolina freshmen are crippled by the fact that their star backfield speedster, Alex Weisker, will be unable to play, his leg not having responded to the treatment. Rankin and Mathews, two stellar ends, are also incapacitated due to injuries. With these handicaps and the fact that Duke will present an exceptionally strong team, the Tar Babies will have to play much better ball than they have shown at any time this year if they expect to cross the goal line, much less win. Undoubtedly, there are some excellent performers in the line as Barclay, McIver, Mulligan, and Gardner, but these must work together to make the attack run smoothly. With the line functioning well, Hackney, Whitener and Phipps should get loose, as all these men are good, hard runners.

There could be no definite news as to the team that would start for Duke. Coach Enright announced his probable lineup as: Jones and Adair, ends; Crane and Strickland, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards; Gardner, center. The probable backfield will be Hackney, Phipps, Whitener, and Woollen.

WILDKITTENS TO MEET WOLFLETS RALEIGH TODAY

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 10.—The Davidson College freshman football eleven tackles its first of the Big Five Freshmen teams on Armistice Day, when it engages in combat with the N. C. State freshmen at Raleigh. The Davidson outfit will leave today in a badly crippled condition, four of the hitherto players of the first string being injured or sick.

These men are Redi Brown, fullback and alternate captain, who broke an ankle bone several weeks ago; Tong, guard, whose arm is carried in a sling as a result of a shoulder hurt, and Goodykoontz and Cochran, tackles, who have been sick. Goodykoontz has been in the infirmary for the past week, but was out Saturday. He will make the trip, but it is doubtful if he will participate. Cochran, who had an attack of influenza, was ordered by his physician to stop football for this fall.

TULANE UNDEFEATED

Maryland, Clemson, Mississippi and Tennessee Run up Large Scores Over Week-end.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 10.—Alabama's Crimson legions removed another obstacle—Florida—from their path toward the Southern conference football championship yesterday, as their mightiest remaining foe, Georgia, scored an impressive intersectional victory over New York university.

Tulane, the only other team unbeaten in conference play, which meets Georgia next Saturday in a game which will eliminate one from championship consideration, had its hands full with a fighting Auburn eleven, winning 21 to 0 after a hard battle.

Jimmy DeHart's final gridiron editon at Duke offered something of an upset in trouncing Kentucky 14 to 7 at Durham.

In a game of fumbles and wild passing, Vanderbilt won its annual game from Georgia Tech 6 to 0. Six times Vanderbilt was presented with scoring chances but only on one occasion were the Commodores able to punch across the goal line. Penalties robbed both teams of a touchdown.

Flashing a rapid-fire attack, Maryland scored three touchdowns in the first quarter and added three more in the second and third periods to trample Washington and Lee, 41 to 7. Berger made three touchdowns and Poppleman two.

Clemson struck its stride again against Virginia military and gave the Cadets a 32 to 0 beating. Harvin accounted for two of the touchdowns and three were scored on passes.

In additional to Georgia's win, Dixie teams were successful in four other intersectional tilts. Mississippi college won from the

COMPETITION IN CLASS B GROUP DRAWS TO CLOSE

Four Eastern High School Teams Will Play Elimination Games For Eastern Championship.

The class B high school football contest schedule has been arranged for the four district champions in the west.

Asheboro will play Statesville at Asheboro this week while Reidsville and Mount Airy will meet at Winston-Salem Friday of this week. The winners of these two games will oppose each other next week in the western final game. In the western final game Asheboro would meet Mount Airy at the latter November 21. Statesville and Reidsville would then clash at Winston-Salem on that date, as would the former and Mount Airy.

These four have won championships in the east: Henderson, Apex, Lumberton, and Elizabeth City. E. R. Rankin will go to Raleigh tonight to arrange their schedule.

The final state championship class B game will be played in Chapel Hill November 28, while the final class A championship game will be played here November 29.

With Charlotte leading in the west and Raleigh ahead in the eastern conference the state football teams have been fighting hard. E. R. Rankin submits these percentage standings:

MORALITY NO LONGER IN VOGUE, SAYS HART

Bryn Mawr, Pa., Nov. 10—(IP)—Morality for its own sake is no longer in vogue, believes Dr. Hornell Hart, professor of social economy at Bryn Mawr College here. Of this he says:

"We are through with the worship of any arbitrary ideal. Let us disavow, frankly and emphatically, some of the old conceptions. Morality for its own sake has no claim upon us.

"Orderliness, obedience, conformity, chastity, monogamy—such ideals are valid only if they promote deeper and more vital values—if they call out to the full possibilities of the self, only if they make for rich, intense, growing, creative experience.

"The question should be, not 'how can we prevent people from having sex experience not consistent with traditional morals?' but 'how can we aid people who seek fulfillment of personality to establish in their own lives those patterns of sex behavior which will bring to them and their associates the fullest and richest experience?"

See Connects Sun Spots With Floods

Vallejo, Calif., November 10.—(IP)—That within a decade scientists will be able to predict serious weather disturbances such as tornadoes and hurricanes and their resulting floods and destruction, by means of a study of the spots on the sun, is the belief of T. J. J. See, U. S. Navy mathematics profsesor, now retired.

Captain See declares that he has definitely connected sun spots with the Mississippi floods of 1927, and with the drouth that burned up the mid-west last summer.

Rapid increase in sun spots, he says, cause a sudden chilling of the Eearth's upper atmosphere, and thus cause prolonged rains and floods.

A similar decrease in the sun spots, on the other hand, he says, cause the Eearth to be supplied with an excess of heat, and a drouth is the natural result.

Captain See is now at work attmepting to work out a proper ratio of sun spots to weather conditions in order that he may be able accurately to predict the weather by the sun.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Dekes Overwhelm Phi Kappa Sigs

After being held to a 1-1 tie in first downs in the first half, the Dekes came back to overwhelm the Phi Kappa Sigs by a score of 25-0. Chatham, Lineberger, and McGlinn led the attack of the Dekes. Chatham and McGlinn scoring a touchdown each and Lineberger getting two. Todays win put the Dekes in first place in the intramural standings with six wins and no defeats, while the Tau Epsilon Phi's and the Phi Gams have won five each. The standings, including todays games are as follows:

Phi Gam Gets Forfeit

Pi K. A. forfeited to Phi Gamma Delta in the Intramural league yesterday afternoon.

Graham Forfeits

New Dorms received a forfeit yesterday afternoon when the Graham team failed to appear.

Another for Ruffin

Steele became the latest victim to fall before the strong Ruffin team, which eliminated the powerful New Dorms aggregation last Monday afternoon. Riggs scored both touchdowns for the victors on passes, one of which he intercepted and ran back for the score. The score was 13-0.

Phi Sig's Scored on for First Time

Although going down in defeat by the overwhelming score of 21-7, the Sigma Chi's had the honor of crossing the goal of the Phi Sigma Kappa's for the first time this year. The Sigma Chi score came when Dockery ran 60 yards for a touchdown through the entire team. The victors scores came on passes from Teachey, Thomas getting two and Fitzgerald the other.

T. E. P.'s Defeat Phi Alpha's

Tau Epsilon Phi added another to their string of victories to run their string to 5, defeating the Phi Alpha's by a score of 27-13. Hirsch and Eisner led the attack of the victors. The game was a very thrilling one, several of the scores coming on long runs and intercepted passes.

There will be a meeting of all reporters covering intramural sports today at 3:00 P. M. in the Tar Heel office. It is essential that all men report, and those absent and without a legitimate excuse will be dropped from the staff.

TAR HEELS PLAY DAVIDSON THERE FOR THIRD YEAR

tilt of the season and winning from the N. C. State Wolfpack at Chapel Hill last Friday. Davidson has likewise played two Big Five foes, but their percentage is only .500. The Wildcats won over the State Technicians in a night encounter, but were later defeated by the Duke University Blue Devils at Durham.

On the basis of comparative scores, the Presbyterians are both weaker and stronger than the Tar Heels, but on offensive strength based on first downs made in contest, the University boys have an overwhelming advanfage. Carolina walked over V. P. I. 39 to 21, in an early season tilt, but the Virginia Technicians invaded Davidson and trimmed the Wildcats 20 to 19 in a Home-Coming mixup for Davidson.

Within the state, however, the Wildcats appear to be the better so far as scores in the N. C. State games determine, however. In Greensboro the Davidson boys stepped over the N. C. Wolfpack for two touchdowns and a 12 to 0 victory. Carolina nosed out the Wolfpack in Chapel Hill Friday 13 to 6. It must be remembered, however, that Davidson struck State at a time when the team was not the possessor of her present offensive strength. Davidson made four first downs in their game compared to 20 which the Carolina eleven chalked up last Friday.

Carolina and Davidson games are always good ones. The latter have generally been on the defeated end of the score, but they have invariably shown the peak of their fighting power when the Tar Heels are met. It is a game to which the Davidson lads always point, and one which is always a treat to the thousands of fans who annually come for long and short distances to see this gridiron struggle.

Both will be more than anxious to win Saturday. A victory by Carolina would mean a perfectly clean slate for the season and Duke University would be the only state foe which the Tar Heels would have to defeat to add another state championship to their already long string. A win by Davidson, however, would muddle the standing of the Big Five members, placing Carolina and Davidson on an even percentage basis, and sending the powerful Duke University team to undisputed leadership in the race.

BUDGET ALWAYS NECESSARY SAYS TELEPHONE MAN

F. M. Craft, Engineer of Bell System, Speaks to Taylor Society on Estimates.

F. M. Craft, chief engineer of the Southern Bell Telephone Company, Atlanta, addressed the local section of the Taylor Society in room 103 Bingham Hall last night. Mr. Craft's talk was on the "Budget Plan of the Bell System."

He spoke of the development of budgeting activities of the telephone company, not only from the standpoint of construction but also of its ability to earn on investment.

Mr. Craft stated that "The Budget Plan of the Bell System Companies is known within this organization as the provisional estimate, and is based on a broad forecast for five years ahead. Each Bell company prepares such an estimate in the fall of each year as a basis for the programming of all phases of its business activities in line with the objectives of its management. The facts brought together in the provisional estimate are intended to show when and why certain things should be done, and what may be expected, particularly in business development, capital costs, revenues, expenses, and net return as the result of the action preposed."

In preparing this estimate, management policies and objectives are stated and discussed within the department in order to determine the trends of growth. Among the things considered are growth of cities and communities, increase in population, prospective use of telephone facilities, labor supply and costs relating to traffic operating expenses, and the type of plant best adapted to the territory.

"Planning for the future is continuously in progress in the Bell System," continued Mr. Craft, "and the provisional estimate represents an annual summary as a definite guide in the programming of activities. Throughout the year requirements are constantly being revised in light of existing facilities, and the ground work for future construction programs is being laid.

"The Budget Plan used by the Bell Companies provides a fund of information for those who administer the business, and enables them to have a full knowledge of what is involved in their responsibility for furnishing adequate and efficient telephone service for the future, and to determine whether their policies and programs as proposed can be executed or whether they should be revised, modified, or discarded. They must satisfy themselves, moreover, that the program will yield a proper and reasonable amount of net earnings on the investment required; otherwise, the program, no matter how splendidly planned, must fail, for investors will not sup-

A. B. Seniors

All seniors in the College of Liberal Arts whose last name begins with E, F, G, or H, must report today to Dean Hobbs' office, 203 South, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. to make application for a degree.

Dr. Harold S. Dyer wishes to announce that applications for tickets to the organ recital that were not accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope will not be mailed out. This applies to everybody including students and townspeople, with the exception of faculty members, whose mail is sent out through the inter-office mail. Applications for tickets to Friday's performance will have to be claimed by Friday noon, and tickets for the recital on Saturday or Sunday must be claimed by Saturday noon. Tickets that are not claimed will be placed in circulation.

Tickets have been going out at the rate of 100 a day, and all applications should be in by tomorrow night. Dr. Dyer states emphatically that persons who make, or have made, reservations by telephone, will have to claim them at the music building. He also wishes to warn people against planning to attend without tickets, as there are very few tickets left now.

Mr. Edward Eigenschenk, dedication organist, has arrived in Chapel Hill, and is the guest of Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, of the music department. The voicers are expected to be through with the organ by Thursday, and Eigenschenk, will practice as soon as they are finished. He has pronounced the acoustics of the hall perfect, and said that the fact that the performer and audience are on one main floor is beneficial to both.

AMERICAN BOOK MARKET NOW IS MUCH UNDERSOLD

Couch of University Press Says Fault Is With Educators.

"Until educators are better educated, until they show a more lively and genuine interest in books, until they realize the plain and simple function of books as practically indispensable intellectual food, it is doubtful whether the general public interests and appreciation will increase," is the opinion of W. T. Couch, assistant director of the University of North Carolina Press, who has contributed an article to the Publisher's Weekly entitled "A Proposal to Educate Our Educators."

Mr. Couch takes issue with certain statements made in a previous article by R. L. Duffus, in which the latter asserts that books are relatively unimportant in American life and that the publishers and booksellers are primarily responsible for this condition.

"I have to agree entirely with Mr. Duffus that books are relatively unimportant in this country, that we are grossly undersold, . . . in the commodity of solid reading matter, but I cannot agree with Mr. Duffus as to the responsibility for this condition," Mr. Couch writes.

"There are four large groups in this country which are immediately concerned with the promotion of reading and trading in books. These groups are teachers, the librarians, the booksellers, the publishers. Of the four, two do not have to depend on business enterprise and acumen for their existence—the teachers and librarians are generally supported by public funds and private endowments. The

TWO TOWNS LEAD IN CONTRIBUTIONS TO ALUMNI FUND

Grisette Announces Number of Subscriptions In 1930 Alumni Drive.

Alumni representing a wide area are subscribing to the Alumni Loyalty Fund, according to information obtained yesterday from the office of Felix A. Grisette, director of the fund. Although the campaign for 1930 contributions to the fund has hardly gotten under way, contributions have already come from alumni residing in sixty-nine different counties in North Carolina, in twenty-two states other than North Carolina, and in eight foreign countries.

Chapel Hill and Greensboro are in a race for the lead in the number of subscriptions, with the former ahead by a scant margin of three. So far eighty-five Chapel Hill alumni have sent in contributions, and eighty-two have been received from Greensboro. When High Point's contributions are added to the Greensboro total, it gives Guilford county a substantial lead.

Charlotte and Mecklenburg county rank third in the number of contributions with Wake, New Hanover, Buncombe, and Forsyth following in close order.

The states represented in the contributions include Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maryland, Michigan, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia.

FARRIS CAUTIONS STUDENTS TO LAY STRESS ON STUDY

Former Student Union President Speaks to Freshman Friendship Council.

Ray Farris, former president on the student union, gave a very impressive talk to the members of the freshman friendship council Monday night. Farris chose for his subject "College Life and What It Is All About."

Farris lauded the Phi Beta Kappa's and urged that students try to reach that goal. He declared that in college, students should make studies primary and athletics and other extra-curricular activities should come second. "Let each fellow try to find a proper ratio between studies and activities and then stick to what ever he starts."

He stated that a fellow's conduct while a student here is, contrary to the belief of some, vital to the individual and to the student body. He counselled first year men to guard against the breaking down of some of their ideals and morals. He also pointed out that they would see a great many changes in life after they had been here for four years and that many of their beliefs would be changed. He advised that a code of morals and ethics be adopted by the individual and for that individual to stick to his ideas even if everyone else is against him.

Farris lauded the work of the friendship council and urged that a keener appreciation of friendships be regarded on this campus.

Legion Expresses A Vote of Thanks

The Chapel Hill Post of the American Legion wishes to express its great appreciation of the fine way in which the students of the University and the people of Chapel Hill cooperated in making the benefit movie held on Sunday a financial success. The proceeds from the show, $155.55, will be spent in aiding the needy families of Chapel Hill.

GREENE WILL PRESENT ACTIVITY TALK ON RADIO

Red Greene, president of student union, has announced that the time of the first of the fifteen minute radio talks to be given by Carolina students over station WPTF, Raleigh, has been changed from 5:15 to 5:30, due to a shift in an orchestra program of the National Broadcasting company over the same station.

The talks which are to take place every Wednesday afternoon are for the purpose of letting the people in the state know what Carolina students do besides attend classes and go to football games, and leave on week-ends. This afternoon President Greene will present a general summary of all activities on the campus and a short survey of each. Each program will be given over to a single activity, such as publications, the "Y", Glee Club and Playmakers.

The Epsilon Beta chapter of the Chi Omega sorority will entertain at a tea to be given tomorrow at the sorority house, 227 Franklin St. The tea has been arranged in honor of the patronesses, and especially in honor of Mrs. L. C. MacKinney.

Playmakers Will Repeat Two Plays Given Last Week

The Carolina Playmakers will present a special performance of Git Up and Bar the Door and Cloey for the delegates to the Association of governing boards of State Universities tomorrow night at the Playmakers Theatre.

Since there were many persons who because of lack of accommodation were unable to see these plays when presented last Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, the Playmaker management has decided to open this performance to the public for a small admission charge. The Playmakers Theatre seats approximately 350 and although three performances were given before capacity audiences, many students, faculty, and townspeople were turned away unable to procure reservations. Many requests have come in for another performance of these two plays and it is hoped that those who have not been able to previously obtain admission will take advantage of this opportunity.

Tickets will be on sale the evening of the presentation at the box office of the theatre. The plays will begin at 8:30 o'clock.

Kiwanians To Be Hosts To Local Legion Officials

Officers of the Chapel Hill Post of the American Legion have been invited to be guests at the meeting of the Kiwanis Club tonight at the Baptist church when Major L. P. McLendon of Durham will give a talk on Armistice Day.

UNIVERSITY WELL REPRESENTED IN 'WHO'S WHO' LIST

Research Reveals Interesting Facts Concerning Number of Prominent College Graduates.

Donald B. Prentice and B. W. Kenkel, professors at Lafayette College, have gathered many interesting and perhaps valuable statistics from Who's Who in America in regard to the college graduates who have won places in this book. The results of their researches are shown in an article, "The Colleges' Contributions to Intellectual Leadership," which appeared in the November 1 issue of School and Society. In the 1928-29 edition of Who's Who there are biographies of 28,805 men and women, of whom 16,433 have received the bachelor's degree from American institutions. Five hundred and six different colleges and universities are represented.

The main fact of interest to Carolinians is that there are 94 graduates of the University of North Carolina whose biographies appear in Who's Who. This is a larger number than any other southern college or university can boast of. In the South, Carolina is followed by Virginia with eighty-five, Georgia, eighty-two, Vanderbilt, seventy-one, Texas, sixty-nine, Washington and Lee, sixty-six, and Alabama, sixty-one. In this state Wake Forest has fifty-six graduates listed, Davidson, fifty, Trinity twenty-seven, and N. C. State less than twenty. Harvard and Yale lead the field by a large majority. Harvard has 1,374 graduates listed, and Yale has 937, the two together contributing one-seventh of the total number of graduates listed.

WORLD COURT AID TO FUTURE PEACE SAYS HENDESON

Distinguished Professor Stresses National Unity in Armistice Day Address.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the mathematics department, delivered the annual Armistice Day address in Gerrard hall yesterday morning at chapel period.

Dr. Henderson stated that he wished everyone to think with him of the new spirit abroad today. "Of course," he said, "it did not take the Great Catastrophe to start thinking toward this goal, but it certainly strengthened this spirit in the fact that, for the first time in recorded history, all people are striving to see the light and moving toward world peace."

For an example the speaker took the feeling that has existed between Europe and the United States in their international relations with one another since America gained its independence in the latter part of the eighteenth century. "Since the Canadian border has been definitely set without any bloodshed whatsoever, what better could represent the placid and peaceful nature of the United States toward foreign nations?" Dr. Henderson asked.

In discussing the various conferences that have taken place between the different countries of the world and the resulting peace pacts, the League of Nations and the World Court, Professor Henderson stated that all have played their part in forwarding a general united feeling toward world peace, both politically and judicially. "Although our country has not as yet joined the World Court, in all probability it will do so shortly. In this lies the strength of some future presidential aspirant who may foster such an important measure," he said.

Dr. Henderson in conclusion brought out the factors which must be adopted by this country before it will be able to enjoy definite and permanent world peace. These were the united public opinion toward this spirit, the entering into the World Court and into the League of Nations, a gradual disarmament by agreement, and the building up of a feeling of security. "Loyal to all high ideals, we must live as nobly as our former patriots died," were the speaker's closing words.

The program was augmented by a medley of patriotic tunes popular during the World War which were played by the string orchestra. The singing of the National Anthem and the National Hymn by the audience was led by Harold S. Dyer, the reading of the roll call of the University's dead by Dr. A. W. Hobbs, the reading of the roll call of the dead of the Chapel Hill Post of the American Legion by Post-Commander Paul Robertson, and the rendering of "Taps" by Mr. George Lawrence.

The Abernethy Case Again

This morning the case of Milton Abernethy, State College student, charged with "misrepresenting" the facts in the Hicks thesis dealing with cheating among students, will again come before the student council of State College. This time the case will be in the form of an appeal. Abernethy was convicted last Saturday morning, and his suspension from the institution for two years has been recommended to President E. C. Brooks, who has the final say-so in the matter. According to the press reports, Abernethy, whose conviction was "rather surprising," was "found guilty of reflecting on the college students" and "was adjudged an offense unto the people of the college."

Yesterday's press also carried a statement by Professor Hicks, author of the thesis. The question asked him was whether he thought Abernethy had misrepresented any of the facts concerned with cheating. To this, Hicks answered, "I don't think he did." It was also stated by the professor, however, that Abernethy did not give due consideration to a certain preface contained in his thesis.

Yet in the face of these things—the expectation of the public that Abernethy would not be convicted (and we think this expectation must have been founded on some basis of sentiment in favor of the accused), and the statement of Professor Hicks that there was no misrepresentation of facts—the student council of State College dared to convict a man for expressing his own opinion about a very delicate matter of student conduct. By its action last Saturday the council has made a ridiculous spectacle of itself. Its decision already has invoked the censure of believers in the right of free speech, and it is apt to give the impression to the public that the atmosphere of State College is one of extreme narrowness. Today the council has the opportunity of undoing, partially at least, a personal injustice it has wrought and a stand it has taken which we hope is not typical of the attitude of the institution as a whole. It remains to be seen whether the council avails itself of this opportunity to right itself.—B. M.

What Price Silence?

If an idea is worthy of being passed through the brain, it is worthy of being expressed in public, either by word of mouth or through the press. An individual who is too timid to voice his sentiments usually has not much of an opinion anyhow. There is no greater factor in the realization of improvement than criticism, even though it be of the severest variety. It is impossible in any language to say just how utterly foolish one is to keep silent when he really has something to say. Such a practice is even more foolish that the proverbial error of talking without saying anything.

Freedom of speech and freedom of the press are the very foundation-stones of the great American nation, the like of which is yet to appear. The writer is firmly convinced that the underlying cause of all differences, brawls, fights, wars, et cetera, is nothing but misunderstanding. Misunderstanding is the very root of hate. What the student body of the University of North Carolina, and the world for that matter, needs is understanding. If one student calls another one a rascal, a fight is apt to occur. The truth of the matter, however, is apt to show that the assailed is guilty of being a rascal, or even worse. The accused would not get mad if he were to consider the accusation in its intended light; that is, endeavor to understand just what prompted the accuser to level the charge against him. Likewise, the student who states that there is something wrong with some branch of the University (or any attachment thereto) is usually merely attempting to ferret out the truth and to arrive at a condition of understanding.

We are attending this University for a definite purpose. We are sojourning in a liberal center, in a community which has claim to existence on no other premises than those of intellectuality. Education makes for understanding. What good is education if it is to be stored up within a brain? What good is an opinion hidden from the public by timidity? The price of silence is synonomous with the penalty of ignorance.—J. C. W.

SAYS STATE HAS FARMING FUTURE

Colonel J. W. Harrelson Tells N. C. Club That State Has All Factors Necessary.

"In North Carolina we have all of the factors and qualities necessary to make this the leading agricultural state of the Union, with the possible exception of California," Col. J. W. Harrelson, director of the North Carolina department of conservation and development, declared here Monday night in an address before the regular meeting of the North Carolina Club.

Colonel Harrelson's address was the second of a series dealing with the problems of agriculture to be given before the club this year. New officers of the Club were elected. They were John Slater, of New Bern, president; J. M. MacLachlen, Jackson, Mississippi, vice-president; and Professor S. H. Hobbs, Jr., of the University faculty, secretary.

"We have the advantage in climate, which includes rainfall, sunshine and temperature; in the quality of the people who inhabit the state; in the quality of the soil and its adaptability to a great variety of crop growing; and the accessibility to the nearby eastern markets," Colonel Harrelson said.

"Citizens of this colony and state exploited the natural food producing resources and as the lands became less productive they failed to enhance the quantity production by artificial methods of land improvement. The shortage caused by consumption demands over production was made up by imports."

He then gave a comparison of the value of the state's production of eight leading commodities and of the comsumption of the same commodities. "In these eight items," he said, "our imports are valued at $137,044,000. This point alone casts an undesirable reflection on the educational forces in the field of agriculture of a state to whose climate and fertile soil equal those of North Carolina.'"

Blame for the present depressed situation in the State's rural communities was laid to failure to practice a more intelligent use of natural resources. He suggested as a remedy the establishment of schools of conservation in our leading colleges and universities.

"After all," he said, "the major function of education is to prepare the student for living a fuller life and contributing to the public good. The establishment of such courses, to guide the students into unoccupied or incompletely occupied fields, will tend toward building a citizenship more serviceable to mankind and better equipped to attain success in their struggle for a livelihood."

CASE NEWSPAPER NOT IN FAVOR OF COUPLING TEAMS

News Organ of Ohio School Wishes To Limit Grid Activities To Ohio Conference.

Cleveland, O.—(IP)—Spurning a pointed suggestion of the Reserve Weekly that the Case and Reserve football teams be combined, in keeping with the spirit of academic co-operation recently announced for the two institutions, whose campuses join here, the Case Tech couched its reply in the following terms:

"If football is first and last a municipal spectacle, let's merge and be quick about it. If it is a campus sport, part of a program of 'every man play his own game,' why not stay in the Ohio Conference, where some good friends — Oberlin and Wooster among them — are working with us to advance these ideals? Why not?"

Reserve, a traditional enemy of Case on the football field, has practically deserted the Ohio Conference of late years, in an effort to bring "big time" football to Cleveland. As a consequence she has taken terrific wallopings from Carnegie Tech, Pittsburgh, and similar teams of national strength.

OPEN FORUM

"WE PACIFISTS . . ."

To the Editor:

I suppose V. A. D., whom I guess to be Virginia Douglas, will feel not a little pride to find that her editorial, "Acceptance and Praise of Man," has drawn forth comment from her readers; for evidently, its daring theme was intended to be (and to her credit I will say that it succeeded in being) unique and individualistic, and was designed to attract attention.

But, I am a pacifist (because I don't want my head shot off and because I don't want to shoot off anybody else's head), so I take mild offense at her statement that we pacifists are fools because we do not realize the innate selfishness of man. As a matter of fact, we do recognize that selfishness in individuals—but not in nations.

Wars are started by individuals and fought by groups. The individuals—greedy, mercenary national leaders—are the selfish ones. Through propaganda, extolling the glories of war, they "educate" the masses to fight for the accomplishment of their own selfish ends.

We pacifists know perfectly the futility of trying to thwart such an attitude. Our purpose, while not ignoring selfishness, is to counteract the force of militaristic propaganda with an educational campaign of our own, endeavoring to point out the ultimate futility of war, to develop a saner point of view from which to consider the subject, and to create a world fellowship which will be opposed to armed conflict between nations.

We are so certain of our future success that we now dismiss her editorial with a "pooh-pooh," and that's that.

publishers and booksellers do not have any such security; they have to depend on their receipts from sales to pay their bills, and they are able to continue in business only so long as they are able to continue doing this.

"The comparative unimportance of solid reading matter in this country is not due to the failure of publishers to meet demands; it is due primarily to the failure of our schools to create demands. The evidence of this failure may be seen on all sides.

"Those of us who are engaged in the business of publishing and selling books know that the great majority of the members of the professional groups—lawyers, doctors, teachers, preachers, public officials, corporation officials, and others—make very little effort to keep up with the more important literature of their respective subjects; and much less are they interested in reading and developing personal libraries of general cultural value.

"The task of educating public officials and professional groups to the idea that books are necessary tools for their work is an enormous one, and cannot be accomplished by the unaided efforts of any one group: whether schools, libraries, publishers, or booksellers.

Carolina Varsity Teams Scrimmage As Reserves Meet State Substitutes

Branch, Magner, Nash, House Combination Functions Well Together.

LINE BLOCKING BETTER

"Iron Men" Battle Wolfpack Substitutes in Armistice Day Game at Warsaw.

The "first 33" had things to themselves at Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon, the "iron men" meeting the State College reserves in an Armistice Day game at Warsaw. Continued hard work was in order for the squad with emphasis being placed on taking out ends for the backs and blocking drills for the linemen, before a long scrimmage between the first and second team was underway.

The first two teams had a long and hard fought scrimmage session and looked much better than they have in recent practices. The blocking, however, was rather spasmodic. At times wide holes were opened, then again the defensive linesmen would charge through and throw the backs for losses.

The Branch-Magner-Captain Nash-Henry House combination worked well together throughout the whole practice yesterday with each of them ripping off nice gains and running good interference.

Jim Magner made the prettiest play of the afternoon when he dashed off tackle for over 60 yards and a touchdown. The line opened a wide hole and ran good interference until he had passed the last would-be tackler. He took a pass from Johnny Branch later in the afternoon on his 30 yard line and outran the second team's tacklers for another score, stepping the whole distance just inside the sideline.

The second team showed a flash of offensive late in the practice and ran over a touchdown on a series of off tackle and end run plays. Chuck Erickson was the individual star for the reserves, racing around ends for long gains and receiving several of Maus' and Chandler's passes.

Ned Lipscomb continued to reach into the air and pull down the opposing team's passes. He snagged one of Chandler's heaves and gained over ten yards before being overtaken.

The first lineup included: Walker, Grindstaff and Brown, ends; Hodges and McDade, tackles; McIver and Fysal, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarterback; Magner and Captain Nash, halves; and House, fullback.

The second team showed: Parsley and Tabb, ends; Underwood, Daniel and Smith, tackles; Newcombe and Kerr, guards; Gilbreath, center; Wyrick, quarterback; Slusser, Erickson, Chandler and Maus, halfbacks; and McNeill, fullback.

George Thompson and Bob Blackwood did not get into the scrimmage session because of injuries, but are expected to be in shape for the Davidson game.

Old Backfield Combine May Enter Davidson Tilt

Carolina may go around the circle and work back to an old favorite in the way of backfield combinations for the Davidson tilt Saturday. Branch, quarter; Magner and Captain Nash, halfbacks; and House, fullback, form the quartet referred to.

The coaches have been working these boys together all week, in an effort to develop a quartet with a punch to hurl against the stout defenses of the ever scrappy Wildcats. The quartet may or may not click as a unit, but it seems certain Coach Chuck Collins plans to give it a try.

Valuable End

ERWIN WALKER-END

Since his recovery from a broken wrist suffered at the outset of the 1930 football season, Erwin Walker, sophomore end, has made meteoric progress in the Carolina line. Walker remained at his end post through the entire State-Carolina game here Friday and served all but one minute of the Georgia Tech game. His ability to shake blockers and prevent gains around his end of the line has attracted state-wide attention.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Delta Psi Defeats Sigma Phi Sigma

In a game composed of an unusually good exhibition of line play by both sides, Delta Psi beat the Sigma Phi Sigmas by the score of 12-0. At no time during the game were any serious threats offered by Sigma Phi Sigma. However, the Delta Psis were forced to content themselves with one touchdown in the first half and could not increase this lead except by six points in the last half. The first tally was made on a pass from Paxton to Nash, while the second resulted from a sweeping end run by Carter, aided by perfect interference.

Everett Forfeits to Carr

Carr won on a forfeit when Everett failed to appear on the field.

Aycock Loses to Law School

The law school team, with a well-oiled system of long passes, took their game with Aycock by the score of 6-0. Excellent blocking by Whedbey and ground-gaining passing attack from Boucher to Sembower featured the contest. Aycock presented a strong line and was able to break up many passes and punts, but did not have the necessary punch to its offense.

A. T. O. Remains Unbeaten

The A. T. O.'s kept their high place in the intramural race by their defeat of the Lambda Chi Alphas. At the end of the first half they had rung up only seven points. However, in the fourth quarter the passing began to coordinate resulting in a nineteen to nothing victory. The outstanding player for A. T. O. was Smith, playing a consistent game.

Chi Psi Victorious Over Sigma Zeta

In the most hotly-contested game of the day Chi Psi defeated Sigma Zeta by four first downs to two. At the half, the outcome was rather uncertain with the score three to one in first downs for the Chi Psi's. However, neither team could break away for a winning run; the final score was decided by downs. Mitcham of Chi Psi shone in the game by his accurate passing.

FOOTBALL DYING SPORT SAYS RICE

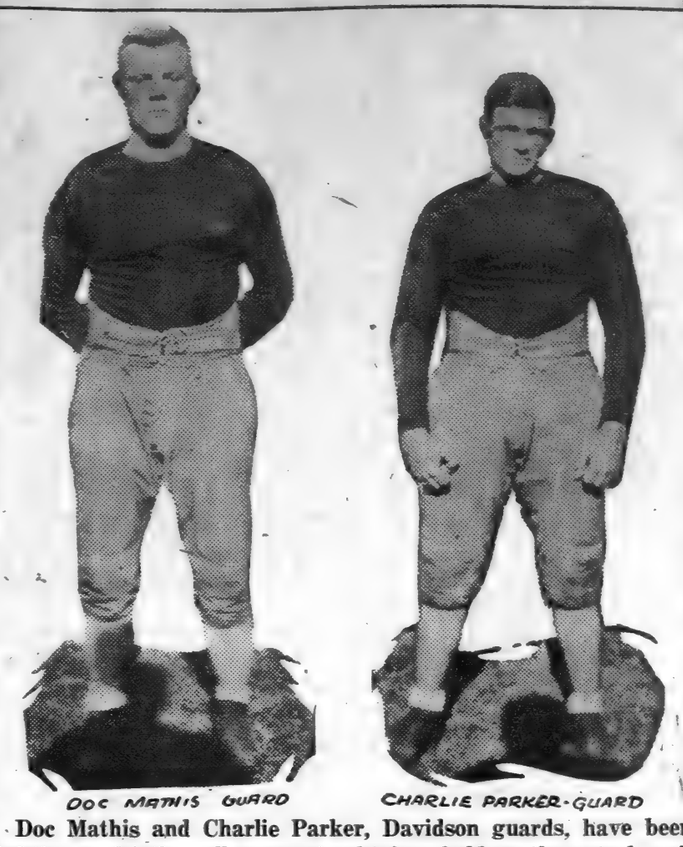
Sports Writer Asserts Football Is On Decline Due to Increase In Professionalism.

Football is again the storm-center of controversy in the college and public press. The public attitude toward the game, the problem of recruiting and subsidizing of players, and the whole question of the place of athletics in university life, are receiving their annual discussion.

This fall the situation is arousing an unusual amount of feeling, with the recent pronouncement of Grantland Rice, sports writer, and Bill Roper, coach of Princeton University, that American football is definitely on the decline. They declare that it is being approached as a business, not as a sport; that too much emphasis is being placed on winning, and too little on sportsmanship; in a word, that football is dying. These statements have not passed unchallenged. Several western college newspapers arise to defend the game, and to insist that the strictures of Mr. Rice and Mr. Roper do not apply to the West, however true they may be in the East.

Professionalism in football is being attacked in the Middle West. The University of Kansas was recently dropped from the Big Six Conference because two of its varsity players were found to be receiving payment. Commenting on this the Daily Nebraskan places "the blame squarely on an athletic-minded public. These wolves are to blame, in all probability, for the present catastrophe at Kansas." On the other hand, the University of Nebraska and Missouri as well as other large universities in trying to guard against the danger of athletes transferring simply for the sake of playing football, have instituted an eligibility rule which forbids transferred students engaging in any activity until they have attended the institution for one year. This rule is causing a great deal of protest at Nebraska as being too extreme, and barring valuable athletes from taking part in activities which really need them, and in which they are interested. It is undoubtedly the effort to avoid the stigma of professionalism.

Co-Ed Archery Team To Meet This Friday



Ida Currie, president of the Women's Athletic Association, announces that the archery team will meet for the first time this Friday afternoon at four o'clock on the field behind the president's home for organization and arrangements. Miss Gladys Angel, of the extension department, has secured the necessary funds for equipment from Mr. C. T. Woollen, graduate manager of athletics, has purchased proper tackle from the Archers' Company of Pinehurst, and has made arrangements to have a representative of the house present to introduce the sport.

A former national women's champion in the sixteen to nineteen year old class and former runner-up in the women's division of the annual Carolinas tournament has offered her assistance and equipment.

CAROLINA LOOKS FOR DRIVE FOR DAVIDSON

Carolina is looking for a backfield pep and punch for Davidson. The Tar Heels have done great gaining midfield but lacked the scoring punch in the last two games, as evidenced by 37 first downs to 13 against Georgia Tech and N. C. State, in comparison with scores of 6-6 and 13-6 for Carolina.

RIVALS FOR DAVIDSON GUARD POST

DOC MATHIS GUARD — CHARLIE PARKER-GUARD

Doc Mathis and Charlie Parker, Davidson guards, have been fighting each other all season to obtain a hold on the guard position opposite Brock, and this constant struggle has developed them both into fine guards. Mathis made his letter last year, but Parker won the place at the first of the season by his fine play against N. C. State. At present there seems little to choose between the two and both always play in every game, no matter which starts. Mathis weighs 179 pounds, Parker 177.

Tar Babies Lose Close Game To Blue Imps, 14-7

HIGHLY-TOUTED DUKE YEARLINGS ARE OUTCLASSED

Winners Make Points on Two Touchdowns and Safety on Blocked Punt.

By Claiborn Carr

Yesterday the Tar Babies went to Durham to play the Blue Imps of Duke in a game which was heralded as one that would be full of thrills. The prophecy was fulfilled and the Blue Imps eked out a 14-7 victory in one of the most exciting and interesting games seen this fall. The Tar Babies, doped to lose to the strong Duke aggregation by an overwhelming score, put up a stiff fight and came near annexing a victory. Duke scored its points through two touchdowns and a safety. The safety resulted from a blocked punt which went outside in the end zone. They got eight points early in the first period, and then Carolina found itself and for the Cavalier Mentor Moves Reiss from Fullback Position to Center.

University, Va., Nov. 12.—Lewis Reiss, a center made from a fullback, has been playing a great game in the Virginia line. He will be one of the key men in the defense against Washington and Lee on Lambeth Field next Saturday and the Carolina game Thanksgiving.

Two years ago Reiss was a back on the DeWitt Clinton high school in New York City. Last year he failed to make the Virginia first year team as a regular, but was understudy for Ward Brewer at fullback. But during his first year on the varsity he has come to be a regular in the Cavalier line.

HARRIERS TRAIN INTENSIVELY FOR SOUTHERN MEET

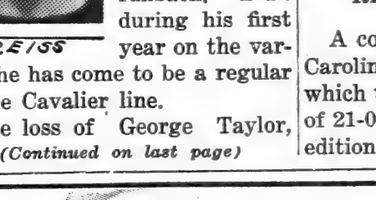
Tar Heel Cross Country Men Will Meet Southern Conference Foes Here November 22.

With two victories in the bag so far this season, the cross-country squad is steadily hammering away in a period of intensive training. Watkins, Farris, Seider, Zelly, Crane, Hunter, and Petty make up the squad of men who are working strenuously each day for the coming meet of Southern Conference foes here Saturday, November 22.

October 31, Coach Ranson's boys took the Gobblers for a ride to the tune of 27-29, following the Baby Tar Heels' victory over the V. P. I. hill and dalers. Captain Baucom, seasoned veteran of the Carolina runners, placed second in the contest, with his team-mates, C. A. Jensen, fourth; J. Jones, fifth; T. L. Cordle, seventh; R. Hubbard, ninth; and J. R. Farris, tenth, following close on his heels.

Over at Duke last Saturday, the powerful Blue and White team led by the flashy Captain Baucom, repeated their victory of last year with a win over the Devils. The following placed for Carolina: Captain Baucom, first; J. Jones, second; R. Hubbard, fourth; T. L. Cordle, fifth; C. A. Jensen, sixth; J. Pratt, eleventh and N. W. Lumpkin, fourteenth. R. Hubbard, who V. P. I., showed a pretty form to place among the first five in the contest with Duke.

C. A. Jensen, T. L. Cordle, Captain Baucom, and T. H. Watkins have suffered minor injuries in the past few days, and as a result, have been slowed up to some extent.



Saturday, November 15, at Lexington, Virginia, a meet is to take place between a quartet of that state's leading schools. The University of Virginia, Washington and Lee University, V. M. I., and V. P. I. will be the participants in this contest. The results of the meet will furnish dopesters a line on material in the Cavalier state, and will give the hill-and-dale enthusiasts an inside idea on what Carolina may expect from Virginia in the conference tourney.

RESERVES WIN 21-0

A complete account of the Carolina-State reserve game which the former won by a score of 21-0 will appear in Thursday's edition of the Daily Tar Heel.

INTELLIGENCE OF MODERN STUDENTS DECLARED LOWER

University of Chicago Liberal Arts Dean Speaks at Davidson College.

"The mental capacity and intellectual interests of our college and university student bodies is far inferior to what it was a generation ago," declared Dr. Gordon J. Laing, dean of the graduate school of arts and literature of the University of Chicago, in one of the three lectures he delivered before Davidson College students and faculty members November 10.

Dr. Laing advanced two causes of this condition. "Students nowadays are taking too many subjects," he said, "and there is such a small degree of consistent and systematic carrying through of any subject, making his education scattered. The eminent educator felt that the curriculum today needed more disciplinary subjects, and cited Greek and Latin as the two which served the field best.

These two subjects, he contended, developed sound judgment that could be applied to any subject, this being consummated through daily readings. It also served to develop, he said, a control of the English language, and an increased vocabulary.

Education was defined in another lecture by Dr. Laing as "The sum total of those experiences that make for the highest development of our special talents. He maintained that the best place to "obtain such an education is not in the school and colleges, but in actual life, and especially by educating ourselves after we get through college."

He urged the Davidson students to map out a systematic plan of reading good literature after graduation, which is one of the best roads to continuation of their education. He pled with them to read exhaustively upon the subject they chose. "Read with reference to the background of the work, political and historical conditions of the times, life of the author, and effects of the work on the future," he said.

Dr. Laing's closing lecture was on "Virgil, His Influence on the Culture of Today." By analyzing a number of the works of this great Roman poet, he showed that Virgil was an inspiration "for our generation because his wide vision of the problems of this world and the next, of life and death, of virtue and courage, of spirituality and the higher life."

In the opinion of the speaker what this generation needs is a "spiritual and intellectual dynamite, something that will raise it from the commercialized routine." In that uplift, he said, the great writers of the world would play an amazing part, and he maintained that Virgil, although he lived almost 2000 years ago, would have a great effect.

U. N. C. Center Passes 'Em Seams Up or Seams Down

A Little Paradox

This is one of those stories whose paradoxes O'Henry loved to set forth.

Last Thursday, a group of ten students stayed up all night and all day for an experiment that L. E. Rackley of the psychology department is conducting. In order to amuse these sleepless marathon boys, it was suggested that they attend the lecture that was given that evening by Dr. H. M. Johnson. They went there quite late, and most of them had to stand up, in order to hear the visiting professor talk for two, what seemed to them interminable, hours on the subject of—sleep.

Choice Seats For Clash Going Fast

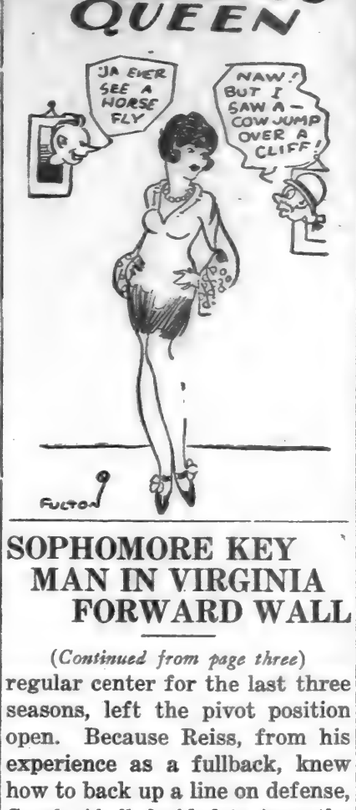
Davidson, N. C., Nov. 11.—(Special)—Tickets for the Carolina-Davidson football game here next Saturday have been on sale for a week, and the advanced disposal of the pasteboards has already been sufficiently large to indicate that the largest crowd before which Davidson has played this season will flock to Richardson field here next Saturday to see these two institutions renew a gridiron rivalry of thirty-three years.

Many reservations by Davidson College alumni were made early in the fall, when they were given a choice of seats for all games before the season opened. Hundreds of others have made reservations during the week just closed, and it is expected that the office of W. M. McGill, treasurer of the athletic association, will be flooded with requests all during the week.

Eastern High Grid Schedule Arranged

E. R. Rankin returned from Raleigh yesterday where he attended a meeting to arrange the contest schedule for the four district champions of the west.

According to the schedule, Elizabeth City will play Henderson at Elizabeth City, November 14, while Lumberton will oppose Apex at Fayetteville the same day. Elizabeth City and Lumberton will then clash at State College, Raleigh, November 20. The following day Henderson will meet Apex at Wake Forest.



FRESHMEN TO COMPETE WITH VARSITY IN TRACK

A track meen between the freshman and varsity squads will be held Friday afternoon, November 21, on Emerson Feld. This meet will include the shorter running events such as the 100 yard and 220 yard dashes, and possibly the quarter-mile. If suitable material is available, relay teams may compete in the quarter-mile and the mile runs. There will be competition in the hurdles and field events also.

Freshmen interested in track work are eligible to enter this meet, in which any student may by trial determine whether or not he is fitted for track and field competition.

Slusser Back In Shape

Rip Slusser, while running, accidentally dug a cleat from his own shoe into his leg during the game with State Friday. The cut was very deep, going clear down to the bone, the doctor stitched it up and Trainer Quinlan thinks that Slusser will be able to play in the Davidson game. Coach Collins predicted that there would probably be more injuries in these next few games than were sustained throughout the games on the "suicide stretch," and it seems as though his prophecy might come true.

Athletic Notices

Men wishing to enter the boxing tournament this fall should begin training today. The tournament is open to all men who have not participated in freshmen or varsity bouts. There will be three rounds of one and a half minutes each with a one minute rest between rounds. Intercollegiate rules will govern the contest. No date has yet been fixed for the tournament, but it will be held sometime before Christmas. Mac Gray will have charge of the contest.

COLLEGES PLAN CRUSADE AGAINST ATHLETES' FOOT

In an effort to stamp out foot ringworm, popularly known as athletes' foot, medical authorities are staging a nationwide crusade which will be actively participated in by college health officers. Recent surveys revealing an alarmingly high precentage of students suffering from the malady have prompted cooperation on the part of the colleges.

The disease is spread in swimming pools, locker rooms, and similar public places through contact with the fungus causing the malady. These places will be the target of the clean-up efforts of college health authorities.

The prevalence of athletes' foot was not realized until recently, when examination in different colleges disclosed the fact that almost one out of three students was afflicted to some degree with the ailment. At the University of California it was found that 52 per cent of the men students had athletes' foot; similar high percentages were found in other universities,, and several public school systems were closed temporaily to check the growth of the disease.

Every other person in the United States is affected with athletes' foot at some time or other, the Medical Review of Reviews, in a leading article, states. Approximately 10,000,000 Americans are victims at the present time, the publication declares, adding that it received great impetus during the World War. Only recently was its nature revealed.

TAR HEELS LOSE CLOSE GAME TO BLUE IMPS, 14-7

rest of the game outclassed Durham rivals.

The Tar Baby line, led by the magnificent play of George Barclay, and Evan McIver, and backed up the equally brilliant play of Strickland, Crane and Gardner, functioned at its best. The highly touted Duke backs plunged in vain against these boys and were repeatedly thrown for losses. McIver and Barclay were in on every play. It was difficult to tell which of these two men made the most tackles. Barclay played the whole game while McIver had to retire after getting hit on the head, only to return later and continue his good work. In his absence, Bud Shore played a whale of a game, several times getting down and stopping the man returning punts in his tracks. Gardner and Parker, Carolina centers, played well. Parker's interference for Whitener on his brilliant return of a kick-off was outstanding. The end play of Jones and Adair was also creditable. In the backfield, Norman Hackney, dashing fullback, played a beautiful game of football. In on every play, backing up the line, making tackles by the bushel, and then running hard and gaining ground, his play was outstanding throughout. Whitener, also, although he missed a pass for a possible score in the first half, came back and dominated the play of the third quarter, through his brilliant run back of the kick-off, and also hard line plunging.

For Duke the outstanding stars were Tyson, fullback, and Hendrickson, quarterback. Tyson made several nice gains and the punting of Hendrickson was outstanding. It was through his punting that Duke gained all the ground in the third period. As neither team could gain through the line they were forced to kick and Hendrickson out-distanced Hackney continually, thus slowly working the ball down the field. Finally, Duke went over for its second score.

The lines of the two teams fought hard, with the Tar Baby forward wall having a slight edge. The Blue Imp attack was a little smoother and this advantage in polish and finish is what enabled them to win. The Tar Babies worked together better today than they have this season, and lived up to the belief that they are powerful. They did what no other team has been able to do this year, cross the Blue Imps' goal line, and they did it in a convincing fashion.

The first period witnessed the scoring of eight points by the Blue Imps. They blocked a punt deep in Carolina territory, which went outside in the end zone. This was counted a safety. Then Duke scored soon again on a long pass, but the try for extra point failed. The score remained 8-0 for the remainder of the first half. The Tar Babies rallied and held off another Duke advance, throwing the opponents from the six-yard line out to the twenty in four downs. Just before the half ended the Tar Babies put on an offensive march. After holding Duke on the six yard line, they went down the field, Hackney and Phipps making nice gains. Then a pass to Whitener was dropped which would have meant a score. Whitener was free and the pass perfect but he was over anxious and the ball bounded out of his arms. The half ended shortly.

The third period was a punter's duel between Hackney and Hendrickson, with Hendrickson having the better of the argument. The play was mostly in Carolina territory, and as the period ended Duke had the ball on the Carolina ten-yard line, first down. When the fourth period began the Tar Babies held, the ball went over to them. They kicked out after a short gain, to the forty-yard line. A double criss-cross made thirty five yards for Duke and then they carried it over on a weak side plunge. Again the try for point failed. Carolina received and Whitener made a beautiful return of about forty yards behind excellent interference. He was almost away for a score, being hauled down from behind. Phipps passed to Woollen, after a long delay, for about forty yards, and with the ball on the five-yard line, after two tries, Hackney strolled across the line untouched on a lateral from Woolen. Phipps made the extra point from placement. The rest of the game saw Duke playing for time and the Tar Babies trying their best to tie the score. The game ended with the ball in mid-field.

The lineups of the two teams:

Carolina	Pos.	Duke
Jones	L. E.	James
Strickland	L. T.	Crawford
Barclay	L. G.	Agnew
Gardner	C.	McIntosh
McIver	R. G.	Cavish

ORGAN DEDICATION
FRIDAY, SATURDAY, AND SUNDAY

VOLUME XXXIX — CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 13, 1930 — NUMBER 48

PLANS COMPLETE FOR DEDICATION CONCERT FRIDAY

Dyer States No Tickets To Be Given Out After 6:00 P. M. Friday.

The hour for the Sunday organ concert has been changed to 4:00 p. m. by the officials of the music department.

Dr. Harold S. Dyer of the music department wishes to state emphatically that by tomorrow, 6:00 p. m., all tickets to the organ dedication will be given out. All applications must be in by that time.

The music club is preparing decorations for the music building for the dedication programs. On Friday and Saturday nights, Mrs. F. H. Edmister, president of the music club will hold a reception in the upper lobby of the music building for Mr. Eigenschenk and other prominent persons attending the program. Members of the music department faculty and persons active in the planning and construction of the new building will be present. Miss Kate Graham, President Graham's sister, will represent him, and Mr. Adolph C. Reuter, designer of the organ, will also be present.

A limited amount of parking space will be available back of the music building on Friday and Saturday nights, but it will not be advisable for persons to park there unless they are from out of town.

No one will be admitted to the auditorium on Friday or Saturday night after the opening ceremony at 8:30, until the first group of selections is over.

Iceland Planning To Use Hot Springs

Reykjavik, Iceland, Nov. 9, 1930.—(IP)—A plan to heat an entire city by piping water from natural hot springs directly into radiators of public buildings and homes was put in operation this summer by this city, the capital of Iceland.

For years farmers and housewives have utilized the springs found in all parts of this country.

Now scientific methods have been used to make the unused heat available for city use.

A pumping plant was built at Wash Springs, two miles from here, and three public buildings are being heated this winter, a national hospital, a public school, and a public indoor swimming pool.

It has been found that in the vicinity of hot springs, hot water can be drilled for just as oil is drilled for, and that it can be piped with little loss of heat in transit.

McLendon Speaks To Kiwanis Club

Major L. P. McLendon spoke Tuesday night to the regular meeting of the Kiwanis club on "The Observance of Armistice Day." The program being of a patriotic nature, the club had as its guests representatives of the local American Legion, and Collier Cobb, Jr., president of the local Rotary Club.

Dr. McClamroch Ill

Dr. R. P. McClamroch, assistant professor of English, has been confined to his home by illness for the past week.

Senior Pictures

According to Travis Brown, editor of the Yackety Yack, all senior pictures must be in by Friday, November 14. Appointments may be made at a booth in the Y during chapel period, and at Sutton's or Pritchard-Lloyd from 1:00 to 2:00 p. m., and from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m.

GEORGE RUSSELL TO LECTURE HERE

George Russell, Irish lecturer and writer, has selected North Carolina as one of the states in which he will lecture next spring. He will deliver several lectures in various parts of the country. Officials of the University have chosen March as the most suitable time for his visit to this state.

Russell is one of the most noted of Irish writers. He is doubtless better known to many people as "A. E." which is his pen name.

FOOTBALL PLAYED FROM BICYCLES IN COREY FORD'S DAY

"It may come as something of a shock to modern devotees of the gridiron sport," reveals Corey Ford in the December College Humor in his reminiscences, And That's How I Met Your Grandmother, "to learn that in my time football was played on bicycles. The entire team would line up along the tape on their high-wheeled 'bikes' and at the referee's whistle they would pedal down the field like mad, the thumbpieces of their bicycle bells clanging briskly and their side-burns floating behind them on the breeze as they raced toward the goal.

"An innovation which proved highly successful was the passing of the famous rule in 1869 that a man who made a touchdown was allowed to keep the ball as a souvenir. Inasmuch as leather was extremely valuable, owing to the high protective tariff, we found that this rule practically did away with the fumble entirely. Once a man had the ball in my day he kept it. On the other hand, it handicapped our forward passing considerably, inasmuch as the first action of a player upon catching the ball in his arms would be to deflate it, tuck it under his jersey, walk off the field, go back to his room, pack his suitcase, buy a ticket to the big city and set up in the leather business for himself. It was in this manner that Otto H. Kahn got his start.

"But the most interesting custom in the good old days was the rule which we adopted regarding spectators. Today the spectator at a football game merely sits in the stands and calls out advice to the teams, such as 'Try a forward!' or 'Take it through the line!' or 'Kill that man!' but in my day they actually went out there and did these things."

No Reading Sunday

The monthly Playmaker reading of Paul Green's latest play, Tread The Green Grass has been postponed until Sunday, November 23. The reading was scheduled for this coming Sunday but the music which is being written by Lamar Stringfield to accompany the play has not as yet been completed. Accordingly there will be no reading this Sunday.

ENDOW AMHERST COLLEGE LIBRARY

Henry Clay Folger Bequeaths $10,000,000 for Memorial Building.

Amherst, Mass.—(IP)—One of the largest and most unusual endowments ever bequeathed an American college of arts and sciences has just been accepted here by the corporation of Amherst College.

The bequeath, provided for in the will of the late Henry Clay Folger, of New York, provides that the trustees of Amherst College shall administer the new Folger Shakespeare Memorial Library in Washington, D. C., and shall pay the college one quarter of the annual net income of the fund of $10,000,000 left for the maintenance of the building.

A clause in the will provided that if Amherst did not accept the gift, it should be transferred to the University of Chicago.

Amherst already has appointed a committee of distinguished alumni to formulate plans for the operation of the new Memorial Library. Included on this committee is Senator-Elect Dwight W. Morrow, former ambassador to Mexico.

The library building, of white marble, and to be completed in 1931, will be situated in the vicinity of the Congressional Library, on a spot diagonally across the street from the block on which the new United States Supreme Court Building is to be located. It will include a small Shakespearean Theatre, and will hold Mr. Folger's famous collection of Shakespeareana of more than 20,000 volumes.

Six Births, Five Deaths In October

The coroner reports six births and five deaths for the month of October. Three of the children born are white and three are colored. Four of the five persons who died were colored. The one white man died as a result of coronary thrombosis, an illness in which clots are formed on the blood vessels. Nephritis, an inflammation of the kidney, caused one of the deaths; a seven months old baby died from pulmonary tuberculosis. It is interesting to note that this child's father had died four or five months ago as a result of the same disease. Another baby died from the effects of malnutrition, and another was still born.

Thus far this month there have been reported two cases of scarlet fever but no other diseases.

President Graham Goes Under Knife

Frank Porter Graham who is now undergoing treatment prior to an operation for appendicitis, is getting along as well as could be expected. President-elect Graham has been in Watts Hospital in Durham for the past several days, and will probably be operated on sometime this week, according to a report received at the Daily Tar Heel office yesterday.

No Fires

The firemen have been having an easy time of it during the first part of November. This month has been the first time in the history of the local fire department that there has not been at least one fire by the twelfth of the month.

PHI FAVORS THE DEATH PENALTY

Heated Discussion Precedes Downing of First Bill on the Calendar.

The discussion at the meeting of the Philanthropic Assembly Tuesday night called forth some interesting issues on the merits and demerits of capital punishment. The bill, Resolved: That capital punishment should be abolished in the state of North Carolina, occasioned a comparison of the crime conditions prevalent to-day in England and America. Representative Wilkinson forcefully compared the two nations. Many representatives denounced capital punishment, arguing that the state should not have the right to take a man's life. By citing well-konwn criminal cases, they endeavored to show the Assembly the advantages and effectiveness of life imprisonment over capital punishment. Nevertheless the Assembly was unwilling to go on record as favoring the abolishment of the death penalty and the bill was defeated.

The second bill discussed during the session was, Resolved: That the emergence of women from the home is a detriment to society. This bill evoked much merriment in the Assembly hall, despite the earnest pleas of Representatives Wilkinson and McDuffie that woman's place was in the home. Representatives Hobgood and Carmichael upheld the negative. After much discussion the bill was tabled until next meeting in order to give the fair members of the Assembly a chance to "strike fire."

Cornell Considers Cold Preventives

Ithaca, N. Y., Nov. 12.—(IP)—Red Flannels are about the only cold preventives which are not being used by a special class in common cold study at Cornell University here.

The class is testing as preventives a half dozen of the latest scientific treatments combined with old-fashioned principles. Included are ultra-violet light, alkalinization of the body by food that reduces hyper-acidity, diet, ventilation, special nose and throat studies and catarrhal vaccination.

"As far as is known," says the announcement of the course, "this is the first time that any university has organized as comprehensive a plan for controlling colds among the student body."

Convinced that cold control among the susceptibles will "go a long way toward preventing cold epidemics among the whole student body," Dr. Dean F. Smiley asks that "cold prevention classes" be joined by those having four or more colds yearly."

ANDRE EXPEDITION FILMS DEVELOPED

Stockholm, Nov. 9, 1930.—(IP)—Dr. Herzberg, Swedish photographic expert, has reported that he has been able to develop half the twenty photographic films which were found among the remains of the ill-fated Andre expedition to the North Pole.

Dr. Herzberg declared that the negatives will enable a number of remarkable pictures to be made, the best of them showing the Andre balloon after it made a forced landing on the ice.

Delegates Arrive

Delegates to the Association of Governing Boards of State Universities will arrive in Chapel Hill today. They will have luncheon at the Carolina Inn at one o'clock and tonight will attend a guest performance of the Playmakers at 8:30.

JUNIOR EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE MEET

The executive committee of the Junior Class met Tuesday night for the first time this year. The budget system of the class for this year was thoroughly discussed.

It was decided that a strict account be kept of the funds spent by the class. In this way the members of the class of '32 will be able to receive full benefit from their fee, and an elaborate prom can be staged.

The men on the committee are: Harland Jameson, chairman; John Phil Cooper, G. Jack Dungan, G. E. French, McBride Fleming-Jones, Hamilton, Hobgood, Casper Austin, James Bunn, and Adrian Daniels.

COKER STUDIES FALL BLOOMING PLANT LIFE HERE

Dr. W. C. Coker of the botany department has been working the last few days with late fall-blooming plants. These shrubs make an interesting study, because they bloom at a time of the year when nothing else comes.

The witch-hazel, a Chapel Hill shrub, has a remarkable curiosity of blooming at this time of the season. The shrub is found in two distinct colors: pale greenish-yellow, and deep yellow of which the latter is the most attractive. The two types were drawn by Miss Nell Henry, a graduate student of the botany department, the coloring being done by Mrs. Mary Graves Rees, a well-known artist of Chapel Hill. These illustrations will probably be used in an article by Dr. Coker for some popular magazine, the subject being "The Variation in Beauty of Our Native Flowers and Shrubs." Dr. Coker is of the opinion there is a field for much improvement in our native ornamentals.

Other well-known flowering trees in Chapel Hill which exhibit great differences in beauty at time of flowering are dogwood, river-plum, red-bud, and red-maple. For example, some red-maples have brilliant scarlet flowers and fruits, while others have pale yellowish-green colors and are of practically no ornamental value.

MacNIDER HONORED WITH GIBBS AWARD

A distinguished honor has come to Dr. William deBerniere MacNider, Kenan Research Professor of Pharmacology, of the University of North Carolina.

The New York Academy of Medicine has awarded to him the annual income of the Gibbs Prize for Research. Dr. MacNider, it is understood, plans to utilize this fund, amounting to one thousand dollars, in the continuation of his research in Chronic Nephritis.

Many of Dr. MacNider's friends, especially those interested in scientific investigation, have congratulated him on this recognition of his research labors.

COKER EXHIBITS WORKS OF EARLY NATURE WRITERS

Elisha Mitchell Society Hears Hickerson and Coker Speak on Contrasting Subjects.

At the meeting of the Elisha Mitchell scientific society Tuesday night at 7:30 in Phillips Hall, the program consisted of two interesting talks by Professor T. F. Hickerson, of the civil engineering department, and Dr. W. C. Coker, professor of botany.

Professor Hickerson explained the theories underlying mechanical methods of stress analysis and exhibited an apparatus for the measuring of deformations of elastic models of structures or machines. This device, invented by Professor George E. Beggs of Princeton University, consists of gages, gage plugs and micrometer microscopes which furnish a precise means of measuring small displacements and deflections of the model, thus enabling one to determine the relation between loads and reactions on the actual structure, even though it may be complex and unsymmetric.

A small celluloid model of a 160 foot concrete arch bridge constructed by the Georgia highway commission in 1927 was shown, and a determination of the thrust, shear and bending moment in the arch caused by a load was demonstrated with the aid of the Beggs deformeter. The results obtained from the deformeter showed a remarkably close agreement with those obtained by mathematical means.

Hickerson stated that although the model was usually cut from a sheet of celluloid, that the results obtained apply to any kind of material that is contained in the structure.

Columbia Professor Will Come To N.C.C.W.

Greensboro, Nov. 11.—John Herman Randall, professor of philosophy at Columbia university and writer of a number of philosophical volumes, is the next speaker of the lecture course at North Carolina college. Dr. Randall comes to the college November 17 and 18 for addresses on the subjects "Religion in the Modern World" and "Contemporary Philosophic Tendencies." The speaker's program includes short addresses before small groups of students.

Editorial Policies

We have been asked to state the editorial policy of the Tar Heel. As a student publication the Tar Heel seeks to reflect through its editorial columns, student opinion. No effort is made to bind the editorial writers to the opinions of the editor or the chairman of the editorial board.

To bind the board to certain well defined policies would eliminate one medium of speech that reaches every student. It is only fair that if members of the board differ or represent differing factions, the Tar Heel should be open to both. To restrict the editorial policies would be to restrict campus opinion.

Except in matters of consequence which necessitate a united front and a decided stand on one side or the other, no effort will be made to limit the policies of any one individual. At present we do not think a restricted policy necessary and the Tar Heel will not have one until the occasion arises.

"Taking Ways"

Here among hallowed intellectual surroundings we develop the habit of using mild terms to designate very severe practices. The time-honored art of stealing has had its name changed to "letting things take up with you." The campus rogue is said to have "taking ways." Such terminology is adept enough to cope with the average and ordinary situation. But for purposes of designating the practice which has been going on in the University library of late we must again call into action the old terms of "theft" and "rogue." Numerous comments handed down by library officials seem to have accentuated the roguish grievance, rather than to have diminished it.

Even the most circumspect member of the student body can see some reason for borrowing overtime a handsome ,expensive book. Such persons restrain from doing so, however, in the interests of that which is right and in the interests of other students who will need the book. But just why a human being should "take unto himself for possession" certain mediaeval history sheets from the reserve book in the reserve room of the library is a mystery to us. The urge to acquire is even our most liberal moments. We cite this as the most outstanding development of "taking ways." that has been seen in these parts in recent years. Stealing is bad enough when the article in question is valuable, but when the article is absolutely valueless in the markets of the world and in the estimation of the human order the matter is worthy of careful examination. The motive involved in such a case is not that of theft pure and simple. It is rather an evidence of unavoidable misunderstanding.

We feel that book-rogues should be punished as a general principle, but we refrain from suggesting a remedy for those who steal reference sheets which have engraved on them nothing but the names and authors of the "driest" books known to mankind.—J. C. W.

All Wet

Regardless of the refusal of the President to face Prohibition squarely and cease dilatory measures and the appointing of cumbrous, ineffective committees, of parties to consider the question an outstanding issue, and of leaders generally to do other than hedge when the point is brought up, the slow but inevitable voice of the people is becoming ever more fixed and to be reckoned with. Development in the recent election disclose the unmistakable swing of popular opinion in the direction of a change of some sort. Little importance can be attached to the claims of Anti-saloon Leaguers, who triumphantly point out and console themselves with the fact that at present the majority of Congress remains dry.

Even disregarding, as involving too complex an analysis, the numerous victorious wet candidates, definite evidence is to be seen in the actual votes on dry referendums by the people of three states—Illinois, Rhode Island, and Massachusetts—all of which went overwhelmingly wet. The Massachusetts result involved not merely an ineffectual recording of opinion, but carried with it the automatic repeal of the State's enforcement act. Thus, incidentally, was belied, for the populace of one State at least, a long-standing hope and belief of conservatives that straw votes fail to reflect the true temper of individuals. How long before such dry states as our own will be aligned with the fast growing majority?

Better Stick To Farming

"In North Carolina we have all of the factors and qualities necessary to make this the leading agricultural state of the Union, with the possible exception of California," Colonel J. H. Harrelson, director of the North Carolina department of conservation and development, declared here Monday night in an address before the regular meeting of the North Carolina Club. The sentence is taken from Wednesday's Daily Tar Heel.

We find it lamentable that more people have not had the good sense—common sense—to see that North Carolina is an agricultural state. It always has been and always will be, and with a little work a rather good one than otherwise. And a state cannot at the same time be a leading industrial state and a leading agricultural state. As an entity, a state has a one-track mind, and its attention cannot be successfully focused on two points.

North Carolina is in its very nature a farming state, and it should drop any hopes it may be entertaining of becoming otherwise. It was never meant to manufacture, and that for the simple reason that North Carolinians are not given to cooperation and organization, and industry without union is becoming an impossibility. North Carolinians are individualists in one of the many senses of the word, many of them suspicious of the rest of mankind, blatantly unreconstructed. They cannot organize with a national union.

OPEN FORUM

GLORIOUS WAR?

To the Editor,

Yes, V. A. D., we agree with you—to some extent, i. e., that wars will never be a thing of the past among the people of this earth, and that men are innately selfish and foolish. We will even go so far as to admit that pacifists are fools—or rather, some pacifists are fools. But we do refuse to allow the statement that wars are "rather glorious," and that Armistice Day should as much celebrate the war as the ending of the war.

I am not the sort of man to condemn fist-fighting when there is just cause for it, nor will I back out of an encounter when my reputation is at stake. Perhaps, V. A. D., you can remember as far back as your high school days when two youngsters over a slight mishap of small consequence, would ball up their fists and start calling each other names. Quickly an audience would surround the pair, urging the impending action to hasten its arrival. Then some eager bully pushed one into the other, and the fighting commenced. Those who push little boys into scraps might be compared with those who advocate wars today; they are the brains of the party, who when the disaster does arrive, sit back, revel in it, make fortunes from it, and spread the ideas of patriotism among innocent and premature youngsters, when they are the least patriotic in the whole land. (Let it be not said that I condemn a patriot.) You are a woman, V. A. D., and perhaps don't know the full horrors of war; if one should break out again, and if you should be sent over as a nurse or to fulfill whatever duties a female does fulfill in war, you might change your "glorious" ideas, although your position and sex would not force you into the center of action where men die like flies, only much more horribly, and the cries "glorious! glorious!" change to "what price glory now?"

It's all very well to treat war lightly in peace times, especially those who have never experienced the horros of it, but it is madness to encourage it and "further" it, as you seemed inclined to do. And it's one thing to have your war waged in foreign lands, but an entirely different matter to have warfare carried on in your own vicinity and on your own property, your mothers and sisters unprotected from attacks from outlying bands of the "d--n, dirty, enemy," and your fathers and brothers being shot or gassed almost within your eyesight.

I am not a pacifist. I am simply in favor of peace, and against those who advocate war.

COIT M. COKER.

FALSE ASSUMPTIONS

To the Editor:

It is a cause for great rejoicing to Miss Douglas in her editorial, "Acceptance and Praise of Man," grants to Christ the theory that men may be brothers. It is, however, not a cause for rejoicing that Miss Douglas does not grant to the word, "armistice," its genuine meaning in the English language. In celebrating Armistice Day, it is presumed that we celebrate the cessation of hostilities and not the hostilities, themselves. If Miss Douglas offers up a personal prayer in the one hundred and twenty seconds between 11 a. m. and 11:02 a. m. for the furtherance of another war, since we notice she carefully washes the war guilt from her own hands, I would like to offer up a personal counter-prayer on behalf of the world, today, and the future youth of the world.

If there is no "particular point" in initiating wars, why is it that there is no point in preventing wars? We fear Miss Douglas would like to be a mediaeval damozel ensconced in a castle, from whose turrets she could watch her knights fight gloriously. When her knights wearied of battle, they could withdraw like a race of gentlemen, until the next time her whimsy caused her vassals to sally forth.

Miss Douglas assumes that human nature causes war, that is, that when the excess energy of two or more nations reaches a breaking point a war ensues, and then she bases her entire creed on this assumption. This assumption is not true. Collective human nature does not start wars; it merely makes their continuance possible. With the sole exception of Miss Douglas, the best modern thought sees a possibility of controlling the real, underlying causes for war: economic, political, and social. "Pacifists," she says, "are unable to see that there is no point in preventing wars." And Miss Douglas then deduces that this inability makes them fools. This classification of hers includes innumerable leaders of thought hitherto considered sane, and in fact, almost intelligent, but who are obviously in a pitifully benighted state.

With a competent agent, I sincerely believe we could have Mussolini, Soviet Russia, and Adolf Hitler vying with one another to obtain Miss Douglas's services, for no one, surely, has ever so convincingly made war seem gentlemanly and glorious. But permit me to call to the attention of this eminent young militarist from Greensboro, her own succinctly stated advice to the fools, "It is always dangerous to make a false assumption and to base an entire creed on that false assumption."

I do hope that when the next war is fought Miss Douglas may find herself in the thick of its glory, and that she may survive to "quit like a" gentlewoman.

The subject of the address by Dr. W. C. Coker was "Some Interesting Early American Naturalists." The observations and writings of the first American naturalists were discussed and some of the early works exhibited. The speaker also quoted certain selections from these works. The four men whose works were discussed were Hariot, Banister, Sir Han Sloane, and Lawson.

A copy of Hariot's "A brief and true report of the new found land of Virginia," published in 1589, was exhibited. Banister's book was shown as it first appeared in Ray's "Historia Plantarum." Perhaps the most interesting book exhibited before the meeting was Sir Han Sloane's first published work, "Catalog of Plants in Jamaica." This book was published in 1696, and the book exhibited by Dr. Coker is the original. It was found by Dr. Archibald Henderson in his father's library and was given to Dr. Coker. There are not more than three copies of this book in the United States. Sir Han Sloane was physician to the English King and in 1753 the government, for the total sum of $100,000, purchased his collection of books and natural historic specimens to place in the British museum.

The last man mentioned by Dr. Coker was Catesby. His great works entitled "Natural History of North Carolina, Florida, and the Bahama Islands" was shown. This work published in two elephant folios, the first in 1731 and the second in 1748, is profusely illustrated by the first paintings of American plants and animals. Catesby was the first American naturalist to describe and illustrate such American plants and animal life as the bull frog and the red dogwood tree.

Dr. Coker had planned to bring his discussion down to the present, but due to the scarcity of time, he was unable to give even a third of his address. He will continue the discussion at the meeting of the Sigma Xi, scientific fraternity, Tuesday night.

Daily Tar Heel

Secrecy Prevailing At Davidson As Wildcats Prepare For Tar Heels

Students Speculate as To What Younger and Tilson Are Doing Behind Closed Gates.

'CATS FIGHT FOR POSTS

McQueen and Brohard Strong Rivals for Fullback Position; Starting Tackles in Doubt.

(Special to The Daily Tar Heel)

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 12—Comparative secrecy prevails on the Davidson College campus as to the preparations of the Wildcats for their engagement with the University of North Carolina Tar Heels Saturday, and there is speculation among the students as to what Coaches Younger and Tilson are preparing for the fans and the Tar Heels team in the way of trick play this coming Saturday.

Both the players and coaches, as well as the student body, know what a victory over Carolina next Saturday would mean to Davidson's rating in the state and for the season's record, and complete cooperation exists between the mentors and students in carrying out the wishes of the former. Ne efforts are being made to scale the fence or gain entrance to the field to watch the workouts.

Don McQueen and Tom Brohard continue their nip and tuck fight for the fullback post. Both possess different types of attack, the former running low with his head down, and Brohard makes his yardage standing up. Both seem adapted to their own particular type of playing, for each has done well upon the gridiron this season. McQueen forged to the front last Saturday by his constant battering of the Wofford forward wall for long struts.

Charlie Parker was not used in the Terrier clash at all, though he was in uniform and ready in case of necessity. He was suffering with sinus trouble Saturday, but should be ready for the contest this week-end. Mathis returned to his oldtime form at Parker's berth, and he and Brock made a good pair of guards. Both will likely get the first call Saturday, with Parker being among the first reserves used if necessary.

Raker, Covington, and Wagner go around in circles for the tackle positions, and until Coach Tilson beckons to one or the other, none of them know which will start. The same is true of Proctor and Pierce at left flank. Brown is almost a certainty for right end. A substitution for him during the season nearing its close has been infrequent.

Davidson should present three punters of practically equal ability next Saturday, for Mills and McQueen have shown that they could boot the pigskin on a parity with Brock, who is drawn back from the guard position. As a rule, Brock is the best kicker, but the punishment he receives in the center of the line wears him down to such an extent that he is a tired boy who goes far back to send the Wildcats out of danger.

Tough Job for Carolina Line Against Davidson

The fact that Davidson has held seven opponents to 38 points this season indicates that Carolina will face another of the dogged and fighting Wildcat teams, powerful on defense and keyed to its usual top pitch for the Carolina game. The Wildcats showed their great fighting powers last year by leading Army for a half and holding Carolina's 346-pointers for a half, and they have additional reserve power to make them a much stronger club this season.

HERE'S ONE THAT THEY missed in the Duke-Kentucky game. Near the end of the last quarter when Kentucky was endeavoring to complete a long pass from near her end zone, a play resulted that should have given Duke an automatic safety. The Kentucky passer ran over to the right to hurl a long pass to his right end who was streaking up the sidelines. Just as the passer drew back his arm to throw the ball, he stepped more than a foot across the right side of the end zone. He threw the pass which was not complete and a play later the game ended. Most of the boys in the press box missed the play, as well as the officials who were intent upon the receiver of the pass. Should the play have been detected by one of the officials it would have given Duke two points for a 16-7 score, and probably banished all fears that Kentucky could come from behind in the last minute and win.

ATHLETIC OFFICIALS AT the University of South Caroline, headed by Jack Crawford, director of physical education at that institution, are fostering the organization of a southern conference soccer league. Some fifty colleges in the country have soccer teams, but few southern schools are listed in the fifty. It is the dream of South Carolina athletic devotees to organize a team at that school and obtain games with eastern colleges.

Outstanding soccer teams last year were: Yale, Penn. State, U. of Pennsylvania, Harvard, Haverford, Dartmouth, Princeton, and Springfield. Penn. State was awarded the Intercollegiate Soccer Association championship by virtue of a record that showed no defeats and seven victories.

It is thought that the movement might be given a trial by instituting soccer as an intramural sport and then, if advisable, provisions will be made for a freshman and varsity team in a few years.

Students of the University of South Carolina have been urged to give their support to this movement which will be inaugurated in an inter-dormitory league schedule which will get under way in December.

THE BIG QUESTION IN North Carolina football today is not "can Carolina beat Davidson," but "can Carolina beat Duke!" Admittedly, the Davidson game will be a good one and important in state football circles. However, there is not as much at stake (by that we do not mean bets) as there is bound to be when the Blue Devils invade Kenan stadium December 6. Behind the football tradition of the two institutions there is a hazy navy blue inscription "Beat Carolina," and an azure blue "Beat Duke." To use a hackneyed reportorial phrase, "Carolina is pointing for Duke."

Workouts during the last few days have done much to elevate the status of the Tar Heels in the state. There seems to be an evidence of punch and drive that has been lacking all through the season. The old favorite combination of Branch, Nash, Magner, and House is rolling along in perfect order; in short, the whole team is clicking. As a department we'll say "Duke Beware," but personally we'll say that we've bet six dollars, four pressing tickets, three pearl studs, and a picture of our best girl on Carolina.

PREPARING BAG OF TRICKS

Coaches Monk Younger and Tex Tilson are drilling the Davidson Wildcats behind closed gates this week, preparing for the game with the Tar Heels Saturday. They are noted for their tricky offensive plays, and their defenses worked out especially for strong opponents often prove very effective.

RESERVES DOWN STATE'S SCRUBS

Pass and Flashy End Run Give Carolina Team 12 To 6 Victory.

Warsaw, Nov., 11.—Shoving across a touchdown in the first and fourth quarters, the Carolina reserve team turned back a strong North Carolina state reserve eleven that was able to eke out one touchdown on a long pass here today, by a score of 12 to 6. Points for touchdowns failed.

A perfectly executed pass from Croon, left halfback to Alexander, end, broke the ice for the ultimate winners in the middle of the first period. Shortly before the half ended, the Wolfpack scrubs tied the count via a fifty yard pass.

The final quarters saw both teams fighting for the breaks with Carolina circling the ends repeatedly but lacking the necessary scoring punch to shove across another score. In the last period Croon dashed around the end for the score.

State plays consisted mainly of line plunges which were plugged repeatedly by the Carolina forwards.

With Captain Strud Nash having returned to form against N. C. State, and Jim Magner looking his best of the season, Carolina will probably use its hard-running backs for an attack of straight football in the Davidson game Saturday.

TAR BABIES REST AFTER IMP GAME

Coach Enright Tells Freshmen To Spend Afternoon Attending to Studies.

After playing sensational ball Tuesday against the Blue Imps in Durham, the Tar Babies were given a holiday yesterday. The weather was terrible and Coach Enright thought it would be best to rest his men and at the same time escape the bad weather. He will have them out today and they will begin strenuous work on their next and final test, the Virginia freshmen on November 22.

The Tar Babies received only a few minor injuries. The most serious was the shaking up that McIver got. Whitener also received a wound on his face, but this was only slight and he is ready now. The rest of the men are in perfect condition and seemed pleased with their showing, as indeed, they should be.

The notice that told the men they were to have a holiday yesterday had a note for them to use this time on their studies. Coach Enright does not want any of his men to get so far behind in their work that they will have to give up football.

Practice will be resumed today as usual and the team may have a scrimmage with the varsity before the week is over.

Jim Moore, Alabama, tossed a 50-yard pass to Suther over the goal line in his team's defeat of Kentucky.

Tar Heels Present Mutt And Jeff Pair For All-Southern Center Ned Lipscomb Foot Taller Than Quarterback Johnny Branch—Has Been Backbone of Carolina Defense Throughout Season—Branch Dynamic General.

At the opposite ends of the height scale, a Mutt and Jeff, Quarterback Johnny Branch and Center Ned Lipscomb have proven the big stars for North Carolina in six Conference games to date and are regarded as the Tar Heels' best bets for mythical all-Southern honors.

The dynamic and elusive Branch is 5 feet 5, and the shortest man on the Carolina squad. The steady and dependable Lipscomb stands exactly a foot higher, and is the tallest Tar Heel. Branch weighs 155, and most of his weight is concentrated in a prodigiously driving pair of legs. Lipscomb tips the scales at 195.

Lipscomb rated as one of the South's best centers last year, and looks even greater in this, his last season. He passes unerringly, and is one of the South's few centers who can pass the ball to the backs with seam down for a pass and seam up for a punt. With his towering height, he has constantly been a ball-hawk on pass defense and has been known to intercept enemy passes with one-hand catches. His uncanny defensive sense and great physical power in playing a roving center backing up the line have made him the backbone of Carolina's defenses in every game, including spirited stands against Tech and Tennessee.

Last Davidson Game Played in Rain; Collins To Be Prepared For Reoccurrence.

GIVEN PASSING DRILL

Squad To Leave Friday Afternoon from Durham at 4:30 for Davidson.

A steady downpour of rain throughout the whole afternoon yesterday failed to halt practice for the Tar Heels, as they continued their week of hard work preparing for the Davidson game at Davidson Saturday. It was the first long workout in the rain that the Tar Heels have had this fall, but they managed to handle the rain-soaked pigskin adeptly.

Coach Collins declared that the team needs to get used to handling a wet ball, since the game with Davidson was played in the rain last year and judging from present weather conditions, there may be a bad day for the game again.

The backs and ends were pitted against each other yesterday for the third time this week, the backs drilling on taking out the

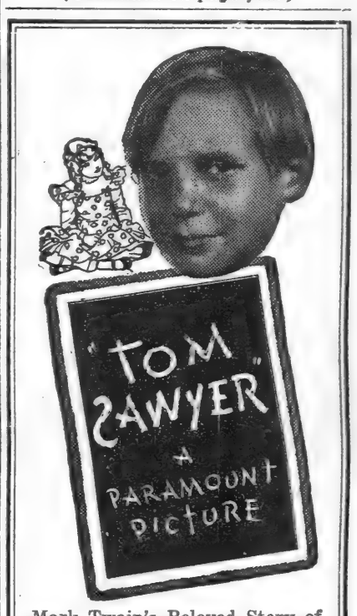
Tennis Tourney Monday

Beginning Monday, November 17, a tennis tournament will be held for all freshmen interested in trying out for the first-year team, and for upper-classmen who are not on the varsity. The purpose of this tournament is to give Coach Kenfield an idea of how the freshman players will line up in the spring, and also to uncover whatever varsity material that may have been overlooked in the past. Entries must be made to Coach Kenfield or to Captain Graham before 6 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Intramurals Rained Out

All intramural football games scheduled for yesterday afternoon were postponed on account of rain. Only games of sufficient importance to have bearing on the race for campus honors will be played off.



Amplifiers Will Be Used In Announcing N. C.-Davidson Game

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 12.—Capt. Norton G. Pritchett, professor of physical education at Davidson, announced here today that amplifiers would be used on Richardson Field at Davidson next Saturday in the game between the University of North Carolina and Davidson College.

"We are anxious to do everything within our power for the comfort and pleasure of the thousands who will visit Davidson Saturday," said Capt. Pritchett, "and unless our plans go awry, we will have this feature to offer for their benefit."

Carolina Will Watch Fraley, McCall, McQueen

Davidson has a trio of dangerous backs whom Carolina will be watching closely on Saturday. Reference is to McCall, who got away for at least three runs above 55 yards last year, and to Captain Fraley and McQueen, who have been splitting honors for sensational work with McCall this season.

But avoid starvation menus. No doubt you know girls who complain of dizziness while dieting. Of headaches, listlessness.

When reducing diets lack sufficient roughage, improper elimination is inevitable.

It can be prevented so easily. Just add two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to the diet daily. It is not fattening. Relief is guaranteed.

ENGLISH THEMES ARE USED FOR ARTICLE DATA

The freshmen who are taking English 1 this quarter were unpleasantly surprised this week when they were asked to write a theme on the subject of high school commencements. The theme was to stress the following points: a description of the writer's own graduation exercises, his frank opinion of the exercises, the significance of commencement, and a description of the student's idea of the ideal commencement.

The purpose of these themes is to gather data for Miss Gertrude Johnson of the University of Nebraska who will write an article on commencements which is to appear in a forthcoming number of the Junior-Senior High School Clearing House Magazine.

Tom Sawyer Will Talk From Screen

After a lapse of thirteen years "Tom Sawyer," the immortal masterpiece of Mark Twain, is to be seen again on the silver-screens of America.

Since that earlier day, Tom and Huck, Aunt Polly and Becky Injun Joe and Joe Harper have found voices. Through the medium of the talking screen they will now be heard for the first time.

In 1917 the late William Desmond Taylor directed "Tom Sawyer" at the Paramount studios.

Jack Pickford, then in his twenty-first year, carried the role of Tom Sawyer. Louise Huff who had been his leading woman in "Seventeen" and a number of other pictures, played the role of Becky Thatcher, Tom's sweetheart. The Huckleberry Finn of that picture was Lewis Sargent, then only 15.

Today, in Paramount's all-talking version of "Tom Sawyear," which comes to the Carolina Theatre today, the child principals in the cast are all much younger than those of the earlier production.

CAIN SOCIETY MEETING TO SEE MOVING PICTURE

The meeting of the William Cain Society, which was scheduled fortnight in Phillips hall, will be postponed until tomorrow night at seven-thirty.

There will be presented a Du Pont picture on the subject, "Hydro-electric power production in the new South." Also T. M. Riddick, a student, will speak.

TAR HEEL HALFBACK IN NEW LEGAL ROLE

Jim Magner, halfback, and legal counsel for the Carolina football team, is a licensed lawyer, having passed the last state bar, and what's more he's had a real case to try. Magner defended a college boy for taking a turkey from a cafe.

Correspondence Courses Attract 1642 Individuals

The correspondence courses in extension work show quite an increase in enrollment over those of last year. The director of the extension division submits statistics which will be published in its annual report to the president of the University this fall.

There are 154 courses offered by the extension division with 65 members of the faculty instructing them. The total number of individuals enrolled is 1642, an increase of 61 over last year, while the total number of lesson assignments corrected is 41,379, surpassing by 4500 the list of last year.

House To Attend Inaugural Address

R. B. House, executive secretary, will take the place of President Graham, who is ill, in extending the greetings of the colleges of the state at the inauguration of Dr. Gideon Ireland Humphreys as second president of High Point College. The inauguration exercises will take place at 10:30 a. m., Saturday, November 15.

Infirmary List

The following persons were confined in the infirmary yesterday: Robert Novins, D. J. Beam, Jr., C. L. Balding, H. P. Chamberlin, W. L. White, and Larry Johnson.

Cross-Country Comment

By Laurence Pegram

With the radio announcers continually droning out predictions of rainy days, and inclement weather, the Tar Heel Harriers are at a disadvantage in not being able to get in full work-outs each day. Nevertheless, the members of the squad keep doggedly at their practice, whether in the gymnasium, out on the track, or around the suburbs of Chapel Hill.

Barring further injuries, the U. N. C. cross-country team will be in tip-top shape for the conference run, Saturday, November 22. Captain Baucom, along with T. H. Watkins sustained injuries in the Duke encounter last Saturday.

Down at the "Flats," Georgia Tech came back strong last Saturday with an overwhelming 17-44 defeat at the expense of Clemson. Captain Hal Asbury was the main cog in the Golden Tornado's victory, as he finished in front of the entire starting unit. Previous to this victory, Tech suffered ignominy at the hands of a snappy Auburn aggregation, when Tech was handed the smaller end of a well-fought contest.

Turning the cross-country binoculars northward, Virginia is seen to be in somewhat of a stir. The "Big Four" of the Cavalier state are mixing things up a bit, and are pointing to the meet tomorrow in Lexington, Virginia, with all the vim and vigor they are able to muster.

GARDNER AND McLEAN WILL BE AT DAVIDSON FOR GAME SATURDAY

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 12.—(Special) — Governor O. Max Gardner and Frank Graham, president of the University, have been invited by Dr. Walter L. Lingle, president of Davidson College, to be his guests at the Carolina-Davidson football game on Richardson Field Saturday.

President Graham, however, will be unable to attend the game as he is in Watts Hospital, Durham, under observation for appendicitis.

Ex-Governor A. W. McLean, whose nephew is manager of the Davidson varsity football team, has already signified his intention of attending the game.

ends. Linemen were kept busy again drilling on blocking and charging.

Coach Bill Cerney sent his backs through a long session on pass defense, so that they would get used to digging into the soft turf and keep up with the receiver. Several of the backs found it difficult to get a good footing and failed to keep up with the receivers who were going down fast, but as a whole the defense covered the passes well.

Coaches Younger and Tilson over at Davidson are working behind closed gates, and seem to be preparing a bag full of tricks for the Tar Heels. They are noted for their unusual formations, and for their defenses which often stop the strong offensive thrusts of superior teams.

Down in Kenan Stadium the Carolina coaches are keeping quiet this week also, and have little to say about the game, but they are going to be prepared for anything that Younger and Tilson may decide to put on the field Saturday.

The reserves, back from their game with the State substitutes, were given Davidson plays yesterday, and probably will run them today in a scrimmage with the varsity. This will be the final stiff workout for the squad before they leave for Davidson Friday afternoon. Coach Collins stated that the team will take a light workout early Friday and leave for Davidson from Durham at 4:30 o'clock.

gave Lipscomb great praise for his fine work against Georgia and Georgia Tech. "Ole Timer," feature writer for the Atlanta Journal, waxed particularly eloquent. "Carolina's center Lipscomb, "Ole Timer" wrote after the Georgia game, " was the backbone of their defense. When he went out near the end of the first half, not to return, the Tar Heels lost the main factor in stopping Georgia. He appears to be a truly fine player."

Branch, widely known for his great broken field work and pass-receiving and for his generalship, has been doing part of his team's passing this year, and has proven of all round value by adding punting to his versatile repertoire. In the latter capacity, the stumpy midget has performed phenomenally, kicking as far as 60 yards, and averaging around 40 yards every game.

Against Wake Forest, V. P. I. and Maryland, Branch gained 150 yards by passes, and returned punts brilliantly, up to 63 yards against Wake Forest, up to 80 yards against V. P. I., and up to 95 yards against Maryland, this latter run winning for Carolina 28-21.

Georgia's great team covered the stumpy star like the dew, although he still got away two or three times, and the Georgia players confessed they'd much rather stop Albie Booth of Yale. He averaged 15 yards a punt return against the strong Tennessee club, and continued his pass-receiving activities. Against Tech he caught passes for 90 yards and scored Carolina's one touchdown. He has been of greatest value in every game, and in at least two battles it has been a case of "As Branch goes, so goes Carolina."

CAROLINA-DAVIDSON GAME AT DAVIDSON TOMORROW AFTERNOON

VOLUME XXXIX — CHAPEL HILL, N. C., FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1930 — NUMBER 49

EARTH TO CROSS METEORIC CLOUD PATH TOMORROW

Orbits of Cloud and Earth Will Coincide for Five Years.

The earth will pass through a great shower of small meteoric bodies in 1933, according to Dr. C. P. Olivier, of the University of Pennsylvania and president of the American Meteorological Society. Dr. Olivier, formerly of the University of Virginia, has done much research and observational work in the Flower Observatory at the University of Pennsylvania.

The cause of these phenomena are explained as the result when the path of the earth is cut by the orbit of a meteor. In many cases the meteor is separated into millions of small bodies which spread out along the path for thousands of miles. Often they are so widely spread that the earth revolves in its orbit several years before the meteoric cloud has moved wholly out of the path of the earth. The point where the two orbits cut each other is reached by the earth in the same month every year.

In this month the earth will pass through the edge of the cloud; next year it will be nearer the center and there will be more meteors seen; in 1933 the earth will reach the center of the cloud where the particles are larger and are many times more in number, and an unusually great number will be seen.

Saturday night next, if one will look in the direction of the constellation, Leo or the Lion, he will see these particles as they enter the atmosphere burn out, Dr. Olivier points out. This group of stars is the radiant point of the meteors in question, and will seem to come from one point and shoot out in many directions, although in reality they are all traveling in parallel lines.

ALDERMEN MOVE TO RELIEVE POOR SITUATION HERE

Order the Placing of Three Stop Signs on Franklin and Columbia Streets.

The board of aldermen of the town of Chapel Hill met last night at their regular monthly meeting to pass legislation for the relief of unemployment in Chapel Hill. The mayor was authorized to appoint a committee which is to raise funds and supervise the expenditure of these funds for some type of community improvement. One of the suggestions put forth was that of having one or two hundred trees, which would cost between one and two dollars each, planted along the streets of the town. The cost of these trees would not be paid by the municipal government but would be a sort of donation from the citizens who would each contribute a tree or so.

In order to help people find work Bruce Strowd of the Strowd Motor Company has agreed to act as an employment agent. All those desiring work should register at Strowd's office; if people needing work done would cooperate with the relief committee by calling Strowd to find out if there is any suitable help it would do much to insure the success of the project.

ALUMNI OFFICERS ARRANGE DISPLAY

A large display board has been arranged by the alumni office for exhibition at a meeting of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in Asheville which will begin Monday.

This board will be in the George Vanderbilt hotel under the direction of Mrs. John Anderson. It measures three feet by five, and contains seventeen large pictures showing typical scenes of the campus.

Dr. J. G. DeRoulhac Hamilton, of the history department, will speak before the U. D. C. meeting in the interests of the Southern Historical Association.

COLLEGIANS TAKE PART IN RIOTING

Foreign Students Lead Political Uprisings, While Americans Stage Football "Riots."

With unemployment and the economic depression as a world-wide source of revolution and instability, the reports of the part taken by students in various countries in stimulating and leading the spirit of unrest by rioting and protest have received wide discussion in the college press.

Within the last few days, Egyptian students set fire to one of the Cairo school buildings and later a large number of student strikers attacked those who refused to join them, with the result that several were injured when the police joined the fray. The cause of the trouble seems to be agitation against the existing government, the new constitution and electoral laws.

Student rioting in Spain has continued for some time. Law students in Barcelona showed an anti-monarchistic spirit and those in Seville combined rebellion against the government with discontent against the university administration.

A third example is found in South America where Peruvian Students overthrew Leguia and the Argentinians aided in the displacement of Irigoyen.

In contrast to this, there is the recent riot at Princeton resulting in the destruction of private property, rocking of interstate buses and the suspension of forty-two men. Along the same lines is the traditional Yale freshman riot, the Gowns against Towns. Sedate Harvard representatives who have known the inside of a jail due to "boyish pranks." With a few exceptions, such as the New York students who were jailed last winter because of too active sympathy with the garment workers' strike, most of the student riots in this country have been caused by mass meetings smacking strongly of football, tradition or "good spirits."

An editorial in the Pennsylvanian does not advocate mob action as a principle, but points out the desirability of rioting over political, religious, social and economic issues rather than puerile rebellions against the local police. The last European riots at least indicate an awareness of existing problems not found to any great extent among young American students. Another opinion expressed in this week's college press on rioting in the American universities is that such purposeless destruction is stupid and ought to be discouraged much more emphatically than has been done heretofore.

"Odd" McIntire Confesses To Being "Somewhat Of A Nut"

"It has been part of my very agreeable job for some 20 years to meet people who are known as celebrities, by what James Branch Cabell might call 'ineluctable inference,,'' confesses O. O. McIntyre in the December College Humor in his article on Perpetual Celebs. "I remember them for what I am pleased to call their superb eccentricities—the little grotesque mannerisms, perhaps of speech, action or even clothes. I suppose that is entirely due to the fact that I, myself, am by the way of being somewhat of a 'nut'. Even my actual name is 'Odd.'

"I have not, save to catch a steamer or train, arisen before noon in fifteen years. I talk to myself in the bath. I am afraid of everything, yet in great emergencies people have testified to my courage. I like to drink coffee out of thick cups. I have never been in the office reserved for me by the concern that syndicates my newspaper articles. I never accept dinner invitations to private homes. I have no bank account. I give every penny of my earnings to my wife, who signs all checks, arranges contracts and all other business affairs. I have no idea what I am worth, if anything, save a lot in Texas and a home in New York, which I bought and immediately gave to her.

"My shirts, suits, hosiery and neckties are especially noisy. I wear white linen spats winter and summer and invariably carry a cane. I usually dine in a different restaurant every evening. I work in my pajamas all day and never dress before five in the evening. I like people but haven't more than a half dozen intimates. I love my home town but have not been there in twenty years. I spend seven months of the year in New York and the rest of the time in Europe and California.

University Press Praised In Kansas

In an editorial appearing in the Daily Kansan, published by the University of Kansas, mention is made of the University of North Carolina press.

The editorial began by making the statement that valuable work all over the country is being done by university book presses in printing scholarly and accurate treatises on research work done by students in various fields. Continuing, it ranked the University of North Carolina book press with that of Yale and of Oxford universities.

It was the hope of the writer of the editorial that the University of Kansas install a book press similar to the ones mentioned.

Coates Discusses State Criminal Law

Professor Albert Coates, of the law school, was the speaker of the evening at the meeting of the Lions Club in Greensboro Wednesday night.

He spoke on the evolution of punishments and the increasing of judicial discretion in the administration of criminal law in North Carolina. The cruelties of the old penal system were brought out. The lopping of ears, the chopping off of hands, and the tortures of ancient law administration were contrasted with the present day conditions. Today the inflicting of bodily punishment is not allowed. In England there used to be over 300 crimes punishable by death, while now only four crimes receive the death sentence.

In the remainder of his speech, professor Coates attempted to point out the path of progress in criminal law in the State.

TWO GIRLS INJURED IN AUTO CRASH WEDNESDAY

Two girls were injured, one seriously, when automobiles driven by John Kennedy and George Alston, colored, collided at the intersection of Franklin and Columbia streets, Wednesday night.

Kennedy's car was demolished while Alston's was slightly damaged. Alston was taken into custody by local police and later released on $100 bond. The case will be tried in recorders court Saturday morning.

LOCAL Y IS HOST TO CLEMSON MEN

Fifteen members of the "Y" cabinet of Clemson College are making a trip to this University, Duke, and State this week-end which will be in the nature of a fall retreat. They will arrive here tonight at eight o'clock and will be received by members of the local cabinet.

Personal interviews will constitute the only means of exchanging ideas of cabinet program work, since the regular meeting of the "Y" falls on a later date. After a tour about the campus Saturday morning, the visiting group will go to Duke university and later in the day to State. The local cabinet has received an invitation to return this visit, and may do so later on in the year if possible.

HARLAND LEAVES ON LECTURE TOUR

Special to the Daily Tar Heel

Lynchburg, Virginia, November 14.—Dr. J. P. Harland, professor of archaeology in the University of North Carolina, delivered an address here at Randolph-Macon College on "Excavating Prehistoric Sites in Greece" last night. Dr. Harland explained the methods used by the various archaeologists who have made important discoveries from this period, and described some of the contributions which these people have left to classic art.

The prehistoric era in Greece dates from 2000 to 1100 B. C., and is noted for the bronze statues, reliefs and tablets, which have been found.

This address was the first of two which Dr. Harland is making on this trip. He will speak tonight at the University of Richmond on "Prehistoric Greece."

Under the auspices of the department of classics of the University of North Carolina and the Archaeological Institute of America, Dr. Harland makes several lecture tours each year, usually making an extensive trip into the northern states during the spring term.

Oglethorpe Book Of Verse Scheduled

The Oglethorpe Book of Georgia Verse, which is being published by the Oglethorpe University Press, will be ready for circulation by the end of this month, it was reported by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, editor of the new book.

This book is claimed to be the only anthology of the poetry of a state ever to be attempted on so comprehensive a scale. Selections from the entire field of Georgia poetry, from the days of the Wesleys down to the contemporary group of poets, are included in the volume.

Most outstanding members of the contemporary group of the Georgia poets are Conrad Aiken, formerly of Savannah, who won the recent Pulitzer prize awarded for the best volume of poems published in a current year. Many other such notable poets are contributors to the book.

Lutherans to Hear Professor

The Reverend W. H. Greever, D. D., professor of religion and ethics at the Lutheran Theological Southern Seminary, Columbia, South Carolina, will speak to the Lutheran student association at the eleven o'clock service Sunday, November 16th, in Gerrard hall.

Student Union President Describes Activities at the University Over WPTF.

In a talk given Wednesday afternoon over station WPTF in Raleigh, Red Greene, president of the student union said that "there is always a question in the minds of the people of the state, especially in the minds of those contemplating entering college, as to just what various activities college students engage in while they are not pursuing their studies.

"It has been the general practice at North Carolina University to give the students there a great deal of freedom in their efforts to organize and administer the work of their varied organizations. Enjoying and profiting by this freedom, our students have developed their extracurricular organizations over a wide field of activities."

Greene then dealt briefly with each of the student organizations here, showing how conduct and discipline are regulated by the student government; the moral and spiritual side of college life by the churches and Y. M. C. A.; the social side by the German Club and fraternities; and the physical side by intercollegiate and intra-mural athletics. He also spoke about the purposes and benefits of the various publications, the Carolina Playmakers, the band and glee club, the Student Entertainment Committee, the Di, Phi, and debate council, the self-help bureau, and the alumni association. As he discussed each organization, Greene named a number of well-known men who

ORGANIZATION OF COLLEGE SPORTS EDITORS PLANNED

Daily Tar Heel Sport Staff to Be Host to Southern Conference Writers in December.

The sports editor of the Daily Tar Heel has made plans for the organization of a sports press association among the sports writers of the conference colleges. This organization meeting is scheduled for December 13 when the Southern Conference officials come to the University.

The idea was suggested by Vernon Rooke, sports editor of the University of Kentucky newspaper and the sports editors of the other college papers have heartily accepted this suggestion. They have been making plans since. Only one meeting is necessary, they think, to organize. This session will convene on the morning of the 13th in the offices of the Daily Tar Heel.

The advantages of such a press association would be to exchange news between the colleges and obtain news and art concerning opposing teams in the conference. A central bureau will be established, if the group decides that there is sufficient news to justify such. The editors will find it useful perhaps to make selections of the all-southern teams.

Several of the fraternities on the campus have consented to house the guest editors while they are here.

The Myth of Free Speech

Once more the myth of free speech has been exploded in the minds of those naive Americans who believe that a man may freely express his opinions without fear of harm. Abernethy, a student at State College, merely wrote his thoughts on one aspect of State life—cheating—and for this expression of his sentiment which was guaranteed him by the Constitution of the United States, the student council has recommended that he be suspended from the university for two years!

This action does not surprise us. We have long ago learned that freedom of speech is a fable told to high school children; a fable which they laugh at when they outgrow their juvenile credulity. As they grow older, they realize more and more that a man can say only what does not displease or anger the man above him. That is, he can say very little.

Genuine freedom of speech has never existed in this country. The early American who said he did not want to go to church was severely punished. The late American who in 1917 said he did not believe in war and refused to fight, was as harshly treated. And a teacher in Tennessee who told his pupils that Adam and Eve were only a fiction of the mind was saved from incarceration only through the intervention of one of our greatest lawyers. Countless other similar cases are on record to show the tenuousness and hypocrisy of the phrase "freedom of speech."

We are beginning to despair that the time will ever come when a man will be allowed to say what he wishes; even if he does tell the truth.—P. L.

Still The Abernethy Case?

For the past few days this Abernethy question at State College has been a front page issue in a big majority of the state papers. Practically every newspaper of any size in the state has run at least three or more editorials as well as several lengthy stories concerning this affair, which to our mind has been given entirely too much publicity for its actual importance.

Student councils in universities and colleges all over the country are faced with the problem of suspending students at almost every one of their meetings. The majority of these suspensions, however, are made and the outside world is none the wiser of the actions.

But, here a case comes up where a student has nerve enough to say and publish what he thinks to be a true state of affairs. He sees something which he does not think is right, and he has the courage to tell others of his decision. Such a case is so rare that the entire state news world goes wild over the matter.

Have we fallen to such a low level that when a man states an opinion of his own, it is worthy of extended publicity? Is the fact that one man will stand up for his convictions important enough to give front page newspaper space to, it? Are there not others who have opinions of their own 365 days in the year, but who have tact enough to hold some of them to themselves? Why then has this trifling matter been so widely broadcast?

To the writer's mind each paper that publishes any news story on the matter is lowering its standard. It is confessing to the world that it thinks that when a man expresses his opinion, then he should be made known to the public. If such men are so rare that their names should be published in the papers, then surely, this present age is treading the downward path.—C. G. R., Jr.

A Happy Solution

Some fortunate things result from accidents, but some, so unfortunate, can grow out of nothing less than divine inspiration. The solution to the problem of what in heaven's name to do with Sunday afternoons must have come only from pure inspiration on somebody's part. And that somebody deserves the undying thanks of this student body.

There was a time when students could meditate for hours on Things in General, and Things in General is a rather large category. They asked nothing better than to spend an afternoon answering the question "Is the chair really there?", and yet never answering the question. But they had a glorious time, no negative pleasure at all. But we may as well accept the fact that the world can't amuse itself any longer, and we may as well accept the fact that there is no sense in deploring the situation.

Sunday motion-pictures dispose of an afternoon that otherwise would leave students wandering about looking like Kipling's Tomlinson when nobody would have him. A few generations of law-abiding forebears give us an hereditary holy horror of breaking the law—as a rule. But we are wholeheartedly in favor of Sunday pictures. The fact that they can be best held as benefit performances is very happy. Two birds . . .—V. A. D.

OPEN FORUM

AGAIN—V. A. D.

Why all this hullabaloo about the glories of war? It is too obvious to argue about. Of course war is a glorious thing; and the most glorious thing one can do is die for his country.

What can be more noble than to say: "My country right or wrong, she can count on me for cannon fodder?" What is more magnificent than to lie in a lousy and filthy trench on an empty belly with a .300 Springfield in your hands and try to kill some one you have never seen and never will see? What would be more admirable than to go over the top and with the butt of your gun smash in the face of some dirty "Heinie" who eats babies and deflowers virtuous maidens—at least according to government and newspaper reports? And finally what, oh what could be more glorious than to die a soldier's death—a death that came only after hours of agony and torture: a death that you prayed would come quickly after that piece of shrapnel entered your abdomen and let your guts seep out through the hole in your clothes?

V. A. D. is absolutely right. War is "rather glorious." Let us always have war. And let all pacifists be thrown into jail. Let them rot there.

At all costs, we must have war.

Oh boy, I'm beginning to feel like a real scandal sheet writer. I have had my first request to withhold some news because it might darken some poor unfortunate's reputation. As it is, I already feel a weakening of the knees when the dark night creeps on and finds me away from the security of my little room.

According to reports, Lawyer Jim was very instrumental in preventing a turkey trot done by several of the boys from becoming a goose step. If the culprits had only waited until Thanksgiving to do their "doity woik," think of the plea which Jim would have been able to make to the jury.

Rumor hath it that "Bootie" Uzzell adopted the slogan of "Pin Penn or pop," before the Georgia Tech game.

Two, boys, whom I know only by reputation, of course, spent the better part of a night not long ago helping each other to their respective rooms. When the visiting boy would decide that it was time to go home, the host would conclude that it would be best to see that he reached his destination safely. Once there, a short rest, et cetera, was necessary before the escort could return. When the visiting boy would decide—. The morning sun found them still helping each other home.

Now that the Chapel Hill barbers have reduced the price of haircuts, there is really very little excuse left for being a literate.

So the girls have taken up archery. Evidently the poor dears have come to the conclusion that their little friend Dan Cupid has either become a mighty poor shot or else has deserted his job completely.

One of our modern Eves was heard to lament the fact that she had to be in Chapel Hill last week-end when there were literally hundreds of West Point Cadets in New York. "Butler, butler, my sporting (pardon)—my military uniform, please."

The Daily Tar Heel informs us that there have been no fires in Chapel Hill during November. Are we really supposed to believe that all the fraternities are satisfied with their houses?

The publication further headlines "Six Births, Five Deaths in October." The sixth shot-gun apparently wasn't loaded.

Kate Graham, of "talkie" fame, and her "rambling wreck" have quite a job acting as the Pi Phi taxi between classes and Patterson's at chapel period.

Which reminds me that I walked into the Pi Phi house Sunday afternoon and found Russell Williams and Jim Lynch (no relation of Steve's) sound asleep on the davenports. Naughty, naughty, boys, you shouldn't go to sleep in sorority houses.

ALDERMAN MOVE TO RELIEVE POOR SITUATION HERE

In addition to discussing the unemployment situation the board voted to install a culvert, or storm sewer, on West Rosemary Street; they also voted to purchase a Ford truck to be used in carrying gravel when the streets need repairing, and further to collect garbage and leaves.

Three luminous "stop signs" have been ordered which are to be placed at important street intersections. One of these signs will be placed at the corner in front of the Carolina Inn; the second one will be put at the corner on which the post office is situated; and the third one will be installed on the corner in front of Spencer hall. These signs strictly speaking are not luminous; glass beads probably one half-inch in diameter are set in the metal so as to form the word stop, when the headlights of an automobile shine on these beads the reflection seems to illuminate the word.

Franklin and Columbia streets are to be made through streets, that is, before a car turns into either of these streets it must first come to a full stop. This ordinance will be put in effect December 1 and will be rigidly enforced. The speed limit on Franklin and Columbia streets has been increased from twenty to thirty miles per hour. The speed limit will remain the same, however, on Franklin Street from the post office to the high school and on Columbia Street from the Carolina Inn to the fire station.

Student Artist Club To Meet

The recently organized Students Artist Club will meet for the first time in its own quarters in Person hall at 4:30 p. m., Tuesday, November 18. These quarters have been fitted up and furnished by the University under the general direction of W. M. Steen and E. H. Gibson.

Tentative plans of the club, which may be changed later, are that members will pay a small quarterly fee, for which they will have the privilege of use of the studio four afternoons a week, with instruction from Gibson. Steen, who is a resident portrait painter residing in Chapel Hill, will criticise the work once a week.

High School Earns Money for Red Cross

The recent drive of the junior Red Cross council in the Chapel Hill grade school yielded $17. The contributions were made from funds actually earned by the pupils. The second grade was the first whose members all gave to the movement. The junior council is composed of one student from each room.

Greene concluded by saying that "we are particularly anxious to be of some service to the high school students in their activities which form a fundamental foundation for a successful college career."

This was the first of a series of talks which will be broadcast every Wednesday afternoon at 5:15 over station WPTF by leaders in the various phases of campus life. Ed Hamer, president of the Y. M. C. A. will be the speaker next week.

Thirty-Six Tar Heels Entrain For Davidson Clash This Afternoon

Light Workout on Kenan Field Is Finishing Touch To Week's Practice.

SCRIMMAGE THURSDAY

Reserves With Davidson Plays Have Hard Time Penetrating Varsity Line.

After going through a light workout this afternoon at the stadium at running back kick-offs and rehearsing signals, thirty-six Tar Heels will leave for Durham to entrain for Davidson at 4:30 o'clock. At the close of practice yesterday, Coach Collins announced the names of those making the trip.

They are as follows: Walker, Brown, Bridgers, Tabb, Alexander, Nichols, Davis, and Parsley, ends; Thompson, Hodges, Crew, Cowper, Underwood, and McDade, tackles; Fysal, Newcombe, Dunavant, Philpott, Blackwood and McIver, guards; Lipscomb, Gilbreath and Allen, centers; Wyrick, Branch and Moore, quarterbacks; Magner, Maus, Chandler, Nash, Slusser and Erickson, halfbacks; and Houston, House, McNeil and McCaskill, fullbacks.

The final stiff workout before the game at the stadium yesterday was taken up with a long scrimmage session in which practically every man on the squad saw action.

The first team was pitted against an eleven of "iron men" in a scrimmage on offense during the early part of the afternoon, but later played defensively against the reserves' interpretation of Davidson's formations.

In the offensive scrimmage the first team gained spasmodically, but at the end of the session were clicking together. The reserves found it very difficult to gain against the varsity while running Davidson plays, being thrown for losses frequently and making only slight gains when they were successful in advancing the ball.

The second and third teams followed the first eleven in the scrimmage against the "iron men." The second line succeeded in stopping the reserves with a degree of consistency, but the third team guards and tackles allowed the substitute backs to sift through for several nice gains.

The field was soggy as a result of the rains, and the ball was rather hard to handle, but the backs succeeded in holding it very well. The whole scrimmage was concentrated on defense of line plays, pass defense having taken up a greater part of the afternoon Wednesday.

GODWIN WINS ON JUDGES' DECISION

Bobby Godwin of Daytona Beach, Florida again won a decision over Jake Denning, former lightheavyweight champion of the Navy, at the Banner Warehouse in Durham Tuesday night. Denning led the fight throughout the early rounds, but Godwin came back with a barrage of short lefts and rights to the head and was an easy winner. Coach Crayton Rowe of Carolina refereed the bout while Coaches Collins and Cerney acted as judges. In the semi-final "Battling" Baldwin put on a last minute spurt to take the decision from "Bill" Parrish of Durham.

Robert McNamara, New York University, starred in his team's 20 to 7 victory over Carnegie Tech, making a 42-yard touchdown run and kicking one punt 70 yards.

Davidson Guard

THAD BROCK - GUARD

Thad Brock, guard, of Davidson's team, is probably one of the best-known members of the Wildcat squad, his 102 yard run against Duke last Thanksgiving and nation-wide publicity in ing largely responsible. He was all-state end last fall but a weakness at guard led to his shifting to that position, where he has played a stellar game all year. But his worth is not limited to his line play. He comes back to do most of Davidson's punting and some of the passing. Last year he had the honor of captaining the team as a junior, the first time that such an honor has been accorded to anyone except a senior at Davidson. He, with Captain Fraley, is a product of Barium Springs.

CLASS 'B' TEAMS IN SEMI-FINALS

Five Games Scheduled for Western and Eastern Class "A" High School Conference.

Statesville will oppose Asheboro at Asheboro Friday while Mount Airy will meet Reidsville at Winston-Salem in class "B" western.

In the eastern class "B" conference Lumberton will clash with Apex at Fayetteville today while Elizabeth City is slated to play Henderson at the former.

Salisbury, in class "A" western conference will oppose Asheville at Asheville today. Winston-Salem and Charlotte are to play at the Queen City also today. High Point will meet Gastonia at Gastonia.

There are to be only two games in class "A" conference of the east: Goldsboro will play Raleigh at the capital while Fayetteville and Wilson will play at Wilson.

SOUTH LEADS IN INTERSECTIONAL GRID VICTORIES

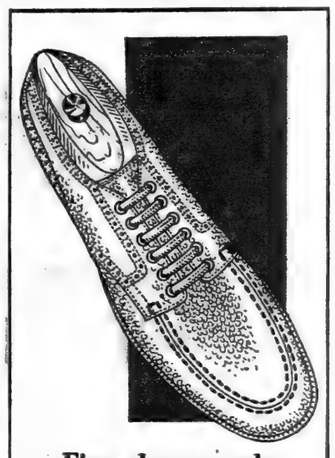
Dixie Teams Have Won 14 Games and Lost 11; East and Far West Trail.

New York, November 12.—With 14 victories and 11 defeats for an average of .560, the south is leading all rivals in the success of its college football teams in intersectional conflict, a tabulation of results so far indicated today.

The east is second with .543, the far west third with .500 and the middle west fourth with .462. The southwest trails with .200, having tackled some of the middle west's strongest teams.

In actual number of intersectional victories won, the east leads with 25, only one game ahead of the middle west which gained appreciably in the last week's play.

Mid-West Picks Up



The private argument between the east and middlewest found the latter section forging ahead by winning five of its last nine games with eastern rivals for a total of 17 victories to 16. Most of the more important games have gone to the mid-west forces. The south, on the other hand, has proved a persistent jinx for the middle west, winning nine games and losing only two.

The far west tangles with the east for the first time this season Saturday when St. Mary's of California plays Fordham here. The southwest will have a chance to fatten its average at the east's expense the same day as Southern Methodist encounters the Navy.

More This Week

Other intersectional conflicts this week are Ohio State-Pittsburgh, Iowa-Penn State, Pennsylvania-Georgia Tech, Loyola of Chicago vs. Boston College, Army-Kentucky Wesleyan and Villanova-Oglethorpe.

After completing their tough schedule of ten games Idaho Vandals will journey to the Hawaiian Islands, where they will play the University of Hawaii, and the Honolulu All-Stars, during the Christmas Holidays.

RIVAL WILDCAT FULLBACKS

DON McQUEEN - FULLBACK TOM BROHARD - FULLBACK

Two hard-hitting Wildcat fullbacks, Don McQueen and Tom Brohard, will be on Coach Younger's leash Saturday afternoon when Davidson clashes with Carolina. Don McQueen, playing his second year on the varsity squad has hit his stride recently and was one of Davidson's chief threats in the Wofford game last Saturday. McQueen plays a good defensive game, and tips the scales at 175 pounds. Tom Brohard completed his academic course last year, but returned to Davidson to take a post graduate course in football and become the fourth member of Davidson's four lettermen backfield. He and McQueen have waged a nice battle all season for the starting fullback berth and first one, then the other has drawn the assignment.

Carolina Game Will Be "Unofficial Home-Coming"

Davidson, N. C., Nov. 13.—Davidson College has had her official Home-Coming this fall, but the Carolina-Davidson annual clash here Saturday will be an unofficial Home-Coming for former students of the Presbyterian institution. This statement is based on past experience, for alumni of Davidson will return to see their Red and Black warriors play the Tar Heels.

COLLINS THINKS STATE, DAVIDSON TOUGH BARRIERS

Carolina Mentor Outlines Grid Strategies In Radio Sports Revue.

The B. C. Sports Revue went on the air from Raleigh at its customary time last Wednesday night. Acting as principal speaker, Chuck Collins began his talk on football in the state with the remark that both Carolina and Duke were going to have a difficult time hurdling the barriers of Davidson and State tomorrow. Chuck says that the Wildcats and Wolfpack are going to try everything in their bags of tricks to upset the dope and whip their stronger foes.

With no other speakers on the program beside himself Collins went into detail about the strategy of defensive formations in footballdom. The ends came in first for discussion, as Collins outlined what a "smashing" end, a "square" end, and a "cautious" end were, and what their actions should be on defense.

A smashing, crashing, swift-moving tackle is the kind of tackle which goes places, and does things, avers the Carolina coach. The day of the slow-moving tackle is past, he says. As in former times, the guards would lower their heads, remain-

Football Now Taught By Talking Pictures; 1000 Coaches Aid In Work of Making First Film

Screen Innovation Reduces Game to Simplest Terms to Help High Schools

Football is now being taught by talking motion pictures. A film has just been produced which reduces the game to its simplest terms and brings out the fine points so that they can be followed in detail by ambitious squads. The picture is designed especially for high school teams. Coaches are finding that the nation's junior gridiron players take readily to the example set in the film by college stars. They are adding the talking picture method of instruction to their regular program.

Many of the country's leading football authorities cooperated in developing this first piece of combined visual and vocal instruction. The film was made under the direction of Lud Wray of the University of Pennsylvania coaching force in conjunction with talking picture experts of Electrical Research Products Company, producer of the film. Members of Wray's U. of P. team are the actors who demonstrate the "how's" of football in the picture.

Prepared by Experts

More than 1,000 high school and college coaches contributed their ideas to the script used. The action was first outlined by a small group. This consisted of W. L. Hughes, now of Columbia University and formerly head coach at Oberlin and De Pauw; Lou Little, head coach at Columbia and W. A. Alexander, head coach at Georgia.

Others who worked with them were E. K. Hall, chairman of the Football Rules Committee; "Biff" Jones, former Army coach; H. E. von Kersburg, and W. G. Crowell, both prominent officials. The script was then reviewed by coaches throughout the country and revised according to their suggestions before being finally accepted.

Special Camera Work Used

The latest methods in modern photography were used. L. G. Phelps, who has been photographing sports events for years, superintended the camera work. He resorted to such devices as slow motion, telephoto lens and close-ups to obtain unusual clarity of motion and detail.

All the fundamentals of the game are covered. Ball handling, kicking, blocking, tackling, position play and correct observance of the football code are brought out. Under the head of ball handling alone a variety of action is presented. Center passing, quarterback passing, forward passing, receiving passes and punts, carrying the ball, recovering fumbles and falling on the ball are shown.

Other Features Filmed

The student sees the correct way to get off a punt, how to place kick, how to block, how to tackle head on, from the side and from the rear or in the flying tackle.

The University of Pennsylvania men illustrate position play both from the defensive and offensive angle. They are shown in the proper method of interference, different ways of running with the ball, side-step, cross-step, pivot, reverse and change of pace.

Gives Lecture

The lecture accompanying the film was recorded by means of the Western Electric sound system and is carefully worded to draw special attention to the subtle points in the action. In football circles the film is coming to be called "the living textbook of the game."

Schools with small coaching staffs are finding particular use for talking picture instruction. Coaches are saving time on elementary work and are able to get into more intricate football earlier in the season.

Advanced Subjects Coming

The success of this method of instruction has already led to plans for similar films on more advanced situations in the game. The Electrical Research Products Company is preparing reels on outstanding systems of attack and defense.

Teaching by talking pictures is expected to find its application in other branches of sport. Films on basketball and track are now being produced.

ing stationary to stop plays at the line of scrimmage. In this advanced football age, a guard must be wide-awake, alert, keep his "chin in the air" and break through the line and smear the enemy's plays. Strange as it may seem, the Coach said, reformed fullbacks make the best guards. Especially when the fullback is a little slow in his line plunges, does he make an excellent guard, because of the fact that he is more in the heart of things on the line where he can take sharper notice. A defensive center must be sturdy, tall, exceedingly fast, and an adept tackler, mixed in with a considerable amount of horse sense, according to Collins.

The three kinds of backfield defenses were next explained by the Carolina mentor; i. e., man for man, zone, part zone, part man for man. The first kind is not used much, while the second type predominates in most up-to-date football teams. The third type mentioned above, formerly popular, has gradually given way to the "zone" protective form, which is much more scientific in the minds of pigskin experts.

Each Wednesday evening the barbers of Chapel Hill gather around their radios, and listen to Chuck. These tonsorial men-about-town carry on "right much foolishness" with Collins when he comes into their shop for a haircut, or shoe shine, and of course the barbers tell him how to run the team. "Hoss" Lloyd, especially is the most expert in extracting bits of "info" from Knute Rockne's protege, and to even things up a bit, Collins has to retaliate over the radio in humorous terms about who the barbers are going to start at halfback or fullback for Carolina.

Coach Collins answered a few more questions after running the "Hill" barbers into the ground. The questions were: What was the longest place kick during last year? Who were the men who scored for the U. N. C. reserves against the State reserves? (Somehow, the men who made the touchdowns against State were not recognized by the fans.) Who was the first man to write a book on football? And is it true that Carolina has been negotiating with Duke to cancel their game of December 6?

The answers were: The longest place kick of last year was for 47 yards, and was performed by the Lafayette team. The men who scored for Carolina in the reserves' game between U. N. C. and State were Alexander and Chrome. The first man to write a book on football was Parke H. Davis, who was instrumental in having the 110 yard gridiron reduced to an even hundred yards.

SCRIMMAGING IN RAIN IS PROGRAM FOR TAR BABIES

Coach Farris Puts Second and Third Strings Through Mud Workout.

A soggy field did not hinder the Tar Babies from taking a long, hard workout yesterday. Coach Farris was in charge and he let all those men who had taken part in the Duke game off with a light practice. They each took two laps around the field and then retired to the showers. They will return tomorrow for a strenuous afternoon.

The rest of the squad had a big time. Two teams were picked and a real scrimmage was held. After two plays every man on the field was covered with mud beyond recognition. Coach Farris had them keep at this scrimmage for an hour, and some real fighting was seen. The mud and discomfiture of play was forgotten.

One team included: Harrington and Rankin, ends; Tatum and Hamer, tackles; Kahn, center. In the backfield there were: Moffet, Rose, McGill, and Anacaustos. This team was the victor, scoring eight points while holding the opposition to nothing. For this team the offensive play of Anacaustos was outstanding. He got away for several nice gains. Moffet and McGill, two of his running mates also played well. McGill starred on the defense, while Moffet, diminitive quarterback ran very well as an interferer. In the line Tatum, Matheson, and Kahn, a reformed back, stood out.

For the defending team the work of Breck, another small back was of the first order.

MAGAZINE'S LEAD ARTICLE WILL BE ADVENTURE TALE

Editor Announces New Rule About Staff Members Not Contributing.

The fourth regular issue of the Carolina Magazine makes its appearance tomorrow morning. Contained in it are the writings of several first-time contributors. In point of format, this number is somewhat different from that of the three preceding ones. One poem and the beginnings of three articles make up the front page.

Evoe, the lead article, is a stirring story appearing under the name of Mary Carr Newby. Jess Slaughter, a former student of the University, makes his bow to the Magazine readers in Close Communion, a tale. In Chloe, George Martin Fieldman has recorded a typical collegiate experience. Philip Liskin states his own personal views as to the aged conflict between mind and matter in Mind Over Matter. Bob Barnett contributes his second work, a play which he has chosen to name Satan Smiles. S. S. Rosenblum displays his wares in two articles—information for which was supplied by his own experience.

Poetry for the number was written by James Dawson, Vernon Crook, Stanley Stevens, Evelyn Terry, and Hamp Maxwell. Book reviews by Beatty Rector, Ralph Westerman, Nathan Shadebrush, and Japheth Album, conclude the number.

Editor Williams states that the following ruling will go into effect immediately: staff members failing to contribute to two successive issues will be dropped from the staff.

DE MOLAY ORDER ORGANIZES HERE

Second Meeting Presided Over By Bill Spradlin Draws Thirty.

Thirty members of the newly-organized DeMolay order met in their second meeting of the year Thursday night in the lobby of the Y. M. C. A. building. The object of this meeting was to acquaint all of the prospective members with the purpose of the group.

Bill Spradlin, temporary chairman, stated that the Order of DeMolay was not a junior Masonry, as has been generally believed on the campus. "It is," the chairman stated, "the same type of organization as the old and well-established Masonic Order, and is an international organization for young men of the ages from sixteen to twenty-one."

According to reports there are quite a few old members of the organization who have not yet affiliated themselves with the new group, and it is the request of the club that these men renew their membership. Harry Gump, master councilor for the state of North Carolina, and Allen S. O'Neal, state deputy, have both given the new organization their entire support, and highly recommend it to the campus. Membership is not secured chiefly by petition, but it is said that recommendation as well plays a large part in accepting new members.

All who desire further information on the matter are asked to see Harry Gump.

Didn't Know It

Baton Rouge, Louisiana, November 14.—Barefooted as he stood in United States district court here, John Schexnayder, 82 year-old backwoodsman, told Judge Wayne G. Borah yesterday he had been making whiskey for 50 years and had never heard of the prohibition law.

Schexnayder, who speaks only French, pleaded guilty through an interpreter to a charge of manufacturing intoxicating liquors. Judge Borah placed him on probation for five years.

Among other things, the backwoodsman said he had not been told the War Between the States had ended.

MATH JOURNALS PUBLISH PAPERS BY CAROLINIANS

University Professors and Instructors Expound Ideas for National Departmental Press.

Several interesting and important articles by members of the mathematics staff have appeared recently or will soon appear in national mathematical journals.

The first paper to appear this year was contributed by L. E. Bush, instructor in mathematics at the University, now on leave at the Ohio State University to pursue work leading to a Ph. D. degree. This paper, entitled "On The Expression of An Integer As The Sum of An Arithmetic Series," appeared in the American Mathematical Monthly for August. It is concerned with the number of distinct ways in which an integer can be expressed as the sum of an arithmetic series of integers. It is a generalization of a paper which was written earlier by Mason, in which he considered the number of ways in which an integer can be expressed as the sum of consecutive integers.

Dr. E. T. Browne, associate professor of mathematics, contributed an article on "The Separation Property of The Roots of The Secular Equation" to the October issue of the American Journal of Mathematics. The secular equation was first used by LaPlace in 1782 in determining the secular inequalities of the planets. It is one of the most important equations in mathematical analysis. In the October issue of the bulletin of the American Mathematical Society, Professor Browne also had a paper entitled "The Characteristic Roots of A Matrix." By a very simple method this paper gives an upper limit to the characteristic roots of the general algebraic matrix—a limit much more restricted than any given heretofore.

In an early issue of the American Mathematical Monthly will appear an article on "Vieta's Transformation of The Cubic," written by Doctors Archibald Henderson and A. W. Hobbs, in collaboration. This paper will give a geometric interpretation of Vieta's transformation of the cubic, a transformation by means of which Vieta reduced the solution of all cubics to the solution of one particular type.

BRADSHAW TAKES CHARGE IN CHAPEL

Dean Warns Sophomores To Begin in Selecting Majors and Minors.

At sophomore chapel yesterday morning, Dean F. F. Bradshaw pointed out to the group two problems upon which they will have to make a decision between now and the end of the year.

Dean Bradshaw began his remarks with a warning to the class against procrastination when the two problems were concerned and urged that every sophomore consider these questions immediately.

The first question discussed was the fact that a number of men would find it difficult in arranging to come back to the University because of finances. "The thing to do now, Dean Bradshaw said, "is not to become discouraged, but to talk difficulties over with your respective deans, or with officials who are always more than willing to offer any advice which they may have, and then to come to a decision." He then mentioned that loans and self-help work is always open to those who apply early enough.

The second problem Dean Bradshaw discussed was one every sophomore must face before the end of the year, that of finding a subject which will be his major for graduation.

The speaker advised that a subject in the curriculum arousing the student's keenest interest and enthusiasm should be chosen as a major and an allied subject as a minor. He also advised that the subject should not be chosen because it appeared to be easy, but because it appealed most to the curiosity of the student.

State Forester To Lecture Tomorrow

J. S. Holmes, state forester and member of the committee created by the North Carolina Social Service Conference to study the question of highway beautification, will give a free illustrated lecture on this topic Sunday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock in the Carolina Theatre. This lecture is illustrated with slides, and a motion picture entitled, "What is Happening to American Landscapes." Photographs taken by Mrs. Lawton in her survey last year will also be shown.

Holmes will tell of work done by the state in connection with road beautification, and explain how the community of Chapel Hill may aid in this project. He will stress the two most important improvements to be made, namely, the removal of advertising matter from the roadsides, and the planting of trees. To every one who attends will be given a short questionnaire to be filled out before the finish of the lecture and left with the speaker.

Episcopal Guild Hostesses at Tea

Saint Hilda's Guild of the Episcopal Church will act as hostess for a tea to be given in the parish house Sunday afternoon, November 16, from 4:30 to 6:00 p. m. Miss Alma Holland and Miss Elisabeth Roome will pour tea. The following girls will serve: Jocelyn Whedbee, Lucy Fletcher, Elizabeth Webb, Eleanora Hunt, Josephine Parker, Florence Yancey, Martha Norburn, and Myra Lynch.

UNIVERSITY HEADS CLOSE SESSIONS

Association of Governing Boards Of State Universities Will Meet for Last Time Here This Morning.

With the Carolina Inn as headquarters, the Association of Governing Boards of State Universities and Allied Institutions has been in progress for the past two days under the management of R. M. Grumman, director of the University of North Carolina extension division.

The delegates arrived in Chapel Hill for a one o'clock luncheon at the Inn Thursday, after having inspected Duke University that morning. Their first meeting was at three o'clock Thursday at which time R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, substituted for President Graham in giving the welcome address. The Carolina Playmakers entertained with a guest performance Thursday evening at 8:30.

David E. Ross of Lafayette, Indiana, is president of the association. Regular sessions took place from 9:00 to 2:00 o'clock yesterday and at 4:00 o'clock they were conducted on a tour of inspection of the University of North Carolina plant. A complimentary dinner was given last night at the Inn, with the Board of North Carolina University trustees as honor guests. The last session was at 9:00 this morning. The delegates will probably leave early today.

Besides the various reports, addresses were made on the following subjects: "Has a State University a Greater Responsibility to Its Own State Than to the Nation?"; "Uniformity in Educational Financial Reports"; "The Administration of Fiscal Control of State Universities and Colleges"; "Readjustments in University Finances"; "The Co-ordination of State Educational Institutions"; and "Co-operative Discipline."

ENGINEERS HEAR OF LONGEST SPAN

At the meeting of the William Cain civil engineering society last night at 7:30 o'clock in Phillips hall the members saw the motion picture on "Hydro-Electric Power Production in the New South." This picture showed some of the work that is being done to harness the water power in the south and utilize it in the form of electrical power.

Thomas M. Riddick, Jr., a senior in the engineering school, gave an interesting talk on "The Constructing of the Hart Memorial Bridge." In his talk he described the method of constructing this gigantic structure. The bridge is one and a half miles long spanning the Chowan River near Edenton, N. C. It was built in 1926 by the Sanford and Brook Corporation of Baltimore, Md., at a cost of $700,000, and is said to be the longest in the state of its particular type. Riddick described it as being constructed of a pre-cast concrete piling substructure and a creosoted timber superstructure.

The meeting was well attended.

Sigma Xi Meeting Tuesday

The botany department will have charge of the meeting of the Sigma Xi next Tuesday night. Dr. W. C. Coker will continue his talk on "Some Early American Naturalists."

Dean McCormick, head of the law school, has been taken into honorary membership in the Dialectic Senate. McCormick has been connected with the University for the last five years.

UNIVERSITY WILL MEET CAMBRIDGE DEBATERS HERE

Murrow Completes Arrangements for Clash Here on December 13.

The debate team from the University of Cambridge, England will engage the Carolina debaters here December 13 on the question, Resolved: That the emergence of women from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life.

This meet was originally scheduled for December 15, but the Britishers found it necessary to sail for home on that date so cancelled the engagement. Whereupon, President Murrow of the N. S. F. A. which manages debate tours for foreign teams, cabled them either to fill their engagement with Carolina or not to come to this country at all. The new date, December 13, was agreed upon after much correspondence via cable and wire between Mr. George McKie, chairman of the debate council, the N. S. F. A., and Cambridge.

Debates with British teams in the past have drawn the largest crowds to attend forensic meets on the Hill. The question this year, according to the debate council, was selected to give the British humor full sway.

Louisiana Student Guilty of Libel

Baton Rouge, Louisiana, November 14.—Kemble K. Kennedy Louisiana State University senior law student, was convicted late Wednesday of criminal libel and circulation of obscene matter, in connection with the publication of the "Whangdoodle," a campus scandal sheet.

Kennedy may receive a maximum sentence of one year imprisonment on each four counts. Sentence was deferred until Thursday at the request of defense council.

The "Whangdoodle," containing references to faculty members, students and university officials, created a stir when it appeared on the L. S. U. campus last spring.

Kennedy is a former president of the L. S. U. student body and at the time of his suspension from the university last year upon being indicted by the grand jury, was president of the law school and president of the senior law class.

SAVILLE HONORED WITH PLACE ON FEDERAL BOARD

Will Study Means of Combating Erosion of Shores By Waves and Currents.

The chief Army engineers have appointed Thorndike Saville, professor of Hydraulic Engineering in the University, and chief engineer of the Division of Water Resources and Engineering of the Department of Conservation and Development, as one of the three civilian members of the Federal Beach Erosion Board.

Four of the seven members of this body are army engineers. The civilian members of the board are: General Richard K. King, Massachusetts department of Public Works; Victor Gilineau, New Jersey Board of Commerce and Navigation; and Professor Saville.

It is felt that Professor Saville's appointment is due to his services to this state in initiating the program for investigation of the physical changes on the coast, and his activity in the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association, of which he is a director.

The board will cooperate with various states in studying means of combating the erosion of the shores of coastal and lake waters by waves and currents.

Four years ago the department of Conservation and Development introduced a program of observations and studies of the changes along the coast of North Carolina. The fact that North Carolina is the first Southern state to meet the need for evaluating the various causes that are active in changing her beaches and inlets has drawn considerable attention to the state. The problems regarding the migration of commercial fish, and navigation, as well as improvements along beaches of the state, will be aided by a more thorough knowl-

MANY APPLY FOR CONCERT TICKETS

Music Club Decorates New Building for Initial Concert.

All tickets to the organ programs for Saturday have already been given out, according to Dr. Harold S. Dyer of the music department. Applications for the Sunday performance that are expected today will take the remaining tickets for that day. No more tickets are now available. All in all, twenty-five hundred applications have been received.

The music club, under the direction of Mrs. F. H. Edmister, its president, has decorated the music building with literally miles of smilax. Lights have been installed in the front of the building, and it presents a very festive appearance.

Large numbers of out of town visitors are expected to attend all of the three performances. Applications from other cities have not been confined to the immediate vicinity of Chapel Hill, but have been received from all over the state. Charlotte and Greensboro are sending especially large numbers. Many prominent persons are expected to attend, and it appears that the University will have a gala celebration.

Student Interest In Government

One discovers in the average American student an amazing ignorance of the governments of their states and the United States. The cause of this ignorance may be traced to the interest in the stock market, athletics, dancing and some of the other intellectual arts. The influence of the national government on the stock market or the economic condition of the country is overlooked by the average student. This is because government is a part of the political game which, to many, is rather contemptible. They fail to realize that the national government influences our lives in more ways than enacting legislation.

Next month the British debating team will appear at the University. Although at this time the students are not debating a question of national or international importance those who attend the debates between the University and the British will be treated to the spectacle of hearing students who are informed on almost every phase of national and international affairs. English students are interested in their government and England has profited by this interest in that they have an admirable system of government.

It is difficult to understand the American attitude in regard to government when the American student gentleman so assiduously emulates his British cousin in the matter of dress and custom. Perhaps the American is too interested in copying the British superficial attitude, and too little interested in emulating his intellectual life.

Dr. MacNider's Honor

With the announcement by the New York Academy of Medicine of the award of the annual income of the Gibbs Prize for Research to Dr. William deBeriere MacNider the scientific reputation of the University soars. Many honors have come to various local men in recent years in the sciences and other fields of research, and the Gibbs award is indeed a fitting one to a distinguished scientist.

It would make little difference to the reputation of Dr. MacNider had he not won this prize, for he is known far and wide as one of the world's leading authorities in his particular field. During his long stay as a professor in the University he has worked patiently and diligently in research, and the results of his labor and ability have been that honor after honor has fallen upon him. Dr. MacNider is one of our really outstanding men.

When an award such as the Gibbs Prize comes to the University, it is a sign of progress. We congratulate Dr. MacNider because of the award, and the University because of Dr. MacNider's relationship to it.—B. M.

More About War

Apropos of the current controversy carried on through the medium of the campus news organ over the relative merits and demerits of modern warfare we note with interest the somewhat bold statements of no less a personage than the former President of Davidson College, now President emeritus of Washington and Lee, Dr. H. L. Smith. During the course of an Armistice Day address to the Charlotte Rotary Club he attacked bitterly the "disgraceful and murderous" militarism of the United States, charging that the War Department has even "captured" Davidson College. "Such hypocrisy (as that of the United States) has wrought injury over the entire world," he goes on to say, declaring that this country consistently refuses to join in peace movements, though professing all the while only adoration and love for peace.

Being a "gold star" father, Dr. Smith has no doubt ample reason to dislike war in all its phases. Yet our regard for him is not heightened by such unfounded attacks on our diplomatic record of recent years. An unbiased view of the facts seem to point to a conclusion totally different from that taken by Dr. Smith. Was not President Wilson one of the ablest advocates of peace in modern times? Did not the Washington Disarmament Conference lead the way for wholesale attempts of the last few years to "outlaw" war? Is the outstanding work of such American statesmen as Kellogg, Morrow, Stimson, and others to go for naught? Does Owen D. Young deserve no credit for his famous plan to save Germany from disintegration? Would it not be nearer the truth to say that in the field of international relations and their improvement America, as it does in the majority of other activities, largely directs the course of affairs? We fail to see how the United States, with its pitifully small standing army and navy, and inadequate reserves, could be considered "militaristic" in any sense of the word. Far more danger to our peace and prosperity results from the present condition of unpreparedness.—J. M. L.

A religious analysis of the 7,000 students who attended Cleveland College last year gives the lie to the oft-repeated statement that college students are Godless, according to Dr. A. Caswell Ellis, director of the college.

OPEN FORUM

ANENT "SOUTHERN GENTLEMEN"

Much against their will, seemingly, the Carolina college boys who went to the show Wednesday got a taste of opera. The cat-calls, hisses, and groans of the audience provided an attractive super-orchestral accompaniment to the singing of Grace Moore; I am sure she would enjoy hearing how "Southern gentlemen act among themselves. Perhaps I shouldn't get hot under the collar because a lot of boors robbed me of my forty cents' worth; forty cents isn't much, but to have enjoyment disrupted magnifies the loss greatly. This isn't a plea for a greater esthetic appreciation, that's too much to ask. I merely suggest if you do not enjoy a thing yourself, be decent enough to keep quiet for the benefit of someone else who does.

MOREHEAD BELLS TO BE SITUATED BEHIND LIBRARY

Grounds To Be Made Into Park With Possible Pond and Walks.

Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, has received a letter from John Motley Morehead, University alumnus and minister to Sweden, telling of the progress being made on the memorial bell tower that is to be built here.

The structure will be known as the Morehead-Patterson Memorial Tower, in honor of the donors, the proposed site for the structure being a small knoll south of the Library and just off the highway. When General Morehead was here for the Georgia Tech game he inspected the location and seemed well pleased with it, since it fits well in the proposed extension of the University. While he was here he also discussed the character and installation of the bells, which are to be the same as those in the bell tower at West Point, with Dr. Harold S. Dyer, head of the University music department.

The ground surrounding the bell tower will be converted into a small park, possibly including a small lake or pond, because the sound of bells is improved in passing over water. Shrubbery, grass, and flowers will be planted, and the ground laid out in walks.

SQUAD PREPARES FOR STATE MEET

Mills Says Free Trade Not Economic Question.

"Free trade versus protection cannot be considered an economic question," stated Professor Mills of Sidney University in his address to the debate squad Thursday night, "for we have free trade between the forty-eight states but a wall against Canada which is geographically and economically as much a part of the unit as any state."

Mills' talk was given at the regular meeting of the varsity squad which is now preparing for the dual debate with State College, the local half of which will be in Gerrard hall November 20. The speaker outlined the case for and against free trade, and gave a resume of the lines of attack. Among the surprising statements that Mills made, was that protection is an artificial selection of the industries that will develop, these taking the place of those that nature or environment would normally select to predominate.

"The Poor Are Identical With Us," Princeton Newspaper Says

The following article, which appeared in the Daily Princetonian, gives a sane and optimistic outlook on the present state of business depression:

WEATHER. RAINY

No agency, except war or national disaster, could operate more effectively to level the fortunes and destiny of the American people than the past year's depression in business. The poor are no longer simply with us; they are identical with us. If there are any confidently wealthy people left in America, they are making very little stir about it. And the new poor are being very graceful about their plight.

Even at Princeton, which has been accused of being a hotbed of snobbery, a capital of sybaritic waste, the late urge toward fantastic spending has been definitely checked. The end, we suspect, is not yet. It is possible that week-ends this year will be shorter, nearer Nassau Hall, less gay, and more enjoyable than previously. The proms perhaps will show less of the influence of DeMille. Correcting an anarchronism, intra-mural drinking is expected to be moderated to that casual standard current these three of four years (outside of Hergesheimer's novels) in urban society.

Prospect Street, we are confident, will ultimately get wise to the direction of the wind and cut down on the "fol-de-rol." The alternative of self-inflicted extinction would be lamented even in Reunion Hall.

Student employment is due for a big wallop, we are afraid. With most of their income coming from their fellow-collegians, the Agency boys will be in the position of those fabled islanders who supported themselves by taking in each other's washing. We are heartily sympathetic, but our own fate is on the knees of the gods, too.

The Class of 1934, if they will pardon our once again naming them out in meeting, enters a Princeton which is more wholesome than it has been, one to which general poverty has brought virtue by the simple method of making vice prohibitively expensive. The bears are planning an all-winter raid on Snobbery common. The only things that look good for the long pull are Simplicity common and Democracy preferred.

edge of these forces and their effects.

The new Federal Act states that North Carolina was first to make application for cooperative coastal investigation. This request was made in July with New Jersey recently taking the same action.

The request of the town of Wrightsville Beach—a complete plan for coastal protection works for that resort—was the first application and concrete result of the investigations carried on in the last four years. This work has borne fruit in other states also.

It is considered quite an honor to the University for a member of its faculty to be credited with such an achievement as Professor Saville's.

Crane Will Attend Hoover's Conference

Dr. Harry W. Crane, of the department of psychology, has been appointed by Governor Gardner as a delegate to represent the state of North Carolina at the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection which is to be held in Washington on November 19th to 22nd. The program and formal invitations have been issued by President Hoover.

Y TO MAKE DRIVE FOR RELIEF FUND

The three cabinets of the Y are planning a drive for the Orange county relief fund. Plans are to be worked out at the two following meetings of the cabinets. The cabinets will meet jointly November 24th and discuss plans and details for the drive.

A.B. Freshmen Make Satisfactory Grades

Of the 233 freshmen in the college of liberal arts, there were 136 who checked all courses at the mid-term report time, leaving ninety-seven receiving unsatisfactory grades on one or more subjects. Of the ninety-seven, there were seventeen who did not check a single course.

Worked out on a percentage basis, 58.4 per cent checked all courses, 7.3 per cent checked no courses, and 34.3 per cent checked some courses and failed some.

ROAD BY EMERSON BEING RESURFACED

The road running along the east side of Emerson field is closed to traffic while it is being resurfaced with a crushed stone and oil mixture. This work, which is being paid for by the University and executed by the state highway commission, will complete the hard surface road that connects with state highway 54 near the Tin Can. It consists of a stretch 700 feet long and twenty-six feet wide.

Masquers To Present Davidson Play Tonight

The Red and Black Masquers, dramatic organization at Davidson College, will present their first play of the fall tonight at 7 o'clock, when it offers The Perfect Alibi. This has been arranged for those visitors who remain at Davidson after the Carolina-Davidson football game in the afternoon. All of the ten social fraternities at Davidson are having house parties this week-end, which will draw many out-of-town persons.

In the cast of The Perfect Alibi are: Alfred E. Tong, Horace W. Erwin, Stuart Meacham, J. B. Black, Jr., John Brown, Ed Hancock, Steve White, William McKnight, and Misses Letitia Currie, and Carolena Moffett.

Wildcats Retire to Lair to Await Tar Heels

Davidson Determined To Upset Dope By Downing Favored Carolina Squad

Davidson Victory Would Spoil Tar Heel Hopes for State Title.

TEAM RESTS AT CONCORD

Davidson Mentors Give Wildcats New Set of Plays for Game.

Davidson, November 14.—Impatiently awaiting 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, when they battle the University of North Carolina Tar Heels on Richardson Field here, the Davidson Wildcats tonight were in their own liar, while twenty miles away at Concord, the opposition was resting up until tomorrow morning, when they come to the Davidson stronghold. Everything is in readiness to entertain a tremendous crowd.

Coach Chuck Collins and the Tar Heels are expected to arrive tomorrow by train, and will spend the morning at the gymnasium where they will rest until time for the game. Carolina's team left Durham this afternon at 4:30 o'clock after having taken a short workout in Chapel Hill.

Admittedly the underdog, and slated to be defeated by a good margin tomorrow, the Wildcats are a determined band of gridiron warriors. It is a known fact that Davidson teams always put up their greatest scraps against overwhelming odds, and it is believed that this will be true tomorrow. Pep meetings have been held this week, at various times, and the spirits of the student body, team, and coaches are at a high pitch.

A victory for the Wildcats would muddle the standing of the Big Five members, while a win by the Tar Heels will keep their slate clean, with only Duke between them and another state crown. Should Davidson eke out a victory, it would give them the decided edge in the state race, and would make Carolina and Davidson on a percentage parity. Both teams will be exhibiting their best, with considerable at stake on the outcome of the contest.

Carolina's record this season, despite the defeats she has suffered, is an impressive one, and the Tar Heels have a powerful offense that is determined to sweep Davidson down the field, unless the Wildcats are able to outcharge and out-fight their opponents, and solve the overhead attack of the University. Regarding the latter, Coaches Younger and Tilson have spent hours this week in an effort to combat Carolina's passing.

At the same time, the Younger and Tilson machine has received much offensive attention. Some new plays have been given the Presbyterians for special use against the Tar Heels, and a further perfecting of maneuvers previously in their possession has been done.

Coach Tilson has also selected his veteran lettermen tackles for the starting lineup against Carolina. These will be Raker and Covington, the former replacing Wagner, who began the Wofford melee. Both of these men are powerfully built, and are natural born fighters where their ire is aroused.

A flankman has been changed too. Skinny Pierce, elongated sophomore who has seen service in numerous contests, will replace Proctor on the left flank, with Steve Brown continuing his inimitable role on the right.

North Carolina has a tough engagement with Davidson's Wildcats this afternoon. The Tar Heels appear to have an advantage over Younger's men in both the line and the backfield but Davidson has a smooth running machine with a lot of fire in it. Brock, Wagner, Proctor, Fraley, McCall, and McQueen are all good performers. Younger has these boys keyed up to the highest pitch, and they will be quick to take advantage of any Carolina lapses, mental or otherwise. On the other hand, the Collinsmen ought to come back strong after their let-down against N. C. State's Wolfpack. After playing V. P. I., Maryland, Georgia, Tennessee, and Georgia Tech in succession, the boys simply relaxed against the Techmen. North Carolina should win by a comfortable margin, although you never can tell what Davidson will do!

If North Carolina State continues to improve, and should Duke have a slight let-down, the Wolfpack may upset the dope and win. "Doc" Sermon has developed a strong line over at the West Raleigh institution, with a fair backfield. DeHart's men have had a great many breaks this season; they have encountered very few injuries, and have caught some of their strongest foes immediately after a hard battle. For instance the Blue Devils played Navy after the later had met Notre Dame the week before, and following the tough Alabama game, Kentucky played Duke. However, DeHart has a good team over in Durham, and they should win over the Wolfpack.

Ruffin Stages Last Half Comeback To Defeat Aycock As A. T. O.'s Win

Question Marks Spring Surprise Win Over Steele; Lewis, Old East, Everett, and Graham Forfeit.

After a disheartening beginning, Ruffin pulled itself together to defeat Aycock overwhelmingly by the score of 20-7 Thursday. In the first quarter Aycock marched down the field, apparently unopposed by the Ruffin defense, to mark up seven points. Potter made the score on a pass from Longest and the point was made on a similar play.

It was a different story from the second quarter until the end. Riggs passed to Grossman for a touchdown, but failed to make the point.

A wild pass by Longest was intercepted by Riggs, who ran for a score. Grossman kicked the point. MacBride also made a touchdown on a pass from Riggs. Again Grossman kicked the point successfully. Grossman, MacBride, and Riggs played well individually and as a unit. Potter starred for Aycock in the backfield. Ruffin's line

Davidsonian Concerned With School Spirit

Among the thousands of people at Davidson Saturday will be the Davidson alumnus who wrote the words to Davidson's football battle-cry, O Davidson. He is the Reverend E. H. Hamilton, 1917 graduate of Davidson, who has been in China as a missionary for the past seven years. Hamilton was at Davidson this week and spoke at the chapel exercises. He was given a great ovation by the Davidson student body. Dr. Hamilton will hear O Davidson sung more lustily this week-end than is normally true.

CROSS COUNTRY MEET WILL PRECEDE GAME

Davidson, North Carolina, November 14.—As a preliminary to the Carolina-Davidson football game here tomorrow, a cross country run between the varsities of the University of South Carolina and Davidson, and the freshman team of Davidson and Winston-Salem high school, was slated for eleven o'clock in the morning. This will be the first outside competitions for the Davidson team.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA AND NOTRE DAME ARE GREAT SCORING TEAMS

New York, Nov. 14.—Notre Dame and Southern California were hailed today as two of the greatest scoring machines in the history of football as a result of a pair of remarkable touchdown explosions on Saturday at Philadelphia and Los Angeles.

Pennsylvania and California, both rated among the strong teams of the country, were all but blown out of the park at the hands of this mighty pair. Notre Dame used its regulars less than half of the game and yet dynamited the Quakers by a score of 60 to 20 and Southern California obliterated its northern rival, 74 to 0.

After losing to Washington State's veteran team by a single point, Coach Howard Jones' Southern Californians now have crushed both Stanford and the Golden Bears and are looking ahead to a battle royal with Knute Rockne's mighty men at Los Angeles December 6.

Truth may be stranger than fiction, but it will never sell for as much.—Louisville Times.

BOXING SQUADS SETTLE DOWN TO RIGOROUS WORK

Hard Workouts Feature Training as Difficult Schedule Approaches.

With the boxing season less than two months away the Carolina varsity ring squad has settled down to rigorous training for one of the hardest schedules ever tackled by a Tar Heel team. Varsity men have begun to work out regularly now, and the squad has been increasing daily. To offset this, however, the freshman squad has dwindled considerably and now consists of a comparatively small group.

Captain Noah Goodridge, in the lightweight, seems as fast and as clever as ever. He has been going three rounds regularly of late and is equally as hard to hit as he was last year when he was recognized as one of the two outstanding men in his class. During the past week the appearance of "Studie" Clark has further strengthened the featherweight class which is now being taken care of by Marty Levinson, brilliant sophomore

GOAL!

FOURTH down! Seconds to play! Defending a slender one-point margin of victory, eleven husky bodies have valiantly repulsed three smashing attacks which have advanced the ball a scant foot to the fifteen-yard line. With success almost certainly within the defender's grasp, the field goal specialist drops far back behind his stalwart line. A crashing impact — a blur of rushing bodies — and his nimble foot sends the ball high between the goal posts for the winning points!

Shift this scene to a battle ground of modern business. The goal is an important contract . . . a substantial order for equipment or appliances. Salesmanship, backed by a product of established quality, plays its important part; but a Westinghouse representative is more than a salesman. The background of specialized engineering skill that enables him to serve his customers as a consultant in electrification is what supplies the necessary "punch" to win.

To many a younger college man with Westinghouse has come the opportunity to apply his talent toward the conclusion of a worthwhile transaction. The young men whose photographs appear on this page are but a few of the many who, with college only a few years behind them, are finding success with an organization offering such a variety of opportunities in the world's electrical work.

THIRTEEN MONTH CALENDAR SEEMS MORE PRACTICAL

A Conference on Calendar Reform Will Consider Change at Geneva in 1931.

Washington, November 14.—(IP)—The proposed change in the calendar to give thirteen months of twenty-eight days each—once a university professor's idea—is gaining rapidly in popularity throughout the world, according to information available here.

The Conference on Calendar Reform, scheduled for Geneva in 1931 is given as one evidence of this, as well as the fact that some of this country's most prominent industrial leaders are members of the National Committee on Calendar Simplification.

The thirteen-month plan would involve a year of thirteen months, each divided into exactly four seven-day weeks. There would be one day in the year which would belong to no month and to no week, and this would be designated "New Year's Day," and have no other name. Obviously, it would be a holiday.

The first of each month would fall on Sunday, and the last on Saturday.

On leap years there would be two New Year's Days.

Arguments in favor of the plan are that it would simplify all business transactions, that rents would be equal each month that, because all holidays would fall on Mondays, weeks would not be broken into by holidays, and it would be much more difficult to forget the day of the week on which a given date would fall.

There is another plan afoot to keep the months as they are, 12 in number, but to equalize the number of days in each month so that each quarter year would be the same size as every other quarter year.

This plan, however, is not as popular as the thirteen-month plan.

Many agencies in the United States already use the thirteen-month plan as an auxiliary calendar.

ENTERTAINMENT GROUP WORKS ON PROGRAMS

The Student Entertainment Committee is working hard to arrange attractive programs for the winter and spring quarters.

The program for the fall has been suspended, and the committee is expecting to book good attractions for the coming quarters, although some difficulties in dates are being experienced.

'EXPERIENCE NO VALUE' — SHERMAN

"Art . . . not experience . . . makes the actor," declares Lowell Sherman appearing today at the Carolina Theatre in "The Pay-Off," a Radio Picture.

Hazing Abolished

After a reign of thirty years at the College of Liberal Arts of Boston, the traditional freshman hazing has been abolished this fall, to be known only as history in the future. The action was initiated entirely by the students of the sophomore class. The sophomores have begun a new policy of dealing with the freshmen, planning to help them organize as a class unit, and to assist them in every possible way to adapt themselves to college.

Chemistry Makeups

Chemistry laboratories will be open Saturday, November 15, 1930, at one o'clock for all who wish to make up back experiments. No other make-up will be held this quarter.

Cross-Country Comment

By Laurence Pegram

The injuries sustained by Captain Baucom and T. H. Watkins in the Duke meet are being treated and the two Carolina harriers will be back in shape soon.

Each afternoon sees the members of the squad down on Emerson field, running, kicking, exercising, and loosening up their muscles. A jog around the track warms the boys up and before they get off for a jaunt around Chapel Hill.

A larger number of institutions than ever before will participate in the meet. The new-comers, Alabama, Maryland, and Virginia, will compete with V. P. I., Florida, Georgia Tech, Georgia, Duke, W. & L., Clemson, and North Carolina. It is thought that N. C. State will not have a cross-country team this year.

North Carolina won the Southern Conference meet last year with a score of fifty-six points, with V. P. I. placing second with seventy-two. Florida, third with 102 points, was pushed by Georgia Tech who scored 110 points, for fourth position. Georgia had to be satisfied with fifth place when she was nosed out by one point by the Jackets of Georgia Tech. N. C. State easily captured sixth place with 117 points, as Duke came in seventh with 168. The last three teams to finish were: Tennessee, 198; W. & L., 228; and Clemson, 237.

Young, of Georgia, ran the five mile course in twenty-six minutes and fifty-eight seconds, to be the man to break the ribbon for first place. Simon, of Duke, was second with twenty-seven minutes and ten seconds, and Miles of V. P. I., who won this year's meet against Carolina, placed third having the time, twenty-seven minutes and ten seconds.

Some of the men who showed up so well in last year's meet have graduated, and others dropped out of school. Nevertheless, the meet here next Saturday will see some of the best men in the South in action.

PADEREWSKI WILL PERFORM AT DUKE

Ignace Paderewski has been booked for a special appearance at Duke University for January 8. The famous musician, who is at present making his final American tour, will appear in the Page auditorium on the campus.

The only other appearance that he will make in the Old North State will be at Charlotte. It is generally believed that this be the final appearance of the noted statesman and musician in the South.

Paderewski has been heard by large audiences at every one of his previous performances in the South, and the Durham university is planning to accommodate a big crowd at his appearance on January 8. A special new grand piano has been purchased for the new auditorium and will be used by the great Paderewski.

SUNDAY CONCERT DIFFERENT FROM OTHER SERVICES

The organ program for the Friday and Saturday dedication ceremonies has previously been printed in the Tar Heel. Edward Eigenschenk will change his program for the Sunday performance. The program for Sunday is as follows:

I. Sonata (D Minor), by Guilmant.

II. Prelude B Minor, by Bach.

III. (a) Divertissement, by Vierne; (b) Legend of the Mountain, by Karg-Elert; (c) Scherzo (Fourth Symphonie), by Widor; (d) Chant D'Automme, by Johnson (e) Finale (Second Symphonie), by Widor.

IV. (a) Canyon Walls, by Clokey; (b) Sketch, in D Flat, by Schumann; (c) Reverie, by Dickinson; (d) Etude Symphonique, by Bossi.

Fifty Yard Line Seats Not Most Advantageous

Statisticians at the University of Michigan have found that the holder of a ticket on the fifty-yard line at a football game is not so fortunate as is ordinarily thought. Figures compiled by them seem to prove that a ticket on the 30-yard line is just as good, if not better, than a ticket on the fifty-yard line.

Out of 712 individual exhibitions of action in the first four games played this fall at Michigan, just 151 were executed in front of the supposedly more fortunate ticket-holders; that is, between the two forty-yard lines. Between the twenty- and forty-yard lines at one end of the field were 186 plays, and at the other end, 191. In addition to being more numerous, these plays were more crucial, and led to or resulted in touchdowns much more frequently than the plays between the forty-yard lines. There were fewer plays between the twenty-yard line and the goal, but these plays were nearly all of the crucial type.

Some budding genius has suggested a gridiron mounted on a slowly-revolving disc, in order that the advantageous situations may be divided equally among all spectators.

Lingle Has Busy Week

This is a fast world, so they say. And it is going to be a particularly rapid one today for Dr. Walter L. Lingle, president of Davidson College. Dr. Lingle speaks at 10:30 a. m. today at the inauguration of the new president of High Point College. He will be back at Davidson by 2:30 p. m. to witness the Carolina-Davidson football game, and afterward he will go to Spartanburg, South Carolina, where he speaks twice Sunday in the First Presbyterian church of that city.

Free Theatre Tickets

Beginning today the Daily Tar Heel, in collaboration with the Carolina theatre, will run daily among the classified ads two names. These names are to be changed every time and the students whose names appear will each receive a pass to the theatre on that particular day.

A. T. O. Remains Unbeaten

The Phi Sigma Kappa's bowed before the superior passing attack and well-organized running plays of the A. T. O.'s to the tune of 13-0. Both teams were somewhat handicapped by the poor condition of the field. However, with Smith presenting a double-threat for A. T. O. by his running and passing ability and with Booker making sensational gains on passes, A. T. O. experienced little difficulty in downing the Phi Sig's. Brooker marked up six points in the first quarter on a pass from Smith. He duplicated this performance in the last few seconds of play, and the extra point was run over by Smith. By far the most outstanding player of the game was Smith of A. T. O. Teachey showed up well for the Phi Sig's by his passing.

Double Forfeit

Both Lewis and Old East, scheduled to play Thursday afternoon, failed to appear, and Everett lost to Carr by default.

Steele Loses to Question Marks

In a game full of surprises Steele lost to the Question Marks by the score of 12-7. Powell made the first score for the Question Marks. Then Hogan of Steele broke loose to run a sensational seventy-five yards for a touchdown. The extra point was made on a triple pass leaving Steele in the lead at the half. Powell received another pass, however, from Edwards to chalk up another touchdown for the Question Marks.

They kept this lead until the game was over. Edwards played a steady game for the Question Marks. His passing, running, and uncanny ability to intercept passes one-handed marked him as an exceptional player.

slugger. Levinson attracted considerable attention last week with impressive workouts against Bill Parrish, of Durham, and is being watched closely by a large group of student fight fans.

Biggs and "Speedy" Boring are the leading contenders for the bantamweight position left open when Evan Vaughan failed to report this year. Both boys lack experience, but show possibilities which may be developed through consistent work.

John Warren and Platt Landis are far from their normal weights at present, but will probably handle the heavy and lightheavyweight divisions respectively when they train themselves into fighting trim. Obie Davis has the call so far in the middleweight class, but is getting lots of competition from Young, a newcomer.

With Jack Farris and Nat Lumpkin still out for cross-country, the congested welterweight class has developed into a struggle between Cecil Jackson and Red Holderness.

year. Neither the Generals nor the Cavaliers have had a brilliant season so far. Washington and Lee seems to hold an edge over Virginia on paper, but the Charlottesville eleven will do everything in their power to win. The success of the season, according to Virginians, depends upon the outcome of the W. & L. and Carolina games. It begins to look like Virginia will have an unsuccessful football year.

Down in the bayou country there is a great deal of excitement, for Tulane and Georgia clash at New Orleans today. Coach "Bernie" Bierman sends an undefeated team against a powerful Georgia squad. The Green Wave has been pointing for Georgia since the game with Georgia Tech. Tulane has a decided edge in the forward wall, while the Bulldogs appear to have the most power in the backfield. Then, too, there is danger that Georgia may suffer a relapse after their Herculean schedule so far. However, Roberts, Downes, Chandler, and Dickens should be able to run over enough touchdowns to assure the Athens team of victory in this titanic struggle.

Vanderbilt has a great opportunity today of beating Tennessee for the first time in several seasons. Both teams have been beaten once this year, and by the same team—Alabama. Tennessee appears to have a stronger line than Vanderbilt; both teams have fine backfields. Vandy has Parker, Askew, Thomas, Fortune, and "Red" Leonard for backfield duty. Pitted against this array of stellar backs are "Buddy" Hackman, "Bobby" Dodd, Quinn Decker, and Ty Dysney. The Vols have a veteran team, whereas Vandy's team is composed largely of sophomores; Tennessee's superior line should be enough to swing victory over in their direction.

Florida has another hard game in store for this week as Josh Cody's Tigers invade the Everglades in search of Alligator meat. The 'Gators appear to have an all-round better team than Clemson can put on the field. However, Florida was beaten by Furman, and they may bow to another South Carolina team today. But don't bet on it!

Auburn's Plainsmen should win their first Conference game in four years in Birmingham this afternoon. The coachless Mississippi Aggies will be the victims. Auburn gave Florida and Georgia Tech shivers before finally bowing to them. N. C. State beat the Aggies.

Curly Byrd's Maryland team tackles V. P. I. at Norfolk, Virginia. The Old Liners have a good line and a fast set of backs. Virginia Poly has a good backfield with a fair line. This difference in the front line should give Maryland the game.

A crippled Georgia Tech team invades the City of Brotherly Love and will meet a strong Pennsylvania eleven. Dunlap is still injured, and several of the other Yellow Jackets are not feeling so good. The Quakers have Dick Gentle, Walt Masters, and Paul Riblett primed for action. Pennsylvania should roll up a big score on Tech.

Yale's Bulldogs clash with Princeton's Tigers at Princeton. Bill Roper's clan does not appear to have much chance against Mal Steven's pack in this animal battle. Albie Booth and his mates will enter the game as overwhelming favorites to down Princeton.

There are two big games in the Big Ten. An undefeated Michigan eleven meets a fighting Minnesota crew. The odds favor Michigan, although Minnesota has risen to the heights to pull upsets several times this season. Northwestern, the other undefeated member of the Big Ten, takes on an erratic Wisconsin bunch. "Hank" Bruder and his buddies are favored to keep their slate clean in this game.

Alabama's Crimson Tide should drown Rus Cohen's Louisiana State crew. Kentucky's Wildcats should claw the V. M. I. cadets into submission. South Carolina's Gamecocks should beat Sewanee; Sewanee has had a very poor season. Barring a miracle, Notre Dame's Ramblers will continue their unbeaten ways against Drake University. Last year Drake led Notre Dame up to the final quarter, but Notre Dame won the game. Fordham's Rams are another unhumbled team that should come out on top against Saint Mary's. N. Y. U. will attempt to atone for the licking that Georgia gave her last week by beating Georgetown; the Violets should score the most points.

HOWE SPEAKS AT SALEM COLLEGE

Dr. George Howe, head of the University's Latin department, gave a lecture on "Virgil," the great Latin poet, at Salem College in Winston-Salem yesterday.

The occasion was part of a general celebration that is being held throughout the world in commemoration of the anniversary of Virgil's 2000th birthday.

Dr. Howe and other members of the University's Latin department have given addresses at a number of these celebrations in this and other states.

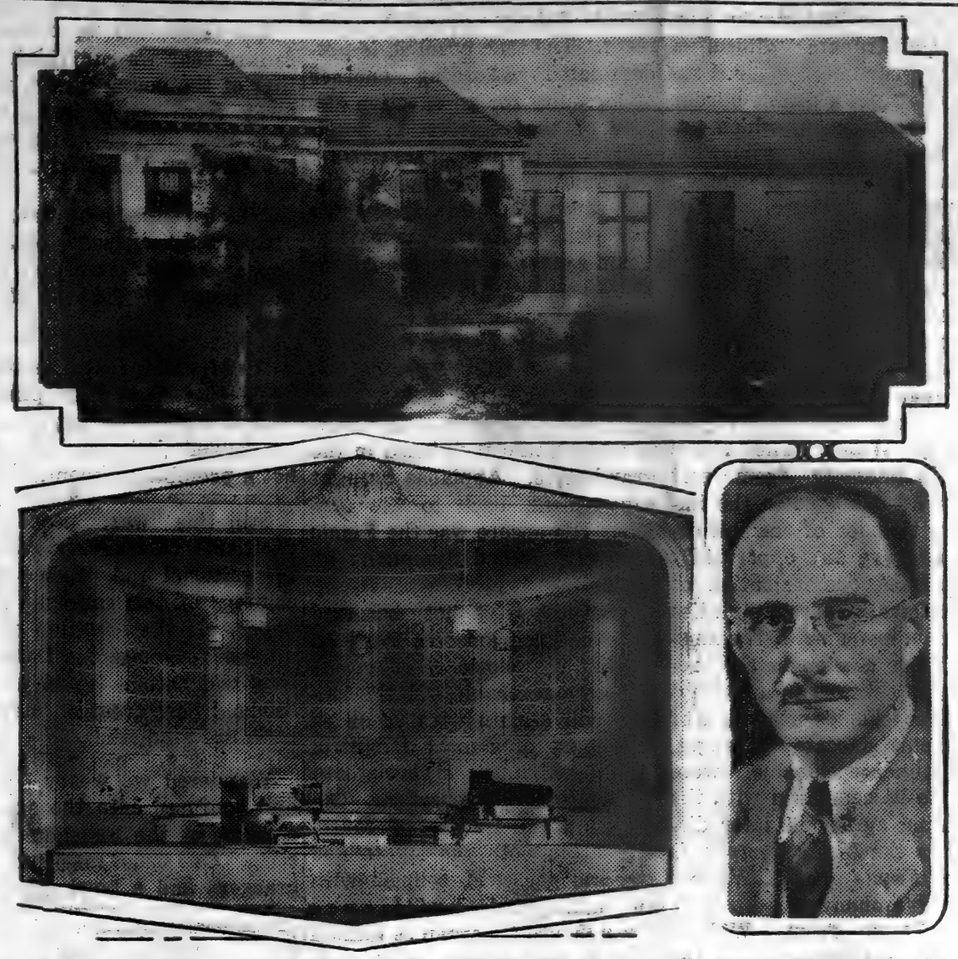
CAPACITY CROWD SEES DEDICATION OF MUSIC HALL

Eigenschenk Attracts Praise by Brilliant Performance on New Organ.

The University of North Carolina's new home of music which, pending a more formal name, is simply being called the University Music hall, was formally opened here Friday night with a brilliant dedication recital.

The artist was Edward Eigenschenk, one of America's most renowned young organists, who has played as soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra, of which he is now associate organist, and who is also organist and director of the Second Presbyterian church of Chicago.

Everyone of the 900 seats on the hall had been reserved before the recital began, and it was a capacity audience that heard the program again last night. The last of the three recitals will be given at 4 o'clock this afternoon, and advance requests for tickets insure another capacity audience.



The Music hall is not a new building; that is, not entirely. The old Library, which was no longer needed to house books when the new one was completed a year ago, was completely renovated and a wing was added. The wing, incidentally, was a most important addition, for it is the portion of the building that houses the auditorium which in turn houses the $30,000 Reuter organ and the equipment that goes with it.

The main portion of the old Library building has been converted into classrooms, administrative offices, studios, and seminar and practice rooms, all for the use of the department of music. It is regarded as a long step forward in the direction of the school of fine arts so ardently desired by the University faculty.

The auditorium stage is designed to seat a chorus of 300 and an orchestra of 60 pieces, with ample room for organ console and piano.

The total cost of renovating the old building, adding the auditorium wing, and organ and furnishings, was approximately $170,000, of which the State contributed only $44,000. The donor of the major portion requested that his name be withheld, but it is understood that he was present last night and was the happiest person in the audience.

NEW MUSIC BUILDING

The picture above shows both the exterior and interior views of the new music building in which Edward Eigenschenk, noted organ soloist of Chicago is playing this afternoon for the final dedication concert of a series of three. In the lower right is Professor Harold S. Dyer, head of the music department, who has charge of the dedication.

It can be seen in the exterior view how the new auditorium has been added onto the old library building, which has been completely renovated, and converted into classrooms, administrative offices, studios, and seminar and practice rooms. All of the rooms have been made sound-proof.

The auditorium, which has a seating capacity of 900, contains the Reuter organ which was built by the celebrated European house of Cassivante at a cost of more than $30,000.

GRAHAM REVIEWS PAST INFLUENCES

Address to Publix-Saenger Managers Emphasizes Present Day Responsibility of the Cinema.

Chapel Hill, N. C. November 16.—"The outstanding factor in the Americanization of foreign countries is the motion picture," asserted President Frank—P. Graham, of the University of North Carolina, in an address before the managers of the Publix-Saenger Theatres of North Carolina, Inc., in convention here this month.

America's great opportunity in world affairs lies just ahead, and in developing this opportunity the motion picture will be a foremost factor, President Graham declared.

"Today," he said, "America is in a position to assume a commanding place in world affairs, just as other nations have done in the past."

TAYLOR SOCIETY TO HEAR HOLMES

Farm Management Subject for Discussion at Monday Night Meeting.

On Monday night at seven P. M., in Bingham hall Dr. C. L. Holmes, the chief of the division of farm management and costs, of the United States department of agriculture in Washington, D. C., will address the local chapter of the Taylor society. His topic will be: "The Technique and Economics in the New Farm Management."

The Taylor society is an international society devoted to the study of scientific management. It is now in its nineteenth year of existence and has members in Europe and America. There are only five chapters in universities in the United States, and the Carolina chapter is the only one in the South. The local chapter chose for its subject this year: "Modern Management." Dr. Holmes is one of the many prominent speakers to address the Taylor society this year. General Rees, assistant vice-president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, addressed the first meeting.

Membership in the local chapter of the society is open to all those taking courses in management. The meetings, however, are open to all those interested in the subject. The meetings should be of great benefit to students planning a business career.

Community Club Meet

The literature department of the Community Club will meet in the social room of the Methodist church, Tuesday evening, November 18, at eight o'clock. Miss Nora Beust of the University library will talk on "Books for Children," and will have books on exhibit.

PHARMACY BOARD MEETS TUESDAY

Chapel Hill Will Be Examination Headquarters for License Applicants.

The North Carolina board of pharmacy will meet in Pharmacy hall Tuesday November 18 to examine applicants for licenses as registered and assistant pharmacists.

The members of the board are Dr. E. V. Zoeller of Tarboro, president; F. W. Hancock, Sr., of Oxford, secretary-treasurer; and I. W. Rose, of Rocky Mount, J. G. Ballew of Lenoir and C. P. Greyer of Morganton.

Dr. Zoeller, president of the board, was given in 1922 the only honorary degree of doctor of pharmacy that the University of North Carolina has ever conferred. He has one of the longest records of service in the country as a member of a state board of pharmacy, having been a member of the board since 1892 and president since 1894.

Mr. Hancock, who is father of Frank Hancock, Jr., fifth district congressman, has been a member of the board for thirty-eight years and secretary-treasurer for thirty-three years.

Mr. Rose is an alumnus of the University, a graduate of the school of pharmacy in the class of 1906.

Requirements for eligibility to stand the examination for pharmacists are: the candidate must be twenty-one years of age, have graduated from a recognized school or college of pharmacy, and have had four years experience under the direction of a licensed pharmacist. Two years of the time spent in the school of pharmacy may be counted in the four years of experience.

To stand the examination for assistant pharmacist, the can-

FIELDS TO TAKE DR. TOY'S PLACE

Dr. Calvert R. Toy will leave for New Brunswick, N. J. early next week where Mrs. Toy and their daughter, Elizabeth, will join him later. Dr. Toy will engage in general practice and in addition will be on the staff of St. Peter's and Middlesex hospitals.

Dr. L. E. Fields who is to take Dr. Toy's place has arrived in Chapel Hill. Dr. Fields is a native of Kinston, and was graduated from the University in 1921. After his graduation he attended medical school at the University of Pennsylvania and served his interneship at the Henry Ford hospital in Detroit.

Dr. Fields has taken a lease on the Knight home, 623 East Franklin Street, and will occupy the house during Dr. Knight's stay in China.

Clemson Delegates Overlook Campus

The delegation of Y representatives from Clemson College were entertained individually Friday night by fifteen members of the local Y cabinets in the fraternities and homes of the cabinet members. A general "bull discussion" was participated in Friday at which both groups expressed their opinions on Y activities and student life.

The Clemson group made a tour of the interesting places on the local University campus yesterday and then journeyed over to Durham to visit Duke University's Y cabinet.

TAR HEEL STAFF TO HEAR GRAVES

Editor of Chapel Hill Weekly Will be Speaker of Meeting Tonight.

Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly, will speak at the weekly meeting of the Daily Tar Heel staff tonight in the Alumni building at 7:15. Prior to this meeting all of the city editors will meet at 7.00 o'clock.

Mr. Graves' Chapel Hill Weekly, has made a reputation for itself in this state as well as in other states in the country. Of the circulation list, sixty are residents in New York, where the weekly has become widely read. Some of the larger northern papers, including the New York World, New York Times, New York Herald Tribune and several others, frequently publish articles clipped from Mr. Graves' paper.

ALUMNI PRESENT VALUABLE BOOKS TO LAW LIBRARY

T. S. Rollins and A. B. Andrews Are the Donors of Gifts Numbering 150 Volumes.

The law library has recently been enriched by two generous gifts made by alumni of the school. A. B. Andrews of the Raleigh bar, and T. S. Rollins, Jr., practicing attorney of Asheville, were the donors.

The Andrews collection of 100 books consists of a valuable set of North Carolina Session Laws from the year 1833 through 1909, and a set of Rose's notes on the United States Supreme Court reports.

The statutory material is specially prized by the library for the reason that it supplements the incomplete set of session laws owned by the library previous to the donation and gives the library a group of early North Carolina laws which are rare and can hardly be bought at any price. The books will be kept as a unit, and will stand under a printed marker reading, "The A. B. Andrews Collection."

No less useful is the gift of T. S. Rollins, Jr. His contribution is composed of a set of American and English corporation cases. In all, these two sets number 150 volumes. These zooks were given in memory of his father, T. S. Rollins, and will be marked with a plate indicating that fact. The sets will be placed in a section of the basement reading room reserved for selected cases covering special subjects.

State College To Give Radio Talks

Another college has started using the radio as a means of spreading information concerning its campus. Friday, State College began a series of weekly broadcasts over station WPTF, with Louis H. Wilson, of Raleigh, as spokesman. The talk was entitled "State College Campus Gossip," and was sponsored by the State College news bureau.

A talk will be given every Friday from 4 until 4:15 o'clock. The purpose is mainly to entertain and enlighten former students of N. C. State College. Thus in purpose they differ from Carolina's weekly talks, the main aim here being to inform prospective students as to campus life and extra-curricular activities.

THIS STATE SPENDS MORE FOR LUXURIES THAN FOR EDUCATION

Average of North Carolina Is, However, Higher Than That of The Nation as a Whole

The National Education Association has made a study indicating that the people of North Carolina spend $1.40 for certain luxuries—tobacco, soft drinks, ice cream, candy, chewing gum, theatres, movies, talkies, jewelry, perfume, cosmetics, sporting goods and toys—to every $1 spent for education. The annual bill for certain luxuries for this state in 1928 was, according to the result of this investigation, $65,936,995, while the cost of public schools and colleges was $47,047,191. This luxury bill is divided as follows: for tobacco, $22,054,566; for soft drinks, ice cream, candy, and chewing gum, $19,057,472; for theatres, movies, and similar amusements, $11,152,737; for jewelry, perfumes and cosmetics, $8,525,722; and for sporting goods, toys, etc., $5,146,498.

North Carolina spends 4.38 per cent of the annual income of its citizens for schools, according to the bulletin issued by the association. The $65,936,995 spent for certain luxuries, on the other hand, represents 6.14 per cent of the annual estimated income of $1,073,028,000 for 1928.

In the nation, as a whole, $2.61 is spent for candy, chew-

Sauce For The Goose

The plea made recently by President L. H. Powell, of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad, for protection of railroads against motor bus competition seems at first glance to be merely the appeal of last resort of an industry which has become unable to compete successfully in the field of open business rivalry. But upon closer analysis it will be seen that sound principles and reasons underlie the proposal. It amounts, not to a request for added protection, but to a perfectly justifiable demand for justice and equality in government regulation of utilities.

Since the formation of the Interstate Commerce Commission, coercion and limitation practically without limit has been imposed upon the long-suffering railroads. Allowed to make only a certain per cent on investment, they have nevertheless borne the brunt of taxation wherever legislative authorities have been able to assert jurisdiction over them. In addition, millions find employment on railroads of the country, no small item in such times as the present.

Bus lines, on the other hand, very few of which are, comparatively speaking, interstate in scope, have little legal discipline with which to deal. In addition to bearing little of the community burden of taxation, they are able quite conveniently to utilize roads built by the use of public finances. An insignificant proportion of the population is employed in motor transportation.

In the words of Mr. Powell, "since no method of transportation has been discovered which can supplant our railroads in their entirety, we are brought face to face with the question of what shall be done with the competition which is so seriously threatening their destiny. Our federal government, dealing with the problem of competition between railroads, has, in the transportation act, declared that no new line can be constructed without the consent and approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Why should not this same principle be applied in dealing with motor competition with our railroads and a policy fixed by law that will prevent such competition where the service then required by the railroad will be reasonably adequate or where the traffic is insufficient to support both types of transportation?"

Competition is admittedly the life of trade so far as it is practicable. But where it becomes advisable to regulate the functioning of one type of industry, all divisions of that category should, in the interests of equity and to afford parity of opportunity, be subject to the same restrictions.—J. M. L.

Weep Not!

A prevalent complaint both here and on other campi is that college organizations are impeded in their progress by the yearly graduation of seasoned members. Upon the departure of such persons from any club or fraternity there is the feeling among the remainder of the group that the organization is apt to go on the rocks. Such a fear is altogether logical and feasible in theory, but it is contrary to actual findings.

The departure of old members is a serious drawback to any organization, no doubt; but the constant influx of new workers is an advantage sufficiently potent to more than offset resultant obstacles. Constant change of old members brings "new blood" into our clubs and prevents them from becoming stale and stagnant. With new members come new ideas; with new ideas comes progress. The group which is forced to operate on one set of principles for any considerable time is very unfortunate, and is apt to make few forward-looking movements. The new element tends to be critical of the status of the organization and to be heartily in favor of eliminating all that is obsolete and worthless. It is the very unconstancy of the membership of collegiate organizations which makes them durable and progressive.

There are so many organizations on this campus that nearly every student is claimed by one or more of them. Each of us remembers the uneasiness that accompanied his first moments as a fraternity man, a Di or Phi member, a member of the debate squad, or what not. The old members eyed us closely, expecting us to say foolish and amusing things. They seemed to be astonished that we didn't "know the ropes" just as they did.

But in the course of a few years these veterans depart into the highways of the serious business of life, leaving the one-time neophytes in the position of prominence. It is this factor which accounts for the consuming interest which college students are seen to take in their organizations. The secret lies in the fact that there is always room for advancement in position—always the coming opportunity to express new ideas and to put new schemes through the ordeal of experimentation. The spark and spirit so characteristic of pioneering is kept ever alive in college organizations by the constant influx of new members who bring with them new talent, new ideas, and new methods.

Wherefore, then, do we weep when the senior bids us goodbye to "shape his old course in a country new?" It is sad, but profitable.—J. C. W.

The Musical University

By Wex Malone

An enthusiastic and appreciative audience filled the auditorium of the New Music building Friday night to hear Edward Eigenschenk in the dedication concert of the new Reuter organ.

The program opened with the Grand Choeur Dialogue by Gigout. Unfortunate difficulties with the instrument made it necessary to shift a double burden on the great organ, which unavoidably curtailed somewhat the effectiveness of the number. Eignschenk, however, extricated himself beautifully from the difficulty by an astonishing manipulation of the voicing and expression of the great organ, so that the handicap was not seriously felt.

The real program began with Scherzo from the Fourth Symphony by Widor. The music varied in intensity from soft wood wind passages to the impressive thunder of the full organ, and gave an opportunity for the first demonstration of the registrational possibilities of the new instrument. The music of Widor challenges the resources of both organ and player. Eigenschenk's execution of the difficult staccato passages, while unexceptionable, were hardly to be compared with the astounding agility he later displayed in the Etude Symphonic and the Finale from Widor's Second Symphony.

The Finale from Widor's Fourth Symphony concluded the first part of the program. This was executed in the grand manner, and the blast of the full organ was unrestrained throughout the entire selection.

In Fantasie and Fugue, by Bach, the organist hit his full stride. Here is the old master as we like to know him. Agility of execution and preciseness of tone distinguished Eigenschenck's interpretation. Bach demands conservatism, and he was played conservatively.

Color pervaded the third part of the program. Canyon Walls introduced the modern motif with a liberal supply of delayed harmonies and whole-tone modulations. Here is your American registration sensitively done. This number demands approval.

Schumann's Sketch and Seraphic Chant by Moline constituted the weakest part of the program. Schumann's melody, beautiful in its simplicity, was sophisticated by over complicated voicing. Perhaps your reviewer betrays his ignorance in submitting that Seraphic Chant at times was positively incomprehensible. The redeeming feature is an effective use of the echo organ and the Vox Humana in the introductory and closing passages.

Divertissement more than dispells any unpleasant taste left by its predecessors. Here is real brilliance and a display of excellent technique. The generous applause brought by this number acclaimed it as one of the high spots of the evening.

Reverie and Toccato furnished the great contrast of the program. Reverie was unaffectedly executed, although the obligato was a trifle sharp at times. The Toccato was superbly done.

The fourth part of the program again presents Bach to the audience with the chorale, In Thee is Gladness. This is the only touch of the liturgical in the entire program. Again the organist demonstrated a close familiarity with polyphonic music to an audience who showed that they could appreciate it.

The three selections following, Scherzo, from the Second Symphony of Vierne, Clouds, by Ciega, and Song of the Basket Weaver, by Russell, all afforded a delightful change to the modern and more imaginative mood. Clouds deserves special comment. The tone poem style predominated, affording another opportunity for an effective display of the registration possibilities of the new instrument.

Eigenschenk concluded the program with Etude Symphonic by Bossi. The Etude was marked by an exchange of brilliant passages between the Great Organ and the Pedals. The organist's use of the latter was especially effective. The stupendous volume of the full organ was again heard as the number drew to a close, and it finished in the grand style. Applause brought Eigenschenk back to the console. His encore was the Finale from the Second Symphony by Widor.

Although it cannot be said that the program was flawless, or that the choice of selections was unimpeachable, still the concert will remain with us all as a memory of a most delightful evening of music. Throughout the program Eigenschenk displayed a conciseness of touch, evident in both the legato and staccato passages, coupled with an undisputed brilliance throughout. An organ is limited only by the concepts of its master, and Eigenschenk played with imagination. This is the greatest and rarest attribute of an organist. It was not without sincerity that we all said, "Those who live in the presence of Music, such as this instrument can give forth, will grow in noble emotions."

Father Petro Kilekwa, a prominent London clergyman, was once a slave on an Arab ship. His name now appears among the lists of the most elite Londoners.

The Campus Snapshot

By J. C. Williams

The most striking example of failure that we can think of is that of the young man who ran away from school and found later that he'd stowed away on the Floating University.

Which reminds us that this place might on some occasions muster enough "isolated fluid" to produce a floating student body.

All of which forces us to conclude that fraternity pins are sufficient evidence to prove to a bootlegger that the wearer is not a prohibition agent.

Still this "war, peace, and pacifism" controversy rages in the editorial and open forum columns of this campus newspaper. If the situation continues, we fear that the Daily Tar Heel will become a red journal. "Behold how great a matter a little fire kindleth."

Wandered we weary, silent, and confused into the spacious confines of the Friendly Cafeteria. Our usual meal of two crackers and a bowl of bone soup we secured in consideration of a sum too insignificant to be quoted. But alas not long were peace and tranquility to be our appointed lot. Before we could find a seat in the congested array of individuals, a co-ed met the level of our then stunted gaze. Judging from the bristle-like erectness of her hair and the rebellious curl of her lip, we knew that all was not well, that she had something to say. "Mr W.", quoth the "evish" creature in a manner far from gentle, "do you really believe everything that you put in your column?" Our only answer was to grow faint. Our sense of truth has been dealt such a blow that we are no longer able to discriminate between falsehood and fact.

Every paper that we have seen for the last week stated, "Graham under knife." Now we have learned that he is not to undergo the proposed operation. Perhaps, he grew tired of the terrible sight of a knife hanging over his existence and decided that he knew enough about the cutting business from observation. Newspapers must, of course, have news.

A collection of 23,000 moths and butterflies, the work of a lifetime, has been presented to Cornell University by Addison J. Ellsworth, a printer who made a hobby of collecting butterflies on holidays and Sundays.

Mighty Wildcat Eleven Defeats Tar Heels

Carolinians' Failure To Boot Extra Point Loses Game 6 To 7

Nash Scores Lone Tar Heel Touchdown On Pass Over Goal Line from Magner.

BROHARD DAVIDSON STAR

Fraley Makes 'Cat Touchdown on Line Buck; McQueen Rips Off Great Gains.

By Don Shoemaker

Davidson College met and defeated the University today by a score of 7-6, but the numerical margin of victory fails to tell the tale of how a beaten and broken Wildcat eleven was driven into its lair in the first period, and emerged to claw a strong Tar Heel aggregation all over the soggy gridiron in one of the most spectacular offensive drives ever recorded in the annals of North Carolina football. Failure to add the extra point after touchdown spelled defeat for the Heels.

The Wildcat line was puncture proof and a wet field rendered the Carolinians' aerial attack inconsistent. Davidson's superiority on a wet field was demonstrated in the first few seconds of the game when McCall seized Branch's kickoff on his own twelve yard line and ran the ball to the Carolina twenty-nine yard stripe. However, the Carolina forward wall held, and Davidson was forced to relinquish the ball on downs.

After an exchange of punts in the middle of the initial period, Carolina took the ball on her forty-five yard line and began the fifty-five yard march down the field to the first score. Nash netted eleven yards on two tries at the end of the line and Magner carried the ball thru tackle to the 28 yard line. After seesawing around the twenty yard line, first gaining and then losing, Magner shot a pass to Nash across the line for the touchdown. Branch's kick failed.

Branch placed the ball in scoring position near the end of the quarter when he received Brock's punt on his twenty yard line and streaked up the side line for sixty-six yards. Magner and Nash punctured the line to the three yard stripe where Houston added a yard. With the oval on the three yard line after Nash had been cut down in his tracks a yard behind the line, the quarter ended.

Forced back to the nine yard line, Branch passed over the goal and the ball went over to Davidson on their own twenty yard line. On a beautiful off tackle smash, McQueen broke thru the Tar Heel forward wall for forty one yards to the Carolina eighteen yard marker. Unable to net more than a yard in three tries at the line McCall dashed around the end to the Carolina nine yard mark where Fraley drove over tackle for the touchdown after McQueen had

Emory University Student Body Abolishes Track Team

Atlanta, November 15.—Emory University students ratified the vote of the athletic council of the institution for the abolishment of intercollegiate track last week. The vote was 410 to 297 for dispensing with track this year and came after the Athletic council had gone on record at the suggestion of the E Club to remove the sport from the university. Paramount among the reasons advanced for the action was the financial status of track activities which was said to be in poor circumstances.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

Jack Bessen

In addressing the Chicago alumni at the annual banquet before the Chicago-Purdue football game last Friday night, President Edward C. Elliott of Purdue said, "Public interest in intercollegiate athletics is waning so rapidly that the time may be near for the restriction of its field. Except possibly where a championship is at stake, we may no longer count on the enthusiastic and emotional public support that we have enjoyed in the last eight years." This statement is just a polite way of taking a crack at professional football, which has undoubtedly taken away some of the color and thrill of the intercollegiate sport. It seems as though football stars are entering college in order to get a suitable background for the professional sport. But fortunately, after a few years of unbounded popularity, professional football is distinctly on the wane, and judging by the gate receipts and attendance figures at intercollegiate games, college football seems to be more popular now than ever. In spite of the "hard times" that are sweeping the country, attendance records for nearly all the big games have been broken, and the increase in strength of the small college teams have also led to an increase in their attendance figures.

It seems as though the University of Maryland is going to have undisputed claim to the title of "Iron Men of 1930." The Old Liners will engage in three games, all hard ones, in eight days, a big piece for any team to bite off. On November 22, they will meet the strong Navy outfit; on Thanksgiving the annual game with Johns Hopkins, and with only two days of rest, will take on Vandy to complete their "suicide schedule." With good luck, the Old Line eleven ought to beat the Navy and John Hopkins, but great doubt is expressed at their chances of including Vandy on the right side of the ledger.

Two of the most colorful figures that have ever donned American League uniforms have been cut loose from the Philadelphia Athletics' roster and it looks as though their major league careers are at an end. The players in question are Wally Schang, catcher, and John Picus Quinn, pitcher. Both of these veterans were largely responsible for Connie Mack's great machine of 1914 becoming the class of baseball. With the release of Quinn, the rapidly decreasing list of spitball pitchers takes another on the chin, cutting the active list to three, Burleigh Grimes, St. Louis Cardinals, Clarence Mitchell, New York Giants, and Urban Faber, Chicago White Sox.

STARS IN 'CAT LINE AND BACKFIELD

Brock by his spectacular punting and blocking, and Brohard by his sensational long dashes were the main factors in the Davidson victory. Brohard proved a constant threat to the Tar Heels, and Brock with his effective punting kept the Wildcats' goal out of danger through a large portion of the game.

Four Fraternities To Clash For Right To Tackle Ruffin

The regular schedule of intramural tag ball was completed on Friday and the powers of the intramural office will make a check up on the standings of all teams engaged in the struggle. On Monday Shelton, first lieutenant to Gray, Intramural head, will announce the play-off schedules for the four undefeated fraternity teams. The outfits that fight it out for the right to take on Ruffin, dormitory champ for the campus title are Phi Gams, A. T. O., Dekes, and the Betas.

On Monday the fraternity group will be narrowed down to three when the Dekes meet the Betas. Ruffin, has still one postponed game to play before they enter the finals. Law School with only one defeat on their record are determined to upset the ambitions of the Ruffin club. The savants declare that Ruffin has the title sewed up, but should Law School win, the dormitory race will be thrown into a triple tie among New Dorms, Ruffin, and Law School. The Phigees and the A. T. O.'s will be on the sidelines scouting the Deke-Beta Game. The Betas, defending champions, are given the edge.

The Phi Gams on Friday struggled through 40 minutes of hard football on a soft field to beat the T. E. P.'s by the close margin of three first downs. The Phigees opened up with a triumphant march down toward the T. E. P. goal but were held for downs. The T. E. P.'s came back strong but were unable to overcome the early lead. Hirsh was the big threat in the T. E. P. backfield with Coates taking the spot with his defensive work on the line. Howard was throwing the passes for the Phigees with Morrison and Slate dragging them in.

The A. T. O.'s were only able to score twice on the Phi Sigma Kappa's. The A. T. O.'s will meet hard going in the play-offs and will have to show more scoring power.

Ruffin scored three times on Aycock while the Law School was only able to tally once.

The intramural office has planned the championship game on Friday. This date is subject to weather conditions that might affect the play-off schedule.

NEW SEWER INSTALLED

A new storm sewer has been installed along main street of Chapel Hill. The sewer was constructed so as to enable the water which collects along Fraternity Row to be drawn off. It is made of large clay pipes one foot in diameter and has its junction, which is made of brick and cement, at the end of Fraternity Row.

Negro Butlers Organize

At the University of Georgia, negro butlers have organized a fraternity to be known as the Silver Kings. Requirements for initiation are: Butlership at a Greek letter fraternity, wearing of clothes acquired only from fraternity men, and the attending of every football game.

CAGLE RESIGNS AS GRID COACH

Former Army Ace Leaves Mississippi A. and M. Post to Join New York Pros.

New York, November 15.—Self-admittedly a failure at football coaching, Cris Cagle, former Army grid star, announced Wednesday that he had signed to play with the New York Giants, professional team, for the remainder of the season.

In a letter which accompanied Cagle's signed contract the All-American back stated that he was dissatisfied with his efforts at Mississippi A.and M. where he has been coaching since his resignation from the military academy last year. His Mississippi team has lost five out of six games played so far this season.

Cagle is to leave Starvill, Mississippi, by airplane today and will arrive here in time for the game between the Giants and the Chicago Bears.

PING-PONG KNOCKS AT INTRAMURAL PORTALS DEMANDING RECOGNITION

Dormitories and Fraternity Houses Have Dedicated Rooms in Which Strenuous Campaigns and Even Tournaments Are Waged in the Interest of Rising Game.

In those little by-ways and highways in which the students congregate, there has been heard, in increasing volume during the past several weeks the insistent demands that ping-pong be recognized by the intramural athletics department of the University; plans have been verbally formed with which to petition "Bo" Shepherd to satisfy the indoor athletes who spend hours at the ping-pong board. To the observant bystander of this rapidly rising feeling on the campus, it appears that it will not be long before the adherents of the ancient and mystic order of Ping-Pong will take measures in their own hands in order to instigate a campus-wide tournament, or at least, an inter-fraternity contest.

Several of the dormitories have dedicated what was formerly known as the social room, or general lounge room of the dormitory to the modern sport, and Aycock dorm prides itself upon the fact that as early as last Spring quarter no one but ping-pong enthusiasts were permitted in the general social room of that building. But at this writing, the center of the new pastime finds itself in the fraternity houses; in the newer houses, where there are side-porches, and several living rooms, there have been set up tables and nets, as well as referee chairs and places for spectators. In the older houses, where the finance committee has not as yet learned the various schemes of floating new, bigger, and better lodges, the group who are yearning for the resounding smack of the racquet upon the celluloid ball, the boys who dash in after classes, regardless of letters, work or even the "show" and scramble for "next" at the ping-pong table—those boys have converted the largest available bed-room into a sacred shrine and place of worship at the altar of Parker Bros.' game.

Practically every fraternity has held a ping-pong tournament, or are in the middle of one now. These elimination contests are not the inocuous things that the casual reader may believe they are, merely because they are played indoors with a ball that weighs almost nothing, and with a racquet the size of a well-done hotcake. No, indeed, all the zest, all the fire, all the fight that goes into a football game, or a tennis match are present at one of the ping-pong games. In one house's back room, a trunk has been pulled up near the table, and a chair placed upon the trunk, and in that chair much like the umpire at an international tennis match, sits the referee, calling each shot, and keeping accurate scores. The excitement that is an integral part of every sport worthy of the name is present in the ping-pong games—participants get sore, try to "kill" the ball, sometime they doubt the accuracy of the referee's judgments, and there is much yelling and screaming, etc., etc. Occasionally two persons who have never been well-disposed towards each other are pitted against one another in the round-robin, and although they begin passively enough, it isn't long before one of them lets forth an acrimonious howl, and it does happen that the loser, who feels that another lost point won't matter anyway, will carefully slam the ball with all he has in the general direction of his opponent's face.

Yes, indeed, there are all sorts of little knicks and knacks in this gentle sport that is sweeping the former yo-yo fans, and professional non-athletes from their former almost impregnable positions.

Another pretty good memory test is to try to remember the names of as many as two of the 59 titans who rule this land of the free and the home of the Noble Experiment.—Macon Telegraph.

Large Crowds Watch Civic Clubs Bowl

There was a large crowd of loyal rooters on hand Monday night, Nov. 10, to watch the city's Civic Clubs battle in their first league game of the season.

The Lions Club team displayed championship class, taking all three games from the Kiwanians with a total of 1339 pins as against a total for the Kiwanis team of 1162 pins.

The A. B. C. Club captured high honors for the evening in pins gathered, their total for the three games being 1355, to beat the Monarchs two games out of three.

It has been officially announced that the American Legion will enter the Civic League during the next few days, and it is interesting to note that at the University of North Carolina an Inter-Fraternity League will be started. This league is now under way and will start in the next few days. Bowling is now fast becoming a recognized sport among the collegians at the up-to-date colleges. The formation of this league is being looked forward to with eager anticipation. This entire league is being sponsored by the Durham Bowling Center.

At The Carolina

The Carolina offers a program this week containing several attractions of merit, so well advertised and with stars whose names are so well known that reports of their worth have gone well before their arrival.

The feature Monday and Tuesday, Amos 'n' Andy in their first talking picture "Check and Double Check," affords an excellent example. These two radio characterizations, for that of course is how they are best known, are appearing in a picturization of their radio story, and as a picture it follows faithfully in the path of action and characters that these inimitable entertainers deal with every time they broadcast. The Kingfish and Madame Queen are among the chief characters, and the audience sees on the screen that remarkable vehicle, the Fresh Air Taxicab, as well as the sacred room of the Mystic Knights of the Sea.

Supporting players include such stars as Irene Rich, Sue Carol, and Charles Morton. An added feature of interest is Duke Ellington and his orchestra, whose pieces "Three Little Words" and "Ring Dem Bells" have been in themselves extensive advertising for the production.

The attraction Wednesday is Jack Oakie in "Only Saps Work." This well known comedian has been extremely prolific in the number of his pictures, and "Only Saps Work" furnishes another vehicle for his wide diversity of characterizations.

A picture that should be of interest to everyone, not only because of its different and unusual treatment of a now common theme, the World War, but also because of the moving and dramatic realism of its entire course, is "War Nurse," coming Thursday. This production, starring Anita Page, June Walker, Robert Montgomery, and Robert Ames, is a vitaphone dramatization of the anonymously autobiographical story, under the same name, that was serialized in a popular weekly magazine only a few months ago. The serial attracted wide publicity for its frank and startling revelations of the lives led by nurses near the front during the war, and this picture that now follows in the lead of the story has shirked no realistic feature in presenting all the tragedy and bitter sacrifice, and all the unconventionality and casting-aside of stilted puritanism that made for relief from and forgetfulness of horror.

William Haines's latest release, "Remote Control," is scheduled for Friday. This feature, combining a mystery plot with comedy situations (enhanced by Polly Moran as a "beauty expert"), is laid "behind the scenes" in station WPN. This novel setting is introduced to further the plot, which has to deal with the actions of a band of crooks who receive their directions over the radio from their leader.

Victor McLaglin will be seen Saturday in his newest picture, "A Devil With Women." In this, McLaglin is seen as a vagabond soldier-of-fortune, whose vocation is fighting and whose avocation is women. As a captain in the army of a little Central American republic the hero battles a bandit revolutionist-leader.

Y CABINETS WILL MEET TOMORROW

The junior-senior, sophomore, and freshman cabinets of the Y. M. C. A. will meet tomorrow night at seven-fifteen o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. Programs have been arranged for each of the meetings.

A general business meeting is to be held by the junior-senior cabinet. The committees will make their reports, and plans for the Orange County relief campaign are to be discussed. Human relations topics are the subjects for discussions. No speaker has been scheduled as yet.

An open forum discussion on international relations has been arranged for the sophomore cabinet. Special attention will be given to the United States' relations to the world. The discussions will be along the lines of the recent lectures given by Drs. Metzenthin and Woodhouse.

PLAY READING ON WEEK'S PROGRAM

The calendar for this week contains many events of interest to Carolina students. This afternoon at four o'clock Edward Eigenschenk will give an organ recital at the organ concert dedicating the Music Hall.

On Monday night at seven o'clock in room 103, Bingham hall Dr. C. L. Holmes, chief of the division of farm management and costs of the United States department of Agriculture in Washington, D. C., will address the local chapter of the Taylor society. His topic is: "Technique and Economics in the New Farm Management." This meeting will be open to all those interested in the subject. At seven-thirty, the Messiah Chorus will be heard in the Music Hall.

Friday night, November 21, at ten, there will be open house and a dance at the Graduate club.

Next Sunday at four-forty-five Nelson Kennedy will play at a vesper organ concert in the Music Hall. At eight-thirty Paul Green will read his play Tread the Green Grass. The reading will be given in the Playmakers' Theatre; Lamar Stringfield will play his music written for the play. The reading was scheduled for today, but was postponed.

GRAHAM NOT TO BE OPERATED ON

Frank Porter Graham, president-elect of the University, will not be operated on for appendicitis, it was reported yesterday. Mr. Graham has for the past few weeks undergone treatment in Watts hospital in preparation for an operation, but his condition has been found such that this will not be necessary. He will return to his home either tomorrow or Tuesday. It was not stated when he would be able to resume his duties as the University's head.

Landsteiner Wins Prize

Dr. Karl Landsteiner, of Rockefeller Institute, received the Nobel prize of about $48,000 for his work in pathology and immunology, according to an announcement by the Stockholm Faculty of Medicine. The recipients of the prizes for chemistry, physics and literature will be revealed next month.

Randall at N. C.

Greensboro, November 15.—Dr. John Herman Randall, professor of philosophy at Columbia university, comes to North Carolina College Monday and Tuesday for two lectures under the auspices of the lecture course. "Religion in the Modern World" and "Contemporary Philosophic Tendencies" are his subjects.

advanced the ball to the seven yard line. Fraley added the point. Once again in the second quarter Davidson was placed in scoring position but lacked the power to force the ball over the final marker.

The remainder of the game saw both teams striving to score before the end of the half, with Carolina launching a fruitless aerial attack and Brohard endeavoring to break into the open on one of his sensational dashes.

The veterans' hospital in Lincoln, of which Dr. Webb has just been made commanding officer, is entirely new. Dr. Webb is now furnishng the building, installing medical equipment and organizing the medical and and nurses' staff.

New Chi Psi Lodge Still Problematic

The Chi Psi fraternity is drawing up plans for building a new house to replace the one which burned during the Christmas holidays last year. At present the members have no house but are boarding at 315 Cameron avenue in the portion of the house which was not destroyed by the fire.

The members of the lodge have not yet agreed on the plans of the new house, but it may be built sometime this year. It is thought that the building will be of stone. The probable location is unknown.

Tracing the development of events which, he said, had led to "the electrification and Americanization of the world," Mr. Graham divided the last 500 years of history into three periods.

The first period, he said, was marked by the "Europeanization of the world, dramatically inaugurated in the discovery of America by Columbus and the founding of Africa by Vasco de Gama in the 15th century."

He referred to the second as "The Britainification of the world." In the 18th century the Watts steam engine set in motion "the tremendous influence of Britain, resulting in a procession of steam engines around the world."

It is now in the 20th century, Mr. Graham said, "that we enter the third period, and we have the electrification and Americanization of the world.

"One of the most powerful factors in these contemporary processes," Mr. Graham said, "is the American motion picture, as it proceeds to introduce American ideas, customs, music, and speech to all the peoples of the earth, thus paving the way for commerce and industry and international goodwill that results from understanding.

"The American movie is conquering the world. This means that the producers and exhibitors are charged with a great responsibility. We believe that standards are rising with mechanical and human technique, as you not only multiply contacts but also have the opportunity potentially to enrich the content of our lives!"

This State Spends More for Luxuries Than for Education

ing gum, theatres and similar items for every $1 spent for schools, stated the bulletin. The nation spends $6,401,650,000 for the limited list of articles and amusements given above, while all the public schools are allotted $2,448,633,561.

"In presenting these figures," comments the bulletin of the National Education Association, "it is not implied that one should limit himself wholly to the necessities of life. We should not be willing, however," it says in effect, "to give luxuries preference over essentials in the spending of our income."

His talk to the staff tonight will be the third of a series given by journalistic men here on the campus. Oscar Coffin, head of the journalism department, was the first speaker of the series, and J. Maryon Saunders, Alumni secretary of the University, and editor of the Alumni Review, the second. Both of these speakers took up the work of the daily paper and commented on it. Suggestions were also made to remedy some of the defects in the publication.

"This policy of securing journalists to speak weekly to the staff will be carried out throughout the year," stated the managing-editor. It is his plan to get not only men on this campus but also newspaper men from some of the surrounding cities to address the Daily Tar Heel staff.

All members of the staff who will be unable to attend this meeting tonight must turn in an excuse to the managing editor before the meeting is convened.

GRADUATE SCHOOL EXPANDS RAPIDLY IN LAST DECADE

Has Played Important Part in Building National Reputation For University

From 145 students in 1920 to 734 for the year June 1929—June 1930 is the record of the phenomenal growth of the graduate school during the past decade. Five hundred seventy-two higher degrees, including seventy-one doctorates, have been awarded by the graduate school during this ten year period.

The first active steps toward the establishment of a graduate school at the University were taken in 1881 and the first degrees awarded in 1883. In 1904 the graduate school was organized as a distinct school with the late Alphonso Smith as its dean. Dr. Charles Lee Raper succeeded Dr. Smith in 1909 and Dr. Greenlaw succeeded Dr. Raper in 1920. At the resignation of Dr. Greenlaw in 1925, Dr. James F. Royster was appointed to the position. Dr. W. W. Pierson, present dean of the graduate school received his appointment this past summer.

The fine reputation made by the graduate school during its existence was one of the chief causes for the University of North Carolina being taken into the exclusive Association of American Universities back in 1922. There are only two other Southern institutions to hold this honor, namely, Virginia, and Texas. In 1924 the University of North Carolina held the vice-presidency of the Association, and in 1925, the presidency.

The important part played by the graduate school in building up the national reputation the University now holds is shown once again in the testimony offered by Professor Frederic A. Ogg in his survey of the humanistic and social sciences for the American Council of Learned Societies. He stated in his survey that "the leadership in the new research movement in the South is traceable to one institution, and to certain men and women in it, namely, the Uni-

Instead of showing a room with walls and ceiling, only the wood work, including the windows, doors, chimney, and paneling will be shown. This skeleton-work scenery will be used throughout. It will also be presented in modern style.

The cast: John Worthing (Earnest), Henry Wood, III.; Algeron Moncrieff, William B. Figgat; Reverend Canon Chasuble, D. D., Theodore F. RARE EDITIONS IN LIBRARY DISPLAY

Additional material relating to Virgil is now on display in the main floor corridor of the general library. This material is drawn from the Hanes Foundation for the Study of the Origin and Development of the Book.

This material illustrates the development of printing as evidenced in the various editions of Virgil published from late in the 15th century down to the 18th century. Of special interest because of its beauty, is a facsimile from an illuminated page of the Koberger edition published at Nurnberg in 1492.

The facsimiles of the 18th century edition are fine examples of the revival of fine printing which took place at that time. Led by Charles Baskerville, a Birmingham printer who brought out his edition of Virgil's Bucolics and Georgics in 1757, other continental printers produced similar handsome editions of the poet's works. Illustrated in this exhibit are the editions by Bodoni of Italy and Didot of Paris. Both of these follow the same monumental and austere school of typography established by Baskerville in England.

Phi Will Discuss Modern Woman

Two bills will be on the calendar of the Phi Assembly when it convenes tonight in New East building at 7:00 in its weekly meeting. These bills are: Resolved, That the emergency of women from the home is a regretable feature of modern life. 2. Resolved, That swimming be added to the athletic program of the University of North Carolina.

GLEE CLUB WILL VISIT MEREDITH

Program of Folk Songs To Be Presented December 6.

The University of North Carolina Glee Club, which has gained a unique reputation in the last few years for its wonderful work in the realm of music, will present its first concert at Meredith College on Saturday, December 6, at 8 o'clock.

The North Carolina Glee Club, which captured first honors at the Southern Intercollegiate Glee Club contest last year, is preparing an excellent program of Russian and Finnish folk songs to be offered at the Raleigh concert.

Professor Harold S. Dyer, director of the Carolina Glee Club, has done a great deal to add to the already extensive repertoire of the club since last year, and much work has been done on perfect range, tonal qualities, enunciation, interpretation, and ensemble singing during the last few months. It is sincerely hoped that the people of Raleigh will not miss the opportunity to hear this famous Glee Club.

The concert is being sponsored by the senior class of Meredith College.

The club will probably contain thirty members for the concert, many of whom were members of last years' championship club.

Freshman Usher Defies Art But Loses To Stringfield

By A. N. C.

Stories like "this" are best published several days after they have actually occurred. The tale has a moral, and as such, should be viewed in a most objective manner.

A week ago, the Playmakers' gave their first bill of the season. And, as usual, the faculty orchestra played their three or four selections before the first curtain and during the intervals between plays. But, not as usual, the faculty orchestra, was decidedly good. Much of this improvement was attributed to the conducting of Lamar Stringfield, the young and distinguished composer and musician who is now making his home in Chapel Hill. With all the gusto of a Toscanini, and the fire of a Stokowski, Mr. Stringfield drew forth from those yearning souls who in their all-too-infrequent hours console themselves with their instruments, a type of music that has long been unheard in the Playmakers' Theatre. Gesticulating his baton as Theodore Thomas or Frederick Stock did and do, the conductor seemed to epitomize to the music-starved audience all that which Music, the gentlest and most artistic of the arts, can be.

On Friday night, as on Thursday, the orchestra and Mr. Stringfield gave their interpretation of The Merry Wives of Windsor. And, as is the custom, they reentered the pit as the curtain fell upon the first offering. The last man of the orchestra wandered in, sat down before the music stand and commenced to tune his instrument. But it was not quite comfortable in the pit, for the door leading thereto was open, and a decided cold draft was being wafted upon the backs of the musicians. The 'cellist nearest the door attempted to close it, but an unctious usher, a freshman, who clothed in a shining dinner jacket, and the importance of the position, told the 'cellist that the door had to remain open in order to ventilate the dressing rooms in the rear. A violinist got up to tell the youth that it was most uncomfortable to play with that chill wind in the pit. The youth remained adamant. A bassoon approached the small group and told the usher that he didn't see any reason why the door could not be shut. The young student stuck by his refusal.

In the meantime, the audience was a bit restless, Mr. Stringfield was a bit annoyed to see that the attention of the orchestra was now centered upon the discussion about the door. And in two short steps, he left his position at the conductor's stand and soon joined in the group. He more or less told the boy that the door had to be closed. The usher, not recognizing the voice of Art, as well as authority, tried to explain why he thought the door should remain open. And Mr. Stringfield's patience now taxed too much, spectators in the first few rows heard him announced in an angry tone of voice, deliberately and with force, that "We won't play a damn thing until that door is shut."

Two seconds afterwards, the gentle form of Mr. Selden was seen to remove the chair that held the door open. The orchestra commenced to play; and Mr. Stringfield, happy in his victory, vigorously "laid on" with his baton.

Emergency Situation Comes As Direct Result Of Unemployment

The county welfare office has reported that there were twenty-nine cases reported to that office during the last month for which there were little or no funds. This by no means covers all the cases where there is a need, but only those who came to ask help.

The county each year sets aside $1450 for chronic poor cases and for allowances for old people. This money is being spent on thirteen cases, nine of which are those of old people. The emergency situation which has arisen is not being taken care of by this.

The main cause for the emergency situation is directly or indirectly due to unemployment. Those people who are dependent on wages are the ones in trouble. The city, and specifically the mill centers, are in the worst shape.

As is generally known there has been a great depression in the cotton mills during the past years. Orange county is not alone in this, for it is a general condition in the south. It is pleasing to note that now the mills are coming back a little to normal, after reaching the bottom of depression.

The rural situation is considered better than for the last six or eight years due to the good crops raised this year.

The main line of endeavor is to try to provide the people with work. Many are willing to work, but are unable to find any jobs. The newly opened unemployment bureau in Chapel Hill is trying to help alleviate the pressing condition.

Along with the unemployment comes sickness and starvation. Right now pellagra and tuberculosis are the most common diseases. Many people are living on a starvation diet. In some places the milkmen and grocers have been persuaded to leave milk and supplies at the homes of several needy families, with only the hope of being paid sometime in the indefinite future. With winter coming on, the "going is going to be pretty rough." A cold winter will add the necessity for fuel and warm clothing. People are being aroused to the situation, however, and it is thought that the conditions will be met.

Math Students

Students who have taken trigonometry somewhere else, or here in summer school, and who want to take college algebra in order to satisfy requirements of Mathematics 1 and 2, can do so by registering in the winter quarter for Math 2-E.

Department Meeting

The literature department of the Community Club will meet in the social room of the Methodist church tonight at eight o'clock. Miss Nora Beust of the University library will talk on "Books for Children" and will have books on exhibit.

BIRD SKINS GIVEN BY J. VALENTINE

The University has just received a very notable gift from Dr. J. M. Valentine, a member of the Zoology staff. The donation consists of about 250 bird skins beautifully prepared and admirably showing the natural colors and other outstanding characteristics of the living fowls. The collection is especially strong in large birds, such as hawks, owls, and water fowl, but includes also very many of the smaller land birds. They were collected and prepared by Dr. Valentine, who has been working on them many years. This collection makes an important addition to the museum outfit of the department of Zoology.

Campus Politics On Di Calendar

Members of the Di senate will assemble tonight in their weekly meeting in New West building at 7:00 to discuss the two next questions on the calendar. These bills for the meeting tonight are: 1. Resolved: That there is a necessity for a strong third party in the United States.—Beatty Rector. 2. Resolved: That campus political frame-ups be required to make public their platforms and a list of their candidates, and that official sanction be given frame-ups by printing the names of candidates of respective frame-ups together on the official ballot for election.—McBride Fleming-Jones.

The rule in the constitution to the effect that each member will be required to speak at least once in four successive meetings in order to retain his membership, will be put into use beginning at the meeting tonight, it was reported by the president.

ALUMNI MEETING WILL CONSIDER VITAL PROBLEMS

Several Hundred Representatives Expected to Attend General Alumni Assembly.

"What Has Happened to the Relation Between Teacher and Student at the University of North Carolina?" will be the subject for consideration at the annual General Alumni Assembly of the University in Chapel Hill December 5-6, according to a statement issued here by the board of directors of the asso-

Several hundred representatives of local alumni clubs and officers of class organizations are expected to participate in the sessions of the assembly, which is the legislative body for the more than 14,00 living alumni of the University. Matters of alumnipolicy are determined at the annual assemblies, and alumni opinion on University and other problems are expressed through them.

The 1930 assembly will open with an evening meeting Friday, December 5—the eve of the Duke-Carolina game. Four prominent members of the University faculty will appear on the program, which will be devoted to a consideration of teaching methods and problems during the past several years, the opportunities and duties of maintaining and developing improved undergraduate teaching at the University.

EDITOR YACKETY YACK ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR YEAR

Dunn Gives Reasons for Action Of Editorial Staff in Regard to Fraternity Group Pictures.

By Clyde Dunn

Plans for the 1931 Yackety Yack have brought forth comments which might be expected of any book in the making, both favorable and unfavorable. Persons connected officially with the library, the department of journalism, and the University press have consistently approved the ideas being put into effect by the editorial staff; a few students have murmured discontent with some of the minor details of this year's annual. In formulating plans for a publication, the editor has a natural desire to produce the best book possible, in point of content and beauty.

When undertaken by an editor on his own initiative, the product should be an honest reflection of the editor's personal ideas of what is best. When undertaken by an editor chosen by popular selection, the product should be a portrayal of the selecting body's ideas of what is best. (This seems to proceed logically from the fact that a person is chosen for a position because the people doing the choosing expect that his ideas of what is best coincides closely with their own; otherwise, some other selection would have been made.) Realizing that the position of editor of the University annual falls into the category of one chosen by popular selection, and that he must reconcile his own ideas with those of the selecting students, this article is written in an effort to make clear the reason of the editorial staff in adopting a certain course of action in a section of the book which concerns a sizeable fraction of the student body.

The matter is a minor one, but a consideration of it will serve as an example of the procedure thought proper for such circumstances. The editorial staff shall portray student body opinion in the Yackety Yack; but at the same time, it desires opportunity to make its ideas clear whenever they are not entirely popular.

SIGMA XI INVITES DUKE CHAPTER TO MEETING TONIGHT

The Sigma Xi scientific fraternity will meet tonight at six o'clock in the social room of the Baptist church. The program for this meeting consists in the main of reports on research work that is being done in the department of botany. Several members of the botany instruction staff will render these reports.

Dr. W. C. Coker states that he will continue to discuss the topic "Some Interesting Early American Naturalists." He discussed this subject at the last meeting of the Elisha Mitchell scientific society, but he was unable to complete his discussion

The University chapter of the Sigma Xi has sent invitations to the members of the Duke University chapter, and have also invited them to become Alumni members of this chapter. There are thirty members in the Duke University chapter and a large number is expected to attend the meeting tonight.

Another Layman's Unwanted Opinion

Too frequently since Davidson defeated Carolina students have remarked that the less said about the game the better. While it is preferable to forget unpleasant happenings it would be unwise to overlook the lesson Davidson rather forcibly impressed on the Carolina players and students.

Highly praised by Atlanta sport writers, considered by many to be well nigh impregnable, and by local writers before the opening game Carolina boasts a record to date which proves that football isn't played on reputation or paper. Three conference wins, two losses and one tie is the conference record for the "Paper Champions." A victory over Wake Forest and a loss to Davidson is the record outside the conference. All of which shows that either Carolina was over rated by the dopesters or that the players aren't playing the game of which they are capable. We think it a combination of both.

Collins warned against a "paper championship" team when he said Carolina lacked a seasoned line. "Bull market" gossip was down talked by the coaches from the beginning. Perhaps some of those who discounted their remarks have learned that the coach after all knows considerably more about football than the layman.

Being one of those same laymen who know absolutely nothing of football yet persist in expressing opinions we think there were two causes for the defeat. Obviously Davidson had been pointed for this game ever since Duke defeated them in October. They were out to win. The second cause was obvious to even the poorest critic—somewhere on that team someone was playing "lousy" football.

The game may well be forgotten, but the lesson should be plastered in everyone's mind: champions aren't developed on paper and the little guy likes to come up and sock the big boy one on the jaw.

Ink, But Not Blood

After two years of association with the American college student, we have come to the conclusion that he is a rather spineless and weakly sort of person. We do not claim exemption from this category, but that is beside the question. The undergraduate in this country seems to lack the initiative and firmness of conviction that characterizes the European and Asiatic student.

The foreign student has always taken an active interest in his country's affairs. He has fought with pen for his opinions and with sword when his pen proved insufficient for the occasion. He has sacrificed his life for a cause. He has not hesitated at becoming a revolutionist to overthrow existing orders that deserved destruction. He is a man of opinion and action.

We also take an interest in national affairs, but it is a very luke-warm one. We shy clear of dangerous ground. We press our pens firmly upon paper, but our feet remain safely rooted to campus soil. We are willing to shed ink for our convictions yes, but not blood.—P. L.

Page Pollyanna

No matter how discouraging conditions become in this country there will, in all probability, always be some other one wherein the situation is perceptibly worse. Today politicians, unable to explain satisfactorily the economic depression, are accustomed to fall back upon the assertion that this state of affairs is worldwide in scope. Particularly is this true in regard to Germany, where the people are today burdened almost unbearably with reparations, debts, and other encumbrances, reminders of a conflict which took place fifteen years ago. Verily, the sins of the fathers are visited even to the third and fourth generations.

Unemployment in the United States, according to statistics from the International Labor Office at Geneva, is placed at 4,000,000 (500,000 greater than the figure conceded by the U. S. government), which compares with 3,184,000 unemployed in Germany. But, measured proportionately, one German in nineteen is jobless as compared with one in thirty in America. Add to this the fact that at least a million more, it is estimated, will join the present well-filled ranks of the German unemployed during the winter. Thus handicapped, that nation is forced to disburse annually to the erstwhile allied powers a total of $720,000,000, not to mention huge internal expenditures necessitated as a result of the war. Checkmated in this fashion, German progress remains substantially at a standstill.

Numerous other continental countries are essentially in the same position, and England ranks second only to Germany. There is, in fact, only one country where unemployment may be said to be actually under control—France, with a population only one third that of the United States. Then is our status in this regard so low after all, if considered, as Einstein showed that everything must be considered, relatively?—J. M. L.

OPEN FORUM

THE PACE THAT KILLS

Americans are making a great mistake in continuing at the present rapid living pace. They are too taken up with their work to enjoy life profitably. "Someday," they say, "We'll take a little time out and do some of those things that we've always been planning to do, someday we'll sit back and take the much-needed rest, someday we'll regulate our schedule to our own suiting." But they never do. It's always the same—that someday never does arrive. They've gotten into the habit that holds on with bull-dog tenacity and resolute finality. Even the younger generation can not escape the clutch of the endless merry-go-round of "save time even at the expense of tranquility and heart peace." Every morning they are pulled out of bed by the irresistable force, snatch a bite to eat, and off to school, five and one-half or six hours in the building, then they are whisked home wondering how much studying they can get by with. Nuf Sed.

At home it's the radio to distract the mind. At night it's the show, dance, or night-club. Nobody ever thinks of sitting down by himself, and puffing at his pipe, reflect and rest. You laugh at me when I suggest it? You laugh at me when I say go off into the woods and walk and talk with nature? "What good is there in that? Here! I've got no time to be talking with you in this idle manner!"

And so it goes: eat hurriedly at irregular times, rush off to work at a certain time, late to bed and early to rise ,no mental rest, and worst of all, no peace in the heart.

"When I get a million dollars, I'm gonna—" But he won't! He can't.

To the Editor:

It is with the greatest regret that I read in your columns of the departure of Percy Crosby's "Skippy" after such a very short visit.

I really began to look forward to seeing the witty little figure appear beside my cup of coffee at breakfast and to see him again in the monotonous hours of an English class. Without a doubt, the young gentleman was one of the most popular and best features of the Daily Tar Heel, even taking into consideration the editorials and Open Forum which has recently become as filled as Liberty's "Vox Populi."

So, if my opinion may be considered, I heartily endorse any effort to induce Skippy to make us an early and lasting visit.

SKIPPY FAN.

To the Managing Editor,
The Daily Tar Heel:

Skippy's appearance in your paper was a happy surprise to me, and I eagerly looked forward to the reading of his escapades. Your announcement in today's issue of the Tar Heel that Skippy was leaving for an indefinite period of time brings forth my regrets and if there is anything that can induce him to return—please let me know.

Here's to seeing him in the Daily Tar Heel soon again!

ANDREW J. BATES.

To V. A. D. and all your Spiritual Kith and Kin:

Tell me, V. A. D., did you really believe all you wrote in your Armistice Day editorial about the "glory and inevitability" of slitting throats, or did you cleverly place those dark hues of cynicism against the silvered background of the Day in order to make the former seem all the darker, and thus to overdraw the picture and secretly aid the campaign for enlightenment? I can't give you the benefit of the doubt, for there would then be no excuse for the rest of this letter.

It is notorious that we human animals have learned more about the art of living in the past ten thousand years than many so-called "educated" specimens of the specie believe can be doubled in the next ten million. They are unaware of the depth of the pit from which we are digged, and they assume that we are in our second childhood, ready to tumble back into the pit again. To be sure, it is not only possible, but probable, that a specie, like the individual and the rivers and rocks and stars, has its maturity, its second childhood and finally its extinction. But, as a specie, we are still young, mere infants it would seem, when compared with the termites who have had a civilization, higher in essential respects than ours, for the past 65 million years.

Why, V. A. D., we are just beginning to learn our manners—the fine art of living together. Of course, man is greedy and will always be hungry when he has no food, but when I sit at the banquet table feasting my appetite for beauty on the elegant charm of my table partners, on the scintillating conversation, the stimulation of beautiful clothes and complexions, and on the dream-like reflection of softened light from gleaming silver and china and cutglass, while my stomach is being all but unconsciously satisfied, thanks to the high art of eating unobtrusively and to the genius of the chef . . . . it is then that I am glad that thousands of years of trial-and-error-and-trial again lie between me and that ancestor of mine, guarded from the cold by dried skins reeking with the stench of stale sweat and blood, snatched a hunk of raw meat from his grunting mate and guzzled it down, with fingers and chin dripping. Our babies would grow up to fill their bellies that way if they were not trained otherwise. Didn't you ever see a little boy eat a live caterpillar? But, laboriously and patiently we teach the little savages, adding our bit to what we were taught. Thus eating becomes more and more an art, a ritual of beauty and communion so devoid of its primitive ugliness and glaring utilitarianism that we take our bread and wine to the altar as the climax of our worship. And, the fine art of eating has become so much a part of some folks that it does not fail them in most emergencies, in fact, it prevents many emergencies.

My dear old Grandfather's lip curled when he spoke of a neighbor who once refused to challenge another neighbor, who had "insulted" him, to a duel. (In case our younger friends have never heard of a "duel," the dictionary of obsolete terms will tell them that it was a private war of one battle. The swords were really sharp, and the guns spat persuasive bullets.) The other day an American in Paris, slapped in the face by a glove and challenged to meet the volatile native in the woods at daybreak, accompanied by his "second" (manager, dear children), merely glanced up from the table with an apologetic grin, and said, "Don't be silly. Sit down and lets talk it over." That took all the thrill out of it, and the crowd went on dancing, leaving the two unapplauded. Grandfather, I am sure, turned his face away from a sun that would shine upon such a race of cowards, but his grandchildren merely rejoice that the youthful art of living together is learning to comb its hair and wash behind its ears.

And, so with war, V. A. D. We're learning. We're still human, you and I, and as needful of security as our ancestors, but, as the world of us grow into intelligent gentlemen and ladies we'll shed our boyhood fist-fights, looking back upon them with a sense of humor and with gratitude that we did not run away from them when there was no better way of settling among ourselves the trouble of childhood. We'll learn eventually. I know we will, for we have learned so much already, and none of it came easily. The only question is: Can we learn it quickly enough?—N. W. L.

STEPPING INTO A MODERN WORLD

It looms up large in their lives

The telephone has a big place in the daily lives of most people today, but its place will be even bigger tomorrow.

Its importance has been fostered by the work of men in all phases of the telephone business and no little part has been taken by those engaged in selling. They have helped to effect an increase of more than three and a half million Bell telephones in the last five years. In the same period they have been instrumental in making the public realize more completely the telephone's usefulness. Result: an increase from 49,000,000 calls per day to 65,000,000.

For men with a leaning toward sales promotion, the opportunity is there!

SOUTHERN CROSS COUNTRY MEET HERE SATURDAY

Fast Field Expected to Enter Conference Run Which Comes Here for Second Year.

V. P. I. GOBBLERS FAVORED

Carolina, Champion for Four Years, Has Team Composed Largely of Sophomores.

Indications are for a large, fast field for the seventh annual Southern Conference cross country run, to be held over Carolina's 5-mile course Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

Forty harriers have already been entered from five conference institutions tonight—Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, V. P. I., all participants last year, and Virginia, not represented last season.

Carolina has yet to announce its entries, and reports are expected the first of the week from Georgia Tech, Duke, Washington and Lee, and Clemson, all of which had teams last year, and possibly from Alabama and Auburn.

V. P. I. looms team favorite despite a close 27-29 early season loss to Carolina, champions for four successive years. Carolina has largely a sophomore team on which Captain Baucom is the only letterman.

The number and calibre of stars already entered give evidence that the field will be fast.

Miles of V. P. I., who finished third last year, ran the Carolina course in a dual meet this fall in twenty-seven minutes and thirty-four seconds, just a half-minute short of the winning time last year, and was closely pushed by Captain Baucom of Carolina, who was sixth in the conference run last season.

Barnhardt of Georgia, Captain Heizer of Duke, Ayres of Florida, and Elder and Carter of V. P. I. finished well up in the runing last year, and are reported as better this season.

Fisher of V. P. I., and Holder and Lauck of Virginia are newcomers expected to make the old heads step to win.

VIRGINIA POINTS TO CAROLINA IN TURKEY DAY TILT

New Cavalier Stadium Will Not Be Finished in Time for Game.

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

University, Virginia, November 17.—Virginia and North Carolina will both take time to catch their breath this week before settling down to prepare for their thirty-fourth annual gridiron meeting. This year the Thanksgiving day game is scheduled for Lambeth field.

The Carolinians have won the last three games and are doped to take the one this season. If Virginia is to have it otherwise they'll have to keep busy through all the nine practice periods that remain before the holiday.

Virginia had hoped to have her new stadium ready for this contest. The Cavaliers dedicated Kenan stadium down in Chapel Hill in 1927 when they were defeated by the Tar Heels for the first time since 1922. They wanted to return the compliment.

But the stadium can't' be completed until next spring and it won't be dedicated until the fall of 1931. That lets North Carolina out as far as the dedication is concerned. But it does not mean that the game here won't be just as interesting as if it took place on the new field.

Virginia will be out to redeem a poorer than average season by downing the North Carolinians. Most of the sideline experts will say it can't be done, but the Cavalier players themselves think differently.

North Carolina, on the other hand, hasn't had all the success that was expected of them when the fall campaign got under way. They'll be scrapping all the harder to swamp the Virginians as they did last Thanksgiving. If they can do this and then go on to defeat Duke they'll have another record to be proud of, despite losses to Georgia and Tennessee.

Neither team has a game for next Saturday. This day has been set aside for the annual game between Virginia and Carolina first year teams to be played in Chapel Hill. Last fall the young Cavaliers defeated the Tar Babies 6 to 0. This season neither club has had outstanding success. Both will be ending their campaigns with this contest.

The jack of all trades is the dollar.—Thomas E. Pickerill Service.

By K. C. Ramsay

OUT-SCORED, "OUT-FIRST downed," out-played, and out-fought Saturday, the Tar Heels lost the last resemblance of the 1929 high-scoring eleven as they were defeated by little Davidson. And to top the climax the students in the stands did not seem to be particularly concerned as to the outcome. In the closing two games of the season the Tar Heels, who have been favored in almost all of their starts this season, will be rated as underdogs.

The stubborn defense which was exhibited for sixty minutes against the bruising attack of Georgia Tech's Yellow Jackets was absolutely lacking in the Wildcats' lair Saturday. Except for a sustained drive exhibited throughout the entire first quarter, there is little that can be said about the showing of the team.

BY THIS WE DO NOT MEAN that the Tar Heels are doomed to lose to Virginia and Duke, but we most certainly mean that a reoccurrence of the listlessness of last Saturday will mean defeat. Virginia showed a reversal of form in downing Washington and Lee, and Duke kept up its victory march, annexing their seventh straight at the hands of State.

There are ten days between now and the Virginia game and almost three weeks before the annual scrap with Duke. There is sufficient time for the Tar Heels to show a reversal of form and develop into one of the hardest fighting and strongest teams in the south before the last brace of games get underway. But it will take work, and plenty of work, not only by Coach Collins and the squad, but by the student body as well.

WE STUDENTS SHOULD back the team in its work, demand that it keeps in A-1 condition physically and mentally, and cooperate with the cheerleaders in improving organized support of the team. A Rah! Rah! spirit will not help things at all. Far be it from us to solicit a rah! rah! attitude in our own or any other student body. What we need is a departure from the "don't give a d--n" attitude, as was evidenced in the stands last Saturday. If this listlessness is done away with, Virginia, Duke, et al, will be unable to stop the Tar Heel football team; the "underdogs" will be the victors.

NO PRACTICE FOR TEAM YESTERDAY

Heavy Work Preparing for Virginia Game to Start Today; Cerney Says Cavaliers Are Strong.

Coach Collins gave the football team a day off yesterday as a relief from the steady grind under which they have been working for the past few weeks, but this rest will not be for long for the Tar Heels are to start in this afternoon on hard work preparing for the Virginia game.

Failure of the line to charge across the line of scrimmage and of the whole team to block and run interference are reasons why the Davidson Wildcats defeated Carolina Saturday, according to the Carolina coaches. And it will be drills on these fundamentals that will take up the greater part of the workout this afternoon.

This weeks' work probably will include heavy scrimmage in which tackling and coordination also will be emphasized.

The Virginia game is going to be one of the hardest tests of the season, according to Coach Cerney, who says that the Tar Heels will have to play a different type of ball from that which they have played for the past two weeks if they expect to win.

Cerney in scouting the Washington and Lee-Virginia game found a team which is wholly different from the outfit which lost to Duke early in the season. He seems to have met with difficulty at distinguishing between Cavalier linemen and W. and L. backs, so fast were the Virginia forwards charging. Their line averages over 190 pounds and is very fast, and Coach Cerney thinks that Bill Thomas, Beury and Sippley will be the greatest offensive threats for the Cavaliers. He says that Bryant is an able defensive fullback and interference man also. The backs average over 177 pounds.

Sheely Drafted to Fill Sisler's Berth on Braves

Earl Sheely, drafted from San Francisco by the Braves, is expected to be the regular first baseman next year which means the passing of George Sisler.

Merle Hoag, the high-priced recruit from the Coast, is billed to start in center field for the Yankees next season.

RUFFIN CLINCHES DORMITORY TITLE

Wins Over Law School by 20-0; A. T. O.'s Eliminate Phi Gams by 7-0 Score.

Ruffin won the right to play the winner of the fraternity race for the championship of the campus by defeating the law school by a score of 20-0 in the last game of the dormitory league. At no time did the losers threaten to score. Ruffin won the game in the first five minutes of play when Riggs caught a punt on the 20 yard line and ran down the sideline for the first score of the game. Thompson took a pass standing on the goal line for the extra point.

The second touchdown came when Royster dropped a pass behind the goal which was ruled complete because of interference. Riggs took a pass from McBride for the extra point. The last score came on a pass, McBride to Riggs, for the touchdown and extra point. McBride's passing, Riggs' running and passing featured for Ruffin, while Hutchinson's passing with Eubanks on the receiving end was good for several good gains for the losers. Eubanks, especially deserves credit, making some pretty catches of bad passes.

The A. T. O.'s won a close one from the undefeated Phi Gam's in the last three minutes of play, to win the right to play the winner of the D. K. E. vs. Beta's game for the fraternity championship, the winner of which will play Ruffin for the campus championship.

The Phi Gam's had the game sewed up apparently, when Smith of the A. T. O.'s scooped up a bad punt by Morrissey and cut down the sidelines for forty yards and a touchdown. The extra point came on a pass, Smith to Brooker, who just made it on a dive across the line. The Phi Gam's led in first downs 3-2 but failed to make a serious attempt for a touchdown, threatening only once, Hubbard intercepting a pass on the 23 yard line, the A. T. O.'s taking the ball on downs and punting out of danger. Hubbard and Morrissey, for the Phi Gam's, and Smith and Brooker, for the winners, led the attack for their respective teams.

PINDER MAY SEE ACTION IN GAME WITH TAR HEELS

University, Virginia, November 17.—Ben Pinder is one of Virginia's relief backs who will probably see much action in the Thanksgiving game with Carolina on Lambeth Field.

Pinder, whose home is in Richmond, came to Virginia by way of Episcopal High School. Last fall he carried the burden of the attack with the 'Daffodil" eleven, but this season he has been with the varsity and has been threatening to break into the starting lineup for the last few games.

Against Pennsylvania it was Pinder who distinguished himself by carrying over a touchdown, the first the Cavaliers have scored against the Quakers since 1901. But since that he has been carrying around a charley horse that has kept him from doing his best.

PINDER

Pinder went into the V. P. I. game last week just in time to aid in the 74 yard march of the Cavaliers for their second touchdown. And he played first class football during all the remainder of the contest. He is a hard ball carrier and an accurate passer in addition.

This Richmond lad has even more skill on the diamond than on the gridiron. He played third base for the Cavalier nine last spring and was generally rated as the best man in the infield. He'll be back on this bag again next spring playing under Gus Tebell who is now instructing him as assistant coach in charge of the backfield.

Pinder is not a big man, for he weighs only 156 and stands five feet, eight inches. But he is a fine natural athlete with an aggressive spirit when in competition—which counts much more than mere poundage.

Art Club Meeting

The second meeting of the Art Students' Club will convene this afternoon at 4:30 in the new quarters of the club, room 1, Person hall. Those desiring to become members are invited to attend.

PROFESSOR FINDS FOSSILS IN WEST

Rhinoceros Buried In Kansas During Pliocene Age.

According to an article in the Daily Kansan, student newspaper at the University of Kansas, fossil-hunters under the direction of H. T. Martin, curator of the museum of paleontology at that university, have discovered evidences of the existence of huge rhinoceroses in Kansas during the Pliocene age. These animals were much larger than the common African rhinoceros.

The expedition discovered many valuable fossils which are now housed in Dyche museum of natural history at Laurence, Kansas. Many of these specimens are almost identical with those found in the Gobi desert by the Chapman expedition. Many scientists believe that the cradle of man was the Gobi desert, but it is possible that man existed in western Kansas at the same time, the Pliocene age. If man existed in western Kansas at this time perhaps he was a huge monster living in caves and feeding on the raw flesh of wild animals. No one knows definitely how he traveled. Mr. Martin is confident, however, that some day scientists shall know a great deal more of early man than they do now.

KNIGHTS TO SAIL FOR CHINA SOON

Dr. Edgar W. Knight, professor of education in the University, will leave at the end of this month to go to China where he will act as educational advisor to a staff of eight men representing the Institute for Research in Religious and Social Science. He will sail from Vancouver December 6, and will be accompanied by Mrs. Knight and their daughters, Anne Turner and Jane.

The University has granted Dr. Knight a leave of absence, and he will be away until about July 1.

The men composing the Institute's staff are to make an inspection of schools, colleges, hospitals, and agricultural experiment stations supported by American effort. Dr. Knight's work will have to do with secondary schools and colleges; and in the course of the expedition he will be in Japan for a while to inspect junior colleges there.

Besides the staff commissioned to go China, the Institute has sent a staff to India and will send another to Japan. Dr. Knight, with work in both China and Japan, is the only one who will serve on two staffs.

The headquarters of the staff will be located in Shanghai, and the members will go from there to visit various other cities. The length of the stay there will probably be about six months.

STUDENTS BRING BACK MOSASAUR

Geologic students of the Mississippi A. and M. returned from an expedition trip lately bearing with them rewards of their work in the form of a Mosasaur of the Cretaceous. It is claimed that this large reptilian animal roamed the Cretaceous seas at least fifty million years ago.

The creature itself, which made its way around through the water by means of huge flapper feet like that of seals, is an elongated animal much like a modern Congo Snake. The length of the monster is somewhat over thirty feet.

This is the second valuable find that the geologic students have brought in, the other being the remains of a smaller creature.

Archeologists have found an upright skeleton, the arm extended, palms up. Doubtless an ancient winter resort.

Duke Graduate Club Elects Its Officers

At the last meeting of the Duke University graduate club, Rodolfo O. Rivera, of Barraquitas, Porto Rico, was elected president of the organization.

The membership of the club is composed of students in the graduate school of arts and sciences and their chief aim is to bring prominent speakers to the Duke campus during the year.

Dr. Charles A. Ellwood of the department of sociology at Duke, spoke at the club's last meeting on the subject, "Social Education in the United States."

will speak on "The Teaching Process." His address will deal with the problems of classroom and laboratory instruction.

Dean Dudley D. Carroll of the University school of commerce will discuss the problems dealt with in the offices of the deans. He will explain the advantages resulting from the establishment of faculty offices and appointment of administrative officials for each of the University's academic divisions, and point out some of the difficulties confronting the deans.

"Personal Direction and Advice" will be the subject of Dean of Students Francis F. Bradshaw's address. Problems of counseling and directing students in their difficulties will be considered by Dean Bradshaw. He will also outline the work of the University's bureau of vocational information, including vocational placement and personnel direction.

Dr. English Bagby, well known authority on psychology and member of the University faculty, will discuss the changes resulting from the passing of the personal type of instruction by professors who were intimately acquainted with their students and who taught them informally about a wide variety of subject matter, and the substitution of the modern impersonal, specialized type of teaching.

The regular business session of the Alumni Association will meet Saturday morning, December 6. Reports from local alumni clubs will be received, membership canvasses tallied, and discussion on local alumni activities conducted. Reports of the alumni secretary, general treasurer, and representatives on the University Athletic Council will be rendered and acted upon. Balloting will be continued until December 31, the new officers taking over their duties January 1.

University alumni have already exhibited unusual interest in this year's assembly. President-elect Frank Graham's policies and administration during the less than six months that he has occupied his position have aroused wide-spread interest, and the alumni have enthusiastically approved his plans for the advancement of education in North Carolina.

Business Staff

The regular business staff of the Daily Tar Heel will meet tonight at 8:30 in the basement of the Alumni building. The business manager requests that all members be present, and invites any new men who wish to try out for a position on the staff.

EDITOR YACKETY YACK ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR YEAR

The matter which has just been referred to is that of pictures in the fraternity section of the annual. In reviewing former University yearbooks with a view to improvement, the editorial staff decided upon a change from individual pictures of men in their respective fraternities to group pictures of each fraternity. Too, it was agreed that a picture of each fraternity house would appear on the page with the group of fraternity members. The reasons for the change from individual to group pictures were numerous. In the first place, the idea of fraternity would be better exemplified by a group picture than by a number of individual pictures. In the second place, group pictures would lend consistency to the section: some fraternities do not have pictures of freshmen members on their page of individual pictures. In the third place, freshmen and sophomore members would be saved the price of having individual pictures made. In the fourth place, the beauty of the book would be enhanced by eliminating the objectionable dark background necessary in the case of individual pictures. In the fifth place, many fraternities have group pictures made during the year, and doing so for the Yackety Yack would save the trouble of a later engagement. In the sixth place, it is fair to conjecture that group pictures would be better representations of the individual fraternities: it is easier to have a whole group present for one picture than to have every member fill appointments throughout the year; also mistakes sometime occur in placing the individual pictures in the correct fraternity.

And so defense is made of the editorial staff's action in one instance, in the hope that the reasons behind such action seem adequate. If the students judge these reasons insufficient to justify procedure, in this or other cases, then the staff will acquiese. However, whatever reason for criticism may be held by dissenting students, it should be weighed against the reasons in the minds of editorial staff members before judgment is passed. It is the purpose of the editor and his staff in producing the 1931 Yackety Yack to put into effect the majority opinion of the students' idea of what is best. However, reason is requested whenever criticism is made; and then, weigh the factors.

versity of North Carolina.

Graduate schools are usually founded for the purpose of training teachers, and for research work. Here at the University, graduate students and members of the graduate faculty in some 200 different departments are devoting a great part of their time to obtain information that has a direct bearing on everyday life in North Carolina. Indeed, Dr. Greenlaw viewed the graduate school as a state laboratory in which experimental work is being done for the benefit of the state as a public enterprise and for the benefit of private economic and business organizations. The results of their work are printed regularly in bulletin form and available to anyone desiring them through the University library.

Research work received a great impetus through the formation of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society, and through the later establishment of studies in philology and the James Sprunt historical studies, these offering additional opportunities for publications on the results of advanced research.

Under these influences, and the leadership of Dr. Pierson, a man who has won high distinction among the scholars of the country, the graduate school seems destined to continue its steady progress. In fact, Texas and North Carolina are now recognized as having the best graduate schools in the South, and from every standpoint North Carolina seems ideally located to take the lead in the Southern graduate field.

Y. M. C. A. STARTS DRIVE FOR RELIEF OF COUNTY POOR

Three Cabinets, 250 Strong, Will Canvass Campus for Thanksgiving Offering.

Plans for a Thanksgiving drive for funds from the University campus to be employed for poor relief in Orange county were presented to each of the three Y. M. C. A. cabinets Monday evening. The "Thanksgiving offering" of the students will be turned over to the county welfare department to be used as the department finds need for it.

Explaining the plan before the cabinets, Mr. H. F. Comer, secretary of the Y, declared that suffering from disease and undernourishment in the spring could be reduced considerably by relief in the early winter months. Unemployment, in Orange county as elsewhere, is at its peak this year and the poverty of the community demands immediate relief.

It is the intention of the more than 250 members of the Y cabinets to begin a systematic and thorough canvass of the campus beginning promptly at 9:30 next Monday night. The bell in South building will be rung at that time to notify the campus of the beginning of the campaign.

A business meeting for the freshman firendship council, an open forum discussion of foreign relations and Germany's reparations debt, and a series of committee reports for the junior-senior cabinet, were the regular programs for the three groups.

PLANS FOR FALL DANCES OUTLINED BY GERMAN CLUB

Officers of the German Club announce that there will be five Thanksgiving dances on Friday and Saturday, November 28 and 29, in Bynum gymnasium. The set includes dances Friday afternoon, and night, Saturday morning, afternoon, and night. Weidemeyer's orchestra from Huntington, West Virginia, will play.

The German Club usually stages the dances in Swain hall because of the large number of visitors in for the Thanksgiving game. Since the Carolina-Virginia game will be played in Charlottesville, the place of the dances is changed to the gymnasium. The hall will be embellished in Thanksgiving colors, the decorations being arranged by a local firm.

At a meeting of the German club earlier in the fall, Clyde Dunn was elected leader of the set with Edward Wood and Henry Anderson to assist. Robert Carmichael will lead the sophomore hop with Arlindo Cate and Elliott Newcombe assisting.

Will Yarborough, treasurer of the club, announces that the members may get their tickets from him at the S. A. E. house. He will be there directly after supper and at chapel period.

NO UNIVERSITY SERMONS

W. D. Toy, professor of German and chairman of the faculty committee on University sermons, has announced that there will be no sermons this year. There have been no sermons for the last two years, although it was the custom previously to have several delivered each year by distinguished clergymen.

A. B. Seniors

All seniors in the college of liberal arts whose last name begins with W, X, Y, or Z, must report today to Dean Hobbs' office, 203 South, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m. to make application for a degree.

TAYLOR SOCIETY HEARS HOLMES ON FARM MANAGING

Government Agricultural Chief Tells Society of New Methods in Farming.

"The machination of cotton and wheat production has caused a revolution in the cotton and wheat industries," Dr. C. L. Holmes, chief of the division of farm management and cost of the United States Department of Agriculture, told the Taylor Society in an address at the University Monday night.

Dr. Holmes was the second speaker on the general subject of "Modern Management" which has been chosen by the Taylor Society as its subject for the year. General Rees, assistant vice-president of he American Telephone and Telegraph Company, was the speaker at the first meeting.

"The Technique and Economics in the New Farm Management" was the subject of Dr. Holmes' talk. He divided agricultural communities into those which produced for commercial purposes and those which produced for home consumption. The South has always been of the former type, he said, as the South has produced principally tobacco and cotton from the earliest days.

With improved machinery in other productive regions the Southeast had been forced to undergo a period of transition caused by changes in technique; more production with less man power was the aim of efficient managers, he said, and the more machinery employed the more land the individual was able to cultivate.

A sifting of the rural population similar to that which occurred among the industrial population of England during the industrial revolution was caused by the machination of the cotton and wheat industry, Dr. Holmes stated. Only those employing efficient methods would survive this revolution which is underway. He said that what was happening in the United States was also happening in Russia.

Dr. Holmes discussed the corn belt and the result of the introduction of machinery there.

ABERNETHY FREED BY STATE COUNCIL

Milton Abernethy, State College student on trial for misrepresenting facts in a newspaper story about college cheating, was acquitted Monday night by the State College student council, Dr. Carl Taylor, dean of the graduate school, acted as Abernethy's counsel. He said that the action of the council in recommending Abernethy's suspension ten days ago, was influenced by his unpopularity on the campus.

Editorials from papers from all sections of the state, severely criticizing the council and Dr. Brooks, were read to the council by the defense at the trial.

CITY MANAGER'S ANNUAL REPORT SHOWS INTERESTING STATISTICS

Student Population Equals Number of Permanent Residents in Chapel Hill; Fraternities Number Fifty, With Property Valued at $500,000.

The city manager's report for the fiscal year ending June 1, which was read at the last board of aldermen meeting, revealed information that there are just as many students at the University as there are people residing in Chapel Hill the year round. The assessed valuation of property in the town is but little in advance of the value of the University property; the town's property is valued at $3,680,000, while the University property is worth $3,500,000. The bonded indebtedness of Chapel Hill is $394,000; this amount, however, is being decreased each year. This year the town is paying $34,000 of the total sum owed. The tax rate in Chapel Hill is quite low—only $1.40 on every $100.

There are six churches which own property in Chapel Hill. They are: Baptist, Christian, Presbyterian, Methodist, Episcopal, and Catholic. The total property valuation of all the churches is $800,000. The two banks, Bank of Chapel Hill and Bank of Carrboro, have assets totaling $1,500,000. The Chapel Hill Building & Loan Association has assets of $300,000, with over $600,000 outstanding.

The clubs and lodges of the town are: Community Club, Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, American Legion, Junior Order United American Mechanics, Knights of Pythias, Masonic Order, King's Daughters, Red Cross Society, and fifty collegiate fraternities. The total property value of the fraternities is $500,000.

The University of North Carolina, the Chapel Hill graded school, each with a property value of $3,500,000, and the Chapel Hill Business School are the three educational institutions in the town. There are two parks in the vicinity of the town: Battle Park, 1,000 acres, and the arboretum on the University campus.

The town and University water supply comes from a protected watershed owned by the University. The water is inspected often, and is carefully purified so as to reduce to a minimum the chance of disease.

Electricity is supplied to the town by the Duke Power Company and the University of North Carolina plant.

The fire department is headed by John L. Foister, chief, and three firemen; the division consists of two paid truck drivers and seventeen volunteer firemen. The quarterly inspection of the business district is made by the fire chief and the two paid firemen. For the fiscal year the fire department has answered forty-eight calls which resulted in a fire loss of $24,500. Most of the alarms have been for automobile fires. The low property loss is due to strict inspection of the business district, and fraternity and residential houses.

The division of police is headed by L. B. Lloyd, chief. He is assisted by two patrolmen. Each officer is on duty twelve

STEENE ADVISOR OF ARTISTS' CLUB

Nationally Known Painter Will Serve as Critic for New Organization.

With twenty-eight prospective members present, the Art Students Club, a newly organized art class consisting of members of the student body and interested persons from Chapel Hill, conducted its first active meeting yesterday afternoon. The group convened in the rooms located in Person hall which have been donated by the University for the use of the Art Club.

Bobbie Mason, art editor of the Buccaneer, and chairman of the committee for the organization of the club, presided over the meeting. E. Gibson, a student of the University who has also been very active in this work, outlined the plans of the organization and its probable costs. A constitution and by-laws, drawn up by the committee, was accepted by the members present. W. M. Steene, nationally known artist of Chapel Hill, has offered his services as the active critic and instructor of the class. Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Strudwick of Hillsboro, both well known artists of this section, were present at the meeting, and have volunteered their criticism and aid.

Dean F. F. Bradshaw gave a short talk on the possibilities of such an organization in the University, prophesying that with the proper development and sufficient interest among the club's

COLLEGES AIDING RELIEF OF POOR

Two Carolina Students Contribute Fifty Dollars for Milk Fund.

Colleges and institutions all over the country are helping in some way or other in alleviating the results of the business depression.

Northwestern University has offered to contribute $100,000 to the relief fund in Illinois, provided that the Notre Dame-Northwestern football game will be played in Soldiers' Field, Chicago where many more people can be taken care of than in the Notre Dame stadium.

Union Theological Seminary in New York City has adopted 100 unemployed families for the winter. They have given up their gymnasium, put cots in it, and through a $1,000 a month subscription raised from the faculty and student body of 200, they are able to feed them.

The American Legion in Chapel Hill obtained money through a Sunday movie to help care for the needy ex-service men in this county.

A small fund is set aside by the recorder's court here for use of the poor in Chapel Hill or in the vicinity of five miles.

The King's Daughters have been active in cooperating with the welfare office in bettering the situation.

Two students walked into the welfare office last week with fifty dollars, which was partly used in paying a dairyman for delivering milk to needy families.

Freshman Chapel

All freshmen in the college of liberal arts will meet Dean Hobbs in Gerrard hall this morning at 10:30. The commerce freshmen were supposed to have met Dean Carroll this morning, but the meeting has been postponed. There will be no regular chapel.

ACTIVITIES OF Y SUBJECT RADIO TALK BY HAMER

Second Presentation of Campus Life by University Leaders to Come Over WPTF Today.

Ed Hamer, President of the Y. M. C. A., will broadcast over station WPTF this afternoon at 5:15 in the second of a series of weekly programs concerning student activity on the University campus. Hamer will record the workings of "The Y. M. C. A., what it is, and its relation to student life at the University." In the talk he will outline its purpose, history, program, type of leadership, status on the campus, and what the "Y" is doing in an effort to bring the students into broader spiritual and cultural living.

Red Greene, president of the student union, who instigated the weekly talks last Wednesday with an explanation of undergraduate organizations in general, will preside at the program this afternoon. Next Wednesday Archie Allen, former president of the athletic association, and captain of the boxing team, will speak on athletics at the University. This will be followed the next week by a discourse on student government by Red Greene, and an outline of publication activities by Will Yarborough and Jack Dungan will conclude the present series.

Greene has received several letters already which congratulated the aims of the program, one from New Bern high school saying that student government and the honor system had been put into effect at their school. He says that his primary purpose of the talks is to get the high schools throughout the state to adopt student government and to assist in perfecting their other activities. Most of the letters received are from high schools, and inquire about the organization of undergraduate activities at Carolina.

HONOR STRESSED IN CHAPEL TALK

Dean F. F. Bradshaw talked on honor and honesty before the freshman chapel yesterday. He gave several examples of honesty throughout the world. He stated that in a certain country a religious sect had been formed many years ago whose large plan of religion was honesty. He stated that this sect was still in existence and that the British government recognized the group as one of the best business groups in the world. The sect has never been known to deal dishonestly with any other business group. The whole religion is based on truth and honor. He took several more examples and stated that students should try to copy this group as honor should stand above everything. He stated, "It is better to receive failing grades and do your work honestly than to make good marks otherwise."

RULES GOVERNING CAMPUS DANCES TO BE ENFORCED

German Club Invests Its Power In Student and Faculty Executive Committees.

The German Club, ruling body which has control of all dances presented at the University, has announced the rules which will govern the dances of the forthcoming year.

In order to be able to hold a dance, permission must first be obtained from the Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Dances. Every dance must be conducted only on Friday or Saturday evening, except by special permission of the Faculty Committee, and must be under the auspices and regulations of the German Club. Any organization giving a dance shall select three of its members who will become responsible for the keeping of order at that particular dance, and who will convene with the Executive Committee of the German Club at the next meeting after the dance. Failure in this last duty will engender suspension from giving dances or receptions for a period of two years.

Chaperons for all dances conducted under the auspices of the German Club shall be selected subject to the approval of the Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Dances. Any organization giving a dance which in the judgment of the Executive Committee is not up to their standards shall be prevented from giving any dances over a period to be fixed by the Ger-

H. J. LASKI WEIL LECTURER IN 1931

The University has obtained Dr. H. J. Laski, professor of political science at the University of London, to deliver the Weil Lectures this year. Though no definite time or subject has yet been announced, they will be given sometime during the spring quarter. Dr. Laski, who is also vice-chairman of the British Institute of Adult Education, has made a number of lectures in this country. He will come here after delivering a series of talks at Yale University.

These lectures were established by the University in the years 1914-15 and have been made permanent through the generosity of the families of Mr. Sol Weil and Mr. Henry Weil. The general topic is American citizenship.

President Graham Leaves Hospital

President Graham's condition has improved so much that on Sunday he returned to Chapel Hill from Watts Hospital in Durham. Although his health is good, it is not known whether an operation will be necessary in the future or not. He is not at work, but is spending his time resting at his home and at Watts Hospital in Durham for further examination. It is not certain when he will be able to return to work.

Community Club

Mrs. W. A. Olsen, secretary of the Community Club, announces that there will be a general meeting of the club Friday afternoon, November 21, at 3:30 o'clock in the Episcopal parish house.

To the "Unknown Donor"

Edward Eigenschenk's organ recital of the past week-end as the concert feature of the dedication of the new hall of music brought out clearly two things: first, it proved that the University now has equipment in its department of music the quality of which is hardly surpassed by any other school in the South; second, by reason of the fact that all of the performances were attended by capacity audiences, it showed that the student body and the general public are genuinely interested in local musical development.

For many years the University has felt the need of adequate equipment for its department of music; it has felt it the more keenly because it has realized that a properly equipped conservatory of music is necessary as the first unit of a school of fine arts. The erection of the hall of music and the installation of the fine Reuter organ are regarded by the many who are interested in the fine arts project as important milestones in the path of the ultimate establishment of a special school.

The interest of students in music was demonstrated at Mr. Eigenschenk's performances. In the past the student body has not shown a great deal of interest, but the past week-end revealed that there are great possibilities for the creation of a general interest in music under proper conditions.

To the "unknown donor" of the greater part of our new hall of music we extend our sincerest gratitude. This person has made a very distinctive contribution to our life here and has made possible a more rapid musical advance. If ever a school of fine arts is established here it will be due in large measure to the interest of this individual.—B. M.

Wanted: Student Opinion

In Tuesday's issue of the Tar Heel the editor of the Yackety Yack announced a new departure in the makeup of the annual, which, as he says, has brought forth considerable comment both favorable and unfavorable. He proposes to use group pictures of fraternities and a picture of each fraternity house in the yearbook, instead of the individual pictures used heretofore.

Supporting his position, he maintains that such an arrangement would be cheaper and more satisfactory to the fraternities themselves, would eliminate difficulties and mistakes in editing the book, and would be less trouble to the editorial staff of the Yackety Yack. Opponents of the plan base their objections almost wholly on the better appearance and beauty of individual pictures as compared to group photographs. They illustrate their arguments with a comparison of the annuals of an earlier period and those of recent years. Both opinions have their merits.

As the editor of the book says, he was chosen by the student body and his work on the annual should reflect the ideas of the campus as to what is best. He shows a willingness to act in accordance with student opinion. Before a decision was finally reached in the matter, a member of the Yackety Yack staff sent out cards to each of the fraternities asking for a consensus of opinion as to the advisability of using group or individual pictures. The results of this canvass have never been publicly announced. Since the editor had not at that time explained his position, it is possible that the return brought in by the cards were not found reliable.

The editor of the Yackety Yack, wishes to have some absolute sanction or disapproval of his action. As always, the Open Forum column of this paper is open for an expression of every student's serious opinion.

Carolina vs. Duke

"Will Carolina beat Duke?" Such is the interrogation which is foremost in the mind of every son of Carolina. On paper, Duke looks better; but victories on paper often fail to tally with the outcomes of actual practice. Duke's superior showing to date, although a bolstering factor in Blue Devil stock, will not be sufficient to win the game. A fighting Tar Heel eleven will be in every phase of the encounter on Kenan field, December 6, to turn the tables on the gridiron prophet.

Regardless of who wins the Carolina-Duke game, the general course of events will not be altered; the world will not be thrown into confusion; and the University will not be forced to take a back seat in educational circles, even in the event of a Duke victory. Should such occur, we students will doubtless feel that all is lost, that the most horrible of all grievances has seized upon us. The truth of the matter is that, save for a temporary fluctuation, even the athletic reputations of both institutions will not be drawn appreciably into abnormal channels.

We feel that the keen rivalry between Duke and Carolina is indicative of a wholesome situation. It is our hope that this rivalry may never become so unfortunately personal as to devise a scism, the culmination of emotional folly. The writer of this editorial hopes and believes as strongly as any member of the student body that the Tar Heel team will emerge from the Duke game with the laurels of victory intact. We cannot help advising, however, that it might be well to be prepared for the worst. In no case will there be any need for an emotional outburst.

Strange as it may seem, there is a large portion of the Carolina student body who actually feel that a Duke victory would signalize the downfall of the University of North Carolina. We cannot help but reflect the puerile folly of such persuasion. Actually, as a matter of fact, the outcome of the Carolina-Duke game will be of no significance in the realm of collegiate education. It will be worthy of note only in so far as it is an emphasized adjunct to college life.

Although the writer is as loyal to Carolina as anybody else, he cannot avoid the sincere reflections noted above. Carolina will doubtless beat Duke, but events will not be drawn out of their regular channels.—J. C. W.

Combination Of Ideas

Someone had an idea a little while ago that he has not yet, and so far as we know has not planned, to carry to the very excellent possible finish. Actually, the idea was fortunate; but potentially, miraculous. As it is, the weekly radio talks will inform possible students. And they will perform a spiritual work of mercy by instructing the ignorant who believe that the state university campus is inhabited by inebriated choristers and by nobody else.

But it is possible to carry the radio talks even farther. The adoption of the State College plan and the combining of that with the University plan seems so advisable that it is a genuine pity not to adopt and combine. We broadcast information to prospective students; State broadcasts campus news to alumni. It would be scrupulosity to say that we should not adapt the other state institution's ideas to our own needs.

We can think of no more excellent way of reaching alumni than by radioing campus news and needs. Even the most judicious use of reminiscence and sentimentality is injudicious in print. But it is a power in speech. There is no limit to the possibilities of the radio as an agent of the Alumni Loyalty Fund.—V. A. D.

Another War?

The celebration of the twelfth anniversary of the Armistice scarcely passed before from across the sea came the voice of a German—a leader in the last war—to the effect that two years more will bring Europe into another bitter struggle. Terrible, indeed, are these words coming from a man, who took a prominent part in the last horrible conflict.

If this forecast be true, what has been the use of our treaties, the value of our peace pacts? What good has come from our peace conferences? For what was the League of Nations and the World Court formed? Is it that a country with one hand makes manifestations of peace, and with the other makes enemies of other nations? Man has not yet come to the realization that wars must be abolished. He is still thinking of war, he still has jealousy and hatred in his mind. As long as this keeps on wars will continue. All our treaties are then meaningless and our conferences can do no good.

But then comes the question of how to divert man's mind into other channels. This is rather hard to answer. But as we see the point, the younger generation is growing up with less of this attitude than their parents had. The younger generation has, and is, developing more and more a world consciousness.

What is needed is to supersede our selfish and aggressive nationalism with internationalism, and our social, political, and economic differences with a democracy, a real spirit of brotherhood.—W. W. M.

The division of health consists of Dr. S. A. Nathan, health officer, and the colored nurse. Under this department comes the sanitation of dairies, restaurants, markets, privies, sewage, garbage, the University and the public schools, and the functions of nursing, quarantine, vital statistics, medical service and assistance to the town physicians.

There are five grade "A" raw milk dairies, two grade "A" pasteurizing plants, and eight grade "B" raw milk dairies supplying the pasteurizing plants. For the fiscal year fifty-one employees of the dairies were examined and 395 cows were tested for tuberculosis. Samples of milk were taken from each dairy and bacterial counts were made.

All of the eating establishments are regularly inspected, and all food-handling employees are given a medical examination for typhoid, tuberculosis, and venereal diseases. 219 handlers of food were examined last year.

The health officer has direct charge of the mosquito extermination work, such as weed cutting and oiling of pools. The work of the colored nurse is concerned directly with the colored population, and indirectly with the white population, as over fifty per cent of the colored families have a representative working in homes, eating places, or dormitories of the University. The nurse instructs the negroes in sanitary methods, and is active in promoting clinics and baby shows and in bedside nursing. She assists the welfare department in preparing the patients for hospitals and institutions and accompanies them there. She administers anti-toxin and typhoid and smallpox vaccine in the colored schools. She was successful in combating an outbreak of itch in the colored schools last year. Through cooperation with local charitable organizations, she arranged to have milk supplied to undernourished children. During the past year the health officer made the following quarantines in town: eight cases of influenza, forty-six cases of syphilis, eighteen cases of gonorrhea, forty-five cases of chickenpox, fifty-five cases of diphtheria, twelve cases of pneumonia, twenty-four cases of German measles, three cases of measles, twenty-two cases of whooping cough, and eight cases of scarlet fever.

Vital statistics for the year (not including birth or deaths of Chapel Hill occurring outside of town limits): seventeen white children were born and twenty-three colored ones; thirteen white persons died and twenty colored people.

Upon the opening of the University and public schools this year, Health Officer Nathan vaccinated all students who had not been previously vaccinated.

The club has the authority to suspend from all dances any student, visitor or alumnus for any misconduct whatsoever in any period during which the dances are being presented, regardless of whether the misconduct is before, during, or after the dance. No girls will be permitted to leave the hall during an evening dance unless accompanied by a chaperon. No smoking or drinking will be tolerated on the dance floor.

All dances under the auspices of the German Club shall not close later than one provided that the last dance in any given set of dances shall close not later than two a. m. If a dance is given on Saturday night it shall close not later than midnight.

All girls are required to be in their lodging places not later than one half hour after the close of the dance. There are to be no dates after the dance.

For the information of any organization wishing to give a dance, the procedure is as follows: A committee of three makes application to the Chairman of the Faculty Committee on Dances several days beforehand, stating time, place, character of dance; giving names of committee in charge of dance, names of chaperons, two members of the Executive Committee they wish to invite, and the name of the doorkeeper. On the Tuesday after the dance, the above committee meets with the Executive Committee of the German Club in 109 Murphey and makes a full report of the dance.

Dinosaur Footprint Found In Utah Mine

In recent excavations made in a Utah coal mine, a fifty-two inch dinosaur footprint was found, and is at present the property of the Penn State museum. This cast is thought to be one of the largest ever discovered in the United States.

According to figures of fossil experts this monster must have been approximately seventy-five feet in length. It is thought by geologists that this creature lived at least one million years ago. The experts have not yet been able to determine whether the animal was of the carnivorous or the herbivorous type.

MURCHISON HOME HAS SMALL FIRE

The Chapel Hill fire department was called out last night for the first time this month. The fire, which was at the home of C. T. Murchison, University professor, was caused by oil being spilled on the stove. Very little damage was caused by the blaze.

In order to maintain the splendid record which the people of the town have achieved in the prevention of fires, the City Manager requests owners to have leaves cleaned from the roofs of their houses. Leaves on the roofs of houses are a great fire hazard, sparks from chimneys can easily set fire to the leaves, which are very inflammable.

If the leaves are allowed to accumulate on the roofs and decay, mosquitoes will surely come there in the spring to breed. Any householder realizes how important it is for him not to have a community of these pests residing overhead. In addition to merely annoying the person upon whose roof they are breeding these mosquitoes soon become a public nuisance.

FOOTBALL TEAM DRILLS HARD ON FUNDAMENTALS

Blocking, Charging and Tackling Emphasized by Tar Heel Coaches in Practice.

CHANGES IN LINE SEEN

Collins Trying New Combinations to Get Smooth Working Line Ready for Virginia.

Fundamentals kept the Tar Heels busy for the whole afternoon yesterday, and it is likely that similar work will be in order for today, because Coach Collins intends to have the squad show considerable improvement in blocking, tackling and charging before concentrated work for the Virginia game is started.

The work yesterday afternoon for the backs was taken up with a long drill at tackling and high body blocking the dummy with Coach Cerney directing the drills. The afternoon's session for the backs was closed with a dummy scrimmage on running through plays.

Coach Bob Fetzer took the tackles over in a corner of the field and explained to them their shortcomings in the Davidson game. The buckboards were kept moving with the tackles taking turns at charging against them and pushing them about the field.

Ends polished up their blocking under the direction of Coach Sapp, and the guards were kept busy as Coach Farris sent them through drills at charging across the line of scrimmage and shoulder-to-shoulder blocking.

Coach Collins has made several drastic changes in the line this week in an effort to get a better working forward wall in shape for the Virginia game. None of the changes at present seem to be permanent, depending on the showing of the shifted forwards, but it is likely that a different line combination will take the field at Charlottesville next week.

The Tar Heels have nothing to say about the Davidson game or what they are going to do for the rest of the season, but they are hard at work trying to erase the shortcomings of the past two weeks. They are the underdogs preparing for a comeback, and it is highly probable that a different team will be seen when they go on Lambeth field to meet Virginia.

Catawba Increases North State Race Lead To Four Wins

In the major contest for North State conference teams this past week Catawba handed Guilford an 18-0 drubbing in the mud of Memorial stadium in Greensboro. This leaves the Indians riding high with four victories and no defeats and with but one further conference game to be played. This is with High Point, and will be played at Salisbury Thanksgiving day.

Williams is still far in the lead of conference point makers with 53 to his credit. Cheek, of Guilford, remains in second place with 31 while Zaengle moved up to third with his touchdown against Guilford bringing his total in conference competition to 24. He is far in the lead as high scorer of the state with 91 points.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

Jack Bessen

America yesterday acclaimed a new "world's fastest human" in the person of Frank Wycoff, youthful University of Southern California speedster, whose mark of 9.4 in the "century" has just been accepted. "Flying Frank" topped Eddie Tolan's record of 9.5, covering the classic "100" twice in that fabulous time. To Wycoff's further credit, it may be said that he traveled the distance without the aid of starting blocks or a favoring wind. With the news that Frank is a "native son," one wonders why all the outstanding track men are born and bred on the Pacific Coast. Take Paul Jessup, Harold Osborne, Charley Paddock, Ralph Hill, and Johnny Kuck. All of these men are record holders and all hail from the Far West. The question is fairly ease to answer. The reason for their success lies in the ideal climate. These men have practically all year to train for the spring meets, and it is natural that they should shade the athletes of the other sections of the country.

Just now the main topic on the campus is the coming Duke game. "Do you think we'll beat them?" is always the final question brought up. Some students are pointing to the State and Davidson games as their arguments for a Duke victory. Carolina lost to Davidson 7-6, while Duke beat the Wildcats 12-0 which makes Duke thirteen points better than the Tar Heels. Carolina beat State 13-6, while Duke won 18-0. That all makes the Blue Devils about eleven points better than we, or about two touchdowns. Carolina supporters have pointed out that South Carolina beat Duke 22-0, and the Gamecocks later lost to Georgia Tech 45-0, who was tied by Carolina 6-6. This would make the Tar Heels sixty-seven points ahead of the Durham aggregation. Well, take your pick.

With the defeat of the University of Washington the Cougars of Washington State clinched the championship of the Pacific Coast Conference, and assures them of being one of the participants in the classic Rose Bowl game on January 1. The eastern representative will probably be Alabama, who will journey for the third time to take part in Los Angeles' gala event, the Tournament of Roses. If Alabama is selected, it will be a fitting swan song for Coach Wallace Wade, long a tradition at the "Red Tide" school. Wade has accepted the head coach job at Duke and will take over his duties at the Durham school after the football season.

Does This Mean Anything To Carolina?

Athens, Georgia, November 18.—A tired and defeated Georgia football team came home to Athens Sunday and was greeted by the greatest crowd that ever welcomed a Bulldog squad home. Three thousand people waited two hours at the Southern Railway station for the special train bearing the Bulldogs back from New Orleans to arrive.

As the team, singly and in pairs, stepped from the train, the strains of the Alma Mater song greeted them, and the welcomers, uncovered, joined in the singing of the song that brings back memories to Georgia grads and students.

Surprised by the huge throng that greeted them, the players were reluctant to descend from the train, and waited until after the students, alumni and Athenians who had accompanied them to New Orleans had detrained. When the boys began coming down from the Pullman, however, they were greeted with the first verse of the Alma Mater.—Atlanta Constitution.

SAVOLDI IS LOST TO NOTRE DAME

Leaves Southbend School When News Of Marriage and Pending Divorce Is Learned.

South Bend, Indiana, November 18.—Withdrawal of Joe Savoldi, hailed as one of the greatest backs ever produced at Notre Dame, was announced today by officials of that institution. It was learned that the star was forced to withdraw because he married and started divorce proceedings. The withdrawal ended his college football career, which had but three games ahead of it, and removed the star from the great Rambler backfield.

Savoldi was said to have secretly married Miss Audrey Koehler, of South Bend, April 3, 1929, before he had gained football fame. Savoldi stated that he hoped to have the marriage annuled.

YEARLINGS PREP FOR VIRGINIA TILT

Frosh Show Better Form in Tuesday Scrimmage.

The freshman squad resumed work yesterday in preparation for the coming battle with the young Cavaliers of Virginia. The game with the Virginia frosh is to be played this Saturday on Kenan Field. Coach Enright had the yearlings out early and scrimmaged them for two hours, every man on the squad getting a chance to play.

Last year the young Cavaliers conquered the Tar Babies by a lone touchdown. The teams, as far as can be learned at present, should be evenly matched for the game. The Cavaliers are ending their season with this game, while the Tar Babies have a possible tussle with the Kiski team of Pennsylvania December 6. The Tar Babies have not as yet scored a win this year. They have been improving rapidly and are determined to avenge last year's defeat and get in the scoring column.

This afternoon the first team had: Brandt and Jones, ends; Crane and Strickland, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards; Gardner, center. Hackney, Phipps, Whitener and Woollen formed the backfield quartet. This team won a hard tussle with the reserves 6-0. Phipps' passing and the line play of McIver and Barclay stood out. The reserves had Rankin and Harrington, ends; Mulligan and Tatum, tackles; Matteson and Blythe, guards: Fitzgerald, center. In the backfield were Jones, Kahn, McGill and Anacoustos. The defensive work of Mulligan in the line and Kahn in the backfield, featured the play of this team. Anacoustos made several brilliant runs.

"The Well Dressed Man"

Yesterday morning a bundle of clothes were found in the woods near Chapel Hill. The package contained a tuxedo and a pair of white flannel trousers which were identified as belonging to a student of Duke University. In addition to the garments which were found, an oxford grey suit and an overcoat were also reported lost by the owner.

Cross Country Comment

By Laurence Pegram

The seventh annual Southern Conference Cross Country run, as previously announced, will be run here, 2:30 p. m. Saturday, November 22, 1930.

The race is open to Conference institutions only, and ten men may be entered by each school. Seven men from each entry may start the race, and the first five men who finish for each institution count in the team score.

Contrary to the general belief among a great number of sportsmen, the low score always wins a cross country meet. The first place counts, one, second place, two, third place, three, and so on until the last man's position in the finish is recorded. This annual meet will be governed by the N. C. A. A. cross country rules, rather than any other.

There will be a silver loving cup presented to the winning team, along with seven pairs of gold track shoes to the seven members of the victorious squad. Medals will be awarded the first fifteen men to finish. The first five will be given gold medals, the next five silver ones, and the next five bronze medals.

The run will be staged over a five mile course, likely the one used in the V. P. I. meet two weeks ago. This route is, on the whole, a very fair track, but in wet weather very muddy and slippery. It may be remembered by some that the day of last year's meet here in Chapel Hill dawned extremely cold and rainy, but the time made by each contestant was very good, despite the biting chill which pervaded the community.

VIRGINIA STARTS WORK FOR CLASH WITH TAR HEELS

Coach Abell Gives Cavaliers Two Days of Rest Before Resuming Practice

HOPES TO DOWN CAROLINA

Virginians Think Loss to Davidson Points Way for Cavalier Victory.

(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

University, Virginia, November 18.—Virginia's varsity began intensive training for North Carolina this afternoon. Since Saturday the Cavaliers have been enjoying the rest Coach Earl Abell gave them as a reward for their 21 to 7 victory over Washington and Lee.

Relaxation from the long period of training is expected to benefit the boys on the squad. Virginia has played nine games, and the last seven have all been strenuous, nerve-wracking struggles. The coaches think that the Cavaliers will be better mentally and physically on Thanksgiving because of the brief vacation.

Davidson's victory over North Carolina has pointed the way for the Virginians. The reverse of the Tar Heels by the Wildcats was their first loss this season to a South Atlantic team. Now Virginia hopes to add another.

But Coach Abell and all his charges know that the Carolinians will be all the more difficult to defeat because they will be on their mettle in an effort to make up for the reverse of last Saturday. The Virginians know they'll have to play their best game of the season in order to win. This is what they hope to do.

An expert declares that most of our legends are pure fiction. That's more than can be said of most modern stories.—The Passing Show.

CASE OF ASSAULT ON COURT DOCKET

The recorder's court opened Saturday morning at ten o'clock with three cases on the docket.

In the first case, Charlie Ruffin, colored, pleaded guilty to the charge of attempted assault with a deadly weapon. Officer Hearn testified that he found Ruffin on the porch of Pine Davis's house threatening to shoot Davis if he showed himself at the window. When Ruffin saw the officer, he threw the pistol in the grass and fled.

The defendant testified that he had been drinking in Davis's home and then Davis had asked him whether he had his knife with him. When he answered in the negative, Davis pulled a gun and shot at him. Ruffin grabbed the gun and ran away. Ruffin further stated that he had called to the police and had then returned to the house where the police found him when they answered the call.

When the police investigated, they found that Ruffin had not taken Davis's gun, but had run from the house and had later returned with a pistol of his own. Davis's pistol was in his possession when the police questioned him.

Counsel for the defense pled that Ruffin's sentence be suspended as he had ample provocation for his act. The defendant was fined $20 and was sentenced to six months on the road. The sentence was suspended under the condition that Ruffin shall not trespass on Davis's property for a year and that he shall not appear in court for the rest of the year.

Roy Eubank, Napoleon Jones, James McDowell, John Murphy, and Leander Jenkins, colored, were arraigned for gambling. Eubank, Murphy, and McDowell were the only ones who appeared at court. Eubank and McDowell pleaded guilty while Murphy plead not guilty.

Officer Rackley testified that he had found the boys playing cards in the basement of the Friendly Cafeteria. Murphy stated that he had not taken part in the game because he had no money. The court found Murphy not guilty and fined Eubank and McDowell one third of the costs.

Luther Alston, colored, plead guilty to the charge of public drunkenness. When asked by Judge C. P. Hinshaw where he had procured the whiskey he thought a while and drawled, "Wal, Judge, yu kin get dat most anywheres." Alston was sentenced to thirty days on the road.

STUDENTS TO BE GIVEN HOTEL RATE REDUCTIONS

Following its program of service to colleges and students, the N. S. F. A. is making a concerted effort to secure reduction for American students on hotel rates in large cities, and various commodities, according to the announcement of the executive secretary, who is now approaching various national concerns for reduction agreements.

A student discount card will be the basis for obtaining the reductions. These cards already provide American students with reductions in visas, railroads, museums, and other services abroad. The card for American students is handled directly by the National Student Federation, and may be applied for by any registered student.

All firms thus far approached have assured their co-operation in giving these reductions. Announcement of the list of national concerns giving reductions to students holding the cards will be made at the Atlanta Congress in December, and delegates will be supplied with application blanks.

BREWER LEADING STATE SCORERS

Kid Brewer, Duke halfback, scored one touchdown against State last Saturday to increase his individual scoring record to fifty-one points and head the list of Tar Heel ball-toters to date. His running mate, Gallopin' Bill Murray, trails him closely with forty-three points, tieing with Eustace Mills of Wake Forest for second place.

Universities Begin To Correct Speech

An attempt is being made in some of the larger educational institutions in the country to correct defects in speech by scientific methods. The Universities of Wisconsin, Chicago, Ohio, Michigan, and Iowa, and Northwestern University are some of the schools working on this new project at present.

In a great number of these schools special speech departments have been organized for the sole purpose of correcting defective speech. Problems involving stuttering, lisping, nasality, and the like are dealt with, and there are regular classes for students having incorrect speech.

Education Pays

A boy may earn a hundred dollars a day by going to college—but he must wait to collect. The United States Bureau of Education shows that college graduates earn from $56,000 to $112,000 more by the time they are sixty than do those who go to work after being graduated from high school. This would give the four years' course a cash value of from $77 to $155 a day.—World's Work.

Found Student Churches

Pennsylvania, Princeton and the University of California at Los Angeles have made experiments with student churches. And lately, students of Oklahoma A. and M. have made persistent efforts to establish a student church. "Critics noted for their ill opinion of college youth should be softened by such demonstrations," says the Oklahoma editor. The proposed A. and M. church would be devoid of dogma or creed and would provide a channel through which the student could express his views. The fact that the project is meeting with bitter verbal attacks from the local ministerial alliance seems to be spurring on the leaders.

Arm of Law Reaches Out And Grows Longer Through Telephone Typewriter

About half-past ten one night, just after all the children in the congested South Philadelphia area were off the streets to bed, two men walked into the South 4th Street Garage, says the Western Electric News. One of them drew a gun and backed the garage attendant against the wall. The other man started a straight-eight sedan. In another minute they were roaring up 4th Street.

The attendant called police. He described the two hold-up men.

A short time before this untoward happening, throughout the mountainous, wooded territory of Pennsylvania, country that provides excellent hideouts for criminals, through which they can speed over secluded roads in any direction to escape the hands of the law, Western Electric installers had rushed the telephone typewriter terminal equipment into place. It went into strategic locations laid out by the police and the Telephone Company.

Cornered in 5 Minutes

Among the 33 towns and cities tied in by this network is Scranton in the coal regions, Williamsport in the forest district, Oil City and Butler in the oil regions and Uniontown in the broad rolling mountains of the southern part of the state. In less than five minutes a police message can be broadcast by means of the telephone typewriter throughout the 45,126 square miles of the state.

Transmitting apparatus is located at three Zone Headquarters in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Wyoming, besides the Central Headquarters at Harrisburg. Receiving machines are located in these Zone Headquarters, as well as among the 33 cities, in County Detective Headquarters, State Police sub-stations or barracks and in municipal police headquarters as in Philadelphia. In that city there is a local telephone typewriter typing in 40 police stations.

A message transmitted from any one of the Zone Headquarters over the typewriter-like instrument is received just like a type-written note over the receiving machines throughout the zone.

Call Goes Out

Ten minutes after the South Philadelphia hold-up, a message was sent out from City Hall over the local telephone typewriter system. It also went out over the state set-up covered by the Philadelphia Zone, and to the General Headquarters at Harrisburg, where it was transmitted throughout the state. This was the message, designated by the police code system as General 89—Ph 18:

GENERAL 89 PH 18—MARCH 12
ARREST 2 YOUNG WHITE MEN—NO. 1 MAN 28 YEARS 5 FT 8 IN 150 LBS—THIN BUILD LIGHT CAP BLUE OVERCOAT THIS MAN HAD REVOLVER—NO 2 MAN 35 YRS 5 FT 8 IN 135 LBS—LIGHT OVERCOAT AND LIGHT SOFT HAT RUDDY COMPLEXION WANTED IN THE 25TH POLICE DIST PHILA FOR HOLDUP AT POINT OF GUN 10:30 THIS PM IN THE SOUTH 4TH STREET GARAGE LOCATED AT 1822 SOUTH 4TH STREET AND LARCENY OF A HUPMOBILE STRAIGHT EIGHT SEDAN—BLACK BODY GREEN WHEELS PENNA LIC NO. AND ENGINE NO. UNKNOWN —LATER MESSAGE WILL FOLLOW.

Installation in Pennsylvania State Police Headquarters, State Capitol Harrisburg. At left are two sending instruments and at right are three receiving instruments for receipt of messages from the zone headquarters at Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Wyoming.

The message came tapping in over the receiving station in the State Police Headquarters at Greensburg, Pa., in the far western section of the state.

The two hold-up men in their "high powered sedan" took to the secluded roads, through mountain ranges, deep forests. The dark night protected them. One would think they were easily escaping all possible capture. They probably chuckled with such confidence themselves.

Over two and a half hours of steady, furious driving had taken them far from the scene of their "job". They were wise, they thought. So many crooks, like fools, hang around afterward. They would stop off in Greensburg for a cup of coffee. A State Trooper on his motorcycle leisurely patrolled the main highway through Greensburg. Tucked in his pocket was a piece of paper carrying the description of a green car—two men—one with a gun.

Ten minutes later this message came tapping in at City Hall, Philadelphia:

STATE POLICE AT GREENSBURG PA HAVE ARRESTED TWO MEN SENT OUT ON GENERAL 89 — PH 18 AS WANTED IN THE 25TH POLICE DIST PHILA FOR LARCENY AND HOLDUP—PLEASE ADVISE.

Within three hours after "the job was pulled", just as long as it took the two men to travel across the state, the arrest was made.

"I used to put all my faith in the night stick—the black jack—the gun," said Chief Dispatcher Dougherty, a dyed-in-the-wool "cop" of 30 years service. "Now I put all my faith in this—the telephone typewriter. One thing a policeman needs to make a 'catch' is information. Now every policeman in the state can have all available information within a few minutes after commission of a crime."

Who? Who! Who?

Students who had two-o'clock classes at Davie hall Monday were greeted on entering the door by a large, solemn-looking barred owl. The owl, who seemed to be uninterested in, or rather bored with, his large audience, looked to weigh at least ten pounds. It is understood that the owl was bought by the zoology department from a negro, who shot him through the head but did not seriously wound him. The bird will probably be stuffed and added to the already large collection of stuffed animals possessed by the zoology department.

TULANE'S ASTONISHING VICTORY OVER GEORGIA TOPIC OF CONVERSATION

Astonishing in its conclusiveness, Tulane's 25 to 0 victory over Georgia, conqueror of Yale and New York university, offered the principal topic of conversation among Dixie's curbstone gridiron experts today.

The triumph left Tulane and Alabama as the only undefeated teams in the conference and virtually assured another perfect domestic season for the Green Wave, defending its 1929 championship. Tulane has yet to meet Louisiana State on Thanksgiving, but the wave figures much stronger than its state rival this year.

Rumbling steadily along, with its second and third stringers playing part of the game, Alabama scored its seventh successive conference decision.

Thomas and Sippley Backfield Threats

University, Virginia, November 19. (Special)—Bill Thomas and Frank Sippley will be the chief backfield threats Virginia will put forward in an effort to defeat North Carolina in the closing game of the season.

Thomas averaged a gain of six yards each time he took the ball against Washington and Lee. He ran with it 17 times for a total gain of 102 yards. Twice he took it over the goal line, once after a 25 yard dash around end.

Sippley, who called signals through most of the game, didn't give himself the ball but 12 times. He gained 52 yards, an average of something better than four yards each time he stuck it under his arm. He scored a touchdown on a 14 yard gain through the middle of the W. and L. line.

Neither Thomas nor Sippley started the game last fall against North Carolina. They are both very anxious to pit their skill against the Tar Heels. With the rest of the squad they've been taking it easy since Saturday and they'll be on their toes ready to go when practice is resumed tomorrow.

HUDSON LECTURES ON SOUTHERN FOLK LORE

Mr. A. P. Hudson gave a very interesting talk on songs and ballads of the Mississippi at the regular meeting of the American Association of University Women. This lecture was the first of a series of talks on southern folk lore.

It was announced that a benefit bridge supper will be given at President Graham's home Friday, November 21st.

for the Dixie meet here next Saturday. Baucom has been instrumental in the winning of two Southern Conference titles for the Tar Heels since he has been on the team. He, also, participated in Carolina's Southern Track Championship awhile back. This sturdy captain of the harriers has had two season's experience in track and three in cross-country, performing brilliantly in both phases of his chosen sport. His second place against V. P. I., coupled with his scintillating victory at Duke indicate that he will put forth every effort to come out on top in the Southern title run this week end. Fostering the supposition that Baucom trots home ahead of the entire field this Saturday, he will have climaxed a very successful record.

Led by Captain Ham Smith V. M. I., varsity cross-country runners nosed out the V. P. I. harriers, defending champions, by one lone point, winning the big four championship of Virginia. The University of Virginia tied Washington and Lee for third place. The big "Ham" ate up the 5.6 mile course in 30 minutes, forty seconds to break the ribbon, with Billy Lauck, Virginia, coming in second. Captain Miles, V. P. I. star, placed third, with Jack Bond and Henry Wise of the cadet team fourth and fifth.

V. P. I.'s powerful freshman team captured the junior chase of 3.1 miles, with V. M. I., second, and W. & L. and Virginia third and fourth. Hudgins, Tech ace, led the pack home in 16 minutes 14 seconds, pushed hard by Turner and Neidengard, of V. M. I., who placed after the Tech man.

A broken finger was sustained by Holloway, a Virginia freshman, when a nervous horse shied and knocked him down, along the course.

INTRAMURAL RESULTS

Betas Defeat Dekes

The Betas defeated the Dekes 6-0 in one of yesterday's foremost clashes in the intramural league. Anderson snagged a pass in the last forty-five seconds of play and streaked across the Deke goal line for the only score.

State Students Outlaw Drinking

At a meeting of the sophomore class of N. C. State College Friday, a resolution was passed, without a dissenting vote, which outlawed drinking of liquor by its members in the future. This is said to have been the first voluntary action of its kind ever taken in a State educational institution in the United States.

The resolution was proposed by the class president, Milo Stroupe, star tackle on the football team and a former member of the U. S. Marine Corps.

It reads: "We, as the class of 1933 of North Carolina State College, put ourselves on record as outlawing drinking liquor among the members of our class."

"I am no angel," said Stroupe after the meeting. "I have taken drinks, but I am here to say that it is not the manly thing to do. By our action today we mean to do all we can to prevent the use of, and traffic in, liquor and to have nothing to do with it ourselves."

The question of liquor drinking has been a big topic of discussion at State, and it is thought that other classes will consider similar resolutions.

JUDGE PARKER TO DELIVER SENATE BANQUET SPEECH

Dean Bradshaw Visits Meeting And Offers Criticism

The bill, Resolved: That there is a need for a strong third party in the United States was hotly debated at the meeting of the Di Senate Tuesday night. After lengthy discussion the bill was defeated 26-13. Senators Rector, Shreve and Olive defended the affirmative side, while Senators Fleming-Jones, Little, Ramsay, McIver, and Entwistle upheld the negative.

A letter received from Judge John J. Parker to the effect that he would be delighted to speak at the annual banquet of the senate which will be held next month, was read to the members. A vote of appreciation was extended the president for having secured Judge Parker.

It was also announced that the tryouts for the Mary D. Wright debate will be held next Monday night. The question for discussion is, Resolved: That the state of North Carolina should levy a luxury tax for the support of institutions of higher learning. The debate will be held on December 2, and the Di will have the negative side. Anyone wishing to try out for the debate should see Senator Fleming-Jones immediately.

A motion was passed changing the meeting time from 7:15 to 7 o'clock.

Before adjournment, Dean Bradshaw offered a few constructive criticisms.

FOUR THOUSAND DOLLAR LOSS IS SHOWN BY AUDIT

Last Year's P. U. Board Debt May Be Averted by Increase In Student Fees

The auditing department of the University issued financial reports of the individual publications and of the Publications Union recently. The reports showed a total net loss of $4,420.15 for the session 1929-1930. The Daily Tar Heel suffered the greatest, having a loss of $4,896.38; the Carolina Buccaneer was next, losing $629.22, while a profit of $1,005.37 was made by the Yackety Yack.

The total assets of the Carolina Publications Union amount to $15,769.30. Some of the interesting items are: stocks and bonds, $10,997.66; office improvements, $315.10; furniture and fixtures, $1,162.90.

The loss incurred last year will be alleviated to a great extent by the fact that the publication fee paid by each student was raised one dollar last spring by popular vote of the student body. The present business staffs of the various publications have been doing efficient work in curtailing running expenses and in getting more advertisements than were used last year.

The greater part of the income of the Yackety Yack last year came from payments for space by student and fraternity pictures, as well as for space of other organizations. Its total revenue amounted to $13,469.77, $8,738.75 coming from organizations' space, while the amount received from advertising was only $699.76.

The editor of the Carolina Magazine, announced yesterday that the last issue of the publication before the end of the term will be a twelve page issue and will be devoted to Christmas material.

Christmas material will be run in the special issue which will be called the Christmas number.

Christmas decorations will adorn the front of the magazine.

The cost of the added four pages will be defrayed by advertisements. With the exception of the "Concluding Number," which will be the last to be published under the present editorship. The Christmas edition will be the only special number of the 1930-1931 magazine.

HAMER STRESSES SPIRITUAL LIFE IN RADIO SPEECH

Cites Need for New Y Building After Outlining Activities Of Organization

"Religion in the broadest and truest sense is a most vital issue at the University of North Carolina," stated Ed Hamer, president of the Y. M. C. A., in his speech over the radio yesterday afternoon. Hamer's talk was the second of a series presented by student leaders on the campus. The first speaker of the series was "Red" Greene, president of the student body, who talked on the present system of student government in effect on the campus.

Continuing his talk the speaker outlined at length the purpose, history, position in campus life, types of leadership, organization, and financial support of the local Y organization. President Hamer stated that the local organization was established on the campus in 1860, and was the third student Y. M. C. A. to be founded in the entire United States, being preceded only by associations at the universities of Virginia and Michigan. Numerous prominent men in the state who were formerly connected with the University Y were mentioned by the speaker.

It was the Y president's opinion that, although the present Y building is still in good condition today, it is entirely inadequate to meet the demands of a student body of over 2600 men.

Besides making mention of men formerly connected with the association, the speaker made the statement that many of the present campus leaders take an active part in the Y's program.

After discussing the organization of the campus Y, Hamer took up the program of the association. "The chief mission of the association is that of 'drawing out for every man the highest and best and fullest there is in human life.'"

The speaker then closed his speech by saying that the Y believes in and puts across to the students time and again that a student leaves college with a very unbalanced education if he neglects spiritual development.

Buccaneer To Clean Up Daily In Energetic Purity Drive

By Chic Sale

Deviating for a few lines from its customary habit of presenting only newsworthy articles, the Daily Tar Heel informs its readers that the self-styled funny magazine, The Buccaneer has made its appearance. Whether it is desired or not, the publication that has received almost campus-wide animadversion has arrived.

This number, dated the November issue and called the Football number, is different in one respect from practically every other periodical in the country. The habit of editors of magazines is to arrange their business so that the issue with the November date upon it will be issued late in October or the first few days in November. Some publications carry this too far, and we have the Christmas numbers being circulated early in September. However, Kermit Wheary and his band of earnest comics have set the new style of issuing their paper almost in December, and with the November date upon it. But not only in this respect is the funny paper unique. It is worthy of the highest praise, for the football number appears just before the football season is gone and forgotten. Nevertheless, it does not prevent the editors from devoting a large amount of their space to very unhumorous attacks upon those few campus institutions which contain the essential ingredient of civilization—a sense of values.

On page 17, there is a well-drawn cartoon of the Mason Brother's concept of what the Daily Tar Heel looks like. It is one of a series of called "Impressions of Compus Publications." The misspelling of campus is apparently a deliberate attempt at the subtle laughter that is innervated by the staff's broad humor. Although the actual physical appearance of the office and workers for the Daily Tar Heel is decidedly erroneous, the essence of Masons' drawing is true. The Daily Tar Heel's staff is constantly conscious of an effort at approximating perfection.

As to Buccaneers being allowed in the office of the Daily Tar Heel, the Buccaneer would have you believe they were not to be seen, but the drawing is but a half truth. Although there are rarely any Buccaneers to be had in the Tar Heel's office, it is because the staff of the Tar Heel, like so many members of the student body, regularly fail to receive the funny magazine due to the greediness of certain members of the student union.

INTEREST SHOWN IN CAMPUS 'POINT'

A few days ago, passers in the neighborhood of the outdoor auditorium were attracted by the perfect form and accurate pointing of an animal resident of Chapel Hill.

The dog was white with black spots, and greatly resembled a statue or a dog that one sees in the circus—well powdered and riding motionless in a chariot.

The object of the dog's point was one of the thickly populated squirrel family, which was busy gathering acorns, and which seemed to ignore the impending danger.

The dog was so intent on its prey that it was unaware of the ever growing group of spectators that stood enhanced by the beauty of the dog's graceful body. No one uttered a word, for noise did not harmonize with the extraordinary scene. The wind ceased to stir the leaves—in fact nature seemed to watch also and remained infatuated by the sight. The dog stood as if frozen in his tracks, and though the squirrel hopped here and there, the dog didn't move.

Such scenes do not last long, and soon the squirrel, frightened by some falling object, or becoming suddenly aware that his every move was being spied upon, scampered off over the benches, and the disappointed "pointer" relaxed and went in search of another victim.

CO-EDS DRINK TEA BY CANDLE AND FIRE LIGHT

Kathleen Wheaton and Elizabeth Reed acted as hostesses for the weekly co-ed tea given at Spencer Hall Wednesday afternoon from four-thirty to six o'clock. A large cheerful fire lighted the living room which, together with the soft candle light added much to the enjoyableness of the occasion. Along with the tea dainty cakes and mints were served. From time to time during the tea a large number of the girls came in.

BRITISH DEBATE TRYOUTS TONIGHT

Try-outs for the British debate—the high-light of the fall quarter in forensic circles—will be heard tonight at 7:30 in Murphey 201. The debating council has requested that all who try out have a brief of the issues involved ready to submit to the judges before the meeting. This is not compulsory, however.

The contest with the team from Cambridge will be held in Gerrard hall December 13th. Both the Tories and Carolina will have one man upholding each side of the question, Resolved: That the emergence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life. The tryouts tonight will embrace arguments on both sides of the question.

Mrs. W. S. Bernard, of the Leonidas Polk chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and state historian of the organization, will preside at the historical evening during the annual convention in Asheville which began Monday. Mrs. Bernard is acting in place of Miss Sally of South Carolina who is the historian general of the U. D. C. Dr. J. G. deRoulhac Hamilton, of the University history department, will address the group.

Mrs. J. H. Anderson, who lived in Chapel Hill last year, presided at the Jefferson Davis dinner in the dining room of the George Vanderbilt hotel yesterday evening at six o'clock.

Fire Is Smothered

For the second time in as many days, the Chapel Hill fire department was called out yesterday morning to a small blaze caused by gasoline soaked rags in the basement of the Strowd Motor Company. The fire, which damaged a few pair of overalls, was soon smothered.

Amaze a Minute

The Daily Tar Heel beginning today will publish regularly an illustrated scientific feature on some of the phenomenal facts about science and invention. These drawings, entitled "Amaze a Minute," contain facts concerning some of the recent discoveries as well as numerous peculiarities of nature.

The illustrations will be printed weekly, and will contain only statements which have been authenticated by experts.

Mrs. Perry Speaks At Knightdale

Mrs. Louise Perry, secretary of the Carolina Dramatic Association, president of Dramatic Arts and secretary of the North Carolina Education Association, will speak to the pupils of Knightdale high school on high school drama. Miss Pauline Willis, English instructor of the school, requested her to arouse dramatic interest in the students.

WOMAN'S PLACE IN MODERN LIFE DEBATED BY PHI

Twenty New Men Are Initiated Into Assembly at Tuesday Meeting

The Phi Assembly held its second initiation of the year Tuesday night when twenty new men were taken into membership.

Speaker Mayne Albright read several articles from the constitution regarding initiation at the beginning of the session which was followed by Representative Uzzell's report on the Mary D. Wright debate. The question to be discussed December 2 between the Phi and Di is, Resolved: That a state tax should be levied on luxuries for the support of higher institutions of learning.

Only one bill was taken up by the group which was: Resolved: That the emergence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life. This topic is now under the consideration of the debate squad.

Following a long discussion on this measure, a vote was taken which resulted in a tie. The bill was defeated when acting Speaker Hobgood voted against the measure.

Among the members initiated Tuesday night are: W. D. Tennant, Angus MacLean, Jr., Wm. A. Thompson, Everett M. Jess, Chas. B. Evans, W. W. Sloan, Wm. W. Bynum, M. V. Barnhill, Jr., P. W. Hairston, J. H. Patterson, Edwin Akers and George W. Wright.

Pharmacy Exams Occupy Two Days

The North Carolina Board of Pharmacy has been at the University two days giving examinations to the students who are candidates for pharmacy degrees. The written examinations were taken Tuesday and the practical examination in the laboratory Wednesday. The State Board examination is thorough and comprehensive and it takes two full days to complete it. The list of successful candidates will be available as soon as the papers can be corrected and passed upon by the board.

PLAYMAKERS TO BROADCAST LOCAL FOLK PLAY TODAY

'Git Up an' Bar the Door,' Recent Production, on Air Over WPTF

At 4 o'clock this afternoon the Carolina Playmakers will broadcast Arthur P. Hudson's farce of Mississippi folk life over station WPTF in Raleigh. Git Up an' Bar the Door, the play, was produced here two weeks ago in the twenty-seventh bill of original plays written and produced by the Playmakers.

The officials of the Playmakers have chosen this play for a radio broadcast because it seemed to be the most representative of their productions this year and because of the praise it received here.

The Playmaker officials also believe that much of the comic value of the farce will be lost before the microphone due to the fact that the amusing pantomine will be missing.

Mr. Morgan Vining, who arranges all radio programs for this vicinity, states that the program will be broadcast on the coastal hookup and part of a national chain.

Professor F. H. Koch, director of the Playmakers and the director of this play, will announce the cast which includes the following characters:

SENIOR CLASSES DUKE-CAROLINA TO GIVE TROPHY

Carolina Sehiors Approve Trophy as Award to Winning Team at Annual Game

The Senior class of the University met last Tuesday night in Gerrard hall in a call meeting for the purpose of discussing the question of establishing a trophy to be given annually to the winning team of the Duke-Carolina football contest. The class voted unanimously to join with the Duke seniors in this idea.

The idea of this trophy came from a suggestion of the official staff of the North Carolina Student Federation early this fall. This federation, in order to allay unnecessary hostility between Carolina and Duke, has been working on projects for the improvement of the relations of the two schools. In view of the fact that the athletic connections of the two universities are more strained than any other relationships at the present time, the federation suggested to the students of the two institutions that they express their goodwill toward each other by presenting trophies for winning teams in their intercollegiate contests. This trophy just approved by the senior classes of the two schools is the natural result of this movement.

Committees from both of the senior classes are now at work on the type of trophy to be offered. It is generally believed that they will select a large gold tinted football on which can be inscribed the name of the winning team each year.

Mental Attitudes

The mental attitude of players is determined to some extent by their contact with other students. If the Carolina student body expresses the opinion that the team is going to lose the Virginia and Duke games the players will necessarily begin to feel the same way. If student opinion is that Carolina can win and must win these two games then no one will count it an upset if we do.

Just now student opinion indicates that many students do not think before expressing an opinion. They say comparative scores show that both Virginia and Duke will beat us. What did comparative scores prove in the Davidson game?

The attitude of the Georgia students toward their players shows why Georgia is hard to beat. After being doped to win the Georgians went to New Orleans and got one of the worst drubbings given a big Conference contender in years. But when those players returned the students met them and let them know that win or lose Georgia supports its football teams. Those Georgia players will not suffer from an inferiority complex certainly.

It's time for both the students and players to think that regardless of what has happened Carolina must beat Virginia and Duke. Every player should be made to think that these two games mean something to Carolina—that if the team plays football Carolina will win.

American women's annual beauty bill is $750,000,000, indicating that our fashionable women are running into big figures trying to avoid them.

Cheer The Under-Dog

According to tradition, one should always cheer the under-dog. The idea seems to be that he might win. Carolina, the under-dog for the remainder of the season, has won under similar circumstances before; the same thing can be accomplished again if the student body will back the team.

One can say, with considerable justification, that the students of the University seem not to have any school spirit. Tar Heel cheering at the Davidson game was negligible. A defeated Carolina team returns to Chapel Hill and is greeted by such questions as: "Why didn't you win?" or' "What in the name of hell is the matter with you boys, anyhow?" This is the existing situation, and one which is in direct contrast to the action of the students of the University of Georgia in meeting the train en masse on which the Bulldog eleven was returning to Athens after having been routed by Tulane University. Such a reception is bound to make a team resolve to do better in the next game. Such a suggestion seems quite fitting for this student body at present. Why not back the team? Why not revive the Old Carolina spirit? If ever there was a time when such action was needed, that time is the immediate present. Carolina can beat Duke and Virginia. We, the students, can help by manifesting a little more interest and enthusiasm. There's no reason why we should not; there's every reason why we should. The time is at hand; rise from your slumber, fellow students.—J. C. W.

Charity Must Needs Begin at Home

The word prosperity has slowly in the last year or so disappeared as a noun, descriptive of this nation, probably never to return. We are no longer such a glamorous nation. We have the largest list of unemployed in the world, with many poor and underfed people. Cold weather is on the way. All of these facts lead to hard times and suffering from exposure and hunger. Such will be the fate of hundreds and thousands of American people for the next few months.

Although we may not sense it at once, Chapel Hill and Orange County are no exceptions to this situation. Need and want are to be found here. The nation-wide business depression is causing much suffering and unemployment. It is up to individuals and organizations to come to the fore now and help relieve the conditions. Northwestern University has offered $100,000 to the relief fund in the state of Illinois through an arrangement whereby it is expected that there will be increased attendance at the Northwestern-Notre Dame football game next year if played in Chicago. The Army and Navy have offered to play a benefit football game for charity. And now the University Y. M. C. A. has inaugurated a campaign among students to help raise money to add to the fund in this county. We, as students, can do our part in helping to allay this situation by contributing now. None ought to feel that he can't give, for it is more the spirit of cooperation than the amount of giving that is going to count.

Although the situation may not be very serious yet, as the cold weather progresses the need is bound to increase, and as the old saying goes, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure." The Y. M. C. A. is to be congratulated in starting such a campaign at this time, and hearty support should be given it by the entire student body. —W. W. McK.

IN THE WAKE OF NEWS

Jack Dungan

A copy of the November Buccaneer has come into our hands with the compliments of the editor our very good friend, Kermit Wheary. Taking the discussion, which the first issue occasioned, as indication of what is wanted (which really isn't what is wanted) the editor and his funny men have cut out the Parisian photos, the bar room ditties, and all the other high class pornographia. We seem quite conservative in stating that the campus is going to be very much disappointed with the New Buccaneer—the New Buccaneer, which like its sister publication, the Daily Tar Heel, is now 99 and 44 something or other pure.

This purity wave which has struck the funny paper of the University has really been the cause of the birth of some very high class humor. The Harvard Lampoon and the Yale Record as well as the New Yorker, must bow to the brilliance, the subtlety, the sophistication, and the ineffable charm of the satires, the ironies, the burlesques, and intellectual qualities of the New Buccaneer.

* * *

Seriously speaking, abolishing the Buccaneer would be a distinct backward step. So far as our limited intelligence is concerned, we have been unable to find a single member of the Daily Tar Heel staff who wants the Buccaneer's office closed. We together with others of our illiterate ilk, however, believe that there lies dormant in the student union of the University of North Carolina a faculty for appreciating a humor which depends not upon such things as women's physiques, the functions of the body, and altogether natural relationships which aren't (or rather should not be) humorous at all.

We have it on the highest authority that Pat Patterson sent a pair of shoes to a local bootery about a month ago and satisfied with the repair work accomplished walked across the campus in them for more than three weeks before he discovered that the repair man had sent back shoes which were not mates. This all goes to show just how certain students at Salem College can upset men's minds.

The sophomores of the State College of North Carolina have taken the "veil." In their entirety they have voted as a class to refrain from looking at, smelling, or even imbibing intoxicating liquors. May God protect them, and their God Mother the Reverend Mr. Pullen, who legislated the resolution through. It is to be hoped that Pullen will permit his little charges to drink some of Mrs. (ex-commissioner) Doran's Prohibition Cocktails—a delicious and refreshing strawberry smash, for instance.

Charlotte O'Mara, anxious to keep up with the times, came into our office the other day with a request for last Monday's Tar Heel. This will prove that there are those among the student union who are interested enough in the efforts of the staff to inquire after us.

The Carolina Playmakers, under the direction of Mr. Koch, Mr. S. Selden and Mr. Ralph Westerman, issued the September issue of the Carolina Playbook yesterday.

Here is no bashful cereal

THIS is Kellogg's Rice Krispies speaking — the cereal that tells the world how good each golden mouthful is! It's a fact! When you pour milk or cream in a bowlful of Rice Krispies, these crunchy rice bubbles actually crackle out loud. And what a delicious flavor!

Eat Rice Krispies for breakfast — great for a quick lunch with fruits or honey added. And what could be better for a late bedtime snack at the campus restaurant? The world's most different cereal! Have you heard it yet?

Kellogg's RICE KRISPIES

The most popular cereals served in the dining-rooms of American colleges, eating clubs and fraternities are made by Kellogg in Battle Creek. They include Corn Flakes, ALL-BRAN, PEP Bran Flakes, Wheat Krumbles, and Kellogg's Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit. Also Kaffee Hag Coffee —the coffee that lets you sleep.

BLOCKING DRILLS CONTINUED FOR VARSITY ELEVEN

Coach Collins Sends Linemen and Halfbacks Through Long Scrimmage

CERNEY WITH RESERVES

Gives 'Iron Men' Virginia Plays As Preparations for Thanksgiving Get Underway

Definite preparations for the Virginia game were started yesterday afternoon on Emerson field when Coach Bill Cerney, who scouted the Virginia-Washington and Lee game, gave the Cavaliers' plays to the "iron men," but the work for the varsity was a continuation of the extensive drills on blocking which have been in order all this week.

For the second successive day Coach Fetzer worked with the tackles, Coach Cerney with the backs, Coach Farris with the guards, and Coach Sapp with the ends in an effort to improve the blocking of the entire squad. After the candidates for the various positions worked separately for half an hour, Coach Collins sent the halfbacks and linemen through a stiff and long scrimmage working on the blocking for off and inside tackle plays.

Theron Brown, who has been shifted from right end to left tackle, saw defensive scrimmage action at his new post yesterday for the first time, and showed up fairly well.

The squad is in excellent condition at the present time since no one was hurt in the Davidson game and the old injuries are coming around nicely.

June Underwood should be able to remove the heavy bandages from his hand within a few days. He saw some action in the line scrimmage yesterday.

Henry House, who played only a small part of the Davidson game because of a bad ankle, is rapidly getting back into shape. Aubrey Parsley has been troubled with an ankle here of late, but, unless he hurts it again, should be ready for the Thanksgiving game.

Coach Collins has made no statement about work for the remainder of the week, but it is expected that blocking will be emphasized again today with a possible short defensive scrimmage for a part of the squad against the reserves, running Virginia plays.

TENNIS TOURNEYS UNDERWAY TODAY

Entry Lists for Upperclassman And Freshman Eliminations Will Close at Noon

This afternoon marks the opening of the upperclassman and the freshman tennis tournaments. The upper-classmen tourney is open to all who are not freshmen or on the varsity squad; the freshman tourney is open to all first year men. All who are desirous of trying out for the varsity or freshman squad are urged by Coach John F. Kenfield to enter one of these tournaments if they have not done so as yet, as these tournaments are being run with the purpose of finding material for the two squads.

Entries may be made by phone to Emerson Stadium before noon today. Following is the list of those who have already entered:

Upperclassman tournament—B. Kendall, Al Yeomans, Moe Wolf, Dan Pachman, Bill McKee, M. A. Barber, Frank Jacochs, W. F. Draper, Garrison Reid, Gilbert K. Blauman, Phillip Laufman, B. G. Winig, A. Benjamin, Frank Huskins, A. O.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

We reprint with amusement the ravings of a certain alleged gentlemen of the press in a southern North Carolina newspaper:

"HARK THE SOUND"
(Tune "Amici")

Hark the sound of Tar Heel voices.
Singing meek and low,
At the linemen pickin' daisies,
While the Wildcats sco!

CHORUS

Hail to the greatest back of all,
On their ears they fall,
Losing forty-seven ya-ahds,
Running with the ball.
'Cause I'm a Tar Heel star and a Tar Heel stumble,
An' if I run I'm sure to fumble
Rah rah Carlina, lina
Rah rah Carlina, lina
Rah rah Carlina—
Ping pong, ping pong, ping pong.

Noble words, especially from an alumnus. No doubt his fertile brain was racked far into the night as he composed his self-admitted immortal verse. Perhaps he figured that he could win the Pulitzer prize for outstanding achievement in journalism by the above example of journalistic wit.

Sports editors are in a class by themselves. Each is the local Robert Benchley on his paper, and he feels it his duty to assume the popular role of a scoofer. Members of nearly every chapter of the Downtown Coaches Association of America will tell you that their most valued member is the local sports editor. He not only offers golden words of advice to the coach, but he prints in his column or on his sport page his personal reflections. We speak from experience.

The Big Question today on the Carolina campus is what is wrong with the team. The answer in part and to the point is: Nothing. Herewith we express our slant on the question.

To turn hypocritical, we suggest that the Di or the Phi introduce a bill to the effect that the Book Ex should install an assorted line of monocles and ivory-headed canes. These could be sold to our student body and the true effect of an Oxford cricket gallery could be preserved. We might even suggest that full morning dress be worn to football games so that the student body might further assume that amusing air of nonchalance and pseudo-sophistication.

It is an established fact on the campus this year that any outward demonstration of hilarity over the outcome of a football game is an indication of vulgarity.

Track Practice

The attention of all track men is called to the fact that the daily check-in is now made in front of the track office by means of a board upon which the names of the squad members appear. Each man will indicate his attendance by putting a washer on the nail nearest his name.

The windows of Coach Ransom's office are now being used as a track bulletin board on which are posted the daily assignments for work-outs, and articles or pictures of interest to the track squad.

Yale Publication Disfavors Scouting

Under the heading, "Thumbs Down," the Yale Daily News yesterday editorially commented on the suggestion made by Dartmouth and Harvard that scouting of football opponents be limited to watching slow-motion pictures of rivals in action and concluded the article with the question: "Why not abolish the custom entirely?"

VARSITY TENNIS SQUAD WORKING AFTER INACTIVITY

Preparations Again Underway for Match With Virginia Next Wednesday

After four days of inactivity due to continual rain, the varsity tennis team took to the courts once more yesterday and went through a stiff workout in preparation for the match this Wednesday with the University of Virginia aggregation at Charlottesville.

Although the present Carolina team is judged one of the best in the country, Coach Kenfield is taking no chances on their slipping up against Virginia, and the team will be on the courts every afternoon until Tuesday, when they leave for Virginia. Play was a little ragged yesterday, but this was to be expected because of the four day layoff. The team should reach top form before the week is over, and little doubt is felt over the outcome of the coming match.

Seven men probably will make the trip in all. Those going are Captain Sonny Graham, Wilmer Hines, Ed Yeomans, Lenoir Wright, Phil Liskin, Hinky Hendlin, and Lucas Abels.

A jazz band plays every day at a London railway station. The idea is to encourage passengers not to loiter about and miss their trains.—The Humorist.

BETA AND A. T. O. TO BATTLE FOR FRAT TAG TITLE

Winner of Game Today Will Meet Ruffin Dorm Friday for Campus Football Title

The last minute win of the Beta's over the Deke's Tuesday afternoon leaves only the Beta's and the A. T. O.'s, who eliminated the Phi Gam's Monday afternoon, undefeated in the fraternity intramural tag football league. These two teams will play this afternoon for the right to meet Ruffin Friday afternoon in Kenan Stadium, for the championship of the campus.

The Beta's have a strong passing attack with Moody tossing them and Dressler and Anderson receiving. This combination won the Deke game, Anderson taking a pass over the right end for the only score of the game in the last minute of play. This combination should work well against the A. T. O.'s, as the Phi Gam's made all their gains on short passes in their game with the A. T. O.'s Monday.

In return the A. T. O.'s will present Smith and Brooker, two fine broken field runners. Smith, especially, is a good runner, scooping up a short punt on his forty yard line Monday and running for a touchdown against Collins and Enright Will Don Moleskins as Notre Dame Plays Charity Games.

Carolina coaches will do their bit at relieving the unemployment situation in the country within the next few weeks for Head Coach Chuck Collins and Freshman Coach Rex Enright will take part in football games to be played for charity.

The "four horsemen" will ride again on December 13 when the famous Notre Dame team of 1924 reassembles in New York City to meet New York University. Stuhldreher, Crawley, Layden and Miller start their march for touchdowns, and they will have their left end back with them. Coach Collins will don his moleskins again for that game.

He will not be able to take part in the weeks practice which is to be held prior to the game on account of the Southern Conference Football Coaches Association meeting here December 11, but will be in New York ready for the whistle to blow on the thirteenth.

Coach Enright will run at fullback again with another Notre Dame eleven when a group of star Irish gridders meet Northwestern's former players on

VARSITY-FROSH TRACK MEET IS SET FOR FRIDAY

Special Feature Dashes and Relays Scheduled for Inter-Squad Cinder Events

A track meet between the varsity and freshmen will be staged Friday afternoon on Emerson Field at 4:15. A number of the varsity and freshman track men have been working out this fall and some excellent competition should result. Among the events of interest will be a quarter mile sprint relay consisting of two four-men teams, also a half mile relay in which each man runs two hundred and twenty yards. The high and low hurdle races will be of 70 and 120 yards respectively. A special 100 yard dash and probably a 300 yard run should be of particular interest to spectators and participants. The field events will consist of the pole vault, high jump, javelin, broad jump, discus and shot put.

All men who expect to compete in this meet should see Coach Ranson either Wednesday or Thursday afternoon.

Among the outstanding varsity men to compete will be Charlie Farmer, Lionel Weil, J. K. Smith, Dick Garrett, and Ken Marland in the running events.

GRID COACHES TO MEET HERE SOON

Southern Football Mentors to Convene Day Before Conference Meeting, December 11

The Southern Football Coaches Association will hold its sixth annual meeting here on Thursday, December 11, with hotel headquarters in Durham.

This meeting will come the day before the annual meeting of the Southern Conference, to which the University will also be host.

Invitations have been mailed football coaches all over the South, and a large attendance is expected, according to announcement yesterday from Robert A. Fetzer, Director of Athletics at North Carolina, who with Chuck Collins, head football coach, and Dr. Foy Roberson, of the Athletic Council, make up the local committee on arrangements.

The Association was formed in 1925 to promote good will and sportsmanship among Southern football coaches and has received unstinted praise from coaches in widely scattered localities, who say there is better feeling and spirit among the Southern coaches than in any other section.

One of the outstanding achievements of the Association was the part it took in the formation in 1926 of the Southern Officials Association, which is now functioning so efficiently under the direction of Secretary A. R. Hutchens, and which has contributed so much to the improvement of officiating in the South.

This forward step was taken by the Southern Conference as the direct result of recommendations from a joint committee of officials and of members of the Coaches Association, the members being Shaughnessy of Tulane, Raftery of V. M. I., Bocock of South Carolina and Tebell of N. C. State.

Officers this year are W. C. Raftery, V. M. I., president; Walter Johnson, Presbyterian College, vice-president; and John Floyd, Citadel, secretary. The officers of the Association since its organization in 1925 have been:

For 1925: H. J. Stegeman, Georgia, president; Mike Donahue, L. S. U., vice-president; W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech, secretary.

For 1926: Wallace Wade, Alabama, president; B. B. Clarkson, V. M. I., vice-president; R. A. Fetzer, U. N. C., secretary-treasurer.

For 1927: W. A. Alexander, Georgia Tech, president; S. A. Boles, Kentucky, vice-president; R. A. Fetzer, U. N. C., secretary-treasurer.

For 1928: Dan McGugin, Vanderbilt, president; R. R. Neyland, Tennessee, vice-president; R. A. Fetzer, U. N. C., secretary-treasurer.

Varsity-Frosh Track Meet Set For Friday

Brodie Arnold, Raymond Ruble, Stafford, and "Sandy" Dameron will participate in the field events.

The freshmen who will probably see action in the running events are: W. H. Bonner, S. Askinos, B. C. Goodwin, J. McGlinn, O. W. Prochazka, and J. M. Tobin. R. W. Gold, F. D. Higby, J. McKay, R. A. Reid, and A. S. Dockery will compete for the freshmen in the field events.

Four Thousand Dollar Loss Shown By Audit

Tar Heel amounted to $14,524.16, with $7,970.29, or over fifty per cent coming from advertising. The printing and engraving of this publication amounted to $14,104.22, only $419.84 less than the total revenue.

Advertising furnished $2,819.14, or about seventy per cent, of the $4,080.04 total revenue received by the Buccaneer last year; the cost of printing and engraving amounted to $3,650.55, $429.49 less than the total income.

Uncollected debts of the Daily Tar Heel amount to $600, of the Buccaneer $200, and of the Yackety Yack $23.25.

As soon as the figures can be compiled, the treasurer of the Publications Union Board will present in these columns a financial prospectus of the Tar Heel and Buccaneer for this session.

Local Chapter Of Sigma Xi Meets

The local chapter of the Sigma Xi, national scientific fraternity, met last night in the social room of the Baptist church. A supper preceded the meeting.

The program was under the direction of the botany department and a discussion of the research work now under way was conducted. The speakers for the evening were: Dr. W. C. Coker, Dr. H. R. Totten, Dr. J. N. Couch, and Mr. R. S. Matthews.

Dr. Totten spoke on mushroom classification and growth. Dr. Coker led a discussion on early works in botany in this country, as well as on certain research projects. Dr. Couch's speech dealt with scale insects and their relation to certain fungus diseases. Mr. Matthews spoke on a study of the seed development in pine trees.

One of the largest attendances at any of the recent meetings was recorded last night, forty-two putting in an appearance. Eight visiting professors from Duke University were present.

Chemical Engineers Will Convene Here

A lecture illustrated by slides will be the chief event of the meeting of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers which will take place tonight at 7:15 in 206 Venable. The topic of discussion will be Silica Gel.

Dr. A. M. White, professor of industrial chemistry, suggested at the last meeting that the Chemistry students make an inspection trip through the principal industries of the South during the spring holidays. At the meeting Thursday night the committee appointed to investigate the cost of such a trip will make its report.

The trip will probably include a visit to the DuPont rayon plant, Old Hickory, Tennessee; the DuPont Ammonia corporation, Bell, West Virginia; the Industrial Alcohol company, Baltimore, Maryland; the Nitrogen Fixation corporation, Hopewell Virginia; and possibly others.

CHAPEL HILL AND SANFORD ELEVENS PLAY TIE GAME

Chapel Hill and Sanford High Schools struggled through four quarters on the gridiron to a 0-0 result at Sanford Tuesday.

In the first quarter, Chapel Hill kicked off, and Sanford ran the ball back to her own thirty yard line. The local squad received the ball after it had made two first downs. Both sides gained but little yardage during the remainder of the quarter.

Sanford sent in a fresh squad at the beginning of the quarter, but Chapel Hill stood fast.

Coach Warrick of Sanford ran his original eleven in for the third quarter. Chapel Hill provided her opponents a little worry when she nearly reached the Sanford goal line.

The Sanford second team came onto the field for the last part of the game and out-played the regulars. They forced their way to the locals' twenty yard line, the closest that Sanford ever got to its opponents goal line, but the latter rallied, thereby chalking up a final 0-0 score.

The local squad was outweighed by Sanford. Captain Ray, McKnight, and King proved to be the outstanding Chapel Hill players.

Davidson, November 19.—Urging his charges to forget about the Carolina game of last Saturday, Coach Monk Younger sent the Davidson Wildcats through a stiff practice session yesterday in preparation for the coming game with Wake Forest here Thanksgiving.

"You played sixty minutes of real football against Carolina," Younger said," and we are proud of you. Nevertheless, Wake Forest will be a hard game, more so because you beat Carolina."

GREEN WILL READ HIS NEW PLAY ON SUNDAY EVENING

Music Will Accompany Reading of "Tread the Green Grass"

Tread The Green Grass, Paul Green's latest contribution to the field of drama, will be read by the author Sunday evening, at 8:30 in the Playmakers Theatre. This is the second Playmaker reading of the year and from all accounts it should be one of the best, if not the best, on the schedule. Lamar Stringfield has written a musical accompaniment for this play and will direct this in accord with the reading. Tread the Green Grass is to be produced in New York some time this season. Incidentally, the Pulitzer Prize winner by way of Abraham's Bosom, has another play, The House of Connolly, preparing for the metropolitan stage.

Concerning the reading of Tread the Green Grass Paul Green has issued the following statement:

"A string quartette with flute under the direction of Lamar Stringfield will play the music which Mr. Stringfield is composing for the play. Tread The Green Grass is a philosophical fantasy written in the form of a musical composition somewhat in the nature of an opera.

"The story is that of a young girl, seventeen years old, in whose mind the personifications of Christian religion, paganism of sex, childish beliefs in fairies, and Mother Goose (a code of morality) and the common sense of the everyday life struggle for supremacy. The characters in the piece representing the different phases or personifications of the girl's character are a young preacher (Jesus), a young lawbreaker hiding in the woods (Dionysus) with whom she runs away, an old woman

The Jitney Players in Action

The above picture is a scene from "The Murder in the Red Barn" which the Jitney Players, renowned troupe of traveling dramatists, will present, along with "The Duenna," in the Playmaker Theatre on December 1 and 2.

Unique Dramatic Troupe Is To Present Two Shows In Village

On the first and second of December the renowned Jitney Players will present The Murder in the Red Barn and The Duenna in the Playmakers Theatre, it was officially announced today. The announcement comes as an agreeable surprise to those who are acquainted with the ability and history of this little troupe of traveling actors.

Subscription tickets will not cover this attraction but reservations may be obtained tomorrow at the Students' Supply store. A special rate of fifty cents is offered to students.

The history of the Jitney Players who presented a series of performances here last year with great success, is indeed an interesting one.

Eight years ago the people of any New England town or resort might have been startled to see springing up in their midst a complete theatre, unfolding from what proved, on closer inspection, to be automobile stage. A Ford truck with an unusual body, plus another truck for baggage, plus the unbounded enthusiasm of youth, with a genius for ferreting out good plays, equalled The Jitney Players introducing themselves to the people of New England and to troubled theatrical waters.

Just who and what are The Jitney Players? This question may well be asked as this winter, people of this town will see rolling through their streets trucks and cars labeled "The Jitney Players."

Eight years ago Bushnell Cheney and his bride, Alice Keating Cheney, were beseeched by their many friends who urged them to produce summer entertainment for various charities. Both Miss Keating and Mr. Cheney were well known in theatrical circles, having played on Broadway, so it was natural that the social world, which had had been their background, should turn to them when something different was needed for their benefits. Along with the romantic background of The Jitney Players it must be recorded that the funds for starting the players were the wedding check presents sent to the bride and groom.

The first company, composed of Broadway professionals reinforced by college friends as stage hands, sallied forth in the summer of 1923 in real gypsy fashion, riding wherever they might perch on the trucks, playing beneath the stars and when the days work was done, sleeping alongside their stage. However, up to the moment of starting the company was unnamed. As they rolled out on the highway, on that first eventful journey, one of the company laughingly shouted, "Here goes the jitney players," calling the company after the more or less stock term for Fords, and so the name conceived in jest has grown into one of the best known of all theatrical organizations, an organization that the New York papers claim is the saving grace of the present theatrical orgy.

Like any new departure from the conventions The Jitney Players were at first looked upon with skepticism. Soon, however, the people of the east began to look forward to the annual visits of this company. Small out of the way places welcomed them; summer resorts besought them; the better drama was coming into its own; the road, in its most primitive sense had returned. The result was the enlarging of company and equipment. Throughout the development of the materialistic side, in caring for the bodily comforts of actors and patrons, the original idea of presenting the unusual and best drama of all ages was not lost sight of.

Out of the demands from new sources came the winter touring company of The Jitney Players, carrying on the principles of the summer company, but acting indoors. The new step was taken in 1928 and has so grown that at present the winter season outlasts the summer one. After all citadels of the drama and education had succumbed to The Jitney Players the only field unexplored was that center of commercialism, New York. Here meeting the commercial theatre on its own terms, on its own field, The Jitney Players enjoyed a five weeks' run, winning unanimous acclaim from the New York press. Back of all the success of The Jitney Players lies the simple fact that success has never dimmed the ideal. The play has always been considered before the box-office, with the result that those of discernment in the theatre have spread the word, and an ever-growing reputation has opened wider fields. —P. Carroll, Francis F. Bradshaw, and Dr. English Bagby, all of the University faculty.

The business session of the annual assembly will be at the Carolina Inn Saturday morning, December 6, beginning at ten-thirty o'clock.

'Mental Hygiene' Receives Praise Of National Hygiene Committee

In the last November issue of the Survey, there appears a review of Dr. Groves' latest book, Mental Hygiene.

Written with Phyllis Blanchard, this book has met with wide approval of the men and women interested in the subject. Dr. George K. Pratt of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene reviews the book as follows:

"This is the book that every person in the professional field of mental hygiene has promised himself some day he would write. That Groves and Blanchard should have stolen a march on the rest of us who were laggard, speaks much for their energy and perspicacity. And the best of it is that the book is a corking fine one. The authors have been particularly successful in steering with a nice discrimination between the Scylla of writing a self-conscious and simplified primer and the Charybdis of inditing a ponderous and equally self-conscious tome. Mental Hygiene comes as near having a universal appeal as any work of its kind, and its generous bibliography and questions for class discussion at the end of each chapter make it an almost ideal textbook for students in sociology, psychology, social work and psychiatry.

"The reviewer with difficulty restrains his cheers, especially for the excellence of the first two chapters on the origin and development of mental hygiene and the psychiatric background. Taken together these portions constitute as fascinating (and as authentic) a portrayal of how mental hygiene came to be, as anything yet to appear. Then come successive chapters dealing with the influence of mental hygiene on childhood, adolescence, marriage, the schools and colleges, industry, recreation, religion, literature, social work, and public opinion. Read consecutively and then integrated in the reader's mind as a whole, these chapters give an insight into the amazing thoroughness with which the concepts of mental hygiene have permeated the thinking, and frequently the techniques, of virtually all the social sciences. Probably the most helpful contribution mental hygiene has made to these social sciences is found in its insistence on a dynamic point of view that asks why people act as they do, as contrasted to conventional and static practices that rest content merely to ask what people are, and to paste labels on conduct accordingly. Groves and Blanchard have caught and imprisoned in their book the true significance of this contribution and have demonstrated effectively how education, religion, social work, and the like, can free themselves from some of the fetters of outmoded tradition that render sterile so much of their effort.

Law Students Discuss Insanity And Drunkeness As Crime Alibis

By L. S. S.

"There, little murderer, don't you cry. Just plead crazy and you'll get by." This prevailing popular sentiment caused the class in the administration of justice in the law school to invite Dr. English Bagby and Dr. J. F. Dashiel of the psychology department to its November discussion, led by Professor Coates of insanity and criminal law.

The meeting was opened by a talk on responsibility for crime committed while drunk or in the throes of delirium tremens by W. B. Matheny, first year law student from Forest City. He stated that voluntary drunkenness, while it might reduce the degree of a crime, was never an excuse or defense. "Permanent insanity caused by chronic alcoholism, however, is as good an insanity as any so far as the criminal is concerned," he stated.

The court's definition of a defendant's sanity—the ability to know the nature of his act and whether it is right or wrong—was discussed in a paper by Wex Malone, third year law student from Asheville. "The defendant," he said, "must prove his defense of insanity to the satisfaction of the jury." Moral insanity, Mr. Malone explained, was not recognized in North Carolina as the courts maintain that "to know the right and still pursue the wrong is to be under the seduction of the evil one."

M. R. Alexander, third year law student from Asheville, discussed the function and problems of the expert witness in court. "The average juror, he stated, "was just as able to diagnose a case of insanity as a case of pellagra or leprosy." Mr. Alexander demonstrated the difficulties of the hypothetical question.

Martin Kellogg, Jr., third year law student from Sunbury, discussed the disposition of a defendant who had been declared insane.

After the discussion of the law's treatment of insanity the program of the meeting was turned over to Dr. Bagby and Dr. Dashiell who demonstrated thoroughly the difference in the legal and psychological point of views. According to Dr. Bagby, "lawyers want the expert witness to say that the defendant has symptoms A, B, and C which clearly indicate demonical depressive insanity which would make him knock people in the head.

"The conditions under which an expert must examine a defendant make this impossible," stated Dr. Bagby. He further stated that to send an expert out for an hour to examine a defendant and come back with a verdict of sane or insane was grotesque. "However," admitted Dr. Bagby, "if you dangle $250 a day before him, an expert will be very liable to reach a conclusion."

The Weil Lectures

In the scholastic year 1914-1915 the Weil lectures were established in the University by the families of Messrs. Sol and Henry Weil. The general theme of the lectures is American citizenship, and each year a specific phase of citizenship is discussed by a person pre-eminent in the particular field. The Weil lecturers have always been people who have had something to say; they have made valuable contributions to the intellectual life of the community.

This year the committee in charge of the lectures has had the good fortune of securing for a spring engagement a leading political scientist, Professor Harold J. Laski, of the University of London. Those who have read Professor Laski's recent article in Harper's Magazine know that he is aware of vital contemporary problems as well as the political theory and history of the past. He no doubt will have some pertinent things to say.

The Weil lectures are being anticipated keenly by those who enjoy listening to the public utterances of important men. The Weil family, in permanently establishing this lecture-series, has indeed established a worthwhile institution. It is our regret that there are not more of this type. —B. M.

Terra Cotta Idols

We have never outgrown our childish belief in the essential fineness of mankind. So we are wide-eyedly disappointed whenever the idol we have made of humanity seems to be only terra cotta. And out terra cotta god smashed yesterday when we learned what various persons, presumably Carolina students and alumni, had been doing.

We had hoped Carolina students and alumni were too fine to send the telegrams they have sent and to write the letters they have written to the football team—unsigned. The very charming missives—unsigned—assure the team that it is yellow. The delicately thoughtful communications—unsigned—assure the team that it lacks the very shadow of school spirit.

Of course there has been an addition to the sum total of human knowledge. We know now that various fans considered the team a source of revenue. When they lost money on the games, they lost their loyalty and sympathy. And they cannot fathom our simple souls that love Carolina and Carolina's football team even when it misses its stride.

Fate can make the best race horse miss its stride. But nothing short of the most offensive presumption can let the Percheron that has never known months of work on the track neigh in derision. He has every reason to be divinely thankful that the world harbors horseflesh that gives its best to the traditions of the course, however fate may happen to legislate against that horseflesh for a season.

And the dray animal cannot understand that the most glorious race is run when all hope of a perfect season is gone. "Hope of the half-defeated . . ." —V. A. D.

Dissecting The Di

Dean Bradshaw, the second campus notable to pay a visit to the Di hall during this quarter, took occasion at the last meeting, after observing the conduct of it, to present a well-analyzed criticism, applicable not only to the Senate, but to present-day forensic organizations of all kinds on the campus. Pointing out that such societies have today innumerable conflicting interests opposed to them which even the last generation was not forced to deal with, the speaker showed that the need for carefully considered expression of student opinion is as much to be desired now as at any time. Though the social function of the societies has been largely superceded, or at least limited, by increased attention to athletics, motion pictures, fraternities, more numerous week-end trips, semi-official organizations, et cetera, there nevertheless remains a real opportunity for discussion centered upon live subjects. Foreign students marvel at the average American student's lack of knowledge of national current affairs and conditions. Yet just such a voluntary, non-didactic group as the Senate might easily remedy that situation.

As brought out by Mr. Bradshaw, the impotence and ineffectualness usually attaching to results reached by the members is a direct consequence of the customary impromptu reasoning and speaking to be encountered in all campus forums. We heartily endorse his suggestion that intensive consideration be given every question before it appears on the calendar. When it can be said that each decision reached by the Dialectic Senate actually reflects the conclusions of what may be termed a fairly representative student group, then will attention be paid its findings, and membership will become once again one of the highest honors sought after on the campus.—J. M. L.

"If a man wants to marry he should make a little money first," says a magistrate. Afterwards, he'll have to make a little money last.—The Humorist.

RAY! RAY! TEAM!

To the Editor:

A spectator at the Carolina-Georgia Tech game made the remark that the student body here was a bunch of pseudo-sophisticated prigs, who apparently thought it vulgar to support a football team. The veracity of the statement is yet to be doubted.

Apparently as soon as it was discovered that Coach Collins could not make an all-American team with a sophomore line, the student body became personally and collectively offended, and limited their display of enthusiasm to criticism and innuendo.

Such an attitude has been a tremendous aid to the team, and is likely responsible for our remarkably successful season. Of course, none of us would be so plebian as to suggest that a team reflects the spirit of the school, and in the event that we should, it would have no effect here, because the blue and white team apparently has no supporters. It might aptly be called a team without a school.

We University students are great and generous winners, but we refuse to associate ourselves with a losing team. Last year any Carolina man would have been highly incensed if anyone had questioned his loyalty. This year that feeling has evolved into a more critical and analytical attitude of reproach. This is highly commendable and a great improvement over the traditional fighting spirit of the Tar Heels. If we can only keep it until after December 6, there will be a lot of things to blame on the team and the coaching staff.

The only objection to such an order of things is that it permits the students to usurp the privilege of the alumni and the sports columnists. These gentlemen may get sore and demand that their exclusive rights be protected, in which event the thought process of the undergraduate will be seriously hindered.

If I am to continue in the role of a writer for the Daily Tar Heel, I should, according to the Buccaneer, get me a little Boy Scout suit and learn to do the wig-wag (That is not what you think it is. It is a signal system used by the B. S. A.) However, I am not going to be catty and criticize the campus comic because they happen to poke fun at my favorite publication. Instead, I am going to show the real Scout spirit, and compliment them on having some funny jokes in the Exchange section.

Mack Gray, director of intramural sports, made the teams from the Law School and Ruffin play on a field of mud the other day. While the teams were wallering in the mire, Mack sat high and dry and enjoyed himself. To think we paid forty cents to see the hard-boiled sergeant in "All's Quiet!" According to the score of the game, Ruffin won, which only goes to show that lawyers are not as good at slinging mud as they are made out to be.

A certain young man (I would like to be able to tell you his name, but it is impossible for numerous reasons) was feeling very emotional while on a date the other night. He was also feeling rosy. As usual under such circumstances, he started the old line of being misunderstood and needing a sympathetic companion. At the psychologically correct moment he sighed, "The trouble with me is that I am hungry—hunrgy—" At this moment his co-ed date brightly replied. "Then let's go down town and get something to eat." Ah, wasted youth, love, and technique.

Well, well, I see that the senior classes are planning on giving a cup to the winning team in the Carolina-Duke game in order to promote friendship between the two institutions. If these "Love Feasts" continue, I propose that anything as rough as football be banned between the schools, and instead the following substituted: The presidents of Carolina and Duke will meet in the center of the gridiron and hold a debate on—Resolved: That face powder is more dangerous than gun powder. Should this fail to decide the superiority, then selected student teams shall meet around the side-lines and hold a lemonade drinking contest. As the grand prize, the winning team will be allowed the services of "Boss" Hill (courtesy of the A. T. O.'s) for the following year. I admit that this plan is ridiculous, but so, too, are the plans to eliminate the intense rivalry between Duke and Carolina. Personally, I'm all for letting them try to take the goal-posts should they win, if their threat of two years ago is again made.

BUILDINGS DEPARTMENT REPAINTS DORMITORIES

P. L. Burch, of the buildings department, explained the nature of the work being done on the campus at present as a continuation of that done during the past summer. The department is concerned with doing the small necessary jobs of repainting and remodeling. During the summer it repainted the interiors of Everett and Aycock dormitories.

The department is remodeling the cornice of old West and painting the stairways, halls, and basement of Steele dormitory. Mr. Burch stated that the stairs and halls of Old West and Old East are soon to be repainted also.

Campus Football Title to be Decided Today

A. T. O.'S DROP GAME FOR FRAT TITLE TO BETAS

Ultimate Winners Score Twice in Last Half to Win Fast Encounter, 18-6

ANDERSON STAR FOR BETA

Winners Meet Ruffin Today for Campus Title; Dormitory Team Favored to Win

By virtue of their win over the A. T. O.'s yesterday afternoon the Betas captured the fraternity tag football title for the second successive year, 18-6 and won the right to meet Ruffin dormitory this afternoon for the campus championship. The game will be played in Kenan stadium at four o'clock.

This game this afternoon is expected to draw a sizeable crowd to see these teams match their passing attacks. Anderson of the Betas, who was on the all-campus team last year, has been snagging many passes this season and is largely responsible for the showing of his team.

Riggs of Ruffin is a dangerous passer with Grossman and MacBride being adept receivers. These two passing combinations have been hard to stop this fall, and a spirited tag game is expected in the battle to decide who will be awarded the crown.

A. T. O. scored the first touchdown in the initial period on an intercepted pass by Kindel. The Betas then renewed their driving power and held their opponents to this lone touchdown while grabbing a score for themselves during each of the remaining three periods. Anderson received a spectacular thirty-yard pass from Follins behind the goal line to score first for the Betas. The entire secondary defense of the A. T. O.'s was around Anderson in an attempt to ground the throw, but the receiver snatched the ball and held on to it desperately.

Dresslar intercepted a long pass from Smith on the second play after the half and returned it twenty-five yards for Beta's second touchdown. Dresslar again scored in the early part of the fourth quarter on a pass from Follins. Both teams held fast during the rest of the final period and were forced to punt frequently.

The A. T. O.'s threatened the Beta's goal several times during the game but lacked the driving punch to put over a score. Both teams presented a fine array of stars with Follins, Dresslar, and Anderson in the limelight for the victors and Smith, Boger, and Kindel shining for the vanquished. Smith made several long gains around the flanks for A. T. O.

CAPTAIN MOTLEY ONLY VIRGINIAN TO END CAREER

Cavaliers Will Have Many Regulars Back, But Now Look Forward to Thanksgiving

University, Virginia, November 20.—Captain Hunter Motley is the only Virginia regular who will be forced to lay aside his uniform at the end of the North Carolina game here Thanksgiving day.

All the other Cavalier first string have at least one more year of football. Some of them have two, for there are a good many of last season's first year players who have made their way on to the varsity this fall.

HUNTER MOTLEY-VIRGINIA CAPTAIN

Captain Motley and Churchill Dunn, a guard, are the only "V" men who will be lost to the squad at the close of the season. Motley has been playing as a regular all fall, but Dunn hurt his leg early in practice and has not played as well as he did a year ago.

Virginia has high hopes for success next season if all those eligible return to the gridiron. In addition there'll be such men from the first year team as Wager, Flock, Dial, Coles, Berkovich, Cutler, Bence and Dosher for the line and Adams, Abramson, Baird, Harris, Holliday and Suddrath for the backfield.

But just now the Cavaliers are looking forward to Thanksgiving and are letting next season take care of itself.

Captain Motley has not played on a team that conquered the Tar Heels. He wants to end his gridiron career by breaking the winning streak of the boys from Chapel Hill and winding up the season with a victory.

Defeating Carolina is going to be hard to accomplish. There aren't many who think the Cavaliers can bring it about. But the boys out on Lambeth Field rather have the feeling that this is their year to win on Thanksgiving day.

James G. Driver, Virginia's director of athletics, reports that advance sale of seats for the North Carolina game is by far the best he has seen since he took over ticket distribution. He'll be looking for a record breaking crowd to see the final game the Cavalier varsity is due to play on Lambeth Field.

Same Course For Race

The course over which the Conference teams will run in their championship tourney will be the same as was used for the meet with V. P. I. except the start and finish, which will be clocked at Kenan Stadium.

Officials of the contest include: a starter, a referee, six timers, six judges, and about twenty-three inspectors, whose duty it is to see that the harriers do not get off the official course added to the important job of holding up traffic at each intersection which cuts into the five-mile route.

V. M. I. Favored To Win Southern Cross Country Run Here On Saturday

Carolina Will Be Defending Her Last Year's Title Against Formidable Cadet Harriers; Georgia Tech, Upset by Auburn, Not Expected to Be Serious Threat

The Southern Conference cross country run coupled with the Carolina-Virginia freshman football game will supply Mr. Sport Fan with an interesting program here tomorrow.

The Tar Heel and Cavalier yearlings will begin the fray at 2 o'clock in Kenan Stadium, and the large, fast field entered for the Conference run will start their five mile championship race between the halves of the football game.

The Dixie Conference race will finish before the spectators before the beginning of the second half of the game, and arrangements have been made to have the progress of the race at each mile post broadcast to the fans via the loud-speakers on the field.

With all the entries in for the annual Cross Country meet, eyes are turned to the comparative strength of the contestants.

Carolina will be defending her last year's title with a strong, but inexperienced sophomore team, while V. M. I. looms as team favorite due to an early season win over V. P. I. The Gobblers are rated as the team for second honors, although they lost to a snappy Tar Heel outfit by a two-point margin last month.

Virginia and W. & L. ran in the four-cornered meet to tie for third place at Lexington, Virginia last Friday, while V. M. I. and V. P. I. were copping first and second honors.

Georgia Tech who placed fourth last year in the Dixie run is not expected to upset the dope this year, as she surprisingly lost to a spririted Auburn team two weeks ago. Nothing has been learned about the University of Georgia's team so far this season, and she is rated as a dark horse in the run tomorrow.

Duke, led by a flashy runner, Heizer, lost to the Navy, W. & L., and Carolina. This pre-season record would necessitate her being placed as a runner-up, and not a threat to cop the title.

Nothing has been learned to date about the power of the Florida Harriers, and they enter the run with the advantage of having their strength kept under cover until the meet.

In a like position are the hill and dalers from the University of Tennessee, as they have kept their actions well-shrouded.

Alabama and Maryland, who were expected to enter this year's run, declined at the last moment. N. C. State has broken up its cross-country team, and will not be in the chase tomorrow.

These teams compose a large fast field, covering almost the entire South, and with hope depending on the young second-year squad (excepting the veteran, Captain Baucom) it would seem impossible to expect the "Heel" rookies to romp home with the bacon in the fashion of Elliott, Pritchett and other stars of recent years. However, Coach Dale Ranson's proteges are rapidly rounding into shape, and barring further injuries the cream of the Blue and White harriers plan to make one strenuous effort to retain their Dixie title against the invading Southerners.

One way to end the depression, some economists say, is for the public to get over its fear of buying. In other words, it must change its mind about minding its change.—Virginian-Pilot.

FROSH END WORK ON VIRGINIA TILT

Will Play Kiski School in Post Season Game on December 5

Yesterday the freshman squad ended preparation for their coming game with the Virginia yearlings as far as strenuous scrimmage goes. They will have a light workout today and then will be ready for the game tomorrow. Instead of ending the season with this game, another game has been arranged. The Tar Babies will play the Kiski School of Pennsylvania, in the Kenan Stadium on December 5. However, the interest in the Virginia game is very great among the players, and they are determined to win.

Coach Enright ran his men through a very spirited drill. First he had a dummy scrimmage of a few new plays he has given, then punt blocking was practiced. He had the various teams scrimmaging kick-offs for quite a while. The session ended after four teams had had a lengthy signal drill. The first team especially looked well. They were getting their plays off

LINE PLAY IS IMPROVED

Virginia Student Support of Team at High Pitch as Game Draws Near

The two days of blocking practice this week evidently have not been held in vain, for both linemen and backs were opening up wide holes for the ball carriers to march through on Emerson field yesterday afternoon. Offensive drive was stressed throughout the whole workout in both real and dummy scrimmages.

Blocking drills, however, have not been halted. When they were not in scrimmage the guards were drilling on charging scross the line of scrimmage, and the tackles were beating on the buckboards.

Practice for the afternoon started with the first eleven scrimmaging offensively against a group of reserves. Blocking

TAR HEEL GRID STARS SPEAK ON SPORT PROGRAM

Captain Nash, Magner, and Lipscomb Discuss Strategy Of Positions

A trio of Carolina's pigskin warriors aided Coach Chuck Collins, Carolina football mentor in putting on an interesting thirty minutes of gridiron talk in the B. C. Sports Review last Wednesday night. Ned Lipscomb, huge center of the team, talked about line play. Bringing out the fine points of offensive and defensive forward-wall play, Lipscomb said, "hit hard, tackle scientifically, make 'contact', and keep your head clear."

Jim Magner, eight yard-a-plunge halfback, eulogized briefly on pass offense, and parallel running plays. The Quaker City boy said that a fast-charging tackle does more damage to a pass formation than any other one man on a team.

A little ten-year-old girl who lives in Chapel Hill, and who is an enthusiastic Strud Nash fan, had the unique pleasure of having Strud tell her over the air that he was glad to broadcast his opinions of football strategy for her especial benefit. The captain of the Heels talked effusively on what a good halfback should do at every phase of the game. The main drift of Strud's initial radio talk on halfback tactics was that the most important work of the half was to block.

After the Carolina boys had finished their talks, Collins explained to the unseen audience how he induced the boys to come to Raleigh with him. Nice big juicy steaks and all the trimmin's were the enticements.

A noted hair-cut expert, and a witty haberdasher were invited by Collins to give their dope on how to run the team. They declined the invitation, one member of the U. N. C. "strategy board" because he was in charge of the baby department for Wednesday night, while his better-half played auction, and the other member because he was "'put out" about the results of a very disastrous bet on the game with Davidson last Saturday.

The Carolina mentor next answered a few questions which were sent in by fans. In his answers he talked about the all-star team at U. N. C. of 1914, the "smashing ends" 'used by the University of Pennsylvania, the "Statue of Liberty" play of Michigan, and the longest forward pass of the past year.

More free passes to the Duke-Carolina game are to be given to youths under-sixteen who pick the best all-state teams. The coaches of the Big Five are to be judges, broadcasting the winners a week ahead of the game.

Chemistry Refunds

A large number of refund checks remain unclaimed at the chemistry supply room. Students who have not received their refunds should call immediately. Some of these are as much as three years old.

Cavalier Mentor Thinks Spirit Of Student Body Is Most Valuable Asset

University, Virginia, November 20.—The spirit of the University of Virginia student body in support of the football team has been praised by Earl Abell, varsity head coach, as one of the chief factors in bringing a victory over Washington and Lee.

Coach Abell expects this same spirit to inspire the Cavalier team against North Carolina on Thanksgiving. He hopes the inspiration will result in a Virginia victory, but he is frank to add that defeating the Tar Heels is going to be hard.

When several hundred Virginia students braved a chill drizzle to cheer the team as it practiced on Lambeth field last Thursday the magic started working. The gridders were fired to a white heat last Friday night by the torch-light procession and the mass meeting which packed Cabell Hall.

As a result the Cavalier varsity played against the Generals as it has not played before this season. That same high-spirited action is what Coach Abell hopes to see when his charges close the season against Carolina. He feels sure that if they play against the Tar Heels as they did against the Generals there'll be a victory for Virginia.

Virginia's varsity is resuming practice after a rest since defeating Washington and Lee on Saturday. The Cavaliers began intensive training yesterday afternoon for the North Carolina game just a week away.

Every member of the Virginia squad has been refreshed by the lapse in training and from each's conversation appears to be keen to get down to the serious business of learning how to lick the Tar Heels.

Coach Abell expects to drive his charges at top speed all this week, with scrimmages on Friday and Saturday. Next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday they'll be tapered off. The game on Thanksgiving Day is expected to attract the largest crowd in two seasons to Lambeth field.

DRAMA BOOK IS NOW OFF PRESS

Latest Issue of "Carolina Play-Book" to Be Offered to Students at Special Rate

With a special subscription rate offered only to students, the first issue of The Carolina Play Book, published jointly by the Carolina Playmakers and the Carolina Dramatic Association, made its 1930-31 debut yesterday afternoon. It is the only periodical of its kind in the United States, having for its slogan, "Toward a Native American Drama" and primarily devoted to that interest.

As summed up by Editor Frederick H. Koch, "Our particular interest is in the making of a native theatre; in the making of fresh dramatic forms—in playwriting, in acting, in all the stage arts."

The book has rapidly gained widespread popularity and engaged the interest of dramatic enthusiats all over the country. Its circulation not only includes many subscribers in California, Wyoming, and other western states but extends as far as Hawaii, Japan, Germany, England and Canada. The staff, consisting of Frederick H. Koch, editor, Ralph Westerman, business manager, and Paul Green, advisory editor, hopes eventually to make the book a monthly. It is now published four times a year.

The recent issue contains an article by Paul Green in which the Chapel Hill plawright frankly presents the bare facts of the situation confronting the struggling actors in New York and other large cities.

A comprehensive study of the ultimate aim of the Playmakers is given by Ralph Westerman in an article entitled "The Carolina Playmakers Define Drama and Look to the Future."

A Tom Thumb lecture on the essentials in stage lighting has been prepared by Samuel Selden, technical director of the play. Mr. Selden is the author of Stage Lighting and Scenery, a recent volume which has received flattering reviews in the The Theatre Magazine, The Theatre Arts Monthly, and other professional periodicals.

Louise Perry reviews the state-wide activities of The Carolina Dramatic Association.

Besides other articles and editorials of vast interest, Joe Fox's Hollyhocks, a play of New England village folk, is printed in this issue.

Ralph Westerman has announced that the special subscription rate offered students is only temporary and is prompted by many requests asking that the rate be lowered to suit the student pocketbook. All those wishing to take advantage of this opportunity should do so before the Christmas holidays.

The objection to unemployment is that it affects the wrong people.—Fresno Republican.

Three Art Exhibits Will Be Parts Of Graduate Reception

The Shirley Graves Graduate Club will have an open house reception and dance for the faculty and graduate students in Smith building tonight.

The reception begins at eight-thirty o'clock and lasts until ten. As a part of the entertainment, there will be three art exhibits in the lounge of the building. W. M. Steene, of Chapel Hill, will have an exhibit of portraits, C. R. Strudwick, of Hillsboro, will have another, and Mary de B. Graves Rees a third. Refreshments will be served during the early part of the evening.

After ten o'clock there will be an informal dance with the faculty orchestra playing under the direction of Lamar Stringfield.

DAVIDSON TO BE HOST OF ANNUAL LANGUAGE MEET

There will be many interesting speakers on the program. Of particular interest is the speech of Dr. S. E. Leavitt, of the Spanish department of the University of North Carolina. The subject of Dr. Leavitt's talk is "The Sources and Date of the Estrella de Sevilla." This play is commonly attributed to Lope de Vegas and the date has long been in doubt. In January, 1930, Senor Cotarelo y Mori attempted to prove that it was written in 1623. Leavitt will point out the weakness of this argument with additional evidence which he collected while in Spain last year.

Dr. G. C. Taylor, a member of the English department of the University, will also be one of the speakers on the program. He has chosen for his subject matters connected with Shakespeare, and will explain certain ascetic qualities of Shakespeare's dramas in the light of the sources of the dramas.

with more precision and snap, and seem in the best condition. Weisker is still suffering from his injured knee, and it is doubtful whether he will play Saturday. Mullis, hefty tackle, who was injured early in the season, will not be able to play any more this year. Beside these few injuries the squad is in fine shape and Coach Enright can throw full strength against Virginia. Anacoustos, hard-plunging back from Illinois, has returned and is in shape again. He will assuredly see action Saturday.

The team that will probably start the game Saturday is: Frankel and Brandt, ends; Crane and Strickland, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards; Gardner, center. The backfield quartet will have Woollen, Phipps, Hackney, and Whitener.

No definite news regarding the young Cavaliers can be found. It is said that they have not had such a successful season, and like the Tar Babies, are out to end the season with a victory.

TEAM BLOCKING MUCH BETTER IN LONG SCRIMMAGE

by this outfit was much better than it has been recently, and the ball carriers had little trouble in getting past the line of scrimmage.

Running on the first outfit were: Lipscomb, center; Fysal and Blackwood, guards; Thompson and McDade, tackles; Brown and Walker, ends; Branch, quarterback; Chandler and Captain Nash, halves; and Houston, fullback.

The best blocking and running of the afternoon was shown by the varsity eleven which replaced the first team. The linemen opened up wide gaps for off-tackle and over-center plays and held well so that the passes could be executed properly. Gilbreath, center; Newcombe and McIver, guards; Hodges and Underwood, tackles; Alexander and Davis, ends; Moore, quarterback; Maus and Erickson, halves; and McCaskill, fullback, were running on this team.

Shortly before halting the scrimmage, Coach Collins exclaimed, "I would like to see you block that way in a game."

After the real scrimmage was over the backs and ends ran dummy scrimmage on forward pass offense, and the linemen, tackle to tackle, went back to their drills on blocking and charging. The backs were snagging passes better than they have of late, though several of them missed some seeming sure catches.

Virginia Spirit at High Pitch

Press dispatches from Charlottesville report that the student support of the team for the Thanksgiving game is running at a high pitch, and that it has been that way for several weeks. They had a torch-light parade the night before the Washington and Lee game, and are planning even bigger pep shows before the Tar Heels invade Lambeth field next Thursday.

The Tar Heel football team knows what this kind of support does to a football team, and they are putting out to get in tip-top form to match the expected drive and fight of the Cavaliers.

TAYLOR SOCIETY HEAD PUBLISHES CLUB'S LECTURES

Addresses Delivered Before Organization Last Year Are Collected by Dr. Schwenning.

Dr. G. T. Schwenning, associate professor of business administration, has recently published a book containing addresses on industrial issues, which were made before the local student branch of the Taylor Society by specialists on the subjects. The collection includes all those made last year before the Taylor society and one by Bernard M. Cone, president of the Proximity Manufacturing company of Greensboro, North Carolina.

The material which this book contains is considered useful to students of commerce and to executives as well, since it takes up the most recent and most important problems in the industrial world. The subject matter of the publication shows that the South is recognizing and inquiring into the present economic problems.

The addresses which were made here last year gave personal opinions of the speakers and many valuable ideas are advanced and are divided into three groups.

The first section is composed of three lectures on the textile problems. The first by Henry P. Kendall, president of the Kendall company, Boston, Mass., and president of the Taylor Society, is entitled "How One Management Has Met Problems of the Textile Industry," in which he outlined the solving of problems confronting his company. Bernard M. Cone, of Greensboro, outlined a number of the most common textile problems in his address on "Some of the Present Day Problems in the Textile Industry." The last address in this group was "Management Problems in the Cotton Textile Industry," made by Dr. C. T. Murchison, professor of applied economics here.

The second group, on personnel problems, contains only two addresses, both by University professors. Dr. Harry D. Wolf,

History Teacher Is Dismissed Because Of Pacific Beliefs

Malcolm M. Young, student of the University and former speaker pro-tem of the Phi Assembly, was dismissed from his position as history teacher in one of the Washington, D. C. high schools because of his beliefs in pacifism, it was reported yesterday.

Young graduated from the University in 1926. During his four years study here, he took an active part in debating, and at one time was winner of the Mary D. Wright debate medal.

The principal of the McKinley high school, from which the history professor was dismissed, agreed with Young in that the latter has in no way "propagandized" the school in favor of pacifism, as he was accused. It was admitted by the former University student, however, that he did at one time mention the fact that he favored the League of Nations, and stated his desire that the United States would enter.

Young is at present seeking support of members of Congress in his appeal for reinstatement.

ROTARIANS STAGE BENEFIT MATINEE

The Chapel Hill Rotarians met in the Methodist Church Wednesday night and were served supper by the ladies' missionary society. They did not have a program as usual, and have decided not to meet on next Wednesday evening.

The Rotary club has decided to put on the annual food matinee for children at the Carolina Theatre this morning at 10:30 o'clock. The children will bring food which will be turned over to the King's Daughters for distribution to the poor.

The Rotarians have decided also to give a performance of The Vagabond King tomorrow afternoon at 3:00. A silver offering will be taken at the door and will be used for the Orange county poor.

UNIVERSITY ASKS FUNDS OF BOARD

State Advisory Budget Board Considers University's Needs In Raleigh Meeting.

At the meeting of the State's advisory budget commission in Raleigh Thursday representatives from the University appeared to request funds for the next two years which included a request for a new gymnasium.

The committee met to approve the new budget which was submitted to the commission yesterday. The University asked for $926,273 for the first year of the biennium and $963,193 for the second. It also asked for $400,000 in bonds for the gymnasium.

The University was granted $848,100 and $750,00 for the two years of this biennium but due to the twenty percent cut in the appropriations, used only approximately $775,300, and $700,000.

Governor O. Max Gardner, as ex-officio president of the board presided at this meeting. Others present were: Francis D. Winston, Leslie Weil, Charles Whedbee, and Josephus Daniels, trustees, and President Frank Graham, R. B. House, and Charles T. Woollen, representing the University.

Coker And Biology Class Visit Lakes

Dr. R. E. Coker, of the zoology department, and his hydrobiology class visited White and Black lakes in Bladen county last Saturday for the purpose of making a study of biological conditions in these waters and of collecting some microscopic animal life there.

The two lakes are among the most interesting natural features of North Carolina; Black Lake covers about three square miles with waters so darkly stained that the bottom cannot be seen at a depth of two feet. White Lake offers a very sharp contrast, having waters so crystal clear that one can see a pin on the bottom at a depth of eight or ten feet; it is like a large spring without considerable inlet or outlet, and covers an area of about ane and one half square miles. Certain forms of microscopic life have been found in White Lake that have not been discovered in other North Carolina waters.

Einstein Gives Views On Modern Educational Ideas And Methods

Albert Einstein, one of Shaw's eight greatest men of all times, states in an interview in the Boston Traveler, "In nine cases out of ten the teacher is at fault when a child is not progressing in his education as he should." The father of relativity is well-known as a teacher himself and can say this with experience at his command.

Going on, he declares, "Only he can be a teacher who can teach interestingly, who can present his material, even though it be an abstract subject, in such a manner as to awaken a resonance in the soul of his pupil and keep alive his curiosity.

"The trouble today is that children are fed up with definitions instead of being introduced to tangible things."

Despite his exceedingly complicated theories of the laws of nature, the man explains in an amazingly clear way his ideas on modern educational methods. He remarks that final or entrance examinations are "no real test of knowledge."

"For a few hours the students are forced to exert their minds in an unusual, artificial manner, only to forget almost immediately most of what they studied on this special occasion.

"I should admit to the university any pupil whom his teacher, having observed him over a period of years, will recommend as fit."

Concerning physics, Einstein believes its study should begin wholly with experiments.

"A pretty experiment," he says, "is intrinsically more valuable, often, than 20 formulae evolved by the brain. Formulae in physics, at least in the early periods of study, are as terrifying as dates are in the study of history.

"In short," he continues, "the salvation of our schools lies in more demonstration. The thing that is to be learned must be experienced." He recommends films as a good means of carrying this out.

History is regarded by Einstein as "unnecessary ballast."

"I don't regard it as a mishap if a pupil never learns anything about Alexander the Great, nor of dozens of other conquerors," he says.

"If you insist upon delving into the ancient past, then please the student from Cyrus, Artaxerxes, and Vercingetorix—and tell him something about the exponents of culture, such as Archimedes, Ptolemaeus, Heron, Appollonius—of discoverers and explorers."

Politics should not be taught, because, he says, impartial teaching is almost impossible when teachers are economically dependent upon the state or board from which they draw their pay.

He maintains that a diploma should not be given until a student could qualify as a carpenter, bricklayer, locksmith, or other skilled artisan.

This, he says, is important, "both because of the intrinsic value of learning a trade and because it makes the educated man feel that he belongs with the broad masses of the people.

"To learn a trade means for a student to broaden the foundation upon which he rests as a moral personality.

"School is to develop, first of all, the man, the character—and not merely his brains."

When questioned about whether women should enjoy the advantages of higher education, he remarked, "All roads to learning should be opened to women, but nobody should blame me if I am somewhat skeptical about possible results.

"I am thinking about certain obstacles in the female organism which were put there by nature, and which stand in the way of our applying the same standards as with the men. The case of Mme. Curie (discoverer of radium) is merely an exception to the rule."—The Tech.

Shakespeare Latest On Roll Of University's Distinguished Alumni

By Anna Nuther

A few days ago three negroes, working in one of the numerous fraternity houses on the campus, were over-heard in their conversation. Standing near the industrious blacks was a statue of the ever famous dramatist, Shakespeare.

"I'se heard whole heaps 'bout dat 'air man tha'", one of the darkies proudly exclaimed, thinking that he was far superior in intelligence to his two comrades.

The second, not to be outdone by the intellect of his companion proclaimed with a disgusted air, "Nigger, you don't kno' who dis here man wuz, and ah'll bet you a nickle you can't explickate who he is."

This bold statement of the truth of the matter was too much for the first speaker. He, of course, did not have the slightest idea who the statue represented, nor, as a matter of fact, did he really care. But he did not let on in the least to his fellow workers that he was ignorant of this matter; instead, he continued more knowingly than ever.

"Boy, you'se ought to be ashamed (accenting the "ash") of yo'sef, 'sinuatin' like ah don't kno' what ah'se tellin'. Why ah'se heard mo' 'bout dis here man than would fill a whole book. You'se jes lettin' on lik' ah'se ben lying."

"Yas 'ir" put in the third worker, "ah'se heard lots 'bout that statue. Come to think uf it what wuz his name?"

After a brief pause, the first darkie, not desiring to disclose the fact that he did not know who the man was, thought he would break the silence. Addressing the second Negro, he said, "Well, ef you'se don't kno' his name, you can't even 'splain when he wuz in school here."

"You'se crazy, Nigger," exclaimed the second, "why he comed to larn here 'bout fifty years 'go, didn't he," he asked, turning to the third black who, a little older than his two pals, had been listening intently to the conversation.

When the old servant had made clear the fact that the man had come to the University some fifty years ago, saying he knew for certain, "'cuz, ah waited on him, ah did," the first speaker immediately fell into a dead silence. With bowed head, he continued his work, much outdone by the fact that his companions knew as much about the man as he did.

BILLY ARTHUR ON CHAPEL PROGRAM

Cheerleader Optimistic Over Cheering At Duke Game.

Billy Arthur, head cheerleader spoke to the sophomore chapel group yesterday about the recent tendency of the students in not cheering at the games. He asked the sophomores to get down after the freshmen and make that class yell. He said that even if the cheering at the last few games has been rotten, he was expecting to have one of the best cheering sections in years at the Duke game.

After Arthur's short talk, he led the group in singing and in several yells.

PAPER'S DEFICIT TO BE SMALLER

Board Treasurer Expects Tar Heel, Buccaneer, and Yackety Yack to Take Small Loss

Basing his predictions on the reports of the various publications for last session and on the financial standings of these publications thus far in the present year, J. M. Lear, faculty member and treasurer of the Publications Union board, has prepared a business prospectus for the Daily Tar Heel, Carolina Magazine and Buccaneer for 1930-31. It is yet too soon to make any close approximation of the probable outcome of the Yackety Yack's finances this session. Last spring the amount which the yearbook formerly received from student publication fees was cut fifteen cents by the Publications Union board, this money being diverted to more needy and less profitable publications. But with a more favorable printing contract this year, it will, no doubt, come out with a profit as it did last session, says Mr. Lear.

The Tar Heel and Magazine deficit last year was $4896. If the advertising is kept up to the average maintained since the resumption of publication in September, the total for the session will be $100 less than last year. However, the income from subscriptions will run around $3550 more, it is estimated. The cost of delivery will be about $240 less than last year and the cut in salaries will amount to $450.

If these estimates, made by Mr. Lear, prove correct, the deficit for the year will be in the neighborhood of $450 as compared to an amount over $4000 for last year.

Last year the Buccaneer lost $629. Its revenue has also been cut fifteen cents. But provided that the volume of its advertising continues as good as it has been in the first two issues, a gain of $640 will be made over last session; the engraving contract is more favorable than last year; and the printing bill will probably run about the same.

The audits of the various publications for last year, which appeared in Thursday's paper, were prepared by the Rogerson-Peacock Company. One item in the report of the Daily Tar Heel read "Bad Debts—$600." This might be misinterpreted to mean uncollected debts; as a matter of fact, that amount is merely a reserve to take care of any such debts.

The infirmary list for yesterday included R. P. Hurley, John Bullock, Peter Gilchrist, Dan Powell, Jr., J. E. Jaffee, Phillip Sasser, William Bynum, I. A. Groom.

WEEDE MEYER IS SECURED TO PLAY AT FALL DANCES

German Club Will Sponsor Set of Five Dances During Thanksgiving Recess.

Thanksgiving dances, the climax of the fall social season at the University of North Carolina, will be held here this year on the Friday and Saturday following Thanksgiving.

The series will consist of five dances, opening with a tea dance Friday afternoon and closing with the Thanksgiving ball Saturday night. Other dances of the set will be the Sophomore Ball, Friday night, and a morning and tea dance Saturday. The Gimghouls will have a dinner dance Saturday evening.

Weede Meyer's orchestra of Huntington, W. Va., has been engaged to play for the set. Weede Meyer has played at the University on a number of occasions in the past, playing here for the Finals in 1928. Since last appearing here, they have played throughout the South and the East.

Features of the series will be the Sophomore Ball and the Thanksgiving ball. Robert Carmichael of New York City with Miss Rosemary Ward of New York City will lead the Sophomore Ball. Assisting them will be Arlindo Cate of Greensboro with Miss Electra Waggoner of Greensboro, and Elliott Newcombe of Charlotte with Miss Con vaire McAden of Charlotte.

Clyde Dunn of Kinston with Miss Clair Haines of Winston-Salem will lead the Thanksgiving Ball. They will be assisted by Edward Wood of Wilmington with Miss Elizabeth Nunn of New Bern and Henry Anderson of Raleigh with Miss Margaret Powell of Asheville.

The entire set will be held in the Bynum gymnasium under the auspices of the University German Club. Officials of the club are: John Bullock of Rocky Mount, president; W. B. Snow, Jr., of Asheville, vice-president; W. H. Yarborough, Jr., of Louisburg, secretary treasurer; and John Park of Raleigh, assistant secretary-treasurer. The executive committee of the club includes the officers and Marion Cowper of Kinston, chairman; Aubrey Parsley of Wilmington, Henry House of Weldon, S. A. Lynch of Atlanta, Ga., and George Newman of Greensboro.

MAYOR APPOINTS COMMITTEE FOR THE UNEMPLOYED

Mayor Zeb Council has recently formed an emergency committee on the unemployment question. This committee composed of Howard W. Odum (chairman), Bruce Strowd (secretary), Marvin Utley (treasurer), Mrs. A. M. Jordan, and Miss Harriet Herring will meet for the first time in the next few days to discuss the problem of finding jobs for the unemployed of the town.

Mr. Strowd has already set up an amateur employment agency in his garage, and work has been procured for six of the thirty-eight men on his list. Some of these already have part-time jobs, and preference is being given to those with no work whatever, many of whom are really without the necessities of life. Townspeople needing help, if only for a few hours, are requested to let Mr. Strowd know.

Student Responsibility

We have sought to avoid mentioning the matter of student spirit and student support of the football team until an obvious need of mentioning it arose. The need is obvious now.

Recently a group of students, well acquainted with the University and its football teams for the past three years, discussed the present low ebb of student spirit. Each of these students had witnessed the football season of 1927 when Carolina had a 7-6 victory over Maryland as its only win up to the Davidson game. Before the Davidson game there existed on the campus the greatest support the football team has known for three years. Carolina won the three remaining games.

Carolina's record to date equals the record of the entire 1927 season, yet to observe the students here one would think that a convention of jelly fish was in session. Football games are determined largely by the mental attitude of the players and players' mental attitudes are formed chiefly by student support and enthusiasm.

The Daily Tar Heel knows that the team wants to win. We know that they can win and that they will win if they know Carolina wants them to. Every student here knows that the team has the power and spirit to win the two remaining games. We talk "bear" and think "bull."

If you want the team to win, tell them so. If you think the team can win, talk it and show it. Get the mourner's expression off and tell that team they've got to win.

The Campus Spends Its Allowance

Coming from the Daily Princetonian, there are reports that "fantastic spending" and "sybaritic waste" are on a positive decline at Princeton University, due to the business depression of the present year; at the University of North Carolina, which has never had the rich and extravagant student bodies for which Princeton is noted (or notorious?), many of the students are staying in school with extreme financial difficulty, while others maintain a minimum of expenditure.

It is a noteworthy but misleading fact that the number and quality of automobiles owned by Carolina students have increased this year. The influx of a larger number of well-to-do students from the northern states, who can come to school here for practically $1000 less than they could attend colleges in their home states, has brought in many of the cars. So, the increase in student-owned automobiles is misinformative and, in contrast, it is evident that there are fewer well or extravagantly dressed students. Last year's old suit is being supplemented by one, instead of two, new ones this season.

Fraternity house parties and dances have been more infrequent on the campus than during the past few falls. Paying for new houses is taking a great deal of money. Yet, three fraternities are contemplating building right away (on the twenty-year plan, of course). Week-end parties and excursions to nearby towns have also been infrequent. Their cost has become prohibitive. On another hand, there is ample evidence that "intramural drinking" is increasing probably because of its cheapness as compared to other collegiate "sports." Likewise, the theatre gets its share of business, as always. "Seeing and hearing" is being made a substitute for "going and doing."

More self-help students than ever before came to the University at the beginning of the term; more of them than ever before have been forced to return home, according to information indirectly received from South building.

So the campus spends its allowance, if any.—E. C. D. Jr.

An Important Decision

Religious denominations pass enthusiastic resolutions in support of the eighteenth amendment; the W. C. T. U. marshalls a militant attack upon those who would restore our country to the awful clutches of saloon-keepers and liquor dispensers; the Anti-Saloon League produces larger sums than ever before to combat the growing tendency to favor a return to pre-war conditions, with some personal liberty; government officials shift the blame for non-enforcement down the line, and bewail their inadequate allowances for bringing about total abstinence; even State College sophomores feel it incumbent upon their apparently virtuous shoulders to outlaw the insidious practice of imbibing of intoxicating liquors.

Yet if one desired to gain the opinion of the one group which, more than any other, knew the exact probabilities and possibilities for eventual enforcement, he would probably consult that profession which deals with the task of enforcing, along with other laws, the Volstead Act and its corresponding state regulations. Proceeding on that hypothesis, the consummate opinion of the legal profession would be something of a weathervane as to the probable course of future events in this respect.

Last week the American Bar Association passed by an overwhelming majority, first a motion to hold a straw vote, and second the resolution, itself, stating that the association goes on record as favoring the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The opposition was not even able to have the question changed to refer to the Volstead Act instead of the Amendment. Thus have the barristers, surprising even the most radical, registered their disapproval of present conditions, and in no uncertain terms.

Student Government Here One Of Oldest In Nation

Editor's note: Due to an unusual number of requests and a specific suggestion of the Faculty Executive Committee, the Daily Tar Heel has asked the student council for a series of articles explaining the operation and mechanics of student government here. This is the first and is furnished by the secretary of the council.

By Mayne Albright

Student government is founded upon the belief that students have the right and ability to govern themselves. It is the expression of a desire for representative government on the campus as well as in the commonwealth. In whatever form it may take, student government should, therefore, be an indigenous growth and should assume a character best fitted to its particular student body.

A spirit of student government expressed itself almost as soon as the University began its career. With the opening of the doors of the University in 1795, the faculty and the administrative officials began the practice of a strict monitor system. There were inspections both day and night, students were required to be in by a certain hour each evening, and even uniformity of dress was at one time required. The students objected so strenuously to this system that in 1805 there was an open revolt against authority. Many of the leading students seceded and were never readmitted. The graduating class of that year numbered only three and the succeeding class could boast of only one more. Some few concessions were made, some regulations changed, but the faculty retained complete control and the students remained dissatisfied.

The monitor system was enforced until the University closed its doors in 1868. Soon after the school opened again in 1875, the two literary societies, the Di and the Phi, came into the height of their power, and their regulations governed the conduct of their members both in the meetings and on the campus. Since every student was required to be a member of one of the societies, their control was all encompassing and to be expelled from one's society was to be expelled from the University.

The reopening of the University found a great change in the attitude of the faculty, and in 1876 President Battle endorsed the adoption of the honor system. The societies immediately assumed responsibility for its enforcement. The same year the by-laws were quietly laid aside and the requirement that students behave as gentlemen was adopted as the general rule of conduct. The reigns of government were now for the first time in the hands of the students through the societies. When, in 1890, membership in the societies became voluntary, the honor system was upheld concurrently by the societies and the four undergraduate classes. All the elements of a student government existed but the formal organization. "It was a body without a head."

The first organization came in 1904 when President Venable called together the class presidents and suggested a "student commission" to dispose of all hazing cases and violations of the honor system. This idea was presented to the classes, adopted by them, and put into immediate effect. The body formed was called the University Council and consisted of the presidents of the three upper classes, a second year student from each of the three professional schools, and a member-at-large from the senior class. A short time afterward an eighth member of the council, a representative-at-large from the student union, was added, and the name changed to the student council.

This form of organization continued until 1921, when a representative - at - large was elected from the student union to serve as president of the student union and chairman of the council, a position formerly held by the senior class president. In 1926 there was a further division of the powers of government, the class presidents yielding their positions on the council to representatives of their classes elected to serve thereon.

Student government at the University was begun without a written constitution, and it has existed and developed into its present form without written laws of any kind. The council has been bound by neither fixed law nor inviolable precedent, and each succeeding council has interpreted student government, to the best of its ability, to meet the needs and the best interests of the changing student body. The faculty has cooperated with but never interferred with the action of the student council. The only appeal from action of the council is to the student union.

Data on the files of the National Student Federation and the findings of our State Federation bear witness to the fact that student government at the University of North Carolina has developed a unique personality. It is, to an unusual degree, mobile in construction, flexible in practice, and simple and effective in operation.

With the manifold interests of daily campus life, the student mind is seldom concerned with the affairs of student government unless something sensational happens. But though it is that form of government which "functions best when it functions least" its successful functioning depends upon its acceptance and support by the students. Every student in the University should realize the value of his student government—should know something of its origin, its organization, its functions, and its ideals, that he may better assume his share of responsibility for its success.

ROZZELLE REASSIGNED AS METHODIST PASTOR

Rev. C. E. Rozzelle will remain as pastor of the local Methodist church for at least another year, it was reported yesterday. This announcement is not official yet, because the North Carolina Methodist Conference, which is in session in Henderson, has not made its report. This report will probably be published either tomorrow or Monday. The local Methodist pastor expects to be reassigned to Chapel Hill, and appears delighted in the prospect.

OPEN FORUM

RALLY CRY!

Dear Editor:

I appeal to the readers of the Tar Heel to join in a movement which is rapidly gaining adherents among the better elements of the campus.

For some time, there has been the habit prevailing among all boarding houses, and Swain hall, to throw rolls and bread, and to jocularly perform practical jokes that leave one a sad specimen indeed. The writer had his ire raised today when his patience was taxed to the limit by having his neighbor at the table pour soup upon what had heretofore been a very pleasing suit.

I trust that students will harken to this call for a new rallying around the standards of less bread throwing and less soup spilling, and more serious, concentrated eating.

A. RIEDER.

STOP THE GERMANS!

To the Editor:

May I use space in your paper to make a few comments on the article in Wednesday's issue, regarding the rules on dancing which the German Club has made?

In my opinion, we of Carolina have no right whatever to criticize State College for their action in the Abernethy case as long as we allow to exist on our campus such abominations as the new "rules" recently issued by the German Club. To be specific, I am referring to the rulings whereby no girl may leave a Carolina dance-hall after the dance is in progress without a chaperon, and whereby no dates are allowed after a dance, forcing all girls to be home within thirty minutes after the dance is over. Shades of the "gay nineties" and the curfew!

Are we yet so young, by the time we have reached our second year in college, and are old enough to have lady friends from other towns come to our dances, that we are to be herded together and told to "stay put" like a bunch of grammar-school children? Or, granting that we have attained our "age" in years, are we so far debased, and have we so lost our dignity, that we have to be watched and guarded every minute in order that we may not do something "ungentlemanly"?

I read the article of the the German Club, and my blood became hot; I re-read it in order to make sure that I was not mistaken, — then my blood boiled! I am not one of these grown-up adolescents who must be treated as one ten years his senior; I am not accustomed to being told how to conduct myself socially. Not that I intend to overstep any bounds of social etiquette whatever; this has never been my practice; I have never yet had a girl refuse me company because my behavior was questionable. By all this I infer that I am perfectly capable of conducting myself in a gentlemanly manner at all times, and intend to do so. But, Mr. Editor, if, at any time, my lady friend and I wish to leave the floor and "sit out" a dance (a practice quite harmless, really;—they all do it!), I do not intend to be told how and when to go nor do I intend to revert to a period of fifty years ago by taking along a chaperon to see that I behave. And when the dance is over, if my girl and I want to ride around before saying good-night, we shall certainly do so.

Not that I wish to defy the German Club. I realize perfectly the necessity of having campus rulings regarding social functions, but when it comes to the place where we are treated as though we were children at a birthday party,—then, Mr. Editor, I revolt!

Conference Cross Country Run Here Today

CROSS COUNTRY RACE TO START AT 2:30 O'CLOCK

Fast Field Expected With Record Number of Conference Teams Entering.

V. M. I. CADETS FAVORED

Tar Heel Harriers Will Be Defending Title for Fifth Year.

The fifth annual Southern Conference Cross Country run will start from Kenan Stadium this afternoon at 2:30 p. m., and will finish between the halves of the football game between the Virginia and Carolina frosh.

The Florida and Georgia entries arrived here yesterday morning, and have been getting in goodly amounts of relaxation in advance. V. P. I. and V. M. I. arrived last night with a determination to carry on the good work which they did in the quadrangular meet of the Cavalier state last week. Duke will remain at home until just before the clash, while the Carolina boys will be resting here on the campus before flocking to Kenan for the dogged fight in quest of another championship. The other entries are expected in early this morning in time to limber up for the race.

The University of Virginia wired their regrets in to Coach Ranson, as they dropped out of the contest for some unknown reason. The withdrawal of the Cavaliers cuts the field down to sixty harriers. Billy Lauck and Holder, of the Virginians, were supposed to have offered some of the best threats to the conference opponents, and their absence will affect the outcome to some extent.

The Tar Heel harriers being led by Captain Baucom, will be fighting for their fifth consecutive title. With their rookie team, they are not doped as favorites because of the showing of Florida, V. M. I. and V. P. I. Eyes are turned on the big "Ham" Smith of V. M. I., who won the four-cornered meet of Virginia. Heizer of Duke, Miles and Fisher of V. P. I., Baucom of U. N. C., are expected to finish up in the running.

The names of the officials of the meet are: Starter: Dr. A. S. Lawrence; Referee, not announced; Clerk of course, Haywood Weeks; the judges are to be: J. P. Harland, J. K. Kenfield, J. M. Gwyn, G. W. Smith, E. P. Dameron, C. M. Farmer. Inspectors: Gilbreath, McEver, Wiel, Slusser, Garrett, Marpet, Bagby, Goodwin. Timers: English Bagby, M. F. Vining, W. E. Caldwell, and K. Marland.

VARSITY DEFEATS FROSH ON TRACK

Ruble and Dameron for Varsity and Legore for Freshmen Turn in Best Performances.

The varsity track team defeated the freshmen cindermen yesterday in a meet held on Emerson field by the score of 46-40. Ruble of the varsity polevaulted 12 feet for one of the best performances of the afternoon, and LeGore of the freshmen also showed up well in his javelin throw of 174 feet five inches. Sandy Dameron threw the discus 131 feet.

The summary of events follows:

DUKE	Wake Forest
VANDERBILT	Auburn
SOUTH CAROLINA	N. C. State
MARYLAND	Navy
NOTRE DAME	Northwestern
YALE	Harvard
MICHIGAN	Chicago
MINNESOTA	Wisconsin
STANFORD	California

The majority of the big teams are resting today in preparation for the annual Turkey Day tilts. Maryland, however, is attempting to do the "ironman" stunt by playing three games in eight days, they play Navy today, Johns Hopkins on Thanksgiving Day, and wind up the week with Vanderbilt.

Duke is going up against a team today that has been pointing for them since the Presbyterian College game ten days ago. Wake Forest has the best pair of tackles in the state in Webb and Williams. Captain Jack Parker, the pivot man, is one of the best centers the Deacons have had in many seasons.

Parker is flanked by two fine guards, DuPree and Levine. The Duke backfield men will have a hard time getting through these positions. Wake Forest stock has been boosted still higher by the return of Walter Covington, fullback, and Ray Gregson, end; both of these fellows are regulars who have been kept idle recently on account of injuries. De Hart's men think that the Baptist aggregation is a set up, and there is a possibility that they will be too overconfident in this game. Then, too, the Dukemen are under an intense strain, whereas Coach Miller's boys are the underdogs with everything to gain and nothing to lose. And yet, there is another major element to be considered—Baptist will be meeting Methodist. There is no brotherly love apparent on the field when these two creeds meet on the gridiron. So it may be possible that Duke is riding for a fall today, and if not today, then . . . . ! Fill out the sentence for yourself. Nevertheless, Duke should beat Wake Forest today by a slender margin.

Picks Ramblers To Win

Knute Rockne's Ramblers are going to receive their stiffest test of the season today in Evanston, Illinois, when they line up against Northwestern. "Hank" Bruder, and Russell, who is substitute for "Pug" Renter, are Northwestern's best ball carriers. The Wildcats have a powerful, well-balanced eleven that has swept everything before it this season. Notre Dame will miss her regular fullback, "Jumping Joe" Savoldi. There is a possibility that Rockne's gang may have a slight let-up, and if they do, watch out for a Wildcat victory. Coach Dick Hanley, who was thirty-five years old this week, may receive a birthday gift by seeing his charges humble a great Notre Dame team, but the odds favor the boys from South Bend.

Yale faces Harvard in the Yale Bowl at New Haven, Conn., in one of the country's greatest classics. Both teams have had their ups and downs this season. Harvard has Eddie Mays, Barry Wood and Bernie White in their backfield, while Captain Ben Ticknor, all-American center last year, "Vic" Harding and others protect the forward wall. Against this array Yale will pit Captain Vincent, Hare, Barres, Parker, Dunn, and the "Mighty Atom," Albie Booth. Past records count for nought when Eli Yale and Johnnie Harvard meet, but the Bulldogs appear to have an edge on the Crimson

FRESHMEN ARE READY FOR VIRGINIA

ELEVEN STRIVES FOR SMOOTHNESS

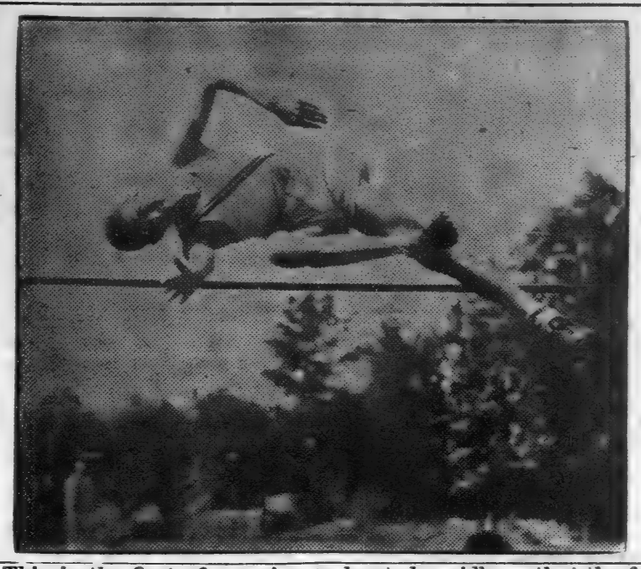
Varsity Football Team Spends Afternoon Running Plays in Dummy Scrimmage.

The Tar Heel football team continued its work at smoothing up its offense yesterday as two elevens ran through their plays in dummy scrimmage agalnst reserve lines. Coach Collins did not send any of the squad through heavy work, but kept them late so as to be certain that the plays would be properly learned.

Following the signal drills, the squad lined up and ran down under punts as the Tar Heel kickers, Maus and Branch, got off some good punts. Practice for the afternoon ended after the squad had run two laps around the field.

Every effort is being exerted by the squad and coaches to get a smooth running attack ready for the Virginians, who seem to have been playing inspired football for the past two weeks. Every day more news comes out from Charlottesville saying that the squad is in excellent mental attitude for the game, and according to their trainer, Churchill Dunn and Bob Kimball, star linemen, will be back in shape for Thanksgiving after having been on the bench with injuries for a large part of the season.

Only Three More Workouts



The Tar Heels have three more days of work before they entrain for Charlottesville Tuesday and the Carolina coaches plan to utilize every moment of the time. Practice for today will be held at Emerson field at 4:15, so as not to conflict with the cross country run and the Carolina-Virginia freshman football game.

Coach Collins stated that work for today will be concentrated on blocking, and that there will be a great deal of work for the linemen on the buckers. Work for Monday and Tuesday probably will be heavy, with a scrimmage one of the two days, saving Wednesday for the final light workout on Virginia turf.

The team has shown much drive and fight in its workouts this week, and every man on the squad is doing his bit to get the much needed coordination in attack which was lackng in the Davidson game.

High Jumper Must Have Great Mechanical Skill

Build of Man Not Necessarily Asset or Hindrance to Success —Principal Styles of Clearing Cross Bar Discussed— Facilities for Winter Work Here Unexcelled.

This is the first of a series of articles on the different events of track and field competition. The information contained in these articles should be helpful to all men interested in track. The facts of each article will be presented by a member of the track coaching staff and will attempt to give information regarding a particular event such as the high jump, which is described in this article.

The high jump is an event in track and field competition requiring great mechanical skill and fine physical condition. The build of a man is not necessarily an asset or a hindrance to success. There are many instances of tall men who have achieved great success (Carolina's best jumpers have been of the slender type), and there are as many more of the shorter, heavy type, such as Harold Osborne, who have shone brilliantly. One can almost state flatly that a combination of good physical condition, natural spring, and willingness to work under the direction of competent coaching are the materials of which good high jumpers are made. The practice must come long months before competition begins in order to perfect the form suitable for use by the jumper and to develop the muscular stamina to endure a season of competition.

There are two principal styles of clearing the cross bar in the running high jump. They are designated as the eastern and western types. The difference between them is seen most clearly in the approach, or run to the take-off, and the direction of the body rotation at the peak of the jump.

Western Form

If the western style jumper takes-off from his right foot, he will start his run about eight steps from the standard on his right as he faces the pit. This starting position will also be about ten feet to the right of a perpendicular erected to the right hand standard, so that as he approaches the bar he will be running at an angle less than ninety degrees and more than forty-five degrees. The run is easy, with long bounding strides adjusted and constantly checked for accuracy so that the jumper will come to the proper take-off with his right foot. This is the foot on the side nearest the bar and is exactly the opposite of the so-called "scissors" or natural manner of jumping. As the right foot comes downward on the take-off spot its speed is accelerated rapidly so that the foot is driven with a resounding impact flat footedly on to the ground. You do not jump from the toe alone, the heel takes the hardest shock. The take-off is a solid flat footed kick or stamp into the ground.

As the right footed western jumper drives his right foot into the take-off his left leg is swung forward in stride until it passes the right foot. At that instant the direction of motion is changed in a vigorous upward kick swinging from the hip. This stamp with the right foot, and the upward kick of the left foot is accompanied by an upward and forward fling of the arms while the head and trunk of the jumper are thrown backward and the entire body is rotated somewhat to the right. The object of all this is to get as much spring as possible from the ground without wasting the lifting action of the left foot and leg, and, at the same time, to enable the jumper to get a complete layout in a horizontal position as he crosses the bar.

The left leg goes up from the swing at the take-off until the left foot is over the bar. There it seems to stand still until the jumper's right hand and head have come over the bar. He is then very much like the letter "Y," the left foot and the right arm and head over the bar and the right foot just off of the ground. The left foot and the head hold their position relative to height as the middle part of the body comes up as a result of the final shove from the right foot leaving the ground and a conscious effort on the part of the jumper to straighten his body at the hips and the waist. As this straightening action continues the right leg is brought

PROBABLE LINEUPS GIVEN

Game Will Share Limelight With Conference Cross Country Run at Stadium.

The Tar Babies ended their preparation yesterday for the tilt with the Virginia yearlings, which is to be played in the Kenan Stadium at two o'clock today, as part of the double-header athletic program. The Southern Conference Cross Country meet will be the other attraction.

The team had a very snappy workout yesterday afternoon, beginning with the usual setting up exercises.

Then the squad was divided up into five teams for a long yet very spirited signal drill. Even though there was no opposition, the backs and linemen were starting fast and running low and hard. The Tar Babies are ready to throw their full strength against Virginia, in an effort to break into the win column.

The yearling line, composed of Crane and Strickland, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards; Gardner, center should show up very well and Coach Enright is counting on them to check the

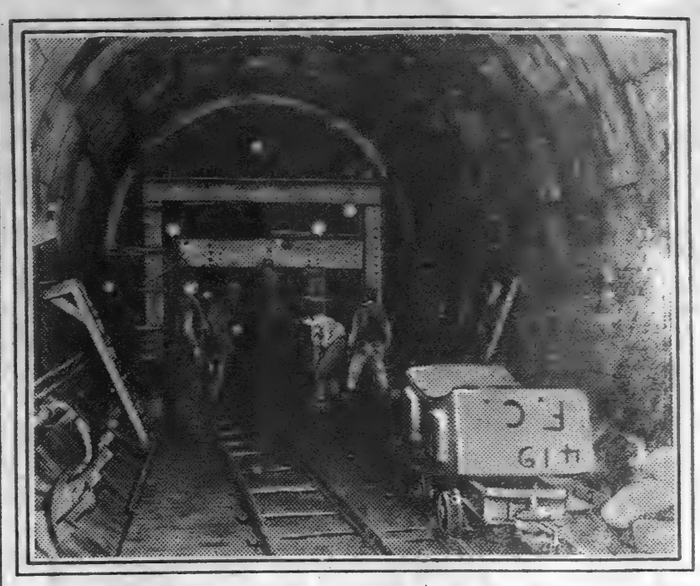
Ford Digs Two Mile Tunnel for A Billion Gallons of Water a Day

NEARLY a billion gallons of water a day—more than is used by the cities of Detroit, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Washington combined—will be the capacity of a huge tunnel now nearing completion at the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Company, Dearborn, Michigan.



The tunnel will replace the present water intake system which supplies the Ford plants with 500,000,000 gallons a day. At the same time the company is remodeling its power house to greatly increase the power output. Both improvements, costing several million dollars, are being made to enlarge the production facilities of the Ford plant.

Sixty Feet Under Ground

In constructing the waterway, the largest of its kind ever undertaken by a single business concern, the engineers are burrowing sixty feet under ground for a distance of two and a fifth miles. They have gone under main highways, railroads, street car tracks, bridges, a cemetery and a creek.

One of the most difficult tasks was that of tunneling under Baby Creek at a point which is crossed by a railroad bridge and where also a large sewer is under construction by the city of Detroit. The piles that provide the foundation for the bridge and those driven by the company constructing the sewer formed a network on each side of the creek. It was the task of the Ford engineers to burrow under the creek, sewer and bridge, going between the piles without striking or weakening them.

Boring of the tunnel is accomplished by means of a shield—a large steel cylinder fourteen feet long and twenty-one feet in outside diameter with a solid steel shell or skin two and a fourth inches thick. This shield has a bulkhead which is made fast near the front end. There are four openings through which the mud streams, like toothpaste from a tube, as the shield is shoved forward by twenty powerful hydraulic jacks.

The head of one of the sections of the Ford tunnel showing the machinery used to burrow through the ground. In the foreground is one of the concrete blocks used to line the tunnel which has an inside diameter of fifteen feet.

When the shield has been pushed forward sufficiently concrete blocks two and a half feet wide and five feet long, each weighing 3,420 pounds, are placed to form a ring around the circumference of the tunnel. One of them acts as a keystone so that the lining of concrete, which is eighteen inches thick, withstands the pressure of the earth. After this steel forms are set up and filled with concrete to form a solid inner lining which is also eighteen inches thick.

The present intake system of the Ford plant has a capacity of 500,000,000 gallons a day. The new tunnel will be able to carry 913,600,000 gallons.

FINAL TAG GAME SET FOR MONDAY

Contest Postponed to Give Betas Rest Before Meeting Ruffin.

The championship game between the Betas and Ruffin, which was scheduled to be played yesterday, has been postponed until Monday to give the Betas ample rest. The game will be played in Kenan Stadium at 4:00 P. M. intramural officials said. That to have played the game yesterday would have been distinctly unfair to the fraternity champions because it would have forced the Betas to play a game the day after a gruelling match with A. T. O. to decide the title in the fraternity league.

The 18-6 victory over A. T. O. Thursday gave the fraternity championship to the Betas for the second year in succession. Last year Beta Theta Pi had little difficulty in snagging the fraternity title, but had plenty of trouble before the campus title was annexed. New Dorms was returned the victor, 7-6, in the first game, but because the dormitory team used an ineligible player, the game was ordered to be replayed. The replay was won by the Betas.

This year the path of the fraternity champions was strewn with great obstacles, and so close was the race that four teams, A. T. O., D. K. E., Phi Gams, and the Betas, were tied for first place. In the replay, A. T. O., eliminated Phi Gamma Delta and the Betas eliminated the Dekes.

On the other hand, Ruffin, the dormitory kings, had comparatively little trouble in winning their title.

CAPTAINS NASH AND MOTLEY TO ATTEND DEDICATION OF FIELD

University, Virginia, November 21.—Virginia will practice tomorrow without the presence of Captain Hunter Motley. The Cavalier leader will go to Woodberry Forest School to attend the dedication of Hanes Field and the football game with Episcopal High School.

Captain Motley and Captain Strudwick Nash of North Carolina, who will also attend the dedication, played together on the Woodberry team of 1926 that won the state preparatory school championship.

Wilson Takes Part In Fisk Dedication

Dr. L. R. Wilson, head of the University's library, is attending the dedication exercises of the new library at Fisk University in Nashville, Tennessee. Dr. Wilson will appear on the program to bring greetings from the librarians of the south and from the American Library Institute.

Others of national reputation participating in the program are Dr. C. C. Williamson, director of libraries of Columbia University, Carl H. Milam, secretary of the American Library Association, Miss Tommie Dora Barker, regional field agent of the American Library Association for the south, and Miss Charlotte Templeton, president of the Southeastern Library Association.

Greensboro, N. C., November 21.—The Play-Likers, dramatic organization of North Carolina College at Greensboro, presented their first drama of the season Thursday night in Aycock auditorium.

The drama was Channing Pollock's "The Fool." The theme being concerned with the labor question, the brotherhood of man, and the life of the hero, Daniel Gilchrist, who, despite the ridicule of his associates persisted in helping the down trodden and who triumphed in the ultimate joy of sacrifice.

FROSH ARE READY FOR VIRGINIA

Cavalier plays through the center of the line. All of these boys are big and powerful and much depends on them this afternoon. If they get together on the offense and clear the opposing linemen out, Hackney and Whitener will certainly get loose.

The probable lineup of the Tar Babies is: Frankel and Brandt, ends; Crane and Strickland, tackles; McIver and Barclay, guards; Gardner, center. Woolen will start at the quarterback post and will have Hackney, Phipps, and Whitener as running mates. Jones and Anacoustos will see plenty of action.

University, Virginia, November 21.—Virginia's first year football squad left this afternoon for Chapel Hill where they will close the season tomorrow afternoon against the North Carolina freshmen.

The young Cavaliers started the fall with a rush by defeating V. M. I. 18 to 6, but after injuries sapped the strength of the squad they lost to Maryland, Washington and Lee and V. P. I. They hope to close with a victory over the Carolinians.

Coaches McConnell and Randall probably will start Moore and Bence on the ends, Berger and Coles as tackles; Moncure and Payne in the guards and Wager at center. Harris will call signals with Baird and Abramson as halfbacks, and Adams, who has recovered from an injury in the opening contest, at fullback.

Carolina's freshmen have defeated the Virginians only once in five years. Last fall, in a snowstorm, the Cavaliers took a 6 to 0 victory on Lambeth Field. Tomorrow they hope to win in order to show the way to the varsity on Thanksgiving as they did on the eve of the V. M. I. game.

High Jumpers Need Mechanical Skill

upward rapidly so that at the moment the body is straight the right leg is bent at the knee and the inner margin of the shin bone is almost touching the back of the calf of the left leg. At this instant the jumper seems to be lying suspended in a horizontal position and a new movement begins. The right arm is swung sharply outward-sideward-downward, the left arm outward-sideward-upward, and the left leg is kicked so that the left foot goes backward-sideward-upward. The right foot comes on across the bar and starts down ahead of the body. Its movement is continuous and the right foot strikes the ground first. In the movements described above, the left leg and the arms are used as levers, acting against their own inertia, to roll the jumper over from a position as though he were lying half on his back and half on his right side, to a face downward position. The landing is a three point affair—the right foot and both hands making the contact almost simultaneously.

In making a jump as described above the jumper has taken off from, and landed on the same foot, the right foot, and his facing direction has been directly reversed so that when he lands he is facing back toward the direction from which he has just run. His head has travelled only a short distance while his feet have gone a much greater distance.

eleven for today's scrap.

Vanderbilt should have an easy time with Auburn this week end. The Plainsmen seem to be far away from the "promised land," although they nearly reached it against the Mississippi Aggies last week.

North Carolina State has a slim chance against South Carolina's Gamecocks this afternoon. The Wolfpack seems to have a good line but a very poor backfield. At any rate, they have failed to click most of the season. South Carolina has a fast, charging line with a faster set of backs. The Gamecocks will be handicapped by the loss of two of their star backs, "Hap" Edens and "Bru" Boineau.

Maryland Over Navy

The Maryland-Navy game at Annapolis should be one of the best in the country today. Coach "Curly" Byrd has developed a fine team at Maryland, while "Bill" Ingram's Middies are only fair this year. The Old Liners, with losses only to Yale and North Carolina, should win the game. Byrd has taught them a lot of deceptive plays that the Middies will have a hard time solving.

Michigan will take on a weak Chicago team. The Wolves have defeated everything that they have played so far, and are likely to close their season that way. Minnesota and Wisconsin meet in what should be one of the most interesting games in the nation. Minnesota's Gophers gave Michigan fans shivers last Saturday and are favored to come out on top today, although Wisconsin may upset the old dope bucket. Stanford's Cardinals meet "Nibs" Price's California Bears at Berkeley this afternoon. California has a weak club this year, and Stanford should eke out a victory.

A writer declares that most novelists get very depressed at times. The necessity for reading over their work before sending it to the publishers makes this almost inevitable.—The Humorist.

SOVIET THEATRE TO BE DISCUSSED BY MRS. MURRAY

Traveler to Speak in Playmakers Theatre Tuesday Night.

Next Tuesday evening at 8:30 in the Playmakers Theatre Mrs. Ella Rush Murray will give a talk on "The Theatre in Soviet Russia." Having just returned from a second visit to Russia in the interests of the American-Russian Institute, Mrs. Murray is fully informed of the latest developments there. After the lecture all those who wish may ask questions about the theatre or any other phase of Russian life.

The chief object of Mrs. Murray's talk will be to show how the arts, particularly as united in the theatre, are an integral part of Russian civilization today. Not only in the cities like Moscow and Leningrad but throughout all the country, theatres are presenting worthy plays to eager audiences. It is not unusual for an ordinary town to support two playhouses in addition to a cinema. Well stocked bookshops are patronized by the people in spite of the high cost of books caused by the paper shortage.

Indeed, the arts apparently nourish the spiritual life of these people, and they demand a high grade of perfection. This contrasts strangely yet admirably with their supply of necessities, for though there is plenty of wholesome food to be had, it is not always the particular kind desired. Mrs. Murray can tell of many amusing incidents of the shops, where one may ask for apples and get pickles or vice versa depending on the supply that day. But the Russians understand the market conditions and accept the situation cheerfully. However, their theatre supplies them with productions worthy of their discriminating attention. All of their plays are not done in the new constructive style, and every drama is not a vehicle for propaganda, as may be supposed from the greater publicity given the more novel works in foreign countries. The old form of ballet and realistic productions still continue, but the masses generally prefer the newer, experimental presentations in which greater freedom of expression is secured with more imaginative effect.

Mrs. Murray believes that much could be learned by having the productions of Meyerhold and other Soviet directors brought here as well as sending American plays to Russia. This exchange of arts is one of the objects of the American-Russian Institute, and Mrs. Murray's talk should be particularly interesting by informing us as to what we may expect from a truly Soviet play presented in a truly Russian manner.

FORMER UNIVERSITY MAN IS NOW A TREE SURGEON

Thomas W. Brown, former student of the University, has returned to his home here in Chapel Hill for a vacation. At present Mr. Brown is working with the Davey Tree Expert Company.

Brown took a train one night in 1928 and went to Ohio. There he secured a job with the Davey company, and has been with the concern ever since.

M'PHERSON WILL APPEAR BEFORE STATE CHEMISTS

Ohio Man to Speak at American Chemical Society Convention at Duke.

Dr. William McPherson, professor of chemistry and dean of the graduate school at Ohio State University, will speak before the North Carolina section of the American Chemical Society at Duke University December 1 at eight p. m.

The group will come together for a supper in the Duke Union at six-thirty before the meeting. Dr. McPherson's talk will be on the "Organic Compounds of Titanium."

Dr. McPherson's whole life has been devoted to the study of chemistry. He studied under Nef at the University of Chicago, receiving his Ph. D. degree from there in 1899. In 1927 he received his LL. D. from Wittenberg. For thirty years he was head of the department of chemistry at Ohio State University.

He was the co-author, with William E. Henderson, of a series of textbooks in chemistry. He is a fellow in the American association for the advancement of science and vice president of section C, in 1908 and 1909 and again 1915 and 1916. During the war he served as Lieutenant Colonel in the chemical warfare service.

Mrs. McPherson will be with him on his trip. The chairman of section C, before whom Dr. McPherson will speak, is Dr. L. A. Bigelow of Duke and the secretary-treasurer is Dr. H. D. Crockford of the University of North Carolina.

Several professors, instructors, and graduate students at the University, who are members of the society, plan to attend the Durham meeting.

Paul Green To Read His Fantasy Tonight

Paul Green will read his latest play, "Tread the Green Grass," at eight-thirty this evening in the Playmaker Theatre. This play is a philosophical fantasy in the form of a musical composition. It is scheduled for production in New York sometime during the winter season.

Music for the fantasy has been prepared by Lamar Stringfield and will be played by a string quartette and flute under Stringfield's direction.

The fantasy shows the conflict of romance and fact. In the mind of a seventeen year old girl the factors of romance, religious personifications, and belief in fairies struggle with morality and reality in life and fact and common sense triumph.

MECHANICAL ENGINEERS TO MEET TUESDAY NIGHT

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers will convene at seven-thirty next Tuesday in 206 Phillips Hall. The meeting will be devoted strictly to business, and President R. C. Plummer announces that several important business matters will be settled at this meeting. Membership cards will be issued.

Refreshments will be served at the close of this meeting. All members are urged to attend the meeting and to take advantage of the opportunity provided by the social part of this meeting to become acquainted with their fellow-members. Freshmen taking mechanical engineering are especially urged to be present.

New Dean

DR T J WILSON JR

In recognition of his thirty-one years of valuable service to the University, Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., registrar, has been honored by the board of trustees with the title of dean of admissions.

T. J. Wilson Honored With Title Of Dean As Symbol Of Service

By R. W. Madry

The University of North Carolina has a new dean.

He is none other than Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., member of the University faculty for the past 31 years and Registrar for 22 of those years.

Dr. Tommie, as the Carolina students often affectionately refer to him, will continue to be University registrar, but the University trustees, in recognition of his years of fine service, have bestowed upon him a new title. From now on he is to be not only registrar but dean of admissions as well.

Dr. Wilson's new title will not affect the nature of his work. He will continue to be the "demon of admissions," as some of the boys call him, who sits in his office here in the south east corner of the South building and makes hair-breadth decisions as to who is and who is not eligible to enter the portals of this 137-year old institution.

The trustees wanted to honor the man and his work, and so they asked him to accept the new rank of dean.

Ten years ago when the student body numbered little more than a thousand, Dr. Wilson could meet any student on the campus and call the boy by name, although it was more than likely that the only time Dr. Wilson had seen the youngster previously was when he registered him in September. The campus used to marvel at the man's memory. With a student body of approximately 2,800, it is doubtful if Dr. Wilson could call every student by name today, but he still possesses an uncanny ability for carrying in his memory an infinite number of details, which makes him a man of extraordinary value to the University.

Dr. Wilson was born in Hillsboro fifty-six years ago, the son of Thomas James and Margaret Douglas (Ross) Wilson; securing his preparation in a private Chapel Hill school, he entered the University and won his bachelor's degree in 1894. In 1896 he took his master's and two years later he won his doctorate.

The following year he taught in the Charlotte schools, it being said at the time that he was the first man with a Ph. D. degree to teach in a North Carolina graded school. Doctor Wilson taught the ninth grade, and Alexander Graham, father of the present University president, was then superintendent.

After a year in Charlotte Dr. Wilson came back to Chapel Hill to accept an appointment on the University faculty as instructor in Latin and Greek. Three years later he was elevated to the rank of associate professor. In 1903 and 1906 he did graduate work in the University of Chicago, having been granted a leave of absence. He was appointed University registrar in 1908, but continued to do some teaching until about 15 years ago.

Doctor Wilson has attained high rank in his field. He is the author of a number of articles on the work of registrars and registration procedure. He has served as president of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars and as president of the North Carolina branch of that association.

About eight years ago Dr. Harry W. Chase, then president of the University, started a movement in North Carolina colleges looking toward uniformity in the matter of admitting students. He and President W. P. Few of Duke University called a meeting for the purpose of organizing the admission officers of the various colleges. That was the beginning of the North Carolina branch of the American Association of Collegiate Registrars. It also marked the beginning of an organized effort on the part of the state department of public instruction looking toward the designation of regular accredited schools. In the matter of evaluating high school units for college entrance things had been in a rather chaotic condition prior to that time.

Doctor Wilson is generally regarded as the godfather of the University chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa, national scholarship fraternity. The local chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa grew out of a local fraternity known as Alpha Theta Phi. Dr. Wilson was the first president of the old organization, which was formed in 1894, and he has been corresponding secretary of the Alpha of North Carolina chapter of Phi Beta Kappa ever since it received its charter in 1904.

The new University dean is a rare type of individual in more ways than one. Although members of the University faculty are entitled to sabbatical leaves for one year out of every seven,

Debaters To Meet State College In Trade Discussion

Tuesday night at 8:30 in Gerrard hall, a Carolina varsity debate team composed of C. A. Shreve and J. C. Williams will meet a team from State College on the question: Resolved, That the nations of the world should adopt a policy of free trade.

Both Shreve and Williams are experienced debaters, and in view of the present depression, which has been blamed in part on the high tariff, it is expected that the debate will be well attended.

The audience will be the judge in this contest. Each person who attends will be given a ballot upon entering the hall. He will mark this to show on which side he then stands. After the debate, he will vote again.

ECONOMICS CLUB WILL CONTINUE FARM PROGRAM

I. O. Schaub To Address North Carolina Club Monday Night.

Director I. O. Schaub of the North Carolina State College extension service will address the North Carolina Club tomorrow night on the subject, "Safely Balanced Agriculture in North Carolina." His talk will be concerned mainly with a system of agriculture designed to retain farm wealth.

Mr. Schaub directs the activities of all the farm and home demonstration agents in the state and all extension activities of the State College, cooperating with the United States Department of Agriculture.

This year the North Carolina Club is concentrating on an agricultural program. It is working in cooperation with the North Carolina Conference for Social Service and other agencies which have joined forces in a study of our agricultural conditions and possible improvements. Mr. Schaub, as head of all agricultural extension work, is the key man through whom suggestions for improved agriculture must be passed on to the farmers.

The North Carolina Club meets in the library quarters of the department of rural social-economics in the library building, at seven-thirty o'clock tomorrow night. The meeting is open to the public.

Four Events Are Listed for Week

Events of this week will begin with the author's reading of Paul Green's Tread the Green Grass at the Playmakers theatre at eight-thirty tonight and will end with the Gimghoul dance Saturday night.

Tomorrow night I. O. Schaub, director of the North Carolina State College extension service will address the North Carolina Club on "Safely Balanced Agriculture in North Carolina."

Tuesday in Gerrard Hall the University debaters will meet State College on the topic of universal free trade. At the same time in the Playmakers theatre, Mrs. Ella Rush Murray will tell of drama in Soviet Russia.

The remainder of the week's program will be taken up with the Thanksgiving holidays, and the Thanksgiving dances given under the direction of the German Club.

'Jones Chosen To Debate Cambridge

In the tryout to select the team to represent Carolina in the debate with Cambridge, last Thursday night, McBride Fleming-Jones was selected to uphold the negative side of the query—Resolved: That the emergence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life. The tryout to select the Carolina representative of the affirmative side of the question will be held in Murphey 201 at 9:30 tomorrow night.

In this debate each school will have one man on each side of the question. The debating council expects this system to bring out the differences in point of view between Englishmen and Americans, and give the Tory humor another outlet.

RELIEF CAMPAIGN CANVASS SET FOR TOMORROW NIGHT

Officially Tagged Men to Visit Students in their Rooms Starting at 9:30 O'clock.

Tomorrow night has been the evening set aside for the canvassing of the campus for a Thanksgiving offering to aid the Orange County poor. The drive will begin with the ringing of the bell in Old South building at nine-thirty. The students are asked to cooperate in making this campaign successful, and are asked to be in their rooms at this time. The campus will be covered in about an hour.

The students who will go around collecting the money will wear a special insignia, stating that they are officials in the relief campaign. This is being done so that the students may be sure to whom they are giving their money, and it will also save time. Fraternity men have been approached through representatives of their own fraternities. Anyone who is not approached, but who wishes to give should leave their contributions in the county welfare office in Alumni building or at the Y office.

Students are not asked to give any definite amount, but it is hoped that they will give at least a minimum of fifty cents.

The situation all over the country has been rather bad as the papers have pointed out, and many colleges are helping in the relief. The Orange County situation is getting serious now, especially in the mill sections, with winter approaching the condition will get still worse. Because of the lack of funds to deal with these new cases, the college students have been asked to contribute.

CHI OMEGA IS HOSTESS AT INN FRIDAY NIGHT

The Chi Omega sorority entertained informally at a beautifully appointed buffet supper Friday night at the Carolina Inn. In the center of the room there was a long table which was decorated with red and yellow tapers with a large bowl of yellow chrysanthemums in the center. At each end of the table tall red candles burned.

Between these attractive decorations there were large garnished platters containing potato salad, roast beef, cold chicken on toast, sliced ham with sauce, fruit salad, pickles and olives, sandwiches, hot rolls and ice cream.

Scattered over the room were small tables for the guests which also were arranged with candles and chrysanthemums to carry out the color scheme. Chaperones for the delightful occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Mackie and Mr. and Mrs. T. C. McKinney. There were forty invited guests.

Staff Meetings

The regular weekly meeting of the Daily Tar Heel reportorial staff tonight will not last longer than ten minutes. The city editors will meet promptly at 7:00 p. m. in the basement of Alumni building and any absence whatsoever will cause an editor to be dropped from the staff.

Reporters will meet at seven-fifteen in room 204 of Alumni.

Support for The Team

Tuesday night the Carolina students will have the opportunity of showing whether they really want the team to win at Virginia or not. A mass meeting will be held at the Well just before the team leaves and according to present plans it will be the greatest mass meeting ever staged here.

The fraternities have already begun their plans for the meeting and the dormitories are expected to meet tonight. The demonstration promises to be greater than any ever staged here if it is given student support. But the leaders of the fraternities and the dormitories cannot alone make the meeting a success. The cooperation of every student here is necessary if the Carolina football team is to get the send off it deserves and it needs.

There will be no event on the campus so important at nine o'clock Tuesday night that students cannot afford to be absent. Every man here should make an earnest effort to be present at this meeting and what is more important to talk the meeting about between now and Tuesday. Football isn't the primary object of college nor is it the foremost student activity, but every student can give one night of this week to the team to see that it knows when it leaves here for Virginia that it has the backing of every Carolina student.

OPEN FORUM

A LAMENTABLE SITUATION

Again the question arises—What is the student body coming to? Here I refer to the lamentable situation existing among the dormitories in the quadrangles. For the past month or so a literal verbal war has been raging between the occupants of the dormitories on the eastern end of the campus. The whole student body must have heard the din of the oaths uttered between eight and one o'clock nearly every night by some of the students rooming in "East Durham." A visitor to the University, should he hear this uproar, would certainly think the students a mass of moral degenerates, although only a few are responsible for the act.

It may be justifiable once in a while for the students to yell at each other at the top of their voices provided they can use decent language, but the obscene words which have been flying wildly around down in the quadrangles sound as if all the devils in hell had been turned loose. Such names as those by which these representatives of Carolina call each other are too filthy to be put in print, and yet they may be heard easily at certain times by almost anyone who happens to be in the vicinity of the quadrangles.

This condition does not belong to a university. How can one study or sleep when such rowdyism is progressing? However, I suppose the noble soldiers taking part in these battles are super-men who never need to study or to sleep. Anyway, the students who have any sense of pride for themselves and their school should take it upon themselves within the dormitories to alleviate this disgraceful condition, to develop those morons into gentlemen and students, if possible, and to maintain dormitories instead of insane asylums.

At The Carolina

The bill of pictures for this week at the Carolina theatre runs from the fantastic to the melodramatic, and comedy, drama, and romance each has its turn.

Tomorrow's show is heralded successor to "Sunny Side Up," but it is a screen musical comedy differing widely in setting and time from its predecessor. The feature is "Just Imagine," and the action is supposed to transpire on Mars in 1980 when regular communications have been established between that planet and the earth. In many ways the story resembles the imaginative accounts of Mars that such writers as Jules Verne and H. G. Wells have written, and from this fundamental conception of an exotic and very dissimilar race of people the authors, De Sylva, Brown, and Henderson, have developed situations glowing with fantastic interest.

El Brendel leads the cast of the comedy, in which are seen also Maureen O'Sullivan, Marjorie White, and Frank Albertson.

Jack Oakie's latest release, "Sea Legs," comes Tuesday. This well known star has worked prolifically since his first appearance on the screen less than two years ago, and the reputation he has built up attests well to the success of his many pictures. Lillian Roth, Harry Green, and Eugene Pallette are supporting players.

A Tiffany production, "Extravagance," will be seen Wednesday. This picture is said not only to register high in entertainment value but at the same time to play to the esthetic senses for it is full of "beautiful ladies, beautiful clothes, and beautiful sets." Those who care to take the picture seriously will find a strong indictment of a certain class of society which lives constantly beyond its means, while others, going only for entertainment and caring nothing for any moral, will be pleased by the modern vein of sophistication and gaity. Lloyd Hughes, June Collyer, and Dorothy Christy lead the cast of characters in the attraction.

The feature Thanksgiving marks the first major screen appearance of the celebrated stage star, Benny Rubin, whose comic antics are known to burlesque and vaudeville audiences all over the country. This star, famous for his broad dialect and humorous dialogue, has been in the "movies" before, but in "Sunny Skies," the all-talking, all-musical collegiate feature, he has taken a leading part for the first time. Rex Lease and Marceline Day play opposite one another in leading roles.

"The Dancers," Lois Moran's most recent feature release, will be shown Friday. The picture is a screen adaptation of the sensational play by the same name that was a stage attraction a few years ago. "The Dancers" is about modern youth and presents the star characterization, Diana (Lois Moran), as one who becomes the victim of doubts and disillusionments as a result of the high pace of living she has set. Walter Byron plays the featured male role.

Saturday "Danger Lights," an all-talking railroad melodrama released by Radio Pictures, brings to a close the features for this week. Louis Wolheim is cast in the chief role and gives a stellar performance capably supported by Jean Arthur and Robert Armstrong. George B. Seitz, the director, has achieved a number of brilliant tricks with sound effects to enhance the realism of the production.

STROWD ACTS AS WORK DISPENSER

Bruce Strowd, who has consented to act as an advertising agency in order to help relieve the unemployment situation in Chapel Hill, has registered thirty-seven persons who are looking for work. Six of the job-seekers have been given temporary work.

Among those seeking work are: four gardeners, nine laborers, one mason, three cooks, three painters, one chauffeur, ten house cleaners, one stenographer, two carpenters and one clerk. It is strongly urged that all those needing any repairing or work done about the house call Mr. Strowd to have someone take care of the job.

College Luxury Tax Is Subject Wright Debate

Representatives of the Di and Phi societies are to be chosen in the near future for the annual Mary D. Wright debate between these two organizations. The debate will take place in Gerrard hall the night of December 2. The query this year is—Resolved: That the state of North Carolina should levy a luxury tax for the support of institutions of higher learning in the state.

The reward for this contest, which dates back a quarter of a century, is the twenty-five dollar Wright medal—said to be the highest debate honor on the campus. The medal, won last year by J. C. Williams of the Di Senate, is presented to the better speaker of the winning team.

BAZAAR AND SUPPER AT CHRISTIAN CHURCH HUT

The Christian church will serve a regular Thanksgiving dinner Tuesday, November 25 at one o'clock in the hut on Cameron avenue. This is a benefit dinner and reservations are seventy-five cents a plate. The money will be used to pay a debt on the hut.

There will be a bazaar with cakes, pies, and novelties on sale. Mrs. Grady Leonard is in charge of the dinner and the bazaar, and she is making the reservations for the dinner.

CHARLOTTESVILLE BOY STARRING ON CAVALIER ELEVEN

Buck Poss Wins Place at Left Tackle In First Year on Varsity.

University, Virginia, November 21.—Buck Poss is a home town boy who has been making good with a smash on the Virginia varsity this fall. This big son of Charlottesville has been playing a great game at tackle for the Cavaliers.

This is the first fall Poss has been on the varsity squad. He entered the University of Virginia a year ago from Fishburne Military School where he was a line star, and played with the Cavalier first year team.

POSS

Poss was faced by competition from two veteran tackles, Captain Hunter Motley and Bob Kimball, both men who won the "V" for football. But he blazed right in and made his place in the starting lineup almost every Saturday.

Last Saturday against Washington and Lee Poss played the greatest game of his career. He had a great hand in the thrilling defensive work on the Virginia line which held back the goal line assaults of the Generals time and again. Once W. and L. had first down inside the five yard line only to be held a foot from the goal.

Poss is tall and rangy and powerful. He stands six feet two inches, and weighs 188 pounds. He is 21 years of age. And because he has been playing football since he was just a youngster he knows how to handle himself in action.

All the Virginia linemen, Poss included, are getting a double dose of drilling this week as they prepare for the North Carolina game with which they will close their 1930 season on Thanksgiving. Coach Abell thinks that his forward wall hold the Tar Heels in check.

Varsity Football Team Takes Light Workout Yesterday

After seeing the freshmen run roughshod over the Virginia yearlings in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon, the varsity team took the field for a light workout. Tackles and ends continued their work at drilling on blocking, and the guards rehearsed pulling out to run inferrence. Backs were kept busy running through plays.

Tomorrow and Tuesday will be the last days that the team will have to practice before it leaves for Charlottesville, and Coach Collins intimated that there will be scrimmaging for at least one of the days.

DATE ANNOUNCED FOR INTRAMURAL BOXING TOURNEY

Six Workouts Required of Entrants Before Opening Date Of Meet.

TO START DECEMBER 10

The intramural department has announced that the intramural boxing tournament will begin Wednesday December 10 and will extend through Thursday or Friday depending upon the number of men entering competition. This tournament is a part of the regular intramural program and points will be awarded toward the winning of the Intramural Cup as in all other sports.

The team winner will receive fifty points, forty points will be awarded for second place, thirty for third place, twenty for fourth place, and ten for fifth place. The same system of point awards will be made to the team having the largest number of entrants. The individual winners will receive twenty-five points and the runners-up in each class will be awarded fifteen points. In addition, the class champions will be given attractive medals in an effort to promote individual interest.

All men, wishing to enter the tournament must report to Coach Crayton Rowe at the Tin Can and must have had at least six workouts under regular instruction before being allowed to fight. All men who have not participated in previous varsity or freshman bouts will be eligible under the intramural rules provided they take the required number of workouts.

Men not wishing to represent any particular campus organization will be allowed to compete as independents, while each organization may enter as many men as it desires.

The Dekes, last year's champions will again have a strong team in the field led by Dale Holderness and Tom Parsons, holders of the welter and light-heavyweight titles respectively. Three other campus champions will defend their crowns in the bantam, feather, and lightweight classes. "Speedy" Boring A. L. T. will make his defense against a very promising field of men now out for freshman boxing, while Calvin Todd of Sigma Phi Sigma and Shuford of Grimes will be back in the featherweight and lightweight classes. Kaufmann and Bartlett, middleweight and heavyweight champions are not in school this quarter, and, as a result, both classes are without a favorite.

The tournament will be supervised by the Intramural Department and the varsity boxing squad. Coaches Rowe and Allen will train the entrants while ineligible varsity men will act as officials in all bouts.

Graduates Entertain

The Shirley Graves Graduate Club gave their annual open house and dance in Smith building Friday night.

From eight-thirty o'clock until ten there was an informal reception with three are exhibits as part of the entertainment. W. M. Steene of Chapel Hill, C. R. Strudwick of Hillsboro, and Mary deB. Graves Rees had portrait exhibits.

After ten o'clock there was informal dancing with Stringfellow's orchestra playing.

Tar Heels and Cavaliers To Meet For Thirty-Fifth Time In Annual Thanksgiving Game

Carolina-Virginia Gridiron Rivalry Now Most Ancient in South—Tar Heels Have Won Three Games and Lost One Since Collins Became Coach — Advance Seat Sales Ahead of Former Years.

By WILLIAM H. WRANEK, JR.
(Special to the Daily Tar Heel)

University, Virginia, November 22.—Virginia and North Carolina play on Lambeth Field at 2:00 o'clock Thanksgiving afternoon for the thirty-fifth time since gridiron relations were started in 1892.

This game on Thursday seems destined to be the last varsity football contest on Lambeth Field. With the start of the football season of 1931 Virginia will have ready the new stadium being constructed at a cost of $300,000.

North Carolina is an odds favorite this season as she was a year ago, but Virginia is admitted to have a better chance of turning over the dope bucket. The Tar Heels gained a decisive victory over the same V. P. I. team that won from the Cavaliers 34 to 13. And they have also conquered Maryland which in its turn downed the Cavaliers.

Interest in the Virginia-Carolina game is running as high as usual. In fact James Driver, athletic director, reports that the sale of tickets is far ahead of any other contest since he took over their distribution.

North Carolina's student body is coming up from Chapel Hill on a special train. They'll bring their crack band along. And from all over Tar Heel territory special trains and special pullmans will be operated into Charottesville.

Next Thursday will be the tenth anniversary of the first Virginia-Carolina game to be played on Lambeth Field when these two institutions agreed on the home and home rule after the war. The Virginians were victors in this contest 14 to 0.

Tar Heels and Cavaliers began playing football back in 1892. Virginia defeated Carolina 30 to 18 early in the season, then, after winning the "Championship of the South" from Trinity in Atlanta, played a post season exhibition with the Carolinians which was lost 26 to 0.

Ths Virginia-Carolina affair now ranks as the most ancient gridiron rivalry among Southern Conference teams. Formerly Vanderbilt and Sewanee held this claim, for they started in 1891 and by doubling up several years managed to play 41 contests. But these Tennessee teams don't meet this season.

Except for the two war years when football generally was forgotten Virginia and Carolina have swapped touchdowns every fall except three—1899, 1906 and 1909. Virginia has won 20 of these encounters, Carolina has taken 11 and three have been tied.

The first years of the rivalry were lean ones for the Tar Heels. After 1892 they did not win again until 1898. In 1902 the game was a draw and for a few years the Carolinians managed to dominate the scene. They won in '03, held Virginia to a one point victory in '04 and were victorious again in 1905. Then for a ten year period all the games went to the Cavaliers.

Since the war Carolina has won twice as often as Virginia. There have been six Tar Heel victories and three for the Cavaliers. In '23 and '25 the games were tied. Under Chuck Collins the Carolinians have won the last three games. Last fall they

Mythical Teams To Be Selected By Tar Heel

All-Southern Team To Be Announced December 3 — Theatre Passes Will Be Awarded Students Making Best All-State Selections.

Watch the columns of the Daily Tar Heel for the announcements of the annual selections of the all-southern and all-state football teams. The all-southern selection together with photographs of those chosen for the first team will appear in the issue of Wednesday, December 3, and the all-state team will follow one week later.

The five students who turn in selections nearest to that of the Daily Tar Heel will receive free passes to the Carolina Theatre. Mr. E. C. Smith of the local theatre has consented to award these tickets to the winners. Rules regarding the all-state choice are as follows: members of the Daily Tar Heel staff are not eligible for the contest; selections must be mailed to the Sports Editor of the paper not later than December 2.

The winners will be announced in the Tar Heel when the all-state team is published. Get your selections in early. If there is a tie, the choices received first will win the passes.

Many All-Southern Stars

The Southern Conference teams this year present one of the largest groups of star football players that have ever played on the Southern gridiron, and selecting eleven of them for a first team will, as usual, probably slight some men who are as good as those chosen.

Southern ends this season seem to run in pairs. Georgia has her Smith and Maffett. Tulane has her Dalrymple and Holland. Vanderbilt boasts of her

By CLAIBORN CARR

If the Tar Heels live up to the example set yesterday by the Tar Babies, Virginia won't have any show whatever Thanksgiving. The Tar Babies smothered the young Cavaliers on Kenan Field by the enormous score of 45-0. Forty-one yearlings saw action. Led by John Phipps, acting captain, the Carolina frosh were unbeatable.

Yesterday for the first time this year the eleven players got together and the power they displayed, working as a unit, was very gratifying to both Coach Enright and Coach Collins. Their defense, which has been the one bright feature of the Freshman play so far this year, was still good but it was only a very few minutes of the game that any defense was used, so busy were the Tar Babies scoring touchdowns and kicking-off.

Phipps dominated the play the whole time that he was on the field. Running with the ball in his hand as one would carry a loaf of bread, he broke loose on a fake pass play for long runs of seventy-two, thirty-five, and sixty yards. Along with Phipps, Hackney was also brilliant. Whitener, McGill, Anacoustos, and Weisker, were four other backs that ran hard and fast and showed ability to pick their holes. They dug hard and were seemingly unstoppable.

Other outstanding players were Frankel and Harrington, ends. The former played a very good defensive game and still found time to score two touchdowns; one on an intercepted pass and another from kick-off. In the two times that he ran with the ball he gained one-hundred and eight yards. Harrington, who was a substitute end, stood out for his kicking ability. Gardner, and his substitute Parker, played a heady game at center. Barclay, McIver, Crane, Strickland, Shore, and Mulligan continued to scintillate in their line-play. Mulligan distinguished himself by blocking two kicks. In all the whole team played by far its best football this year and at the same time they all got together. Then it was just too bad for Virginia.

'Ever-Snitch' To Be Playmakers' First Studio Production

The first of a series of studio productions will be given at the Playmakers theatre Tuesday afternoon, November 25, at four o'clock.

This play, Ever-Snitch, by Mrs. Karl H. Fussler of Professor F. H. Koch's playwriting class, will be an invitation performance for the class and for persons connected with the Playmakers. Other persons who are interested should make application for a ticket at the office of Mr. Ralph Westerman, associate director and manager of the Playmakers.

The productions to be given this year will be written by members of the playwriting class and after their presentation will be criticized and discussed as selections for the annual tour.

Mr. Westerman requests that persons wishing to try-out for the parts in the plays see him in his office.

UNIVERSITY WOMEN GIVE INFORMAL BRIDGE SUPPER

The members of the Chapel Hill chapter of the American Association of University Women gave an informal bridge supper at President Frank Graham's home Friday evening at seven o'clock. About 112 persons attended.

Mrs. Clarence Heer was in charge of the entertainment, Mrs. G. T. Schwenning in charge of the supper, Mrs. R. M. Grumman of the decorations, and Mrs. M. S. Heath of the serving.

There were twenty-six tables of bridge, a prize being given at each table.

Reservations for the supper were one dollar each, and about sixty dollars were made clear of expenses. This money will be used for the international fellowship given by the A. A. U. W.

FROSH RING MEN CONTINUE WORK

Brown and Pace, Light Heavyweights, Show Well in Early Workouts.

Coaches Crayton Rowe and Archie Allen are hard at work down in the Tin Can trying to mould a small and poorly balanced freshman boxing squad into a team capable of upholding the reputation of past Tar Heel fight squads. In spite of the dearth of material, however, several prospects have been uncovered who may fill the gaps made by graduation in next year's varsity.

Brown and Pace, two lightheavyweights, have been going strong lately and have attracted considerable attention. Both are fast and show a willingness to mix it up on every occasion. Brown boxed a round against Add Warren Thursday and showed tremendous improvement over his past performances. Although a newcomer to the ring, Brown has developed speedily and is one of the best prospects of the year.

Two other beginners, Clifford Glover and Holt, are leading the bantamweight contingent while Furches Raymer and Paul Hudson are the outstanding aspirants for the feather and welterweight berths respectively. Hudson has looked especially good in recent workouts with Archie Allen, Noah Goodridge, and Red Holderness and may develop into a star if he continues his good work. Guthrie, the outstanding middleweight, has been on the injured list for the last two weeks, but expects to get back into action sometime after Thanksgiving.

Six new men in the lightweight class have failed to impress as yet, and the division is without any leading candidate. Besides the lightweight situation, the coaches are confronted with the problem of finding someone to fight in the heavyweight class which, to date, has no contender.

T. J. Wilson Honored With Title of Dean

with half pay, Doctor Wilson has taken advantage of only one leave with pay during the 31 years he has served the institution. That was several years ago when he spent three months abroad visiting his son, Dr. Thomas J. Wilson, III, then a student of Oxford University, England. Doctor Wilson took occasion to make a thorough study of student life at Oxford.

The Wilson family is socially prominent and comprises one of the most interesting groups in the University community. Mrs. Wilson is the former Miss Lorena Frank Pickard, a daughter of Walter Warren and Elizabeth (Snipes) Pickard, of Chapel Hill. They were married in 1900. On his father's side Dr. Wilson is descended from Scotch-Irish stock, his father having come from Pennsylvania. His mother was a Virginian. The Wilsons have four children: Dr. Thomas J., III, Marvin Pickard, Walter Warren, and Peter Pickard Wilson.

Community Club Meets

There was a general meeting of the Community Club Friday afternoon in the Episcopal parish house.

General business matters were discussed, and a report was given by Mrs. S. E. Leavitt about a district meeting in Wendell recently.

FRESHMEN WIN OVER VIRGINIA 45-0

Virginia, although clearly outclassed, fought grimly to score. They only made four first downs and they were through penalties. Yet in the final period they came near scoring on an intercepted pass which Harris ran back for seventy yards. At this time Coach Enright had his third team on the field. They had three good men that bore the brunt of the afternoon. They were Moncure, and McGuire, linemen, and Harris, a back. These three men stood out above the rest.

Carolina started the game by kicking-off to Virginia. After Virginia had been forced to kick, the Tar Babies started a drive from their own twenty-four yard line which terminated in Whitener dashing off-tackle for thirteen yards and the first score. The try for the point failed. Then in a few minutes Phipps broke loose in the first of his three parades and ran seventy-two yards for a score. He made extra point from placement. This ended the scoring for the first half. Coach Enright sent in numerous substitutes and the subs played on even terms with the Cavaliers. McGill, one of the substitutes played very well. He got off once on a beautiful run for a score but was called back. He is fast and picks his holes very well.

The first Tar Baby team was back at the beginning of the third period. They simply marched up and down the field scoring one touchdown after the other until they had amassed the grand total of thirty-two points before the period was over. Phipps and Hackney dominated the play during this time. Weisker and Anacoustous, both substitutes, played a big part in this scoring orgy. Both ran hard and fast and played well on the defense. Coach Enright sent his third and fourth string men in the game at the close of the game and the fourth period was the closest period of the game. Virginia was able to play this team on an even basis. The game ended with the ball on Carolina's ten yard line and Virginia fighting desperately to score. There was one serious injury during the game. Tom Moore, a Virginia man broke his arm in the second period.

The line-ups were as follows:

Frankel	l.e.	Moore

Mythical Teams To Be Selected By Tar Heel

Schwartz and Sheffer. And besides these there are Jones of Georgia Tech, Rosky of Duke, Nolan of Florida, and Moore of Alabama.

Freddie Sington of Alabama seems to be on the road toward claiming an all-southern tackle position for the second year. His teammate Captain Clements is another star performer at this position. Vance Maree of Georgia Tech is one of the strongest contenders for recognition this year also. Muddy Waters of Florida, McCanse of Tulane and Wright of Kentucky are some of the other great tackles of the year.

Georgia presents another pair of stars for consideration in Leathers and Maddox for the guard position. Steele of Florida was chosen by many writers for the team last year is a likely contender, as are Boedenger of Tulane, Captain Forquer of Kentucky, Captain Thayer of Tennessee, and Howard and Miller of Alabama.

Carolina will present in Ned Lipscomb one of the finest centers in the South, and he will give Lloyd Roberts of Tulane a race to recapture the place which he won last year. Others are Gracey of Vanderbilt, Clemmons of Florida, Williams of Kentucky and Adkins of Duke.

Bobby Dodd of Tennessee is the quarterback of the year with Austie Downes of Georgia, our own Johnnie Branch, Campbell of Alabama, Spicer of Kentucky and Askew of Vanderbilt also excellent field generals.

"Jack the Ripper" Roberts of Georgia seems to be the outstanding fullback of the year, but before the position is awarded to him, Cain of Alabama, Sauls of Florida and Barron of Georgia Tech must be carefully considered.

Almost every conference team has its star halfback to offer. Here are a few of the best. Suther of Alabama, Hackmann of Tennessee, Kelly of Kentucky, Bethea of Florida, Chandler and Dickens of Georgia, Berger of Maryland, Leonard of Vanderbilt, Slusser of Carolina, Murray of Duke, Thomas of Virginia and Zimmermann of Tulane.

All-State Stars

In North Carolina's "Big Five" there are at center; Lipscomb and Gilbreath of Carolina, Adkins of Duke, and Parker of Wake Forest; at guards: Fysal and Blackwood of Carolina, Brock of Davidson, Woerner of Duke, Stout of State, and Dupree of Wake Forest; at tackle: Webb and Williams of Wake Forest, Cobb of State, Davis of Duke and McDade of Carolina; at end: Rosky and Hyatt of Duke; Gregson of Wake Forest, Brown of Davidson, and Silver of State.

Quarterbacks are: Johnny Branch of Carolina, Mullens of Duke, and Fraley of Davidson; halfbacks: Murray of Duke, Slusser, Magner and Nash of Carolina, McCall and McQueen of Davidson, Mills of Wake Forest, Murray of Duke; fullbacks: Brewer of Duke, House of Carolina, and Brohard of Davidson.

den of W. & L. The big "Ham" Smith was head man at the second marker, being pushed by Barnhardt, of Georgia and Wise and Bond of the Cadets, who surprisingly shot into the leading group. Miles, of the Gobblers, and Baucom, Jones and Jensen of Carolina were sticking to the first group at the half, but at the third mile position they were rapidly giving way to the more experienced Virginia men. Captain Baucom, of Carolina, had a bad foot, which hampered him greatly once he got on the final stretch.

Bad weather prevailed throughout the afternoon. Although it was not raining, or too cold, a grey pall hung over the sky during the entire afternoon.

Carolina was not doped as a favorite yesterday, due to its rookie sophomore team, and injuries to one or two of the dependable runners in its running attack. The boys strived valiantly to retain the magnifiicent championship cup, which was captured by V. M. I., but did not have a chance with the many seasoned veterans who competed.

ANNUAL ALUMNI ASSEMBLY OPENS DECEMBER FIFTH

Relation Between Student and Teacher, Topic at Opening Session.

W. T. Shore, of Charlotte, president of the General Alumni Association of the University, will preside at the annual assembly which opens here December 5. The meeting is to begin with dinner at the Carolina Inn, and will include speeches by various members of the faculty on the topic, "What Has Happened To The Relation Between Teacher and Student At The University of North Carolina?" President Frank Graham will give the introductory statement on this topic and Robert B. House will preside over the ensuing discussion.

Dean D. D. Carroll will explain the functions of the offices of the deans. The value of personal advice and direction to the student will be the subject of a talk by Dean F. F. Bradshaw, and Dr. English Bagby, of the department of psychology, has selected as the subject of his talk, the "Psychological Reaction of the Student as an Individual." These talks are to be followed by an open forum discussion among the members of the assembly.

The board of directors of the General Alumni Association will convene for a short meeting Saturday morning, December 6, preceding the regular business session of the Association. This business meeting will be occupied with reports from the various committees, and the nomination of candidates for association offices. The assembly will attend the Duke-Carolina game Saturday afternoon.

Play By Sheridan On Play Bill Of Traveling Troupe

Sheridan's The Duenna with the original music of Thomas Linley, will be presented here by The Jitney Players December 1 and 2.

America has not been given the opportunity of seeing this play until the Jitney Players brought it to the stage in 1927. Overshadowed by The Rivals and other works by the same author which the commercial theatre had seized upon, it was found to contain the same wit and humor, the same abundance of brilliance as these other works, plus a novelty and freshness untouched by years of standardized production. The interest created in 1927 did not abate with the passing seasons, but was fanned to greater flame by the spontaneous success of this company's production of another little known Sheridan play, A Trip to Scarborough, produced last season.

The Duenna is a fast moving comedy of laughter and music. Against a silver background the play of the vivid color of the costumes enhances the beauty and sparkle of the lines. The play opens to the vivacious and exulting life of the fiesta.

The Duenna was first acted at the Convent Garden Theatre, London, England, in 1775.

This comedy will be enacted here by a cast listing Alice Keating Cheney, Frederick Forman, Edmund Forde, Harrison Dowd, Douglas Rowland, Richard Skinner, Robert Spruill, Harvey Fite, Ellen Love, Elizabeth Zachary, and Elizabeth Ogden.

Russian Theatre Discussion Tonight

A talk on "The Russian in Soviet Russia" will be presented by Mrs. Ella Rush Murray at 8:30 this evening in the Playmakers Theatre. An open forum discussion will follow the lecture during which Mrs. Murray will answer any questions on the Theatre or any other phase of the Soviet Government.

Mrs. Murray is a member of the advisory council of the American-Russian Institute which is headed by William A. Nelson, president of Smith College. She has traveled extensively in Russia and is well acquainted with the people and government under Soviet rule.

Mrs. Murray will be in Chapel Hill for a few days this week attended by her husband, the designer of the Saluda dam recently completed near Columbia, South Carolina.

SMALL COLLEGES ARE HELPING TO BUILD NEW SOUTH

Walter Rollo Praises Work of Institutions Other Than Larger Universities.

"There is a new South because youth in the South is better informed and is thinking with greater clearness than ever before," says Walter Rollo Brown, author and distinguished biographer of Dean Biggs of Harvard. "Everywhere one comes upon memorials of sacrifice, of aspiration, of faith in the efficacy of intellectual freedom. And these memorials are not necessarily such sturdy institutions as the University of North Carolina, the University of Georgia, Vanderbilt University, Tulane University, or the seats of such magnificent experiments as the Rollins plan or the Virginia Quarterly, but modest institutions whose names are likely to be misspelled by the metropolitan press.

"Coker College in South Carolina represents a class," he declares, and continuing mentions other small educational institutions included in the group: "The Georgia State College for Women . . . offers education each year to a thousand or twelve hundred young women at a total cost to each student that would pay a Wellesley or Smith undergraduate's bills for just about one month . . . .

"Lincoln Memorial University was established and is maintained for mountaineers of eastern Tennessee who are intellectually hungering . . . .

"Hollins College in southwestern Virginia originated in an old hotel where Andrew Jackson used to stop on his way from Tennessee to Washington and drink the sulphur water . . .

"To mention only these four or five institutions is unfair to many another. For throughout the South there are scores of all classes of higher institutions that are moved by the same spirit. With tens of thousands of men and women brought in contact with something of the record of human experience, the South can not remain what it has been . . . .

"No one who cares for the future of the United States of America wishes to see these all Southern institutions be made into the standard pattern of the North. The South, if she is persistent, can eventually bring an infusion of gentler blood."

COURT SUSPENDS MANY SENTENCES

First Case, Alston vs. Kennedy Is Nol Prossed on Testimony Of Officer.

The first case on the docket of the recorder's court Saturday was nol prossed. This case between George Alston, colored, and John Kennedy, white, which was concerned with the collision of their cars November 12 was thrown out of court when Officer Wright testified that the accident was unavoidable.

C. D. Dowdy plead guilty to driving an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. The defendant drove into a cement wall and damaged his car to the extent of sixty dollars. Dowdy was fined fifty dollars and was sentenced to three months on the road; sentence was suspended upon the condition that he would not operate a motor vehicle in Orange county for a period of three months.

Charles Edwards, colored, was charged with driving past the red signal light at the intersection of Franklin and Columbia streets. Edwards plead not guilty. He stated that another car turned the corner in such a way that it was necessary for him to continue past the light in order to avoid an accident. The defendant was found guilty and paid the costs.

Ernest King, colored, plead guilty to the charge of appearing in a public place in a drunken condition. The defendant was found near the Friendly Cafeteria about midnight a week ago Friday and was arrested. King did not appear in court last Saturday when he was arraigned; he testified that his car broke down on the road between Durham and Chapel Hill and that he was unable to return in time to appear in court. He was sentenced to six months on the road, but the sentence was suspended subject to the condi-

DEBATERS MEET STATE TONIGHT

The time for the debate with State College has been changed from eight-thirty to seven o'clock, so that it will not conflict with the giant send-off that is planned for the football team tonight.

The annual forensic contest with State has been on the Tar Heel schedule since 1924 in which the varsity team won the affirmative end of a dual affair by an audience vote of 68-32. Since that time teams from the state's leading institutions have been meeting on the rostrum each year. Some of these debates have been no-decision affairs, but Carolina has won a majority of those in which a decision was given.

The meet tonight will be on the question, Resolved: That the nations of the world should adopt a free trade policy. The Carolina team will uphold the negative side. The varsity will be represented by J. C. Williams, who has competed in, and helped to win more debates than any other student of the present student generation, and by C. A. Shreve, also an experienced debater. The audience will judge this debate by registering their shift of opinion.

Crane Supervises Psychology Clinic

Dr. Harry W. Crane of the Department of Psychology and Director of the Bureau of Mental Health and Hygiene of the North Carolina State Board of Charities and Public Welfare, returned Saturday from Salisbury where he had held a clinic in connection with the Salisbury city schools. In this clinic the children were given the Stafford revision of the Binet-Simon psychological test; a test that is given to "problem" children. Dr. Crane was assisted in giving this test by Dr. Goudge of Durham.

On Thursday, Dr. Crane was called from Salisbury to Mocksville to examine and testify at a sanity hearing.

Tradition Surrounding Famous Old Tree Grows Greater Year By Year

By Otto S. Steinreich

Tradition tells us that at noon on the day of the laying of the cornerstone of Old East, William R. Davie and the official party had lunch under a large tree, supposedly a poplar, near the newly erected building. From that time down to the present day the tree has been known as the Davie Poplar.

In 1793 the tree was probably straight and beautiful. Today it is still beautiful, although it inclines a bit toward the south, as though the tremendous trunk were too heavy for the roots underneath. Wire cables, attached to the upper branches of younger and sturdier trees near by, help to support it.

Three Presidents of the United States have stood under Davie Poplar; James Knox Polk was here in 1847, James Buchanan in 1859, and Andrew Johnson in 1867. Buchanan received a special ovation and was kissed by the belles at the commencement he was attending. Unhappily he was a confirmed bachelor and the kisses were wasted.

The Davie Poplar is considered by many as the heart of the Carolina campus. Since the old days the tree has been one of the favorite gathering places on the campus. Perhaps the time when the old tree is most important is at commencement, when the graduating class gathers under it every day during senior week and the alumni come back to sit under it and recall fond memories. The faculty commencement procession forms in front of Alumni hall, just to the east of thre tree, and marches from there to the exercises in Memorial hall.

At the present time the trunk of the tree, measured five feet above the ground, is sixteen feet four inches in circumference and five feet two inches in diameter. Up to about thirty feet from the ground the poplar is covered with ivy, especially thick on the north side. Most of the limbs are gone, though there remains one tremendous limb, at least two feet in diameter.

According to the nationally prominent University botanist, Dr. W. C. Coker, the Davie Poplar is incorrectly named. Botanically speaking, it is not a member of the poplar family, but of the tulip family. The scientific name is Lirodendron tulipifera. This species of tree is closely related to the magnolia and is known to grow to a great size. In the southeastern part of the United States the tulip is the second largest tree, while the

Monster Rally Called To Give Team Send-Off

"Ever-Snitch" Will Be Produced This Afternoon at Four

The play Ever-Snitch will be given this afternoon at four o'clock in the Playmakers theatre. This is the first of a series of studio performances which will be given this year.

Mrs. Karl H. Fussler, the writer of the play, is a member of Professor Koch's playwriting class. This play was picked as one of the best of the quarter, and if it is accepted today it will probably be considered for the next tour of the Playmakers.

As was announced previously in the Daily Tar Heel, persons wishing to attend this invitational performance may be able to do so by sending their requests to Mr. Ralph Westerman in his office in the Playmakers Theatre.

Entire Student Body Will Assemble By Old Well Tonight At 8:45.

PRESIDENT ON PROGRAM

Team Needs Only Confidence and The Support of the Campus, Says Writer.

Tonight at 8:45 the students of the University will have an opportunity of redeeming their former disloyal attitude by instilling a feeling of confidence in the Carolina team. This evening the student body will assemble before the Old Well to give the Tar Heel team a send-off that will show them that the University is wholly behind them and will on Thanksgiving Day and December 6 accept nothing but victory.

Cameron Avenue will be entirely blocked off and no automobiles will be allowed to pass through. Cards with the cheers on them will be distributed. At 8:45 the band will play Carolina songs and the cheer leaders will lead the singing. Nine o'clock will be ushered in amidst a burst of cheers—for the team. President Graham will give a short talk at 9:05. The interfraternity council and the dormitory presidents have exerted themselves to the utmost in order to make the send-off a "howling" success and will succeed, if you, and your room-mate, and your dormitory or fraternity and the student body, and Chapel Hill come to this pep meeting and show your team that you believe that they have the stuff to win the rest of the games on this season's schedule.

In courtesy to the team and the University, E. Carrington Smith of the Carolina theatre announced that in view of the mass meeting the feature show this evening will not begin until 9:30.

Carolina has suffered no extremely disastrous defeats, and yet the students here criticise the team and are entirely pessimistic as to the outcome of the next two games. Georgia beat Yale, and until the last period the Tar Heels held Georgia to a lone touchdown. Tennessee, acknowledged as one of the outstanding teams of the country, barely nosed Carolina out 9-7. The Tar Heels smeared the Ramblin' Wreck. With the record that the Carolina team has made there should be no reason for pessimism, on the contrary, a feeling of optimism should pervade the campus.

Up to the Yale game, Harvard had scored no victories in major contests this year. If any team should have had their morale destroyed it should have been this one, but the students at

North Carolina Club Hears Third In Series of Agricultural Talks.

I. O. Schaub, director of the North Carolina State College extension service, read a paper to the North Carolina Club last night at its meeting in the library room of the department of rural social economics in the library building. Mr. Schaub's subject was "Safely Balanced Agriculture in North Carolina."

Mr. Schaub, as head of the agricultural extension, directs the work of all farm and home demonstration agents in North Carolina and all extension activities of State College. Through him farmers are informed of new methods and suggested improvements in agriculture.

This is the third in a series of talks to be made before the North Carolina Club throughout the academic year. This club has combined with the North Carolina Conference for Social Service to study agricultural conditions in North Carolina with a view to working out a plan of improvements. The papers will be presented at the annual meeting of the Conference next spring, and will be published in a year book.

Insignificent Incidents

Incidents, ignored in the average day's routine, mount high in the determining of future events. We refer to the mass meeting which will be held at 7:30 tonight at the Well to send the team off for the Virginia game.

Whether the campus-wide depression has resulted in the loss of one or two football games, or whether the loss of the football games has resulted in the depression, we do not know. But the causes of one bear upon the causes of the other.

Tonight's mass meeting is apparently just another send-off for the football team. But it goes deeper than that. An enthusiastic meeting will not only result in a victory over Virginia Thursday but it will also result in raising the pall of gloom which seems to have enveloped the campus recently.

The meeting will be brief, it will be lively and it will reflect absolutely the student attitude toward the team, toward the University and toward campus life. Whatever else we may have scheduled for the forty minutes of the meeting let us not forget that in the attitude of the students lies the success or failure of the football team.

Factory Literature

The United States of Soviet Russia from its very inception has been hard on the professional men of the country. For years after the Red Revolution the self-admission that one belonged to the professional group was sufficient to cause one to lose his head.

Any work no matter how necessary it had been considered in the old regime which is not done with the hands in the new is looked down upon. The entire upper crust of Russian society has been done away with either through the medium of emigration, execution, or a leveling to the depths of all those who survived death or who elected to remain within the borders of their native land.

It is not for us to hold any brief for either side of the socialistic question, but the Russian policy is terrifically near sighted in that it attempts to give a beautiful thing—equality—to the underprivileged who are not yet and probably will not be ready for one hundred years to receive its due to their having been without education or privileges for some two thousand years. In their zealous efforts they lose sight of the fact that they in their desire to bring equality to all, are just as vicious toward the professional and educated classes as the Czarist order ever was toward the working classes.

It is a crime for good Red Russians to seek medical attention upon becoming ill or legal advice if in any difficulty.

The latest campaign to be waged by the Soviet is against the literary artists of the country who have not violently allied themselves with the proletarian wing. Russian literature which was lifted to world-wide artistic prestige by such eminent writers as Tolstoy, Pushkin, Tchekov, and Dostoievsky is to henceforth to be controlled by Soviet factory workers. The factory personnel must henceforth pass on all literary work both large and small in their meetings. All but the proletarian wing of the literary craft have protested this on the grounds that the Russian factory worker is unable to criticize due to his being not yet culturally ripe enough to judge works of art.

All Moscow theatres are under the strict surveillance of factory committees; engineers are eyed with suspicion; doctors are being done away with; literature is to be criticized by ignorant factory workers; lawyers are taboo in the new regime; and it looks like the Russians will be successful in legislating God out of his very existence. There is a chance that the next war will be one of entire civilizations rather than one of countries or mere policies.—JACK D.

OPEN FORUM

IN QUEST OF LOYALTY

To the Editor:

What has happened to the once well-known and admired "Carolina Spirit" of loyalty, that in times past was pointed to with pride by everybody interested in our University? The present demoralizing and deadly thing that seems to have Carolina in its grip is not confined to football or athletics, but is trying to choke everything. Of course, just now the most conspicuous and concrete evidence of this blight is seen in the student support of their football team. The old grads, out struggling with the many distracting problems of life, seem to be much more loyal than are the students themselves. Perhaps that may be explained by saying that the contact with the world has taught the grads true values. But that answer would not explain the present situation at Carolina, for most of the old grads were devoted and loyal when here, and followed, more often than not, their losing teams with such a spirit of true sportsmanship that they won the rather reluctant admiration of the, at that time, "superiority complex" Virginians. Nor can it be explained by saying that the students here now will not support a team when it loses, for the lack of enthusiasm at the games played in Kenan Stadium was notorious last year when the Tar Heels were piling up huge scores.

It is hard to believe that our students care less about their University, or are at heart less loyal to it than are the students of the neighboring institutions to their alma mater. And yet that is the impression a stranger would have got if he had attended any of our football games during the last two, no three years; for, whatever the cause of the disheartening attitude that has been choking the life out of one of the biggest assets of student life, the effects began to be noticeable as far back as three years ago. Personally, I believe that the causes are relatively simple and easily explained, so I will not go into them now, for it is the effect that is our chief concern at present, and that effect is not simple, nor is it as easily disposed of as the optimistic would like. The "rah rah spirit" frequently held up for scorn and ridicule by the sophomoric person, is comparatively wholesome, and entirely natural. The present prevailing attitude held apparently by enough members of the student body to make it, at least, seem representative of all of us, is certainly not natural; on the contrary, it is the manifestation of a deadly poison that will not confine its effects to this student body alone, but will be carried out into the life of the state by the outgoing students, unless it is fought and checked at its source, for most impressionable years of the average adolescent are those spent in college.

And now getting down to the business of freeing ourselves and our alma mater from this blight, what can each of us do about it at the present time? Everybody knows the answer to that question. We can make a start where the opportunity now presents itself. Our Tar Heel football team needs our support whether they are winning or losing. It is their right, and it should not be denied them under any circumstances, for if it so happened that any given situation might be displeasing to a student body, its support would go far towards correcting that situation, as everybody knows. And last, if we will not stand up for own, what sort of folks are we?

IN THE WAKE OF NEWS

Jack Dungan

That Prohibition is absolutely the most important national issue of the time can no longer be denied by the most caution political boss seeking to divert campaign issues into less turbulent waters. There is no paper or review but what hasn't some thing to say on the subject.

The past week brought forth such significant items as the vote conducted among members of the American Bar Association, representative of a profession which undoubtedly knows more about whether the law can be enforced or not, which revealed that 13,779 were for repeal and only 6,340 for the present system.

The Anti-Saloon League, which should change its name to the Anti-Speakeasie League and do something to bring down prices and bring up quality, announced that it would seek $6,000,000 with which to campaign in the interests of dry candidates between now and 1932.

————, dean emeritus of the Yale law school and his political head due to his unpolitical pronouncement to the effect that the Republicans would always stay dry.

The Womens' Christian Temporance Union in holy meeting at Houston, Texas, hearing that the Wickersham committee (which some are prone to Call Hoover's Sham committee) would not report either for repeal or four percent beer, closed with the words "Praise God!" Not however until they had declared themselves in favor of the Union's taking over the censorship of the motion picture industry in order to prevent" those insidious wets" from using that medium in their unrighteous campaign.

The Tempest in the Tea Pot is liable to continue thusly for years. 1932 will not see it settled or 1942. Exactly 5,000,000 persons represented by thirteen small states are powerful enough to keep the amendment in the constitution despite what the rest of the 122,000,000 persons desire. In, other words Nevada with but 77,000 population is as powerful as New York with around 12,000,000.

Just as the amendment enfranchising the negro has become a deadletter so will the Eighteenth amendment. Gradually the law will be enforced only in those states that are willing to cooperate and desire Prohibition, until such a time in the dim distant future that people as a whole will have become temperate enough to permit the importation from abroad of spirituous liquors. There will probably never again be legally manufactured in this country any intoxicating beverages.

Sweden has a very interesting program ahead of it which calls for government liquor control boards similar to the successful governor-elect of the state of Massachusetts, has intimated that he will call a congress of the governors of the country to consider the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment providing the national congress does not do the same thing within the year.

Chairman Fess of the Republican party will very likely lose ones functioning in Canada, and a maximum of four and one half quarts of liquor for each registered adult.

The Unholy Alliance between the Womens' Christian Temperance Union, the Anti-Saloon League, and the Bootleggers of America is omnipotent enough to hold their present seat of power until long after we would have use for any stimulating influence.

RED CROSS TO BEGIN CHRISTMAS SEAL DRIVE

The annual drive of the American Red Cross for the sale of Christmas seals will begin in Chapel Hill December 1 and continue throughout that week. Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge will have charge of the work, and is now organizing workers for the campaign.

In discussing the use of the money made by the sale of seals, Mrs. Breckenridge stated that seventy-five per cent of the total results of the local campaign would be used for the care of tubercular patients and prevention of the disease in Chapel Hill and vicinity, while twenty per cent goes to the state sanitorium and five to the National Tuberculosis Association, to pay for the costs of printing and mailing publicity materials.

Two Teams Drive Hard In Scrimmage

LINES OPEN WIDE HOLES AS BACKS MARCH THROUGH

Squad Will Leave for Virginia Game After Pep Meeting Tonight.

BACKS CLICK TOGETHER

Nash, Magner, House, Branch Combination Works; Slusser And Maus Good.

All dressed up in their game togs to have their picture taken, the first two Tar Heel elevens looked good in offensive scrimmage against the freshmen yesterday afternoon at Kenan stadium. The Branch-Nash-House Magner backfield combination made gain after gain behind the varsity line which blocked better and showed more drive than it has for several weeks.

The second team not to be outdone raced over another freshman eleven for many long and spectacular gains. Jimmy Maus and Rip Slusser did most of the running with Pete Wyrick calling signals and running good interference. George Houston made several nice gains running from fullback.

Both of the lines seemingly have profited by their experience of last week at beating the buckers and drilling on blocking. They were opening up wide holes for the backs to march through. Tackles and guards showed considerable improvement over the performance of past games.

The first team took the ball on their own thirty yard line five times and only once were they held short of a touchdown. Most of the scores were made by steady gains of from four to ten yards, but several of the backs gained as much as twenty behind good interference.

Lipscomb was at center; Fysal and Blackwood at guards; McDade and Thompson at the tackle posts; and Walker and Brown at end in the first team line. The second line included Gilbreath, center; McIver and Newcombe, guards; Hodges and Underwood, tackles; Alexander and Davis, ends.

Leave Tonight at 9:15

The squad leaves here tonight at 9:15 immediately after the gigantic pep meeting which is to be held at the Old Well at 9:15. Coach Collins announced that a squad of thirty-five men will make the trip, but would not announce the names of the men that are going until this afternoon.

The final stiff workout before the game will be this afternoon with only signal practice and limbering up exercises in Virginia tomorrow.

FOUR FROSH HARRIERS TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

In the freshman cross-country run between Carolina and Washington and Lee, which was run Saturday afternoon preceeding the varsity meet, Mead, McRae, Groover, Sullivan, and Farr lead the field and finished first for the Carolina harriers. This quintet of runners barely missed tying at the finish line; Farr, however, misjudged his distance and finished a close second.

Some Virginia Gridiron Veterans

When the Tar Heels meet the Cavaliers at Charlottesville Thursday, they will be watching Bill Thomas, who is Virginia's outstanding backfield threat. DeButts, guard, and Captain Motley, tackle, are two stalwarts in Virginia's defense. Bryant played a great defense against Duke early in the season. This is Coach Earl Abell's second year as head mentor for the Cavaliers.

TENNIS TEAM TO MEET CAVALIERS THERE TOMORROW

Coach Kenfield and Squad Will Entrain Tonight for Annual Match.

TAR HEELS FAVORITES

Team of Star Performers Expected to Down Comparatively Weak Virginians.

Carolina's versatile aggregation of tennis players entrain tonight for Charlottesville where they will meet the University of Virginia team in their annual encounter. In both 1928 and 1929 the Virginia team turned back the Tar Heels by decisive scores, but this year Carolina sends to Virginia what is probably the strongest collection of players it has ever put out, and this year's team stands a good chance to win for the home team.

Virginia has only one good man in Alfonso Smith, who won many tournaments this summer and lost to Wilmer Hines in the finals of the mid-Atlantic collegiate tourney in five hard fought sets at White Sulphur Springs.

Carolina, on the other hand, has a team composed of champions. In the order of the probable line-up for tomorrow's match they are:

1. Wilmer Hines, 1930 national junior champion and also win-

CAVALIER BACK AVERAGES FIVE YARDS PER TRY

University, Virginia, November 24.—Bill Thomas, Virginia's premier halfback, has averaged a gain of five yards plus a foot each time he has tried to advance the ball from scrimmage this fall.

In the eight games in which he has played Thomas has received the ball from center 196 times. He has tucked it under his arm and started to run 126 times, for total gains of 586 yards. He has passed 37 times for 279 yards gained. And 33 times he has punted.

Thomas has averaged a gain of a few inches less than five yards each time he has carried the ball. His 37 passes averaged gains of seven and a half yards each time he tossed the ball into the air. Twenty of his throws were completed. Combining passes and running plays his season average is about five and a third yards.

The Kentucky contest was the only one in which Thomas did not take part. A charlie horse kept him on the bench then. His best gains, however, were not against weaker teams, for he played less than 20 minutes against Roanoke College and was in the Randolph-Macon game scarcely 10 minutes.

Wouldn't it be great if the soft and sentimental boys who sing with their eyes closed would only try the idea on their mouths?—Boston Herald.

Ruffin Wins Campus Title

FOOTBALL

By K. C. RAMSAY

LAST SUNDAY A FOOTBALL TEAM RETURNED FROM Davidson, a football team beaten by the little Wildcats. It was humiliated by being defeated at the hands of the Presbyterians, but realized that it has two more games to play this season, and that an air of melancholia and defeatism would mean nothing but disaster. With this in mind the squad took the field Tuesday afternoon, after a rest on Monday, and settled down to a long and hard six days grind on the fundamentals of football. It tackled the dummy, practiced shoulder blocking, high body blocking, and had line scrimmage day after day. Throughout all this tedious drilling the squad worked and labored to get into the pink of condition. Today it is quite another football team, ready to go to Charlottesville, and ready to return to meet Duke. The whole football team has discarded its melancholia, defeatism, listlessness, or whatever you want to call it.

WHEN THE TEAM RETURNED A LARGE NUMBER OF Carolina students came back to the "hill" also. They had sat in the stands at Davidson, but that was all. Throughout all of the second half of the game, when the 'Cats had the Tar Heels with their backs to the wall, the majority of the students just sat. A small body of this group, on returning to Chapel Hill, decided that this is not the way for Carolina students to support their football team, and got busy to see what has happened to the support of the team. Billy Arthur has called a big mass meeting of the student body for tonight, and the interfraternity council and the dormitory presidents have pledged their support to this outward expression of the fact that the student body is behind the team. This meeting tonight is not going to be a "Whoopee, Boys for Oshkosh" affair. It is going to be a definite proof to the team that the students want the team to beat Virginia and Duke, that they believe the team will beat Virginia, and ten days later beat Duke. The team has put away its listlessness and melancholia. Have the students done so? Tonight is our chance to prove whether or not we have. Here is what one student thinks:

Sports Editor The Daily Tar Heel:

Among our student body there seems to be many superior persons who have an idea that enthusiasm for their college team is prep school stuff and beneath their dignity. . . . . .

And as long as football is a college sport and not professional, and as long as the boys who play are rewarded only by an ephemeral glory if they are successful, and plenty of mean knocks if they are not, the team has a right to the loyalty and encouragement of the entire student body, irrespective of whether that team wins or loses, for you can depend on one thing, they do not lose for the pleasure or profit they get out of it.—A STUDENT.

DUKE'S DEVILS ARE BLUE after having been tied by Wake Forest, and many here at Carolina have already decided that they are down and will be easy meat for the Tar Heels. This tie game has proven one thing. It has proven that our neighbors are human and they can be halted, but it means that they will work even harder than before to come over here and try to beat Carolina. Wake Forest has shown that they can be tied. Carolina will show them that they can be beaten.

SOMETHING SHOULD BE said for the Tar Babies. They seemingly didn't have a great deal of opposition from Virginia Saturday, but if they had been up against even a stronger team than the Cavalier yearlings, they would have won. The Tar Babies were playing football. They have a group of star players on the squad, but up until the game Saturday, they have been without the necessary coordination which is necessary to any football team. The blocking by our yearlings, their tackling, and their defense was very good. If they keep up the fight and show the same ability when they are promoted to the varsity squad next year, some varsity men will have to put up a stiff fight to keep their position.

THE BIG FIVE FOOTBALL title may come to Chapel Hill in spite of Carolina's loss to Davidson. Carolina has lost one game,

RIGGS AND McBRIDE STAR

Weathers Makes First Touchdown for Ruffin in Second Quarter.

Ruffin abruptly terminated the Beta's reign as Intramural champions, defeating the former title holders 19-0 yesterday in an uninteresting game played on Emerson Field. Both teams took to the air, but the Beta's offense could not get going. The dormitory champions clearly showed their superiority in all branches of the game with the possible exception of intercepting passes, which were about even.

The Beta's kicked off to McBride who returned the kick-off twelve yards to the Beta's forty-nine yard line. Play see-sawed in mid-field until close to the end of the first period when the Beta's had the ball on Ruffin's ten yard line, but on the next play, the pass was grounded in the end zone.

In the second period Ruffin broke the ice on a fluke. Ruffin worked the ball down to the twenty yard line and attempted a pass in the end zone which was knocked down by Follin into the hands of Weathers who was over the line. McBride's pass for the extra point was grounded.

The new champions ran wild in the third period scoring two

"Hit and Run" Driver Injures Two Girls

Two girls were seriously injured Sunday evening when they were run down by William McCauley, colored, who was driving a Ford sedan along West Franklin street. Eloise Moore sustained a broken arm, and Bertie Beck was taken to the hospital with her skull fractured and a broken arm.

McCauley, frightened, abandoned his car and has not been located. Due to the fact that there were no witnesses to the accident and that the victims are unable to make statements yet, the police have been unable to ascertain the cause of the accident.

Tradition Surrounding Famous Old Tree Grows Every Year

members of the poplar family itself are rather small, and many trees are erroneously called poplars which do not belong to this particular group. History and tradition, however, are too strong for the Davie Poplar to be designated by any name other than the present one.

The trunk of the tree is hollow from the ground up and a cavity inside is large enough for a man to crawl through. Dr. Coker estimated the age of the tree to be about 200 years.

Looking to the future, on the morning of March 15, 1918, Dr. W. S. Long and Dr. Kemp Plummer Battle planted a shoot from the old tree, just northeast its sire. This new tree is now just a mere stripling when compared to its illustrious sire, but it is strong and straight and will in spirit take the place of the old patriarch when it is gone.

The feeling which all Carolina students, past and present, hold for the grand old tree is beautifully expressed by Edmund De Berry Covington '44 in the following poem:

Ye ken ye stand on classic grun',
And reck na win, nor rain, nor sun;
For weel ye trow our lo'e you've won,
Auld tottering frien'!
But now I grieve your course is run,
Ower late to men!

A douce auld Tree, ye lang hae stood;
But time, wha recks na ill nor good,
With blasting tooth has sapped your blude
An' left his mark,
I'd fain unhaud ye an I could
Auld Patriarch.

Duke has been tied, Davidson has lost one, and Wake Forest has both lost and been tied. If Carolina beats Duke, and Wake Forest beats Davidson, it will be another title for the Tar Heels. If Davidson beats Wake Forest, and Carolina beats Duke, there will be a tie for the title. It seems to us that the Tar Heels have an excellent chance to retain the top position in North Carolina for another year.

3. Graham and Abels.

touchdowns in rapid succession, both on intercepted passes. Play had no sooner started than Bethune intercepted Follin's pass on the Beta's forty-five yard line and dashed the remaining yards for the score. A little later Bethune repeated his earlier performance, this time from the thirty yard marker. McBride kicked the extra point to make the score 19-0.

The Beta's, desperate by the turn of events, threw passes all over the stadium, but to no avail.

Henry Anderson, after playing a spectacular game, was injured in a collision with McBride and forced to leave the game.

What the game lacked in skill was made up in the intenseness of play, Ruffin being penalized three times for holding.

Bethune, Riggs, and McBride starred for the victors, while Follin, Anderson, and Council were the big guns for the Beta's.

Rally Called To Give Team Send-Off

Harvard refused to believe that Yale could win. And when this spirit was communicated to the team the result was that Harvard decisively defeated Yale 13-0 and made a successful season out of a hitherto unsuccessful one.

Princeton, too, was forced to suffer the ignominy of losing all its major games, even Lehigh who had not beaten Princeton for forty-three years overcame the Tiger. On the eve of the Yale game, however, Tigertown turned out en masse to show their team that they still believed in it. The next day a tearing slashing Princeton team marched eighty yards to a touchdown, mopping up the muddy field with the Bulldog as they went along. But for the educated toe of Albie Booth who kicked a field goal that won the game, Princeton would have held Yale to a 7-7 tie and ended the season in triumph.

What the Tiger and Harvard have done the Tar Heels can do also if they get the same support that was accorded the Princeton and Harvard teams by their respective student bodies.

tion that he be a law abiding citizen for a period of six months. He paid the costs.

Luther Alston appeared before the court to ask that his sentence of six months on the road be postponed until after Christmas. When Judge Hinshaw asked him why he did not go to some place where there is no whiskey, this rival of the late "Pink" Guthrie answered, "I don't know where there is such a place."

Napoleon Jones plead not guilty to the charge of gambling. James McDowell and John Murphy both testified that the accused had been playing. As the was his first appearance in court and as he vehemently denied the charge the judge passed no sentence; however, Jones paid the costs.

In the last case, H. S. Kennedy plead guilty to appearing on the streets in a drunken condition. Police Chief Lloyd stated that the accused had been arrested Thursday for drunkeness and was to report in Court last Saturday, but the defendant had come to court to have his trial postponed and had then become drunk again that evening. Judge Hinshaw sentenced the defendant to one month's hard labor on the roads; the sentence was suspended on the condition that he be a law abiding citizen for six months. The defendant paid the costs.

The fire department was called out Sunday morning to a fire of unknown origin at the home of Dr. G. T. Schwenning.

PROGRAMS HELD UP BY DELAY IN NEW AUDITORIUM

Plans for Presidental Inauguration and Entertainment Programs Delayed.

No definite arrangement has yet been decided upon in regard to the inauguration of President-elect Frank Porter Graham, it was reported yesterday. As soon as the new auditorium is finally completed, plans will be announced.

The announcement of the final program of the Entertainment Committee is at present also awaiting the opening of the new building. The committee has at present many prospective companies in view, but at present no contracts can be made.

It has been reported that the general character of the performances will probably be higher this year than any previous season. This fact is possible due to the present economic condition which has reduced the prices of some of the best entertainments in the country to the minimum.

The new auditorium, which will have a seating capacity of around two thousand, will probably open to the campus use sometime during the first part of the winter quarter. Because of the possibility that certain materials for the building may be delayed no exact date has yet been set for the opening. Plans are now being discussed to have some of the noted men in the state present at the opening ceremonies. During the week following the opening, the entertainment committee has announced that it will try to have one of its performances booked for that time. This, however, has not been definitely arranged.

Local Cafe Placed In Receiver's Hands

Tom Gooch's cafeteria, the oldest in Chapel Hill closed its doors Monday night. Gooch has faithfully served the students of the University and the townspeople of Chapel Hill for twenty-seven years as the satisfier of the inner man. The first cafeteria owned by Gooch was opened in the store where Eubanks drug store now stands. He traveled around town, opening stores here and there, finally starting his sixth venture as a cafe proprietor at his present situation.

Gooch acted as telephone operator for Chapel Hill when the telephone building was in the house where the Carolina U-Drive-It garage now is. He lived in the same building and while residing there raised a family of ten children.

With the closing of his latest venture the sages of the town are busily speculating as to whether Gooch will attmept to start in the cafeteria business again. With his passing from the business world Chapel Hill loses one of its most colorful personalities.

SYMBOLISM AND PESSIMISM FILL RUSSIAN DRAMA

Student of Soviet Stage Describes Russian Drama to Playmakers.

Mrs. E. R. Murray spoke last night at eight-thirty in the Playmakers Theatre on "The Theatre in Soviet Russia." Mrs. Murray said that in order to understand the theatre under Soviet Russia one must understand that the Russian people have insisted on having drama and the fine arts throughout their history. To them things of mind are far more important than material comforts. This point is found in Oliver Saylor's book The Russian Theatre. Mr. Saylor, who was in Russia during the revolution of 1917, says that they attended the theatre in the midst of the firing.

There are two outstanding features in the Russian theatre, Mrs. Murray tells us. The first of these is the finest art of symbolism; the second, a Japanese influence which, though adapted to the Russian temperament, is quite obvious—especially in the Meyerbold Theatre. In the old days only nobles went to the theatres so the lower classes were forced to stage their own drama. The originality of this has come from the fact that the people were scattered and were very poor. Mrs. Murray says that drama is often born of loneliness and that the downtrodden try to fabricate a dream life. In this way, she says, the South may also develop an art in drama.

After the talk an open forum was held, in which Mrs. Murray, drawing from her personal experience, answered diverse questions about Soviet Russia. She has been to Russia twice in the last three years, spending three months there, and has traveled to Vladivostok through Siberia—a trip which few tourists make.

Williams Chosen To Meet Cambridge

In the tryout last night to select the second Carolina representative for the debate with Cambridge University, J. C. Williams was chosen. Williams, with one of the Cambridge debaters, will uphold the affirmative side of the question, Resolved: That the emergence of woman from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life. The negative side of the query will be supported by McB. Fleming-Jones, and one of the men from England. The meet will be held in Gerrard hall, December 13.

No Mass

There will be no Mass in Gerrard hall Sunday, November 30.

ARTISTS CHOSEN FOR PRODUCTION OF 'THE MESSIAH'

The tenor, soprano, and contralto for the Christmas oratorio, The Messiah, to be presented in December have been chosen, December fifteenth in the music auditorium have been chosen, according to Dr. H. S. Dyer, of the music department. The tenor will be sung by Mr. Edward Molitore. Molitore has just finished a ten-weeks season with the Cincinnati Opera Company. He is considered one of the finest lyric tenors ever heard with the company. He is a graduate of Northwestern University. His most recent appearances with the Boston Grand Opera Company, and with the Detroit and Cincinnati companies.

The soprano will be sung by Mrs. Camilla Tentera Molitore, the wife of the tenor. Mrs. Molitore has sung as soloist with the St. Louis Symphony. Mr. and Mrs. Molitore are at present singing at the First Presbyterian Church in Greensboro. Dr. Dyer has heard them both sing in Greensboro, and has said that their work is of the highest type.

Mme, Emily Berger Cullum, prominent Chicago singer, will be the contralto. Comment on her singing has been very complimentary. At present, she is located at Davidson. Her husband, Ernest James Cullum is director of the music department at Davidson College. The artist to sing the bass in the play has not been selected as yet, but will probably be selected before long.

Director of Players Is Versatile Artist

The members of the Jitney Players who are appearing in the Playmakers Theatre December 1 and 2 are well-known actors to Broadway and leading theatrical circles throughout the East. This company will present on December 1 at eight-thirty o'clock The Murder in the Red Barn, a melodrama of 1840, and on December 2 Sheridan's comic opera The Duenna.

Alice Keating Cheney, who is the active head of the organization since the death of her husband, Bushnell Cheney, with whom she had been co-founder and director, appears in the title role in The Duenna and as Maria Marten, the innocent heroine of The Murder in the Red Barn.

Miss Keating, before her marriage and the founding of the Jitney Players, had been playing on Broadway under the management of Arthur Hopkins and played Ophelia opposite John Barrymore during part of the run of Hamlet. Miss Keating before her professional debut in New York had been interested in theatricals in Buffalo, where she was active in the social world. After extensive travels abroad she studied dancing under the late Isadora Duncan.

Of her work on the stage one critic has said: "Alice Keating who has played many types hereabouts has ever the sure and stylized touch, a certain individual technique. She gives satisfaction in every part both to the eye and to the mind." Besides her abilities as director of this unique theatre and her capabilities as an actress this unusual woman finds time to design the costumes for the Jitney productions, as well as to assist and advise in all departments. In both plays the costumes are made from costume plates drawn by her.

THREE STUDENTS HURT AS RESULT OF MOTOR CRASH

While returning on a week-end trip to Fredericksburg, Virginia, three University students were severely injured in an automobile accident near Richmond, Virginia. The three students are Sidney Rosen, Nat Chafetz, and Charles Lasko.

The most seriously injured of the trio is Rosen, who is in a Richmond hospital suffering from internal injuries. An X-ray will be taken today to ascertain the extent of his hurts. Chafetz, the driver of the car, sustained severe laceration of the head and face, having two stitches taken in his forehead. Lasko suffered a ruptured blood vessel and contusions of his right leg.

According to the students, they were driving along when an approaching car suddenly swerved into them, overturning the automobile three times, and wrecking it entirely. The unknown driver of the other car said that the wind blew his hat over his face and he was unable to see Chafetz's car in time to avoid a collision. The extent of the damage to the Virginian's car was a broken wheel and fender.

Dance Series Is To Begin Friday

The Thanksgiving dances will begin with a tea dance Friday afternoon in Bynum gymnasium. The set continues with the sophomore dance Friday night, a morning and a tea dance Saturday, a Gimghoul dinner dance Saturday evening, and ends with the Thanksgiving ball Saturday night.

Weede Meyer's orchestra, which has had engagements at the University in the past, last appearing here in 1928, will play for all these dances.

The sophomore dance Friday night will be led by Robert Carmichael of New York City with Miss Rosemary Ward, also of New York City. They will be assisted by Arlindo Cate of Greensboro with Miss Electra Waggoner of Greensboro, and Elliott Newcombe of Charlotte with Miss Convere McAden of Charlotte.

Clyde Dunn of Kinston with Miss Clair Hanes of Winston-Salem will lead the Thanksgiving ball on Saturday night. Edward Wood of Wilmington with Miss Elizabeth Nunn of New Bern and Henry Anderson with Miss Margaret Powell of Asheville will assist.

Rules formulated by the German Club will govern the conduct of all the dances. Three members of the organization giving the dance are chosen to keep order and will meet with the executive committee and report. The chaperons will be approved by the chairman of the faculty committee on dances.

Students, visitors, or alumni may be suspended from the dances for misconduct on the floor. No smoking or drinking is allowed. Girls are not allowed to leave the floor without being accompanied by a chaperon and they must be at their lodgings within thirty minutes after the close of the dance.

Mrs. Knight Honored

Mrs. F. G. Patterson, 229 E. Franklin street, will entertain a number of friends at a luncheon Friday in honor of Mrs. E. W. Knight who is leaving Saturday for China.

Reappointed

Rev. C. Excell Rozzelle, who has served as minister of the local Methodist Episcopal church in Chapel Hill for three years, was reappointed Monday to fill his old post here.

LITERARY BODIES SELECT MEN FOR ANNUAL DEBATE

Mary D. Wright Debate, Between Di and Phi, Set for December 2.

Competition for places on the Dialectic and Philanthropic teams for the Mary D. Wright debate was ended Monday night by the selection of C. A. Shreve and McB. Fleming-Jones from the Senate, and H. H. Hobgood and William Egbert Uzzell from the Assembly.

The meet will take place at seven-fifteen next Tuesday, December 2, in Gerrard hall. The query is, Resolved: That the State of North Carolina Should Adopt a Luxury Tax For the Support of Institutions of Higher Learning. The Di will uphold the negative and the Phi, the affirmative. This question was chosen by a committee from the Senate because it has been suggested that the decreasing appropriations for the University might be increased by this means. This way of financing colleges has been tried in the West and Mid-West where some states highly recommend its adoption while others condemn it.

The Mary D. Wright Debate was won last year by the team from the Senate, and the medal awarded to J. C. Williams. All of the contestants in this year's meet are experienced debaters, having represented the University in at least two inter collegiate forensic contests.

No Tar Heel Staff Meeting Sunday

There will be no meeting of the Daily Tar Heel staff Sunday night, it was announced by the managing editor of the publication yesterday. This regular weekly meeting has been postponed until three-fifteen p. m. on Monday afternoon. All reporters, city editors, and members of the editorial board will be expected to attend this meeting unless previously excused by the managing editor.

Infirmary List

The following were confined to the infirmary yesterday: James B. Farr, W. R. McLaughlin, W. A. Miller, N. R. Chafetz, and H. H. Hendlin, Hendlin who is ranked number four on the University tennis team, which left for Virginia yesterday will most likely have recovered sufficiently to accompany his teammates.

REV. ROZZELLE TO RETURN TO POST FOR FOURTH YEAR

Reappointed as Pastor of Chapel Hill Methodist Church at Request of Friends.

The news was received in Chapel Hill yesterday that Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon had reappointed the Rev. C. Excelle Rozzelle as pastor of the Chapel Hill Methodist church for his fourth consecutive year. The North Carolina Conference has just closed its annual session at Henderson, North Carolina, and the appointments of the three hundred Methodist ministers for Eastern North Carolina were read on Monday morning. Mr. Rozzelle has served as pastor of the local church for the past three years, having come to Chapel Hill from Myers Park Methodist church in Charlotte. His many friends here are pleased that the conference saw fit to send him back to this charge. Many requests went to the bishop and his cabinet from students, professors, and business men in town asking that Mr. Rozzelle be reappointed to Chapel Hill. The bishop decided to let Mr. Rozzelle remain here instead of sending him to the University Church in Atlanta, Georgia, which move had been planned.

Mr. Rozzelle is an alumnus of Duke, Emory, and Vanderbilt Universities. He has held prominent pastorates in Texas, Tennessee, and North Carolina, but he considers the pastorate in Chapel Hill to be the best of them all. Mr. Rozzelle is rated one of the most liberal of all Methodist ministers in the South, unhesitatingly speaking his mind on all the modern issues of theology, science, sociology, psychology, and philosophy. He has been called by his fellow ministers heretic, modernist, socialist, and many such titles, but he always replies with a smile and the most generous spirit imaginable.

"Chapel Hill is the one spot in our dear Southland where a man can speak freely his thoughts and not be burned at the stake," said Mr. Rozzelle in an interview yesterday with a

This Noble Experiment

For the last decade this nation has been concerned with all the possible ramifications with which a noble theory has deluged us. The proposition which has divided us and which now threatens a civil war of ballots within the next generation is that of whether any political group has the right or privilege to regulate the manner of living of the rest of those persons with whom they find themselves.

The prohibition of the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors is only the specific side of a great moral and economic question which besieges us today.

Waiving aside the fact that some pretty questionable methods were employed to "put-across" the Eighteenth Amendment, and that the majority may not even have been the real majority of the time, it can not be denied that the various constituencies of the nation were swayed by war time hysteria which had not abated.

Even taken for granted that most were sincere when they voted for forcing people to desist from drinking liquor, ten years of increased crime, and wholesale disregard for law, has strengthened hypocrisy which can undermine all sincerity. The watch-word of the day is "Vote Dry and Drink Wet."

The only honest solution is the complete repeal of a tyrannical, odious, and non-enforceable law which has plunged this nation into excesses of manners and morals hitherto unheard of, and which has nutured and fostered the growth of a criminal-politico underworld which boldly challenges the authority of the state.—JACK D.

The North Carolina Club

The North Carolina Club seems to be a really wide-awake organization this year. Already the club has had several excellent meetings and has brought to the campus men of great importance in the life of the state. At the last meeting of the group Mr. I. O. Schaub, director of the North Carolina State College extension service, read a paper on certain aspects of agriculture in the state. Prior to this meeting the club had as speaker Colonel Harrelson, a conservation expert in the employ of the state. With men of this type, a very useful program is being carried out.

It is the procedure of the North Carolina Club to have papers prepared by experts or persons qualified by research to be read to the club. The topics of the papers are concerned with life and conditions within the state of North Carolina, and the subject matter is largely informatory. Membership in the organization is not limited; it is extended to all who desire to attend the meetings.

Very little is known by the average citizen or the average citizen-to-be, the student, about the actual workings of the different departments under our state government. Few are acquainted with actual social and economic conditions. The North Carolina Club is sponsoring a program which offers great opportunities to students to learn something of the state in which they live; the work it is doing is indeed essential to the proper training of future citizens of the state. —B. OPEN FORUM

KEEP IN THE SWIM!

Editor The Daily Tar Heel:

There seems to be much energy wasted in discussion of several unimportant questions. There is one especially important subject on which I wish to discourse. May I refer specifically to a swimming team. The first question I might ask myself would concern the reason for not having a team. But, automatically that question can be marked off. The pertinent query is: "Why have we no swimming pool?" No doubt the management will answer to the effect that the interest here in aquatic sports does not warrant the expenditure of the sum it would require. Is that so? In nine out of ten of the bull sessions held in the sanctums of campus dorms and frat houses concerning athletics the swimming question arises. There is potential interest everywhere, but the individuals drop the matter indifferently, satisfied with the laurels of football, tennis, and track.

Practically every first-rate school in the country has swimming facilities and is represented in intercollegiate meets. Are we aware that the Southern Conference sponsors swimming meets? At Georgia Tech there is profound enthusiasm in swimming. Carolina lays stress on her athletic prowess. She refers often and at length to her lofty place among Conference schools. Assuming that this reference is justified, she must keep herself up there in every possible manner. I understand our rapidly progressing neighbor of the magnificent stone buildings has just completed a most beautiful pool and intends to emulate the splendidness of the pool with outstanding swimming and diving teams. With open eyes, ears, and mouths we discuss the forthcoming Duke-Carolina football game with the fear that we may possibly be defeated. But in a dormant fashion we sit by, while our rival builds herself up in a sport that is becoming more popular with each school year and in which we are not even represented. Ho-hum—if we can't go in for it now, it's' something to consider.

Espionage and Monitorship Replaced By Honor System

Editor's Note: Due to an unusual number of requests and a specific suggestion of the Faculty Executive Committee the Daily Tar Heel has asked the student council for a series of articles explaining the operation and mechanics of the student government here. This is the second and is furnished by the secretary of the council.

By Mayne Albright

A sympathetic understanding and appreciation of student government at the University of North Carolina is dependent upon a knowledge and understanding of the honor system, the campus code, and the purpose of the student council.

The honor system replaces espionage and monitorship by a confidence in student honor. The campus code replaces by-laws and rules of conduct by the simple requirement of a standard of gentlemanly conduct. The student council is the agency of the student body whose function it is to carry out these two governing principles.

There is a definite line of demarcation between the honor system and the campus code; and in the matters over which they have jurisdiction.

The honor system deals with but three offenses: lying, cheating and stealing. Under this every student is honor-bound to see that both he and his fellow-students abide by the principles of honor in every phase of campus life. Since there is no espionage—no police system—the theory is that students themselves will act spontaneously upon breaches of honor and will submit such offenses to their own tribunal, the student council. Students are trusted and left in perfect freedom.

The honor system is larger than student government. It would be nearer the facts to say that the University, rather than our student government is based upon the honor system. It is the basis of student life rather than of student discipline. The honor system may exist where there is no student government and in fact did exist here in the University for twenty-three years before any student governing organization was formed. On the other hand student governments can, and do, exist without the practice of the honor system, using instead a system of proctors or monitors in an attempt to prevent violations of honor. The honor system gives opportunity for the development of moral and social consciousness; the substitutes for the honor system deny both character and morality.

The penalty for violation of the system is, and always has been, suspension or dismissal. The honor system can never be said to fail, but it is an obvious fact that there will always be some students who fail to live up to the system and who abuse the privileges granted to them.

The campus code lists particular offenses and covers all offenses save those against the honor system. Any breach of gentlemanly conduct is included, and thus the field is wide indeed. The offenses most frequently dealt with under this head are hazing, gambling, drunkeness, destruction of property, and the passing of bad checks. The punishment for convictions of guilt in any of these offenses is dependent upon no precedent or law, but is aimed to deal with each particular case upon its merits. The first two, however, are generally considered suspension offenses.

Tar Heel reporter. "I love the place so well that when we named our baby we called her 'Carolina'. The church membership here has been exceedingly loyal to me during my three years of service. I could never hope to have a more devoted group of people. My friends outside of our membership have been most generous in every particular. The ministers in Chapel Hill are splendid men, every one of them, and our working together has been gratifyingly harmonius. I certainly trust I can live here for many years to come," said the minister.

Mr. Rozzelle is prominent in civic and fraternal circles. He is a Rotarian, a Scottish Rite and Thirty Second Degree Mason, and a Shriner.

At its recent meeting the conference also pledged itself to relieve the indebtedness on the Chapel Hill Methodist Church.

6-ton reels of cable distributed with the speed of perishable food

A carload of telephone poles laid down a thousand miles away within 36 hours after getting the order! Rush calls of this sort must frequently be handled by Western Electric, distributors for the Bell System.

But even more remarkable is the regular day by day flow of telephone supplies. The Chicago warehouse—one of 32 in the national system—fills 100,000 orders a day. In 1929 more than $400,000,000 worth of equipment and materials was delivered to the telephone companies.

Distribution on so vast a scale presents many interesting problems to Bell System men. The solutions they work out mean much in keeping this industry in step with the times.

The opportunity is there!

Tar Heels Leave For Virginia Game

RECEIVE GREAT SEND-OFF FROM CROWD AT WELL

President Graham Speaks to Large Assemblage Which Cheers Team.

SQUAD DRILLS DEFENSE

Final Practice To Be On New Field at Woodberry Forest School Today.

By K. C. Ramsay

After attending the monstrous pep meeting and send-off held for them at the Old Well last night, the Tar Heel football team, thirty-five strong together with coaches and managers, left for Orange, Virginia, where they will go through their final workout before the Virginia game on Woodberry Forest School's Hanes Field.

The pep meeting last night was one of the largest assemblages of Carolina students ever to gather to see the team off, and was marked by the excellent cheering exhibited by the crowd. The University band played a number of stirring marches in their usually good style, and lead the student body in "Hark the Sound."

President Graham made a short address at the meeting, in which he exhorted the student body to give their fullest support to the football team.

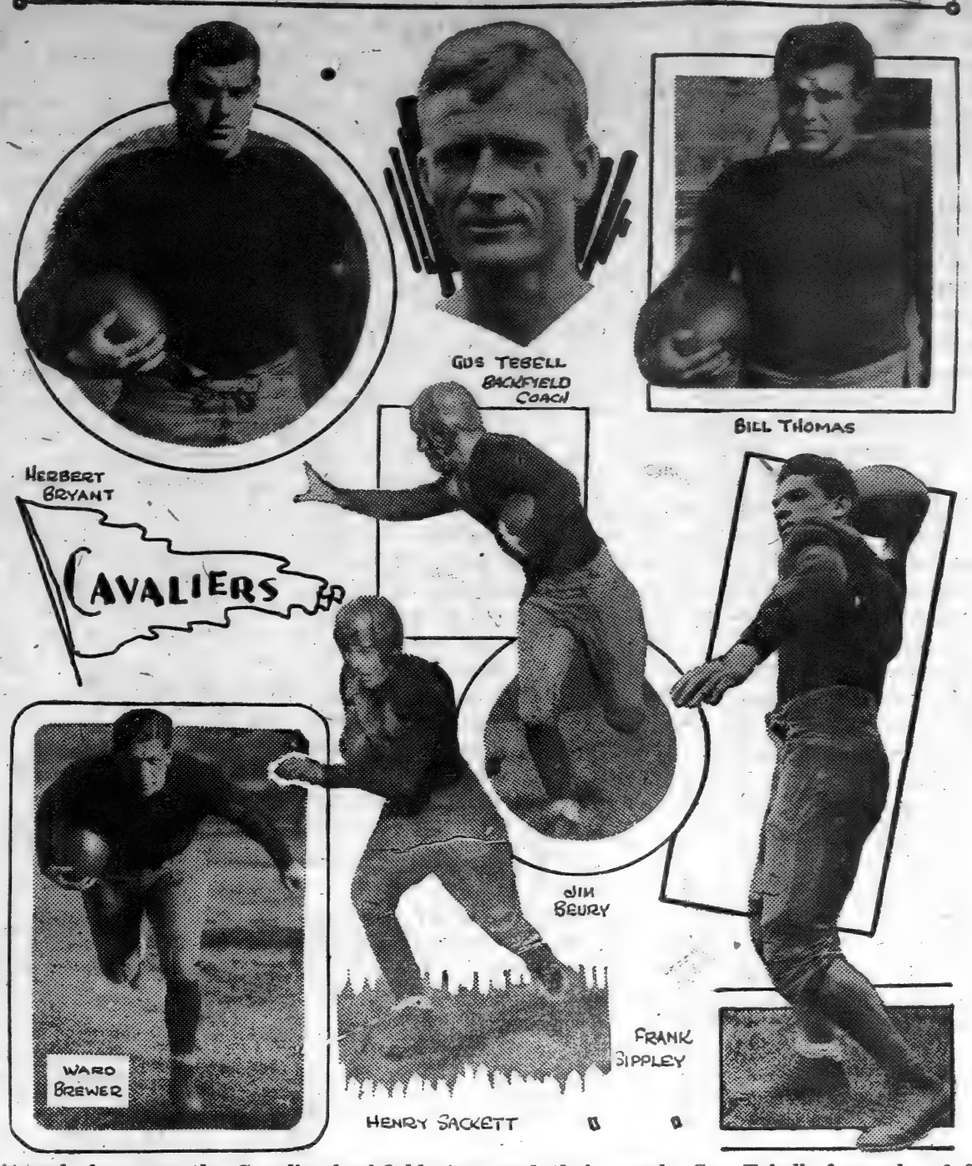
Dummy Scrimmage Yesterday

In their final workout in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon, the football team drilled on defense for Virginia plays in dummy scrimmage, and completed the practice with a short signal drill, kicking practice, and running down under punts.

The squad showed a great deal of fight and alertness in its workout and followed the Virginia plays closely, the reserves being unable to catch the first team off its guard with the tricky Virginia plays, once it tried the defense which the Carolina coaches have given them for these formations.

Crowd Going to Game

A large crowd of students, townspeople and faculty members will leave here during the day and night by highway, rail and air to be in Charlottesville tomorrow afternoon for the game. James G. Driver, graduate manager of athletics at Virginia, has announced that the advance ticket sales have been unusually large and that they are expecting to have a record crowd attending the last football game that will be played on Lambeth field.



The University band and the Carolina cheerleaders will leave for the game on the special train tonight, and will be on hand early tomorrow to lead the Carolina representation at the game.

The probable starting lineup for Carolina will be: Walker and Brown, ends; Thompson and McDade, tackles; Fysal and Blackwood, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarter; Nash and Magner, halves; and House, fullback.

Other Tar Heels who made the trip are: Parsley, Davis, Bridgers, Nichols, and Alexander, ends; Underwood, Hodges, Cowper, and Rose, tackles; McIver, Philpott, Newcombe and Dunavant, guards; Gilbreath, center; Wyrick and Moore, quarterbacks; Maus, Chandler, Erickson, Slusser and Daniel, halfbacks; and Houston, McCaskill, and Thompson, fullbacks.

Virginia's "A" team this week and the one which probably will start tomorrow is: Gravatt and Condon, ends; Matley and Poss, tackles; DeButts and Cameron, guards; Reiss, center; Sippley, quarter; Thomas and Myers, halves; and Bryant, fullback.

Pictured above are the Cavalier backfield stars and their coach, Gus Tebell, formerly of State College. They will be closely watched by the Tar Heels at Charlottesville tomorrow.

Tentative 1931 Carolina Grid Schedule Is Learned

Unconfirmed Rumor Reveals Maryland and V. P. I. Will Be Dropped from Schedule.

A tentative, unconfirmed 1931 Carolina football schedule was learned yesterday. It is rumored that V. P. I. and Maryland are to be dropped from next year's schedule while Vanderbilt and Florida will take the places vacated by the Old Liners and the Cadets.

The additions to the role of 1931 opponents represent the strongest teams in the South this season. Prospects at both institutions are reported to be exceedingly bright for next year, thus giving the Tar Heels an even higher hurdle to clear than this year. While Vanderbilt has not risen to the gridiron heights of the Gators, the Tennesseans have offered stern competition to Dixie's foremost aggregations

Both V. P. I. and Maryland fell before the onslaught of Carolina this season, and both proved to be equally formidable opponents. Their absence from the lists of Carolina next year will terminate an old rivalry.

Although confirmation could not be obtained, it was understood that Wake Forest, Georgia, Tennessee, Virginia, and possibly Davidson will meet the Tar Heels at Kenan stadium next year.

Five of the strongest opponents on the schedule will engage Carolina on succeeding Saturdays: Vanderbilt, Georgia, Davidson, Georgia Tech, and Tennessee.

The schedule:

Wake Forest	Chapel Hill
Florida	Gainesville
N. C. State	Raleigh
Vanderbilt	Nashville
Georgia	Chapel Hill
Davidson	Davidson
Georgia Tech	Atlanta
Tennessee	Chapel Hill
Virginia	Chapel Hill
Duke	Durham

North Carolina and Virginia meet for the thirty-fifth time tomorrow on Lambeth Field at Charlottesville in one of the South's leading Turkey Day classics. Virginia's sudden reversal of form in the Washington and Lee game recently indicates that the Cavaliers will reach the best form of the season on the morrow. Captain Hunter Motley, Virginia's crack tackle, will lead such players as Bill Thomas, one of the best backs in the South, Pug Bryant, powerful fullback, "Sip" Sippley, Pender, Beury, Churchill Dunn, DeButts, Poss, and other Virginians against Carolina. The Cavaliers have been troubled all fall by a weak forward wall. Their greatest strength lies in their backfield. Although the Charlottesville eleven has failed to check in many victories this season, they came back to topple over a supposedly stronger Washington and Lee aggregation. Virginia pointed for the Generals and they are also pointing for Carolina. It would appear on paper that the Tar Heels are an all-round superior team to Virginia, but Davidson tripped Carolina up. This loss, however, has probably taught North Carolina a dear lesson. Virginians are hungry for a victory over Carolina, and the Virginia coaches will leave no stones unturned in an effort to wrest victory from their ancient foe. Carolina's stronger line and veteran backs should give the North Carolinians their fourth straight victory over Coach Abell's boys.

Duke will find no set-up against Washington and Lee. The Deacons overworked the Devils in last Saturday's modern version of a holy war. The Generals have not had too much success this year, but this kind of team is always dangerous.

Georgia's humbled but still powerful Bulldogs go to Birmingham, Alabama, in an attempt to accomplish what the Pharoahs and, incidentally, no other team, has succeeded in doing—to cross the Red Sea.

DEACONS RISE TO MUDDLE RACE IN BIG FIVE GROUP

Unexpected "Victory" Over Duke Gives Carolina Chance To Take Crown.

The trek for the Big Five title, practically consigned to Duke university, was thrown into a muddle by the unexpected rise of Wake Forest against the Durham team Saturday. Overshadowing the Blue Devils in every department of the game, the Deacons clearly demonstrated their right to the laurels of a hard fought game which ended in a 13 to 13 tie.

The tie places the mythical title in reach of Davidson, Carolina, and Wake Forest—a possibility previously attained by only Duke. Should Wake Forest upset Davidson and Carolina turn back Duke, the Tar Heels would have a legitimate claim to the crown with one defeat and no ties. Wake Forest and Duke would then take second position, each with one defeat and one tie.

A line, touted today as one of the foremost in the state was the reason for the Duke ""downfall." Murray, Brewer, and other luminaries in the Blue Devil backfield that galloped at random through the Navy, Villanova, Kentucky, and North Carolina State on successive Saturdays, were stopped abruptly by the Demon Deacon forward wall. If Coach Billy Dehart had not taught his charges the fine points of the aerial attack, Duke could not have scored on the Baptists for many a day.

Saturday's fracas considerably lowers the prestige of the redoubtable Devils. It proved Apex and Reidsville To Meet Here Friday for State "B" Title.

The high school championship games are just around the corner, emerging from one of the most hectic elimination battles in the history of high school football in the state. Reidsville and Apex Highs have won the right to clash in Kenan stadium here Friday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock for the class "B" title of the state, and Charlotte and Raleigh meet here Saturday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock for the Class "A" title.

Georgia, sulking under her defeat at the hands of Tulane, may completely stop the march of Alabama's legions tomorrow. If Leathers, Maddox, "Catfish" Smith, McWhorters, Captain Herb Maffett, and the other linesmen can stop the charges of Cliff Suther, "Monk" Campbell, and Cain, then Georgia has a good chance of victory. Roberts, Downes, Chandler, Dickens, and the other backs, were stopped in their tracks by Tulane. Alabama's line seems to be even stronger than Tulane's first line defense. Certainly 'Bama has a big margin over Georgia in the line. The two backfields appear to be about even.

Over in the Queen City they have the annual Davidson-Wake Forest scrap. Both teams are very strong this year but the Demon Deacons appear to be the strongest. The Baptists seem to have a much better line and some mighty good backfield men. Davidson has a lighter and faster set of players which, augmented by the Old Wildcat spirit, may bring Davidson her first victory over the Deacons in eight years. But the odds are in favor of the Deacons because of their great line.

Tennessee Vols and the Kentucky Wildcats meet at Knoxville, Tennessee, in what should be one of the closest games of the season. The Vols have Captain Thayer, one of Dixie's best guards; Saunders and Atkins, tackles; Hickman, guard; Quinn Ducker, fullback; Buddy Hackman, all-southern halfback; and Bobby Dodd, a candidate for all-American honors, at quarterback. Coach Harry Gammage will stake everything on Captain "Floppy" Foquer, left guard; Williams, candidate for all-southern honors at the pivot post; Meyers, quarterback; T. Phipps, fullback; and the great halfback, "Shipwreck" Kelly.

"Dixie's Army and Navy game" is at Roanoke, Virginia, where V. P. I. meets V. M. I. The Gobblers have it all over the cadets this time, but this game is always extremely uncertain. Last year V. P. I. was doped to win, but the Flying Squadron made all the dopesters look silly and won. Nevertheless, Captain Byrd Hooper and his mates should down the Lexington cadets.

A fighting Florida eleven invades Atlanta to tackle Georgia Tech at Grant Field. Coach Bachman's 'Gators have made a fine record so far while the Golden Tornado has died down to a faint zephyr. All in all it looks like the Alligators will get revenge for their 1929 defeat by the Yellowjackets.

Down at Columbia, South Carolina, Auburn and South Carolina will have it out tomorrow. It looks like the Plainsmen will have to wait until the 1931 season before they reach "the promised land" of a southern conference grid-iron victory.

Tulane should experience little trouble in downing Russ Cohen's Louisiana State Tigers; if they do, then they will have a clean conference slate for the second year in succession. Maryland will have no trouble in beating Johns Hopkins. The Clemson-Furman game should be a close one, for the state championship hinges on it. The Tigers appear to have a better all-round team and should win.

Notre Dame meets the Army in Soldiers Field, Chicago, Saturday in one of the nation's headliners. The Ramblers, after their hard scrap with Northwestern, will have a hard time downing the West Point boys. John Price, the Cadets' powerful tackle; Wendell Bowman, quarterback; Ken Fields, fullback; and Ed Herb, fullback, will give Rockne's stars something to think about. The Army's line is conceded to be one of the strongest in the East. Notre Dame's great machine-like team, however, should ramble on to another victory.

Stanford and Dartmouth also clash Saturday at Palo Alto, California, in one of the season's big intersectional games. Both the Cardinals and the big Green Wave from the North appear to be very strong. Dartmouth has scored over 240 points this year, while Stanford has scored about 200 points. The long ride across the continent will undoubtedly tire Dartmouth. Stanford should win by a close margin because of their stronger line.

Maryland, playing her third game in eight days, will be hard pressed to beat Vanderbilt Saturday. Both teams are strong. The Commodores have the better forward wall, but the Old Liners appear to offset this advantage with the better backfield. Vandy should win, for Maryland will be tired because of so much football in such a short period of time.

Mrs. T. J. Wilson, Jr., will entertain a number of friends at a bridge luncheon today.

HECTIC BATTLES FORESEEN IN HIGH GRID ENCOUNTERS

Reidsville beat Leaksville 2-0 for the Class "B" title of the West. Apex beat Elizabeth City, 26-13, for the Eastern title. Season records show that Reidsville averaged 18 points a game in its three elimination battles with Leaksville, Mount Airy and Statesville, while holding all foes to the low sum of six points, a touchdown scored by Mount Airy. Apex averaged scoring the same 18 points in four elimination victories over Sanford, Hamlet, Lumberton and Elizabeth City, but yielded 25 points to Lumberton and Elizabeth City.

Season records of the teams to clash for the Class "A" title promise an equally interesting game. Charlotte beat a fast, hard-hitting Asheville team, 7-0, for the Western title, and has a conference record of four wins, no losses, and one tie, a 0-0 affair with Winston-Salem. Raleigh, Class "A" champions of the East, had five victories and no ties for a perfect record until their last game last week, when the Wilson cellarites pulled an upset and held them to 0-0.

conclusively that spirit and will, coupled with good football, can beat Duke. End to end, tackle to tackle, and guard to guard, the little Baptist team matched the Methodists in every department of the game. Mills, Quillen, Benton, and Levine stood out in the Wake Forest aggregation.

DAILY UNDERGOES STIFF SHAKE-UP

Twenty-One Suspended and Three Dropped for Non-Attendance at Meeting.

The staff of the Daily Tar Heel experienced a surprise shake-up yesterday afternoon following a called meeting at three-fifteen, when six editors and fifteen reporters were temporarily suspended from their work on the publication. Three reporters were dropped from the staff permanently. All members of the staff who failed to attend yesterday's meeting were automatically suspended together with all who missed two consecutive weekly meetings of the paper.

Bob Madry has been secured to be the speaker at the regular meeting of the staff next Sunday night December seventh, at seven-twenty in room 104, Alumni building. The managing-editor states that no one will be excused from this meeting next Sunday due to the fact that it will be the last meeting this quarter. On Sunday, January eleven, the first staff meeting of the winter quarter, a chance will be given for new reporters to get on the staff.

Eleven more issues of the paper will be published before the close of this quarter, the managing-editor stated yesterday.

The following men are requested to meet with Jack Dungan this afternoon in the Tar Heel office at one-thirty p. m.: E. C. Daniel, J. C. Williams, W. M. McKee, Beverly Moore, Ed Yarborough, Virginia Douglas, W. A. Allsbrook, A. Alston, Alex Andrews, Bob Betts, McBride Fleming-Jones, Wm. Farmer, Phil Liskin, E. R. Oettinger, L. L. BRADSHAW TALKS TO FRESHMEN AT CHAPEL MEETING

Advises Them Against Staying Up Too Late at Night Studying for Examinations.

Dean F. F. Bradshaw in addressing the freshman chapel group yesterday told them to guard against staying up late at nights in studying for the quarterly examinations. He warned the students that after studying all night they would probably know less about the subject than if they had not studied at all. He ventured that a review of past work would help to keep the subjects fresh in their minds, and suggested that the work of the last two months be divided into fourteen groups so that students might study one of these groups each night until the examinations.

Dean Bradshaw told the group some of his own experiences in studying for examinations and advised the students to keep themselves physically fit during the examination periods.

Business Staff

There will be an important meeting of the Tar Heel business staff at 8:30 tonight in the basement of the Alumni building. All new men interested in advertising are urged to attend.

At a luncheon after the initiation each of the new members made brief addresses. Joe Carruthers, student president of the Duke circle, presided. One of the Duke faculty members, Dr. Frank C. Brown, an officer of the national organization, also spoke.

ENGINEERS MEET IN SHORT SESSION

Mechanical Group Appoints Committees and Moves to Buy Famous Portraits.

More than forty members attended the business meeting of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers last Tuesday evening. The business session was conducted in 206 Phillips hall, and after its conclusion refreshments were served in the mechanical engineering laboratory.

After the reading of the minutes and the treasurer's report, chairman R. C. Plummer appointed the following men to serve on the program committee for this year: R. K. Cowhig, J. S. Adams, R. I. Burnett, Aubrey Parsley, and R. C. Plummer, chairman ex officio.

Another committee was appointed to select a number of famous engineers, whose pictures are to be purchased by the chapter. The committee was instructed to prepare a short biographical sketch of each engineer chosen, to be read before the chapter previous to the purchase of the portraits. This committee included Professor E. G. Hoefer, chairman, Professor N. P. Bailey, J. Allan McLean, and D. Allen Harold. This committee will meet with Professor Hoefer in his office this afternoon at four o'clock.

Honorary Chairman E. G. Hoefer made a short talk on the awards open to A. S. M. E. student branch members this year. Professor Bailey joined him in urging that a large number of students compete for these awards.

The meeting was adjourned after discussion of minor matters.

SHORT SESSION ON SENATE'S PROGRAM

Due to the scheduling of the Mary D. Wright debate at 7:15 tonight, the meeting of the Di Senate will last only fifteen minutes, beginning promptly at 7 o'clock. Important business, including arrangements for the banquet, will be discussed, and all active members are urged by the president to be present to receive cards for the banquet. LAW GROUP LAYS FOUNDATIONS FOR NEW STATE CRIMINAL CODE

University Criminal Law Professor and Some Younger Members of North Carolina Bar Cooperate on Draft to Be Submitted to 1931 or 1933 Legislature.

By Albert Coates
(Professor of Criminal Law and Procedure in the Law School of the University of North Carolina.)

The gradual development of procedural rules in criminal cases in North Carolina is recorded (1) in statutes scattered through the Session Laws from 1915 to 1929, (2) in decisions scattered through the Reports from Volume 1 in 1797 to Volume 199 now in the press, (3) in the practices of courts and officials which have not found their way into printed pages, but which reflect no less the habitual processes of the law.

From time to time digests have been made of the decisions: by Iredell in 1839, Jones in 1854, Battle in 1866, Buzbee in 1880, Walser in 1899, Michie in 1916. From time to time compilations have been made of statutory changes, with the judicial constructions placed upon them: The Revised Statutes in 1837, the Revised Code in 1854, Battles Revisal in 1873, The Code in 1883, Pells Revisal in 1905, Jerome's Criminal Code and Digest in 1916, The Consolidated Statutes in 1918, The North Carolina Code in 1927. The decisions represent the traditional common law as it has continued into the life of our time. The statutes represent merely patch-work changes in the common law made in scattered moments to meet obvious evils as they raised their heads. No comprehensive study of these decisions, these statutes, and their relation to each other or to the unwritten practices of administrative officers, has yet been carried through. In short, no critical analysis of the theory and the practice of our criminal procedure has yet been made.

In 1848 the Field Code of Civil Procedure was completed. It furnished the basis for a complete codification and revision of civil procedure in North Carolina in 1868. In the spring of 1929 the American Law Institute completed its Model Code of Criminal Procedure. It is based upon an intensive study of the procedural systems in the different states of the union and the leading countries of the world, by a group of distinguished law teachers, judges and practitioners. It furnishes the basis for a complete codification and revision of criminal procedure in North Carolina today.

Plan of Procedure

This work has been undertaken by the teacher of Criminal Law and Procedure in the Law School of the University of North Carolina, together with a number of the younger members of the North Carolina Bar living in different parts of the state. Each lawyer is (1) studying one or more chapters of the Model Code in terms of its common law and statutory background, (2) tracing the North Carolina law bearing upon it as it has developed through our statutes and decisions from Colonial days to the present, and (3) comparing its present status in detail with the provisions of the Model Code so as to indicate the similiarities and differences between them.

As the first draft of each chapter is completed it will be rotated among the lawyers who have been working on the other chapters and then rewritten in the light of the criticisms of all who are associated in the work and the greater grasp derived from a study of the Code as a whole. As each chapter is rewritten it will be circulated among the Judges and Prosecuting attorneys of the Supreme, Superior and Intermediate Courts for the invaluable criticisms and suggestions which can come from men daily engaged in the administration of

CHRISTMAS SEAL DRIVE CONTINUES

Jack Ward and Friendship Council in Charge of Sale of Seals on Campus.

The annual Christmas seal sale sponsored by the National Tuberculosis League has begun in Chapel Hill. Each year this society sells Christmas seals in order to get funds with which to combat tuberculosis. The society provides food and camps for tubercular children and in many other ways renders a great service in fighting the disease.

House-to-house canvassing started yesterday, continues today, and will finish tomorrow. Mrs. M. S. Breckenridge, Mrs. G. B. Logan, and Mrs. H. D. Carter entertained the canvassers at a luncheon on November 28. Mrs. Breckenridge, chairman of the Chapel Hill Tuberculosis Committee, spoke of the unusual demands likely to be made this year to carry on preventative health work.

Jack Ward has charge of the sale of the Christmas health seals in the fraternities. Students appointed by the freshman Friendship Council are responsible for canvassing of the dormitories.

MANY STUDENTS USE LOAN FUNDS

Dean Bradshaw Requests Early Applications for Next Quarter's Loans.

As financial depression continues to make both credit and employment difficult, the University loan funds, managed by the office of F. F. Bradshaw, dean of students, are in great demand. Many students who have borrowed to remain in college this quarter are having to continue borrowing in order to complete the year.

Other students who were able to arrange for the fall quarter without a University loan find it necessary to apply for such help as they make their plans for the winter quarter. Dean Bradshaw urges that all students who plan to request loan fund assistance for the winter and spring quarters notify his office as soon as possible.

Juniors and seniors, who will register before going home, will need to take such steps immediately since fees are collected at the time of registration as was the case this fall. Loan application may be made at any time between the hours of nine and five in 205 South.

AUSTRALIAN DEAN WILL LECTURE ON SOCIAL POLICIES

On Thursday night at 7:30 o'clock in the auditorium in Bingham hall (103) Dr. R. C. Mills, dean of the faculty of economics in the University of Sydney, Australia, will lecture on Australian economic and social resources. In particular, after a brief description of the economic resources, the people and the government of Australia, Professor Mills will examine the ideas underlying Australian social (or socialistic) policies and show how successful they have been in practice.

GUSTAVE BRAUNE SUCCUMBS HERE

Dean of Engineering School Dies of Pneumonia Following Brief Illness.

Gustave M. Braune, dean of the school of engineering succumbed to an attack of pneumonia, at six o'clock last Wednesday evening. The late Mr. Braune accomplished a great deal in raising the University's engineering school to the rank of one of the most prominent in the country, and was also active in research in engineering fields.

The community was shocked by the suddenness of the Dean's demise. He had been about the village apparently healthy Saturday before his death but a cold with which he was seized Sunday developed into pneumonia and proved fatal. So quickly did the disease reach its conclusion that few of his friends and associates even knew that he was ill until they heard of his death.

Mr. Braune was born in Eutaw, Alabama, fifty-eight years ago. After his graduation from Spring Hill College, Mobile, he attended the Royal Polytechnic Institute in Dresden, Germany, and completed the course leading to the degree of civil engineer. From 1897 to 1903 he was engineer for the Southern Bridge company in Birmingham, and thereafter was for several years, connected with construction enterprises as designer and consultant. At one time he was a member of the engineering staff of the New York barge canal.

Dean Braune's first venture as a teacher was made when he joined the faculty of the University of Cincinnati in 1912. He had become head of the engineering department there when he accepted the position at the University in 1921. In the next year he was appointed dean and organized the engineering school. One of the innovations which he favored was the system whereby the students spent part of their time away from the University at work for transportation, manufacturing, construction, and power companies.

In research, his best known achievements were concerned with the determination of earth pressures on culverts. Some of his experiments were conducted in cooperation with the North Carolina highway commission. He contributed frequently to engineering journals, and for three years he was a director of the American Society of Civil Engineers.

Mr. Braune was a member of

Smoker Week

Attendance at class smokers has been poor in the past. This is attributed to the hasty and haphazard manner of giving them. One class officer is usually selected to make all arrangements, and the remainder of the class is left in ignorance of the time and hour of the event until a few hours before the smoker.

The organization of the University eliminates all unifying elements except smokers and the University itself. It is well to consider ourselves University men, but we should also think of ourselves as being members of certain classes. Class consciousness and class organization is practically dead here. To promote the growth of class consciousness it is necessary that effective means of bringing the members together be employed.

Smoker Week has been suggested as the means of creating class unity and class consciousness. An effort will be made this week to introduce Smoker Week. Freshman, Sophomore and Junior Classes will hold smokers on succeeding nights of the week. If supported properly the plan will prove successful and will eventually elevate class smokers to a position of importance in the routine of student life. The significance of the smokers will become apparent once proper effort is made to increase their attendance. We suggest that the class officers discuss the plan of Smoker Week and that they give it a try for one week next quarter.

White Men's Burdens

There are people in this world who have been destined from all eternity to be hewers of wood and drawers of water. They will always do day by day manual labor. They will always lead a hand to mouth existence. They can't help it. Call it fate or anything you like. It's fact—and the particular breed of dog.

These people must work every day in the year if they are to eat every day in the year, because they are simply incapable of earning wages that will give them any time off. It's just a part of the general scheme. Some guardian angel may see them safely through a week's illness. But such a calamity as tuberculosis is another matter entirely. We, men with white or at least whiter collars, (perhaps through no particular merit of our own) are expected to assume the responsibilities that go with extra privileges, and to support the rest of the world, if necessary. And the best means we know of helping one part of the world that can't help itself is by buying tuberculosis seals.

OPEN FORUM

NEW HONORARY DEGREE

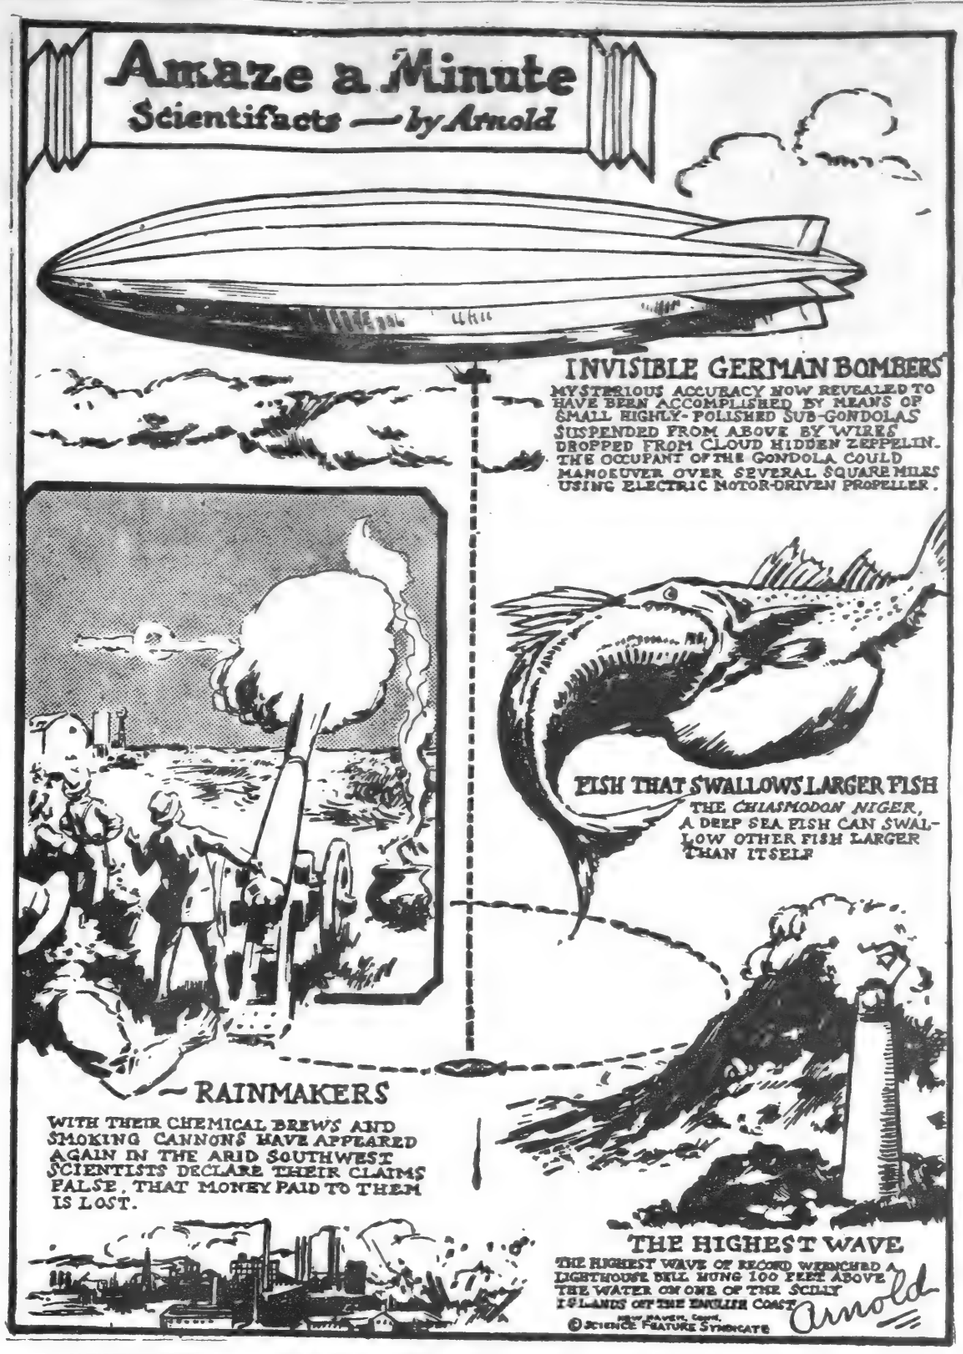
Thanksgiving Day was bitterly cold, and yet nearly 5,000 of the alumni of the University of North Carolina journeyed to Charlottesville, Va., to see the football game, and four times as many Virginians did likewise. Why? If was a foregone conclusion that Carolina would win. The answer is, as to the alumni, college loyalty. They were willing to sit in the chilly air to prove their devotion to "their dear old mother."

The Richmond News-Leader thinks they should be rewarded by alma mater with some mark of distinction. It says that the endurance of Virginians was tested last Thursday, when many traveled 200 miles through a biting wind, shouted themselves hoarse in a chilling wind, and saw their favorite team hopelessly walloped. How should a university honor such loyalty? The Richmond paper says: "The least the school can do is to confer the degree of 'D. N. F.'—darn near frozen."

Engineers To Meet

The Student Chapter of the American Institute of Chemical Engineers will meet this evening at 7:15 in room 206 (the main lecture room) Venable hall.

Frank Thomas, a senior, will give an illustrated lecture on "The Use and Construction of Dopp Kettles and Their Function as Heat Interchangers." This deals with a different phase of chemical engineering from any this year, that of equipment construction.



All chemical engineering students are requested to be present at this meeting. There will be further discussion of the proposed inspection trip which was favored at the last meeting. This trip will be conducted during the spring holidays.

Talkie In French Is Unique Attraction

A unique feature of motion picture entertainment will be provided for theatre-goers Wednesday night when an all-French talkie version of "The Big Pond," recent screen success, starring Maurice Chevalier and Claudette Colbert, both natives of France, will be shown at the Carolina theatre following the last show of that day. The picture is a novelty to American audiences only in the introduction of French dialogue; in all other respects the attraction is exactly as was the original vitaphone production when the conversation was in English.

Manager Smith of the Carolina announces this innovation as a sort of experiment. He says it should prove popular especially with those members of the faculty and student body who are students of French. If this initial experiment proves a success, it is the intention of the management to continue the policy of providing productions of this type, not only pictures made in America with some alien tongue substituted in the spoken lines, but also foreign productions, motion pictures that have been conceived and produced in France, Italy, and Germany and containing casts of foreign stars.

"The Big Pond" will start at 11:50, following closely upon the last showing of Wednesday's feature attraction. If the attendance is too large for this single performance, the picture will be held over to the following night at the same time when it will be screened for a second time.

RARE PAPER OBTAINED BY CHAPEL HILL MAN

A few days ago Rev. A. S. Lawrence returned from Jackson, Mississippi, where he attended the Provincial Synod. He brought back with him one of the issues of a hand-published paper published by Louis Sutton, Jr., grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Francis P. Venable of this city.

Consisting of six pages, five by seven inches, the paper was first printed on the typewriter, but due to the constant demand for more copies, it was published by means of a device known as the hectograph.

KENNEDY TO PLAY VESPER CONCERT

Professor Nelson O. Kennedy, of the music department, will give the first vesper concert next Sunday afternoon at 4:45 in the music auditorium. The main feature will be the complete suite of Handel. It is called the Water Music suite, and it was written as a special commission by Handel, when he was court musician of England. A number of novelties and lighter numbers will be presented also.

The programs will carry complete notes, so that an uninformed person will be enabled to get the maximum of enjoyment from the music. No effort will be made to force appreciation in any way. The Universities of Michigan, Iowa, Illinois, and others present such programs each week for the benefit of the students. The number of programs to be given at Carolina will be determined by the response. All programs will be limited to 50 minutes. There will be no other organ concert in 1930. Not only the vespers concerts, but recitals by guest artists will be open to everybody, as no admission will be charged in any case.

Saturday night from nine until twelve will be held the third Grail dance of the fall quarter. The "Carolina Tar Heels" orchestra will play for the occasion. The usual rules regarding such functions will be in effect, and only a hundred and fifty stag tickets will be sold. Tar Heel Picks Lipscomb For All-Southern

DALRYMPLE AND MAFFETT NAMED FOR END POSTS

Bobby Dodd, Ripper Roberts, Buddy Hackmann and Jock Suther in Backfield.

ALABAMA GETS TACKLES

Freddie Sington and Captain Clements Play Stellar Football All Season.

By K. C. Ramsay

The Daily Tar Heel adds its choice for an all-Southern football team to the staggeringly large number of selections which have been published or will be announced within the next week. In selecting this eleven we have talked with several of the leading coaches, sports writers and former gridiron stars, and have considered the group both from the standpoint of individual ability and the showing of the team on which they play.

Alabama placed three men on the Tar Heel's selection as does Georgia. Tennessee comes next with two. North Carolina, Tulane and Kentucky each place one.

Lipscomb for Center

The Tar Heels' Ned Lipscomb is our choice for the pivot position. Ned is a very consistent and dependable center both on offense and defense, and is thoroughly schooled in the roving Notre Dame style of play. He has the coveted ability of sizing up opponents' plays readily, and is quite adept at snapping the ball accurately, being able to shoot them back seams up for punting, and seams down for passing. He has been the backbone of an inexperienced Tar Heel line all this season. Preacher Roberts of Tulane is an able pivot man, and is outstanding for the second team berth. He is playing in a line that is noted for its defensive strength. The Green forward wall has kept the driving Georgia backs and other great ball carriers from pushing across scores this season.

Captain "Floppy" Forquer of Kentucky and Leathers of Georgia are our choices for the guard positions. Forquer has been a big gun in the Kentucky line all season, being strong on defense and skilled at pulling out for interference on offense. Coach Harry Mehre's success at Georgia this year is due largely to the stellar play of his guards, and particularly to the play of Leathers. He is an excellent interference man and quite often is seen to charge through on defense to halt the opponents backs before they can get in motion. Steele of Florida and Boedenger of Tulane are our choices for the second team guards, but there is little to choose from between this pair and Captain Thayer of Tennessee and Maddox of Georgia.

Sington and Clements

It has often been said that a team is as strong as its tackles, and the University of Alabama is a very strong team. Captain "Foots" Clements and "All-American" Freddie Sington are our idea of a pair of stellar tackles. This pair together has succeeded in keeping the Crimson goal well guarded, opponents

Hardwood Squad Ends Fundamental Training and Settles Down to Hard Work.

After four weeks of calisthenics and drill in the fundamentals, the varsity basketball squad is settling down to work in preparation for a hard schedule. Coach Ashmore has been putting a squad of thirty men through intensive preliminary training that will fit in with the somewhat different style of play that Ashmore intends to use this season.

At the end of the first week of scrimmage the squad is starting to take on polish. Various combinations are being tried out with many changes and substitutions in the scrub line-ups. The chosen ones for the first string line-up are: Hines and Cleland, forwards; Dameron, center; and Marpet and Edwards guards. All

With the intramural boxing tournament scheduled for December 10, twenty-three men from the varsity and freshman boxing squads have entered and have begun their workouts. Among these men are two defending champions, Dale Holderness and Cal Todd, as well as several dangerous scrappers who hope to wrest the titles in the heavy and middleweight classes.

The lightweight class with eight candidates leads the field and promises some exciting competition when such men as Bruce Langdon, Cliff Baucom, and Digby Wardlaw meet. Shuford, the defending champion in this weight, has not entered the tournament as yet, thus leaving

FRESHMEN WILL PLAY KISKI TEAM

Post-Season Game with Famous Prep School Eleven Scheduled for Friday.

The University of North Carolina freshman football team is busy this week preparing for a post-season game here Friday afternoon in Kenan Stadium with the famous Kiski prep eleven of Kiskiminetas School, Pennsylvania.

The contest is not considered a scheduled game for the Carolina freshmen, for they closed the regular schedule with a 45-0 victory over the Virginia freshmen here Nov. 22. The Kiski eleven is coming to North Carolina primarily to see the Carolina-Duke game here Saturday afternoon and the game with the Tar Babies was arranged.

Kiski is considered the Notre Dame of scholastic football, defeating among other teams during the past season the Army Plebes. The West Point account of the game said, "It was the first time this year the Plebes have been outweighed."

Most of the Kiski players go to Northern Schools, but John Jankoski, former Duke star, and Barclay, star Carolina freshman guard, both played football there. Coach Jimmy DeHart of Duke is another product of the school.

TAR HEEL TEAM PREPARING FOR GAME WITH DUKE

Settle Down to Hard Work for Championship Game After Three-Day Recess.

FUNDAMENTALS STRESSED

Linemen Get More Drills in Blocking; Collins Fears Overconfidence.

After a recess from practice since defeating Virginia 41-0 at Charlottesville Thanksgiving, the Tar Heel football team settled down to work preparing for the state championship deciding game with Duke here Saturday. The afternoon was taken up with limbering up exercises, punting drills and blocking practice for the linemen. Heavy work preparing for the game will be underway this afternoon.

The drills on fundamentals which took up so much of the time preparing for the Cavaliers probably will be emphasized a great deal this week, and continued work on the offensive tactics doubtless will keep them busy also.

Coach Collins seems pleased with the way in which the Tar Heels executed their offense against Virginia, but fears that the one-sided score may tend to give the team overconfidence. He cautioned them that any such spirit about the coming game with Duke will prove disastrous, and reminded them that the Blue Devils have been pointing for the Carolina game all this season, and that they will be fighting even harder since Wake Forest has tied them, and Washington and Lee held them to a close score.

The squad is in excellent shape as preparations for the game get underway, only bruises and minor injuries having been sustained in the Virginia game. June Underwood was out yesterday with his hand unbandaged for the first time since it was injured in the Georgia Tech game.

KYSER TO LEAD S. M. U. CHEERS

Kay Kyser, prominent orchestra conductor and graduate of Carolina will serve as head cheer leader for Southern Methodist University in Saturday's game with Texas Christian, dispatches from Dallas, Texas, state. Kyser is known to Carolina fans as the leader of the famous Cheerios, student cheering organization of several years ago. It is understood that the former Tar Heel cheer leader has led cheering sections at Pitt, Carnegie Tech, and N. Y. U. in similiar demonstrations during the 1930 football season.

DALRYMPLE AND MAFFETT NAMED FOR END POSTS

having scored only thirteen points on them this season. Muddy Waters of Florida and Vance Maree of Georgia Tech have shone this season also, and are deserving of the second team tackle posts.

The ends are Dalrymple of Tulane and Captain Herb Maffett of Georgia. The south this season has some of the finest ends that have ever played on any gridiron and at least two pairs of star ends could be well selected from Southern teams. Dalrymple has been outstanding on Tulane's 1929 and 1930 undefeated in the conference teams. He blocks well, covers his territory on defense and is an able pass receiver. The same can be said of Maffett. Maffett has proven himself to be one of the steadiest ends in the nation, and very little yardage is ever gained around his flank. For second team we prefer Schwartz, Vandy and Smith, Georgia.

Dodd Great General

Selecting an All-Southern quarterback was not very difficult with last year's All-Southern field general back on the gridiron performing better than ever. Bobby Dodd is one of the greatest quarterbacks in American football, and ranks alongside Rockne's Carideo. He is adept at booting the ball for 45 to 60 yard punts, passes unusually accurately, and can run when he chooses to call on himself. His success is due largely to the calm and cool way in which he manages the Vols in tight places. Austin Downes of Georgia is skilled at passing, running and has lead the Bulldogs to victories over some of the country's leading teams. He is our choice for the second team berth. Campbell of Alabama, Spicer of Kentucky, Welch of Clemson, and our own Johnny Branch are other field generals who push Downes for the second team position.

"Jack the Ripper" Roberts of Georgia is one of the hardest driving fullbacks in the country, and has been consistent throughout the entire season at gaining ground for the Bulldogs. He is our choice for first team, but "Hurri" Cain of Alabama trails him only slightly for the second team berth. Cain is one of the big reasons for the marked success of the Crimson Tide this season.

Many Star Halfbacks

Selecting two halfbacks from the great array of talent in the South this year is a difficult task. Almost all of the teams in the first division of the conference have their star ball carriers. We have narrowed the group down to Jock Suther of Alabama and Buddy Hackmann of Tennessee. Suther has gained well over 600 yards this season, and is equally skilled at sweeping end runs, line smashes, pass receiving, broken field runs, and at blocking for his fellow backs to take their turn with the ball. Dodd to Hackmann has been one of the reasons why Tennessee has had a successful season without McEver, Brandt, Hug and other stars who have been injured. Buddy Hackmann has raced over the Southern gridiron this year both by taking 'em out of the air, and by taking them from the Vols' center for rushing plays. Bill Murray of Duke and Red Bethea of Florida are our choices for the second team places.

BASKETEERS END INITIAL DRILLING

are veterans except Hines, who took the spotlight in frosh basketball last year. Hines has been hitting the hoop regularly and his defensive work has improved considerably.

The only real competition that Dameron is getting at center is from Smith. Hendlin, Markham, and Longest are doing considerable work at forward. Slater, Kendall, Lineberger, and Cohen are the guards that have showed up the best to date. Alexander, Marpet's running mate of last year, will not be released from gridiron duties for another week.

In the scrimmage last week, Ashmore worked his varsity against various combinations from the rest of his squad. The varsity scored plenty and held down the scrubs well enough but the play wasn't as smooth as might be expected. The passing was ragged and the teams were missing hanger shots. Dameron was feeding the ball to the forwards and Marpet from the foul line. Hirsh and Moore, forwards, who worked against the varsity handled the ball well and turned in some nice basketball. Longest was dropping them but showed a tendency to give the ball away on bad passes. Brooker turned in a nice game with the first string, working with the varsity at forward. Built light, he cuts fast and covers a great deal of the court.

Ashmore states that his outfit is in good shape now and is off to a good start.

criminal law. The results will then be placed in the hands of every interested lawyer in the state for further criticism, and finally presented to the Legislature for adoption.

Object of the Revision

In this way we hope to arrive at an accurate statement of the law and practice of criminal procedure in North Carolina—what it is, how it came to be what it is, and how it is working today; what is in the lines of statute and decision, and the tendencies, trends and directions which lie between the lines. Through focusing on our criminal procedural problem the different viewpoints of different men from different sections with different practices, this generation of lawyers can build into North Carolina's legal traditions new attitudes and new values worthy of the high tradition of the North Carolina Bar. Through this sifting process will come, we hope, a codification and a revision of our criminal procedure, eliminating technicalities where they exist, clarifying vaguenesses where they confuse, stimulating the law in its slow and often belated response to the ever quickening tempo and rhythm of our life.

The first drafts of the chapters dealing with (1) Arrests, (2) Methods of Prosecution, (3) Grand Jury, (4) Indictment and Information, (5) Arraignment, (6) Jurisdiction and Venue, (7) Change of Judge and Removal of Cause, (8) Waiver of Jury Trial, (9) Presence of Defendant, (10) Proceedings to Determine Mental Condition of Defendant, (11) Conduct of Jury after Cause Finally Submitted and Verdict, have been completed and are now ready for circulation. Substantial progress has been made on all the other chapters. It is estimated that the final draft of the Code as a whole will be practically completed during the spring and summer of the coming year and be ready for legislative consideration in 1933. Parts of it may be presented to the Legislature in 1931.

Three Conferences Held

Three conferences have been thus far held in Chapel Hill to initiate this work and to discuss results as they have been achieved. The first of these conferences was held in August 1929. Among those attending were Justices George W. Connor and Willis J. Brogden of the Supreme Court of North Carolina; the Attorney General of North Carolina, Dennis G. Brummitt; and the Assistant Attorney General, Frank Nash; Judge W. C. Harris of the Superior Court; Judges James R. Patton, Lewis Teague, Daniel L. Bell, Henry L. Stevens, Jr., of the Durham, High Point, Pittsboro and Duplin County Courts, respectively; T. A. McNeill, Jr., of Lumberton; and F. Donald Phillips, of Rockingham, Solicitors of the Ninth and Thirteenth Judicial Districts, respectively; Thomas Turner, Jr., of the High Point Bar and Hill Yarborough of the Louisburg Bar.

The second of these conferences was held on September 26 and 27 1930, and was attended, among others, by Daniel L. Bell, Pittsboro; Henry Bane and Sigmond Meyer of Durham; John C. Busby, of Salisbury; Algernon Butler of Clinton, Hugh Dortch of Goldsboro, Robert H. Frazier of Greensboro, Dillard S. Gardner of Marion, Ballard S. Gay of Jackson, Luther T. Hartsell, Jr., of Concord, Charles F. Rouse of Kinston, Richmond Tucker of Winston-Salem, Miss Susie Marshall Sharpe of Reidsville, and Hill Yarborough of Louisburg.

Many Engaged In This Plan

The third of these conferences was held on October 31 and November 1, 1930, and was attended, among others, by Frank M. Armstrong of Troy, John C. Busby of Salisbury, William E. Comer of Boone, W. Ney Evans of High Point, Robert H. Frazier of Greensboro, J. Y. Jordan Jr., of Asheville, Forrest G. Miles of Winston-Salem, Henry T. Powell of Henderson, E. K. Proctor of Whiteville, George Rountree, Jr., of Wilmington, Ludlow Rogers of Durham, Thomas S. Rollins, Jr., of Asheville, Neill McK. Salmon of Lillington, W. Tolman Shaw and Carroll Weathers of Raleigh.

David C. Sinclaire, Wilmington, and Frank S. Spruill, Jr., Rocky Mount.

Others actively working on specific topics of the Code are: J. O. Atkinson, Jr., E. D. Kuykendall, George C. Hampton, Jr., Edwin W. Pearce and E. Earle Rives of the Greensboro Bar; Moore Bryson and J. Frazier Glenn, Jr., Asheville; J. G. Edwards, Jonesboro; L. J. Giles, Chapel Hill; E. A. Humphrey, Jr., Goldsboro; Charles R. Jones, Lincolnton; Oscar Leach, Raleigh; R. A. Merritt, Greensboro; William H. Murdock, Durham; and James R. Patton, Durham; H. G. Parker, Monroe; A. L. Purrington, Jr., Raleigh; Edward Scheidt, Chapel Hill; T. A. Uzzell, Jr., Greensboro; J. A. Williams, Hendersonville; J. N. Wright, Shelby; Oliver Rand, Wilson.

Work of Pioneers

This work will, of course, have to stand on its merits. It will be time enough to assess its value when it is done. In the meantime, however, it may be said and in appreciation of the efforts of the men who are associated together in this work—the younger members of the bar who are finding the time in their struggles to make a living out of the practice of the law to do without pay the long and toilsome work of pioneers in laying the foundations of a new criminal code; the older members of the bar who as Judges and Prosecuting Attorneys of the Supreme, Superior and Intermediate Courts and as practitioners at the bar have already taken out time from their work to discuss and advise on the problems which are so frequently encountered as the work proceeds and who willingly offer to take out more time yet—the efforts of these men, it may be fairly said, are in this moment significant facts in the history of the North Carolina Bar.

MADRY WRITES ON NEWS CENSORSHIP

News Bureau Head Is Author of Article In "The Epsilog," College Publishers' Magazine.

"In their effort to suppress the unfavorable news stories that originate on their campi, a great many educational institutions are injuring their relations with the public and press," comments Robert W. Madry, director of the University news bureau, in an article published recently in The Epsilog, college publishers' magazine.

In this article, Madry points out the attitude of the news bureau on the subject of suppressing news. The policy of the University's news service, he says, is absolute non-censorship of the press, because of the fact that news suppressed will leak out and do more harm in the form of rumors and that a story suppressed will be played up more by the press when finally, published.

"And yet there are correspondents in some educational institutions throughout the country trying to suppress news day in and day out. Of course most of their efforts are futile, for real news gets to the newspapers by one method or another. And if it is not sent out straight at first, it is frequently badly garbled in transmission. Usually one paper gets the story first. The others are x 'scooped.' You know the rest. Such a correspondent doesn't last long in the confidence of the news editor, Madry goes on to say.

The news bureau director speaks from six years' experience with the University when he says: "What part the news service has played in the tremendous growth of the institution is a matter for speculation,

Bradshaw Collects Data on Freshmen

To secure direct facts for general information and for his talk Friday night before the assembled alumni in regard to personal service rendered to the individual student here, Dean F. F. Bradshaw asked each freshman in chapel yesterday morning to fill out an anonymous card giving specific instances in his college career that advice had been given him, stating by whom, when given, and how many times given. All information and advice that had been received in regard to loan funds, religious affairs, self-help work, fraternity matters, vocations, courses, how to study, health, or miscellaneous affairs were to be included.

Mr. Bradshaw also continued to stress the importance of avoiding procrastination in applying for loans or self-help work during the next quarter.

Dawson and Gooch Open New Restaurant

Scarcely had the news of the closing of Tom Gooch's cafe appeared before his son, C. E. Gooch and his son-in-law, M. Dawson, decided that it would not do for the town of Chapel Hill to be without a Gooch owned and operated restaurant, and so they took over control of the former Anilorac Cafe. Both of these men are experienced in cafeteria work; Gooch worked as general manager of his father's cafe, while Dawson also occupied a position in the employ of Tom Gooch.

Freshman Council Urged To Maintain High Moral Level

The freshman friendship council held a brief but interesting meeting Monday night. John Lang, president of the State Federation of Students, gave a short talk to the members on the subject of Carolina ideals. He urged that those present should inspire others by their actions to uphold the Carolina tradition of gentlemanly conduct at all times, but especially at the coming football event this Saturday.

"To carry out the tradition of upright character, clean sportsmanship, and to give a square deal to his opponents is the privilege, as well as the duty, of every Carolina man," Lang said. In closing he stated that if each man acted the part of a gentleman, nothing would occur to the discredit of the school.

In inaugurating the sale of Christmas seals on the campus, Ed Lanier pointed out the true worth of the cause. In his talk he showed the need of helping all those thousands who are making the greatest fight of all in their struggle against tuberculosis.

The main speaker of the evening was Reverend A. S. Lawrence of the Chapel Hill Episcopal church. In an inspiring message he urged that in the college democracy a highest-common-denominator should be established instead of a lower one. It is the tendency, when in a crowd, to lower the moral tone of the gatherings instead of raising it. This, he said, should be remedied by reducing the popular tendency to be alike in morals and ideals, as well as in thought and speech. He showed that the very best type of democracy is one in which each man contributes his best and thus raises the whole to a higher plane.

It was unanimously voted that President Frank Graham should be invited to meet with the council in its next meeting.

Y CABINETS MEET IN JOINT SESSION

The sophomore, junior, and senior Y cabinets convened in a joint session Monday night. After some especial business matters had been discussed, a letter from George H. Lawrence, Orange County superintendent of public welfare, was read as a report on the recent relief fund drive. It was announced that this drive would be followed up by an old-clothes collection to be made before Christmas.

The Detroit faculty-student conference, to be held in December, was discussed with the possibility in view of sending a quota of ten men as representatives. No definite decision was made about the matter.

A report by Sam Gorham, chairman of the student volunteer group on the campus, was heard concerning the recent group meeting. Plans were made for the meeting this winter.

The program was concluded with a talk by Beverly Moore on "Social Problems in North Carolina." He mentioned some of the most pertinent ones and told of the methods being employed by the North Carolina Conference on Social Service to alleviate these conditions.

Bazaar Friday

A bazaar will be held Friday afternoon at three o'clock in the Presbyterian church. Tea will be served and a large assortment of Christmas gifts will be on sale.

Student Radio Station Will Celebrate Tenth Anniversary

On the first floor of Phillips hall there exists under the direction of the engineering department an amateur radio station which plays an interesting part in the life of the school. The station is named W4WE and has been in existence since 1921. The name was assigned by the government when a license was obtained for the station. The tenth anniversary of the founding of the institution will take place shortly.

There is no radio department in the University, so the operators have to obtain their experience outside of school. The station is under the direction of Professor J. E. Lear, head of the electrical engineering department. However, active control is given the operator in charge of the station.

Records of messages being transmitted have been kept since 1925. G. M. Rose and T. B. Smiley did a great deal to build the equipment for the station and were largely responsible for bringing the station to its present high standard of efficiency. They were at Chapel Hill until the summer of 1928. At present four or five men are licensed to operate the station.

Station W4WE operates in all amateur bands. It has conducted two-way communications with stations in all parts of the world. Some of the most interesting countries with which it has communicated are: Alaska, Mexico, Nicaragua, Brazil, Bolivia, Argentina, Tasmania, New Zealand, Hawaii, Poland, Germany, France, England, Jugo Slavia, Rhodesia, Palestine, and Cameroon. W4WE was in communication with the McMillan Artic and the Byrd Antartic expeditions. As is the case with nearly every amateur station, the local station is a member of the American Radio Relay League. The members of this league transmit messages sent from any station and thus furnish a valuable means of communication especially in emergencies.

Amateur operators have played an important part in the development of radio, especially in developing the field of short wave transmission. They were especially commended for their work during the recent world war and have been active in aiding the navy and army in times of peace. There are at present about twenty thousand amateur operators in this country. They have proved very valuable in communicating with sections of the country which due to emergencies have been cut off from the rest of the world.

The local station is the only means students have of studying radio in Chapel Hill. Since only licensed operators can handle the apparatus, the number of students able to work with the station is greatly restricted. However, the present staff is surprisingly large and is capable of handling all work available in Chapel Hill.

Post Office Issues Annual 'Mail Early' Christmas Message

If Thanksgiving has past, can Christmas be far behind? Many, as usual, have not realized how soon Christmas will be here, and have made no preparations for the holiday. The post office took the opportunity to tell the students and townspeople its annual story, "Mail early."

All parcels must be securely wrapped or packed. Umbrellas, canes, and golf sticks should be reinforced their full length by strong strips of wood tightly wrapped and tied so that they may withstand any strain occurring in transportation. Hats should be packed in strong corrugated boxes or be crated, otherwise they are liable to be crushed. Cut flowers should be wrapped in tissue paper so that they will retain their moisture and should be packed in a wooden or tin box. Drawings, paintings, etc., should be wrapped in some strong material so as to avoid damage. When not flat, these articles should be wrapped in a wooden core or put in a paste-board tube. Sharp-edged or sharp - pointed instruments should have edges and points fully guarded so as to prevent injury to other mail and to the clerks.

Articles easily crushed or broken must be crated or securely wrapped. Liberal quantities of straw or some like material should be used in packing these articles in the container. All things easily damaged must be plainly marked "Fragile." Objects sent through the mail, which are likely to spoil within the time reasonably required for transportation and delivery, will not be accepted for mailing. Wrap or pack carefully, according to contents, and plainly mark all such parcels "Perishable." Use special - delivery stamps to expedite delivery.

Addresses should be complete, with house number and name of street, post-office box or rural route number. A return card should be placed in the upper left corner of every piece of mail. If a tag is used, the address and return card should be written on the wrapper for use if the tag is lost, and a copy of the address should be inclosed inside the parcel.

Postage must be fully prepaid on all mail. Place the required amount of stamps on the upper corner of the package. No parcel may be more than eighty-four inches in length and girth combined. Seventy pounds is the maximum weight for packages.

During the Christmas holidays the volume of mail increases approximately two hundred per cent. It is a physical impossibility to efficiently handle this great quantity of mail when it is all sent during one week. For this reason the post office department asks that everyone buy and mail early so that there will not be too much congestion and delay in the transportation and delivery of the mail and gifts.

The use of Special Delivery stamps will assure delivery on Christmas day if posted at the proper time. Special Delivery services mean the handling and transportation of parcels with the same expedition of first-class letter mail, as well as the immediate delivery at the office of address. Special Delivery may be obtained by affixing a Special Delivery stamp of the proper denomination, or its equivalent in ordinary stamps, in addition to the regular postage. When ordinary stamps are used, the

McPherson Visits At Carolina, Duke And State College

Dr. William McPherson, professor at the University of Chicago, has been lecturing in the vicinity for the past few days. He arrived in Durham Sunday night. Monday morning he was at Duke University going over the campus. He had luncheon with the members of the chemical faculty and that afternoon was the guest at a tea given by Dr. and Mrs. Gross at their home. That night the section gave a supper, forty-three persons being present.

Seventy persons heard Dr. McPherson give his lecture on the Organic Compounds of Titanium. The group was composed principally of faculty members at Duke and advanced students from the chemistry departments here and at Duke University.

Yesterday morning he visited the University. He gave an informal talk at eleven a. m. before approximately a hundred students in advanced chemistry. He was entertained at dinner by Dr. Bell, the department head. President Graham was also a guest at the dinner.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. McPherson visited State College in Raleigh. A stag supper was given in his honor there last night. He left this morning for Roanoke, Virginia.

WBIG PLANS FOR RADIO PEP RALLY

Greensboro Station Will Offer Talks, Music and Cheers for Carolina Team Thursday.

In an effort to help bolster up the spirit of Carolina supporters throughout the state before the Duke game, a radio pep rally will be given over WBIG in Greensboro Thursday evening from nine until ten o'clock. This is the first radio event of its kind ever planned.

Those in charge of the program intend for it to stir up interest in the game all over the state instead of only in Chapel Hill, and also for it to "let the team know that real Carolina support is behind it, and to let the South know that the sporting world has its eyes on the Carolina-Duke contest."

The group of prominent persons and "pepsters" who will speak briefly during the hour includes: Judge Earl E. "Scrubby" Rives of Greensboro, who was elected all-time cheerleader while at the University and one of the two to receive a varsity letter for cheerleading; Bill Cox, Greensboro Daily News sports writer, who will give a comparison of the two teams; Mayor Bob King of Greensboro; Ernest C. McLean, president of the Greensboro alumni club; Red Greene, president of the University student union, who will give a talk on the good spirit existing between the two universities; Billy Arthur, Carolina's diminutive cheerleader, who will tell of the progress made in cheering here and of his plans for Saturday; and Coach Chuck Collins.

At regular intervals until Thursday, announcements of the program will be made from WBIG and on the night of the rally telegrams from University alumni will be read. Jack Wardlaw's Carolina Tar Heel Orchestra, of University students, will provide a background of novelty music, songs and cheers for the rally.

JOHN J. PARKER WILL ADDRESS DI THURSDAY NIGHT

Senate To Meet at Banquet in Carolina Inn To Hear Noted Man.

At the Dialectic Senate banquet to be served Thursday evening, December 4, at six-thirty, Judge John J. Parker will deliver an address to the members of the group. The banquet, the first to be given by the Dialectic Senate in a decade, will take place in the ball room of the Carolina Inn, and as many as seventy members are expected to attend.

Judge Parker graduated from the University with an A. B. degree in 1907 receiving his LL.B. in the following year. At one time he was president of the Dialectic society. After having practiced law in Greensboro for several years he took his degree of LL.D. here in 1927. Among the honors he won at this University were Phi Beta Kappa and the Golden Fleece.

In the year 1920 Parker was Republican nominee for the governorship of North Carolina following which he was appointed special assistant to the Attorney General of the United States in 1924-25. At the Republican national convention in 1924 he was delegate at large for North Carolina. By the appointment of President Coolidge Judge Parker served as circuit judge of the 4th United States circuit court. He is now a trustee of the University and a member of the North Carolina and American Bar Associations.

William C. Medford, a law student and president of the Senate will act as toastmaster for the occasion.

County Officers Sworn In Yesterday

The county officers elected in November were sworn in at Hillsboro yesterday. The following officials were installed: W. T. Sloan, who is serving his second term as sheriff; A. W. Kenion, Clerk of the Superior Court, who is also serving his second term; S. W. Andrews, who several years ago was sheriff of the county, was sworn in as register of deeds; Dr. S. A. Nathan, who is serving his third term as coroner; Jeter C. Lloyd and J. C. Hanner, who were re-elected to the board of county commissioners; and W. P. Berry, who was elected to the board this year for the first time. George Hearne took the oath of office as constable of Chapel Hill.

MILLS IS MEMBER OF RELATIONS INSTITUTE

The meeting discussed what subjects were to be put before the conference of the Institute which will be held in China in 1931.

Talking Pictures In Teaching

In a recent interview with a newspaper reporter David Wark Griffith, the celebrated motion picture director, stated that talking pictures are "today quite practical" for use in classroom lectures and demonstrations. Such a statement by a person so prominently connected with the cinema industry is not, to say the least, unexpected, yet it does cause speculation on a possible innovation which might prove to be a valuable instrumentality in the science of teaching. One can imagine the benefits to be derived from the use of talking pictures in the study of such subjects as drama and the foreign languages.

Tonight the experiment will be tried locally when the Carolina Theatre presents a talking picture in French dialogue. It remains to be seen whether the experiment will be successful here—whether both finances and reception by students will warrant further presentations. In case the showing tonight results in enthusiastic reception by the audience one might well say that the use of talking pictures as an educational method is practical indeed.

Forensic Audiences

Debate officials are always assured of having one problem to contend with: namely, the task of securing an audience for intercollegiate debates. During the last three years, University debate teams have participated in some thirty debates. Yet only four of these have attracted an audience of any considerable size. Three years ago the Carolina-Alabama local debate almost filled Gerrard hall. The cause for such a large audience was rightly attributed to the peculiar nature of the query: "Resolved, that Alfred E. Smith is preferable to Herbert Hoover for the presidency of the United States." The prevalent curiosity to see and hear Britishers was intense enough to garner large audiences for the two Carolina-British debates which have taken place in Chapel Hill during the last three years. The fourth debate referred to was held in Kentucky two years ago. The large audience in this case was due to the importance of the query in the coming Kentucky gubernatorial campaign.

Debating activity at the University since the writer's entrance has been of such a nature as to convince him that intercollegiate debating will never come into its own again until debate officials meet the demands of an amusement-crazy public. The few debates which are well attended would attract only small audiences, were it not for the fact of foreign debaters, radical queries, et cetera. Debating is faced with the same problem that the church the nation over is having to battle with; namely, provision for amusement and entertainment. People will no longer go to church knowing that they will hear nothing but a "hell-fire and damnation" sermon. There are few people in our own day who will attend an intercollegiate debate, unless there is promise of something more than a "cut and dried" discussion of the subject of free trade. The church is already meeting the issue by providing pageants, parties, and all kinds of social entertainments. If a large audience is desirable at any cost, then debating as such must give way to entertainment. Were we to have a "sexy" picture just before intercollegiate debates and then bar the door, we would never have to worry about the problem of the audience any more. But such is not expedient, for debating is not intended to amuse and entertain. Debating appeals to the reason, not to the emotion.

We are of the persuasion that it is more expedient to struggle along with small, interested audiences than to sacrifice true debating to satisfy the lusts of the seeker after pleasure.—J. C. W.

Carolina Stock Rises

With the defeat of Virginia, stock in the Carolina football team experienced a sudden rise of forty points to a new high level for the year. Simultaneously Duke University's supporters tightened their purse strings and the betting odds became considerably smaller. After the Duke Kentucky game, betting on Duke to defeat the Tar Heels was at its height.

Then came the tied score of the Duke-Wake Forest match, and finally the overwhelming defeat of Virginia by a rejuvenated squad of Tar Heel gridiron warriors. Now professional bookers are placing bets which favor Carolina to down the Blue Devils, if only by a small margin. The tide has turned. The staunchest of the Blue Devil fans, however, are not as yet afraid of the outcome of the game; they are merely more cautious.

Here on the campus and even out among the sport fans in the state, the phenomenal change in the spirit and strength of the Carolina team has been credited to the influence of the successful mass meeting at the Well Tuesday night as the squad was leaving for Charlottesville. Unfavorable criticism of the team and student body died to a mere whisper when news of this event became known.

As in years past, every student in Duke University is out for a Tar Heel scalp Saturday, but again the mighty Blue and White team will be ready and waiting to disappoint them.—E. C. D., Jr.

All of us should believe in kindness to dumb animals. So many of us are.—Greenville Piedmont.

IN THE WAKE OF NEWS

Jack Dungan

We are but recently returned from a business trip to that interesting maelstrom — New York. The life those people live—always running—never sleeping—eating irregularly is a constant source of amazement to me. What is even more astounding is the fact that three-fourths of the city appears to be living six months ahead of its income. What with motion pictures at one dollar per seat, and good food at high prices, and bad liquor at worse prices it is a puzzle how fifteen and twenty dollar a week clerks can afford camel's hair coats, follie's tickets, and night club couverts.

Mayor Walker has been attempting to eradicate noise in the life of the city. Traffic signals have been made noiseless, and among other things the I. R. T. subway is taking the clicking sound out of its turnstiles. The greatest noise abatement reform that could be instigated, however, would be to provide the shyster barkers of the motion-picture theatres, who stand before all of the theatres enticing passers-by to enter their palaces, with arrangements similiar to the maxim silencers used on guns.

* * *

The unemployed of the metropolis stand on the street corners selling apples. This was considered a very good racquet until "Jack Legs Diamond" entered the field by securing a monopoly on apples and raising the wholesale price from eighty-five cents to two dollars and sixty-five cents.

* * *

This New Yorker Hotel with twenty-five hundred rooms and Hoarce Heidt as maestro of jazz is one of the seven marvels of the city. It is perhaps the most continental of the American hotels. The French concierge system is employed on the room floors, an atttendant being on duty on each floor from twelve noon to midnight. Three restaurants and a dining room, radio service in every room for fourteen hours daily, in addition to a private tunnel going to and from the Pennslyvania station and the most personal and courteous attention we have ever heard of, are features of the institution.

Typical of the city is the fact that this leviathan of the hotel business will be antiquated as soon as the new Waldorf-Astoria (costing $40,000,000) can be completed.

* * *

New York is the magnet of the country that attracts all of us country men at periodic intervals to gape and marvel. Others go there too. In the short time we spent there we ran into Bob Brawley who graduated from the University last year, and Harry Galland who told me of the comings and goings of the fastly growing ex-Carolina colony in the city. Among the six or seven University persons working at the Greater Macey's are Lois Warden of the class of 1929 and that ever to be remembered personage—Miss Peggy Lintner. Galland is connected with the advertising staff of the company.

Marion Follin, president of the late Daviens, claims the palm for being the world's most forgetful man. After evincing great interest in his organization last year he forgot to call a final meeting at the end of last year in which to elect officers and so the Daviens along with the extinct Stygians is an organization of the past.

Red Green, John Idol, and Pat Patterson seem to have had a more successful holiday than the rest of us. On three successive nights the trio took turns in leading the dances given at the national convention of the Kappa Epsilon sorority meeting at Jamestown, New York. For long distances over the Thanksgiving holidays this will probably stand for some time.

Local D. A. R. Chapter To Meet In Durham

The Davie Poplar chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution will be the guests of the Durham chapter this afternoon at a meeting in the east Union on Duke campus at three-thirty o'clock. Mrs. Clarence R. Whitaker, state regent, of Southern Pines, and Mrs. John Brewer, of Wake Forest, chairman of the sixth district will also be present.

Playmakers Busy Designing Scenery

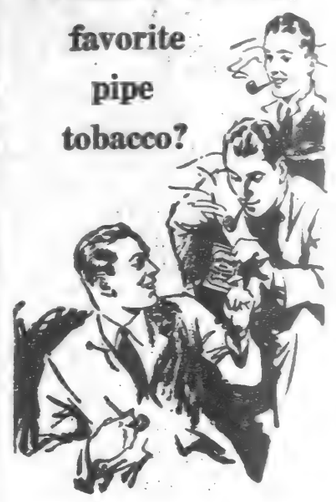
Established in the old music building, the scenic designers of the Carolina Playmakers are hard at work on the sets they will need this year. In Person hall they have more room to work than they had in the Playmakers theatre, where rehearsals held them up since they could work only on the stage.

Every afternoon about eight boys work on the sets. They begin by carefully planning the work on paper. The plans are scaled accurately, and measurements made so that no mistakes will be made when the parts are assembled.

When all plans are complete work is begun in earnest. First the framing or skeleton is cut out and firmly fitted together, after which the frames are covered with canvas. Then boys skilled in painting give them a priming coat, and finish them up with the necessary coloring for their respective uses.

In making the sets the designer or designers must take many things into consideration. First the sets must be so made that they can be easily struck and packed for tours. They must be so constructed that they can be erected or taken down in the shortest length of time. It must not take over ten minutes to take down one scene and erect another.

The men have begun their work early so that they will be sure of having the sets ready in time. Seven productions will be given this year, two of which will be studio productions and will need no scenery, and five plays which will require at least two sets each. The construction of these sets will require a great deal of work.



At present Samuel Selden, technical director, is planning all the designs, but states that he would be very glad to teach anyone who is interested and give them a chance to learn something about stage work.

Team Spends Another Day On Fundamentals

Calisthenics, Beating Buckboards and Blocking Drills Keep Team Busy.

ADKINS COACHES TACKLES

Former Carolina Star Aids Coach Fetzer in Grooming Tackles For Duke Game.

Fundamentals again yesterday kept the Tar Heel football team busy, with the squad going through stiff calisthenics, blocking drills and beating the buckboards. Coach Collins wants to be certain that the squad is going to continue the excellent blocking which it did in the Virginia game, before the final touches are put on the offense and defense for the Duke clash.

The cold wind which blew across Emerson field yesterday lent much to the pep and snap of the workout. The tackles and guards practiced blocking and charging across the line of scrimmage under the direction of Coach Fetzer, and topped off the afternoon's work with several sprints up and down the field.

Coach Cerney sent the backs through a brief signal drill, stiff exercises and had them pushing the buckboards about the gridiron before they retired to the field house.

Thompson, Underwood and Hodges have shown some improvement in their play at tackle during the past few days. In line scrimmage yesterday they were covering their territory well.

An addition was made to the coaching staff yesterday afternoon, since a 1929 Tar Heel tackle, being from Durham, is particularly interested in seeing that Carolina beats Duke. "Coach" Fenton "Pot" Adkins donned a uniform and aided Coach Fetzer in sending the tackles through their workout.

During three years in which Adkins was on the Carolina team, he played stellar ball particularly against Duke. In the 1927 game when he was a sophomore, Adkins got into the game for a few minutes and showed marked speed for a 230 pound tackle. In the 1928 and 1929 games when he was a regular, he time and again stopped Bill Murray and the other fleet Duke backs. It is with this kind of record against Duke that "Coach" Adkins is aiding the Carolina coaches in preparing for Saturday's game.

Shelton Arranges For Dorm Cheers

Next Saturday the University's best efforts will be spent in an effort to beat Duke in the annual Duke-Carolina grid clash. It appears that concentrated efforts are to be made.

All men feel safer, less self conscious, and less likely to be embarrassed, when in their customary environment. In order that a dormitory resident may yell and cheer, without being regarded as a "smart Aleck" college boy by outsiders, it has been decided and arranged that all dormitory men may sit together as representatives of their respective dormitories. When each dormitory resident calls for his ticket, he can request that he be given a ticket in the group reserved for his dormitory. There is nothing compulsory about it, according to Wallace Shelton, president of the Carolina Dormitory Club. If one does not care to sit with the rest of the crowd from his dormitory, then he will not be forced to do so.

CAROLINA-DUKE GAME TO DECIDE BIG FIVE TITLE

Duke Only Undefeated Team in State, But Win for Carolina Would Put Team Ahead.

With a State championship and a number of All-State honors hanging in the balance, the stage seems to be set for a wide-open, fiercely contested battle for Kenan Stadium here Saturday.

All the other Big Five teams have drawn their curtains, and this season finale will end one of the most hectic and muddled Big Five campaigns in history. Duke has the only undefeated record in the Big Five and would win the title on a tie, but a Carolina victory would bring a third successive title to Chapel Hill, as is shown by the standings:

	W	L	T	Pct.
Duke	2	0	1	1000
North Carolina	2	1	0	.667
Wake Forest	2	1	1	.667
Davidson	2	2	0	.500
N. C. State	0	4	0	.000

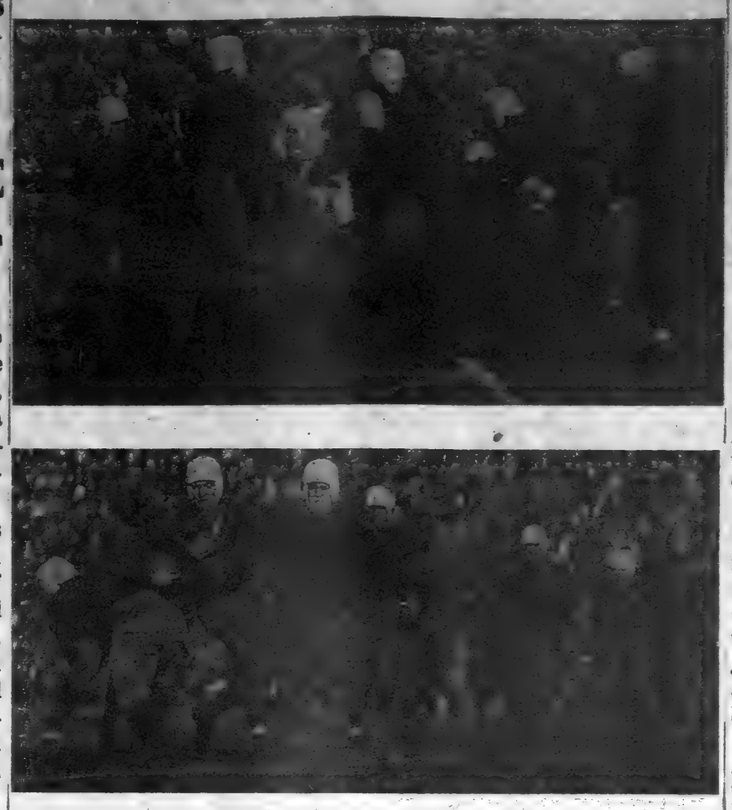
Mid-season victories over Villanova, Navy and Kentucky made Duke the favorite for weeks. Carolina stock soared up to equal heights, however, with last week's 41-0 victory over the Virginia team that beat Washington and Lee 21 to 7 as compared to a 14 to 0 victory Duke scored over the Generals a week later.

Now Coach Collins of the Tar Heels is expecting Duke to be at top fighting edge for having been held to close scores in the last two weeks by Wake Forest and Washington and Lee, and is trying to keep the Tar Heels from getting overconfident.

Duke Meets Carolina With Excellent Record

Durham, December 3.—The Duke team that meets Carolina at Chapel Hill Saturday has made football history at Duke this year. One loss, one tie and eight wins eclipses all other Duke or Trinity records. Six of the wins have been shut-outs. Since the opening game, the Devils have not scored less than two touchdowns in any contest.

Tar Heel Linemen Good Bets for All-State Honors



Carolina will be presenting at least three outstanding line candidates for all-state honors when the Tar Heels battle Duke for the state title here Saturday. Ellis Fysal, 188-pound guard, and Roy McDade, 205-pound tackle, have lent a strength to the right side of the Tar Heel line that has made Georgia, Tennessee and all Carolina's other foes choose to run the other way. On the left side, Bob Blackwood, 175-pound guard, has been playing such brilliant ball as to receive special mention after every game.

Wake Forest Game First Tie for Duke Since 1922

Durham, December 2.—The tie game between Duke and Wake Forest recently was the first time a Duke team tied a game since 1922, when Presbyterian College and the Devils played a six-to-six tie. The year before, the Devils tied New York University, seven-to-seven.

Track practice has been resumed and will be continued as usual until the Christmas holidays, with the exception of the fact that track men will be required to work out only three days each week until the holidays. The schedule of work-outs will be posted on the door of the track office.

In the second picture, Strud Nash is the only Tar Heel in view following the play from the right.

Chapel Hill Loses In Final Game To Ayden

In the closing game of the football season, Chapel Hill high school lost to Ayden by a twelve to nothing score. The contest took place at Ayden Thanksgiving Day.

Ayden played well the first half, making two touchdowns in the second quarter, but failed to gain the extra point at either time. Chapel Hill came back strongly in the last period, but was unable to score. The local team did excellent punting and passing. Chapel Hill completed twenty of about twenty-five attempted passes, most of them being initiated by Dashiel.

The line-up of the local squad included Captain Ray, right end; Neville, right tackle; Cate, right guard; Mann, center; Lloyd, left guard; Renn, left tackle; Stone, left end; Pendergraph, right halfback; Dashiel, left halfback; King, quarterback; and McKnight, fullback.

Coach Brookbank, of the local team, took two entire squads to Ayden Wednesday evening, the Chapel Hill boys being the guests of their opponents that night and again Thursday evening when the victors gave a dance in honor of the visitors.

In spite of the defeat of Chapel Hill in the final game, the team has finished well. Of the nine games played, four were won, three tied, and two lost. A total of nineteen points were scored against Chapel Hill, as compared with sixty-seven points chalked up.

The football season concluded, Brookbank will turn his attention to basketball this week.

Carolina Out To Stop Runs Of Bill Murray, Duke Ace

Durham, December 2.—Carolina will be intent on stopping "Smiling Bill" Murray, the greatest halfback Duke has produced in modern football, when the two teams meet Saturday. Bill has run 174 times this year and carried the ball for a total yardage of 982, an average of over five yards per trip.

Now all the barber shop coaches and side-line assistants can pick their sectional All-Star teams with profit to themselves, because the House of College Clothes, makers of Learbury suits, is giving away twenty-one suits of clothes to the twenty-one persons whose selections correspond, or are closest, to the teams selected by College Humor. Three suits will be given away for each of the following seven All-Sectional elevens: the All-Midwestern, the All-Southwestern, the All-Southern, the All-Eastern, the All-Rocky Mountain, the All-New England, and the All-Missouri Valley and Big Six. Each contestant may pick only one team from each section, but he may, if he is familiar with other sections, pick a team from each of the other six sections of the country. In case of a tie between two or more contestants each winner will receive a suit.

DUKE TANK TEAM BEING SELECTED

Durham, December 3.—Twenty-four students are trying for positions on the Duke swimming team, which opens its winter schedule on January 16 with a meet with Washington and Lee.

Only six of the twenty-four men out are experienced in inter-collegiate competition, but the remaining ones are developing rapidly. Strong on strokes, and dashes, the Devil-fish team will be weak on the diving events, and the varsity team is practicing regularly with attention fixed on this feature.

A freshman swimming team will be chosen this winter.

DUKE IN SHAPE FOR TAR HEELS

Blue Devils Work On Offensive With Stiff Scrimmages as Battle Draws Near.

Durham, December 3.—Duke's Blue Devils intend to put every ounce of offensive strength into the battle with Carolina next Saturday, if scrimmages this week indicate anything.

The Blue Devils are spending very little time with defensive work, but are uncorking a stiff series of aggressive scrimmages, indicating that Duke hopes to lose no time in opening a strong attack.

New plays are being added to the Devils' repertoire this week; in fact, some of them have been used in practices for several weeks. Ever since the Kentucky Wildcats were sent home defeated the Blue Devils have been pointing to their tilt with the Tar Heels.

Throughout the season Duke has been comparatively lucky in regard to injuries of a serious nature, and now are in fighting shape for Carolina.

The Blue Devils are in top fighting form with none on the injured list. In their own vernacular they plan to "shoot the works" against the Tar Heels. In the first place because they have not lost a game since September; in the second place because they want to whip Carolina for the first time in many years of football.

Finally, the Devils are out for a victory because Coach Jimmy DeHart will be watching a Duke team in action for his final time as head mentor. The "little man" wants a victory and the Blue Devils want to present him with one.

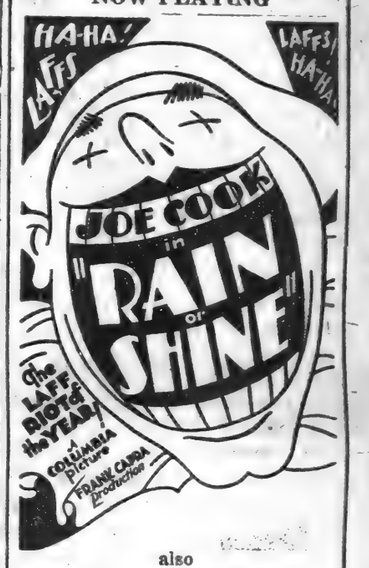
The Duke-Carolina game will be the gridiron fade-out for five Devil players: Rupp, Murray, Hayes, Captain Davis, and Rosky. Each of them leaves a great football record for the Duke annals, and while Rupp and Davis have not been in the game a great deal this season their services have been as invaluable as when they were line-up starters.

Fans state that the Tar Heels discovered themselves in the Virginia game, and that Duke will not be in a slump when they play Saturday. With both teams slated to be in tip season form, sports writers are naming the contest a "natural".

The nation spoiling for a fight usually fights for the spoils. —Boston Shoe and Leather Reporter.

SPECIAL SEATS TO BE ALLOTTED GROUPS AT GAME

Fraternity and Dormitories May Obtain Special Sections for Duke Game.



According to an announcement by athletic officials, arrangements have been completed to allow dormitory and fraternity men to sit in groups at the Carolina-Duke game Saturday.

A special agent will be stationed in the Y. M. C. A. this afternoon from two o'clock until five to fill orders for the tickets in lots. Fraternity or dormitory presidents are to bring the pass books of their group at this time to receive special section tickets. By special concession, any member of the group may purchase a ticket for his girl in his section. A printed sticker placed upon the ticket will take the place of the membership book when presented at the gate.

Science Reveals Peculiarities Of Light, Sight, And Coloring

A woman is as old as she looks, but a man is old when he stops looking. Sight was not always man's most important sense, but as man grew and perfected himself the specialized nerves which were sensitive to light became among the most developed.

Sight requires three things: an object to be seen, an optical organ (as the eye) to see with, and light itself. Light travels in wave motions at the terrific and unsurpassable speed of 186,000 miles per second, regardless of its color. Electricity and radio waves, in fact all electro-magnetic phenomena, move at this same speed.

The sun's white light is not a true color. It was early discovered that sunlight, passing through a prism, separated into a rainbow-colored band called the spectrum. By placing a second prism in the path of each color, it was established that there was no further division into color. The prism, therefore, did not produce the color but simply separated the various kinds of light already present. Violet light, being the shortest waved, was refracted the greatest amount, while the other colors, blue, green, yellow, orange and red, in order, were refracted lesser amounts as their wave lengths increase. The study of the refraction and the reflection of light has been used in making mirrors, microscopes, telescopes and eyeglasses which reflect or increase the apparent size of the object seen in varying degrees. Application of the same knowledge has enabled the development of the camera and motion picture.

Curiously enough, every element known to chemistry radiates light of distinctive color upon being heated to incandescence. By this means astronomers have been able to ascertain the elements composing our heavenly stars and have found that they are made of the same materials as our own earth. Perhaps the most interesting of all such discoveries was the finding of the element, helium, in the sun long before it was known on the earth, the element being named after the Greek word for sun. Interested scientists turned to look on the earth itself for this unknown substance. Their search was difficult because helium was an inert substance and does not combine with other things, but eventually it was isolated from the gasses which are found escaping from drilled oil wells.

Most objects we know are non-luminous and cannot be seen in the dark. We see them by their reflecting the light by which they are illuminated. Each object has its individual color by absorbing all light rays which fall upon it with the exception of the color which it appears to be, light of this color alone being reflected back to our eyes. We can easily prove this for ourselves by holding a piece of red paper up to various colored lights. If red rays are permitted to fall upon it, the paper will appear red, but if yellow, green or blue rays are used, the paper will appear black since all of these colored rays are absorbed. On the contrary, a white paper will reflect whatever color falls upon it since it is capable of reflecting all colors and so assumes that color to which it is exposed.

The story of our senses' gradual growth in ability to distinguish color is an interesting one. We have good authority to believe that Xenophanes recognized only three colors in the rainbow, namely, purple, red and yellow, as did Aristotle who spoke of the rainbow as being tricolored. At the time of the primitive Aryans, our ancestral forerunners, twenty thousand years ago, man was conscious of only one color. He saw no difference in the various tints of Nature about him, in the blue sky the green grass, the brown earth or the many colors of flowers, nor in the wonderful panorama of sunrise and sunset. In primitive languages there are not even word-roots to indicate colors.

We know that in dreams which are a primitive development of sensations, there is no color, yet its absence is not noted and the dream seems life-like to us. Likewise, colorless moving pictures or photographs seem to us to be the actual scenes and the people represented.

The first colors to be recognized were red and black and later man was able to distinguish yellow, white and green, in order. Throughout the poems of Homer and all through the Bible, the color of the sky is not mentioned once, giving good presumption to believe that it was not recognized. The sky was mentioned and described in thousands of ancient writings, yet its color was entirely ignored. Words themselves give us an interesting clue to man's ability to gradually discriminate different colors. The English word "blue" and the German "blau" comes from a word that means black. The Chinese word for the blue of the sky formerly meant black. The Persian and Arabic word 'nil," for blue, comes from the same origin for which the Nile, the "black river," was named, and is in turn related to the Latin "niger", meaning black. We can therefore see that it is only during the last thousand years or more that man has been able to perceive colors in the way that we know them today. The richness of this talent is expressed by the amount of our poetry given to descriptions of colors, hues and tints and to the remarkable discrimination we show in choosing the correct shades we prefer in our clothes. Since man's eye even now is not sensitive to all light waves, the curious thought comes to us as to what other colors man may, in the future, become sensitive to and able to recognize. Could his eye ever become sensitive enough to ultra-violet rays to be able to see through thin opaque objects, or could he become sensitive to infra-red rays and be able to discern objects many miles away, yet concealed to his eye today because of intervening mists and fogs?

Wellesley College Offers Fellowships

Notices posted on the bulletin board in South building give information concerning four fellowships and scholarships offered at Wellesley College, Wellesley, Massachusetts.

The first of these, the Alice Freeman Palmer fellowship, which yields an income of about $1600, was founded in 1903 by Mrs. David P. Kimball. It may be awarded to a graduate of Wellesley College or of some other standard American college, the young woman to be of good health, not more than twenty-six years old, unmarried during the tenure, and free from responsibilities. She is not eligible for more than two years. Usually the award is made to someone who has already done graduate work and shown ability.

The fellowship may be used for study abroad, study at any American college or university, or for individual research. During the tenure, the holder must show evidence of serious study and at the end of three years present to the faculty a thesis, comprehensive of the work done.

Applications for this fellowship are made to the president of Wellesley College by February 1 of the year before the fellowship is wanted.

The second is the fellowship of the Wellesley College alumnae which is called the Horton-Hallowell Fellowship in honor of Mary E. Horton, the first professor of Greek at Wellesley, and of Susan M. Hallowell, the first professor of botany. The amount is $1250 and is awarded only to a candidate holding an A. B. or M. A. degree from Wellesley. It is for study toward the Ph. D. or equivalent research. Applications are made to the chairman of the committee on Alumnae Fellowships, Wellesley College.

The rules governing these fellowships state that applications should be accompanied by a personal letter, the most advanced papers prepared by the candidate, testimonials sent direct from instructors as to ability and character, a certificate of health, and a certified record from the registrar of the college from which a degree was granted.

The trustees of the college have established resident fellowships which pay tuition for one year. Applications for these are made to the Committee on Graduate Instruction, Wellesley College.

The Fanny Bullock Workman Scholarship of $1400 was founded in 1929 by a bequest of Mrs. Fanny Bullock Workman. It is granted to a graduate of Wellesley who gives evidence of good health, character, financial need, ability, and freedom from personal responsibility. Twice during the tenure the holder must give evidence of the work done, and not later than a year from beginning she must give a full report.

Story By Alumnus One of 1930 Best

"The Patriot," a story written by William T. Polk, alumnus of the University, received a place on the Roll of Honor in The Best Short Stories of VTCJ issued by Edward J. O'Brien.

The scene of this story, which was published first in the magazine, Hound and Horn, of Cambridge, Mass., is laid in a Southern country home that fell into decay after the Civil War. The main character is a man who, unlike the ambitious sort who went to seek fortune in the North and West, remained in the midst of what his old sweetheart, returning thirty years after their separation, described as "poverty-heat-niggers-dullness."

Debate Last Night

The University of North Carolina affirmative debating team met the North Carolina State negative team last night in Raleigh. It was the exchange debate for the one held here November the twenty-fifth between the State affirmative and Carolina negative, and the same query—Resolved: that the nations should adopt a policy of free trade, was used. The men representing Carolina were D. M. Lacy and R. A. Merritt. The Daily Tar Heel went to press before the result was recorded.

Wesleyan University May Change Name

Middleton, Connecticut—(IP)—Agitation has been renewed this year on the Wesleyan University campus to have the name of the university changed.

For some time now the change of name has been the subject of much discussion here, the chief reason for the proposed change being that the institution is so frequently mistaken for Wesleyans in other parts of the country, such as West Virginia Wesleyan, Ohio Wesleyan, and several other in the mid-West.

It is also declared on the campus here that the name indicates a closer connection with the Methodist Episcopal Church than is warranted.

This year the university is finding it difficult to gain any publicity outside of the New England and Atlantic Coast states, because of the feeling on the part of newspaper editors that the eastern institution's name will be applied by readers to Wesleyans in their own territory.

Havana To Be Made A Federal District

Havana, Cuba—(IP)—One of the oldest cities in the New World, Havana, will, in 1931, lose its identity as a municipality, and will, like Washington, D. C., become a federal district, under the control of the Cuban congress.

February twenty-fourth has been set as the date when Congress will take over the affairs of the city.

Cuba, in this manner, more closely than ever brings its government in close parallel to that of its protector, the United States.

PHI TEAM REGAINS FORENSIC MEDAL

Hamilton Hobgood Recipient of Mary D. Wright Award.

The Mary D. Wright memorial debate medal returned to the Phi Assembly after a two-year stay in the possession of the Di Senate when Hamilton Hobgood, of the Phi, won the prize Tuesday night in Gerrard hall. The victorious Phi team upheld the affirmative side of "Resolved: that the state of North Carolina should levy a luxury tax for the support of its institutions of higher learning." Billy Uzzell teamed with Hobgood. McBride Fleming-Jones and Clyde Shreve, representing the Di, presented the negative argument. J. C. Williams, winner of the medal last year, presided.

Throughout the debate, the speakers centered their attention upon the feasibility of a luxury tax as a means for remedying the lamentable financial condition surrounding North Carolina's institutions of higher learning at present. The affirmative saw in such a tax the long-sought-after proper distribution of the burden of taxation for educational purposes. This contention met with the approval of the judges, who declared the affirmative the winner and Hobgood the abler speaker of that team.

Council After Good N. C.-Duke Relations

Members of the student council are this week making talks in chapel for freshmen and sophomores in regard to the athletic relations which have existed between Carolina and Duke in the past.

Mayne Albright, secretary of the student council, spoke yesterday, and Red Greene, president Student Union, will speak today and Friday.

The idea that the speakers are trying to put across to the student body is that the University is just now beginning our relations with the real Duke University, both in athletics and other fields. The precedent which is established next Saturday will have a great effect on our relations in the future. The two rivals can profit greatly from each other and a clash or possible severance in athletics would destroy their mutual advantages in other fields. However it is hoped that no such situation will arise.

While Carolina is teaching her students good sportsmanship for her close rival, the student council of Duke University is doing the same thing along this line.

PRESS RELEASES TWO NEW BOOKS

Etchings By Steene and Stories By Cheshire To Be Published Soon.

The University of North Carolina Press will publish two books of interest to Carolina students. Six etchings of the University of North Carolina by William Steene and a book, Nonnulla, by Joseph Blount Cheshire will be released in the next few days.

William Steene is a member of the Salamagundi Club, the national society of Mural Painters, American Federation of Arts, and several other artists clubs. He has exhibited or been represented in the National Academy of Design, the Architectural League of America, Grand Central Art Galleries, Milch Galleries, and several other galleries and at several universities. He has been living and working in Chapel Hill for several years and has studied the scenes represented in the six etchings which are to be published. The etchings are the Old Well, the Episcopal Chapel, the Playmakers Theatre, Old East, Davie Poplar, and the Kenan Stadium.

Bishop Cheshire is well known as a great story teller. He has at last been prevailed upon to put some of the best of his stories in writing. The book is more than a collection of stories. It is woven of the very warp and woof of North Carolina the book could answer well to a roll-call of North Carolina's great names, with illustrating estimates and anecdotes. In presenting these "Not Nothings," as he calls them, Bishop Cheshire has given us a "cross-section" of North Carolina life and legend.

Tickets Exchanged

SCIENTISTS CONDUCTING QUEST FOR CAUSE BACK OF OILINESS

For Years Research on Problem Has Been Going On With the Final Result That Machinery Has Been Devised to Measure Degrees of Slipperiness.

By Hendley N. Blackmon, General Engineer Westinghouse Corporation

Mankind, in general, regards a treacherous banana peel underfoot as the pinnacle of slipperiness. Just another case of prejudice though; because oil, such as used to lubricate electric machinery, would give him a farther and faster ride than the best banana skin in the country. No one knows just yet what makes oil so oily, but research engineers are hot on the trail.

Scientists have long known that oil makes a good lubricant—but soap suds, or steel on ice, is better if slipperiness is the only aim. Despite the profound technical knowledge of the twentieth century, man does not know exactly what makes oil oily. Ordinary chemical and physical tests merely check the uniformity of oil shipments, but tell nothing of the lubricating value.

A group of scientists, isolated in a building of their own, have been stalking the answer to "what makes oil oily", for the past few years. Unlike tasting a pot of porridge for seasoning there is yet no test nor instrument that will tell the answer. In the past to determine this elusive property the lubricant was placed in service until the oil wore out; i. e., lost its oiliness. Researchers getting to the roots of the problem, finally devised machines for measuring this slippery property—they can tell the degree of "oiliness"; but just what makes one oil more slippery than another is still a worrysome question.

Crude oil, as it comes to the laboratory from wells scattered throughout the world, is tested for oiliness and then broken up into its chemical elements. Tedious comparative studies are made of samples which behave exactly alike except for oiliness; doggedly striving to find what makes the difference. It is not the degree of refinement of the crude oil—the same commercial oils are much more refined than others. If oils are too pure they become water white (like the widely advertised Nujol) and lose their lubricating usefulness.

A person on ice skates rides on one of the best lubricating surfaces known. The almost effortless propulsion is possible because the weight of the skater melts the ice under the runners and he scoots along on a film of water, not ice. Little globules of water cling to the steel runner, another layer is on the surface of the ice, leaving a free layer of water in the middle which gives almost frictionless movement of the skates.

In electrical rotating machinery, an oil film surrounds the moving shaft and acts like the water film under the skate runner. Tiny globules of oil adhere to the revolving journal, other oil molecules stick to the babbitt bearing and the load rides merrily on the free film of oil in between.

Automobile bearings need only a small fraction of a thousandths of an inch oil film; large electrical machines require an oil film about .0012 inches thick—the same part that 3-4 inch represents in a city block. Measurement of the oil thickness in big electrical machines shows that the shaft wanders about in the oil film very curiously, climbing up one side and slipping down the other. Though microscopic in size, the film is always thick enough to keep the metals from direct contact. Trouble begins as soon as the film is ruptured and the metals touch, which happens sometimes due to minute imperfections in machined surfaces, misalignment of shaft and bearing, and warping of the bearing shell by excessive heating.

Never stingy, Nature has been exceedingly open handed in her gift of oils—vegetable oils are widely used in cooking, animal oil glistens from sleek black hair; and mineral oils produce our gasoline. Vegetable and animal oils are more oily and therefore the best lubricants; but their family tree makes them more susceptible to oxidation when in service. Straight mineral oils, preferably with a paraffine base, last longer as a lubricant despite their lesser degree of oiliness. Like a sprig of mint in tea to enhance the flavor, soap is sometimes added to mineral oil to bolster its lubricating properties.

Oil leads a tough life, however. For instance, machinery on shipboard must be well lubricated. The boat crosses the equator and a month later is anchored in Alaska—the oil must never become so soft it will run away nor too hard to become useless.

BOGGS TO ATTEND FOLK-LORE MEET

Dr. A. P. Hudson, professor of English, R. S. Boggs, assistant professor of Spanish and probably Dr. G. R. Coffman head of the English department, will attend the meeting of the meeting of the North Carolina Folk-Lore Society in Raleigh, Friday, December 5. Mr. Boggs is to deliver a paper entitled "The Legend of the Half-Chick."

This meeting, as in previous years, is being held in connection with meetings of the North Carolina State Art Society and the State Literary and Historical Association, of which Dr. E. W. Knight, professor of education here, is First Vice-President. The last two meet today, though the Art Society opened an exhibition on December 2.

SLADE LECTURES TO MATH SEMINAR

Yesterday afternoon at three o'clock the mathematics seminar was held in Phillips hall. Professor J. J. Slade, of the school of engineering, conducted the seminar with his own treatment of the "Differentiation and Integration of ono-integral orders with application of the theory to the solution of Abel's problem of the tantochrone." The problem is given: a bead on a smooth curved wire. The bead is to fall from point A to point B in a specified length of time. The question is to determine the curve in the wire which will enable the above conditions to be fulfilled. This problem was solved by Abel over two hundred years ago and has been solved often since.

Lawsons' Visitors Extensively Feted

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth S. Graves of Geneva, New York, have been visiting in the home of Dr. and Mrs. R. B. Lawson for the last two weeks and have been entertained extensively.

Mrs. Graves was entertained at a bridge luncheon Tuesday morning by Mrs. Alex Koonce, and Tuesday evening President Frank Graham and Miss Kate Graham entertained at dinner in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Graves. Last night Miss Helen Shell entertained at a buffet supper and bridge at the Irving apartments in Durham. Today at one o'clock, Dr. and Mrs. Collier Cobb will entertain at a luncheon for Mr. and Mrs. Graves. This afternoon from four to six o'clock, Miss Estelle Lawson will entertain at a tea in honor of Mrs. Graves and Miss Kate Graham.

Friday afternoon Mrs. T. S. McCorkle will entertain at bridge in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Graves, and Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Bell will entertain them at a bridge party. Next Wednesday night Mrs. Carrington Smith will entertain at a theatre party.

OFFICERS CHOSEN BY POLITY FORUM

Dungan Elected President and Sitterson Chosen Secretary at First Meeting.

Jack Dungan was chosen president of the polity forum in an organization meeting Tuesday night on the second floor of Saunders building. Lyle Sitterson was elected secretary of the group.

The meeting, which was called by Beverly Moore, temporary chairman, was attended by thirty-five students. The purpose of this forum is to interest persons on the campus in national politics, and it is the plan of the organization to bring many noted statesmen to the campus. Foreign relations will also be one of the topics of discussion by the forum. In this connection Professor Calvin Hoover, of Duke University has been asked to address the next meeting of the group Thursday, December 11.

So far as can be ascertained, the organization on this campus is the only one of its kind in the south. There are but few others existing in the entire United States.

Professor Calvin Hoover, who is to address the next session of the forum, will speak on the subject of "Russia." Mr. Hoover has for the past fifteen months been living in this country and is well acquainted with conditions there.

It is the plan of the president to bring such men as Norman Thomas, Senators Borah and Reed, Secretary of Navy Adams, and Rabindrath Tagore to speak to the organization.

Freshman Smoker

The first freshman smoker of the year will take place tonight in Swain hall at nine o'clock. Eats and smokes will be served. As yet no speaker has been secured, but Pat Patterson, president of the senior class, who will preside over the smoker, states that one will be obtained in time for the occasion. Music will be furnished by the Carolina Buccaneers.

LOCAL DELEGATES ATTEND NATIONAL FRATERNITY MEET

John Cooper and Jack Ward Active in Proceedings of Interfraternity Council.

At a meeting of the National Inter-fraternity Conference held during the Thanksgiving holidays in New York City, John Phil Cooper, of the Sigma Nu fraternity and Jack Ward, of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, were the representatives from this campus. Both of these delegates were placed on several of the committees of the convention. 150 schools sent representatives to the meeting.

Pat Nelson of the University of South Carolina, and representative of the S. A. E. chapter at that institution, was elected president of the convention. Bill McKinze, Phi Gamma Delta, from Brown University, was chosen secretary, and John Phil Cooper, Sigma Nu of the University of North Carolina, was voted chairman of the executive committee.

Jack Ward, of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, the second delegate sent from this campus, was placed on the scholarship committee, and Cooper, received another position by being placed on the committee on morals.

This convention was attended by men from schools all over the country, who met for the purpose of discussing some of the problems which confront the different fraternities. The abolition of "Hell-Week," system of rushing, relations among fraternities on the different campi, and other such difficulties were discussed by the representatives.

Cooper, as one of the speakers on the program, made a talk on the subject of "Where fraternities' duties should yield to those of the university, and vice-versa." A bill was also presented by the Sigma Nu represen-

GREENE SPEAKS ON GOVERNMENT

Radio Speech Over WPTF Wednesday Explains Student Government

The student government of the University of North Carolina has been an individual growth, and it has developed a personality of its own," said Red Greene, president of the student union in a radio address yesterday.

Greene went further to say that it depends largely upon the state of student opinion and student interests. He told of the work of the Student Council, its function, and its value. His object was to show the state high schools the value of student government in order that they might thoroughly understand it, should they establish such government in their schools. In summing up his remarks he explained that at Carolina there is no system espionage. When some act of misconduct is committed, the students will spontaneously act upon it and the form of action is to submit it to the Student Council, which is the controlling body of the student government.

John A. Lang, president of the North Carolina Federation of Students followed Greene's talk by explaining how the council was attempting to instill good sportsmanship among the students, for the Carolina-Duke game.

Traditional Reactions

The game Saturday with Duke will be a threat to the traditions of the University. Either defeat or victory may cause reactions which will not be in keeping with the traditions of this institution and may destroy in one moment of passion the results of more than a century's labor.

Defeat brings bitterness which causes resentment and anger. Victory brings joy which sometimes knows no bounds. In either instance events may occur which would reflect upon the students as individuals and as parts of the University. A victory for Carolina will result in a celebration both on the Hill and away. But if it is true to our traditional celebrations then no one need caution the students as to the possible results. Carolina students have conducted themselves in the past in such a manner as to reflect only credit to the University.

But defeat may bring an assault upon the goal posts or other actions which might be resented. The goal posts are perfectly able to take care of themselves and they need no aid from any students. An assault upon the goal posts will not be considered an assault upon our dignity or pride. Carolina retains its dignity and its traditions regardless of football games. And its traditions will hold no matter who wins Saturday. But the University will not retain its dignity if over-zealous students attempt to restrain by force a harmless celebration.

Indications

We read Tuesday that no admission fee would be charged for the organ concerts, no fee for concerts by guest organists, even. And we saw in that announcement the keynote of the University's administrative policy. Perhaps the announcement was simply an announcement. But we found it—maybe we were wrong, there are people who think we usually are—an indication. It is an indication that the University authorities have opportunities for petty money-grabbing and do not take them.

Last week we heard of a school that demands from each student living in a dormitory a twenty-dollar deposit against possible damage to his room. And it is a remarkable fact that it takes the whole twenty dollars to repaint, or wash with Dutch Cleanser, a black smudge under a desk. The students pay a blanket ten dollars for three or possibly four home football games. Down in the city tickets are one dollar. Another school charges five cents each time a student uses an electric iron, albeit he happens to press only a handkerchief. It is not a difficult experiment in physics to find the real cost of the electricity required in the pressing of a handkerchief.

These are not state institutions, it is true. The University is a state-supported institution, and has therefore less occasion and excuse to demand a dollar at every turn. But nevertheless, the authorities have opportunities of being like modified editions of those other authorities. It is to the credit of our officials that they permit the opportunities to pass. The University could charge two dollars for make-up labs in the botany department, because some assistant may have to wade in a mile of marsh to find the real cost of the electricity required in the pressing of a handkerchief. It is not state institutions, it is true. The University is a state-supported institution, and has therefore less occasion and excuse to demand a dollar at every turn. But nevertheless, the authorities have opportunities of being like modified editions of those other authorities. It is to the credit of our officials that they permit the opportunities to pass. The University could charge two dollars for make-up labs in the botany department, because some assistant may have to wade in a mile of marsh to find the specimens necessary for the experiment. But if we are not very much mistaken, the charge for the first opportunity to make up a lab is only fifty cents, which is also an indication.—V. A. D.

The Straight And Narrow

We feel called upon to take notice of recent actions by students of one of our brother institutions. Surely it is but fitting that decisions of such far-reaching influence in the world of ethics and morals should receive proper evidence that they are appreciated by the rest of us who have not yet been seized so strongly by the urge to virtue and moral reform.

The highly commendable acts referred to include: the attempted dismissal of a fellow student who certainly must have been a moral reprobate, since he dared to suggest that there might be defects in the working of the honor system; the no doubt very effective resolve of the sophomore class to "outlaw" the drinking of nasty, poisonous liquor; the organization of various small groups to control any and every kind of vice; the passage of resolutions directed against the same; and now, to add the crowning touch, the organization of a "Virgin Club" for the purpose of "promoting better moral relations between the sexes of the younger generation."

All credit to the worthy upholders of the standards of the younger generation! But why stop at this point? We suggest that the reformers decree that all students give up smoking that virulent weed, tobacco; that the co-eds cease employing those instruments of the devil, powder and paint; that only Ivory Soap (99.44 percent pure) be allowed on the campus; that strict censorship be instituted over all reading matter available to students; and only the Christian Herald be allowed on the library desks; that chapel be compulsory twice a day; and that all forms of profanity and slang be purged from conversation, and only "pure" English allowed. Then, indeed, will this venerable institution become the fit cradle of future members of the W. C. T. U., Anti-Saloon League, etc. fit to rank with that other "noble experiment" in the field of education, the W. J. Bryan University.—J. M. L.

THE CAROLINA PLAYMAKERS
THE JITNEY PLAYERS
in
The Murder in the Red Barn
and
The Duenna

If appreciation for the theatre has been on the wane in Chapel Hill this year, it is because the lovers of the drama have been forced to suffer from malnutrition. The Jitney Players required less than half a scene in order to restore life to what at first appeared to be a listless audience. This wandering band of troopers, who last year so enchanted the local theatre-goers with The Wonder and A Trip to Scarborough, completely won the hearts of all Chapel Hillians who saw them Monday and Tuesday night at the Playmaker's Theatre. The only regret which could be expressed was that the representative of our own little theatre, Sheppard Strudwick, was not with them again this year. Unless the forthcoming season brings an extraordinary offering, The Jitney Players will once more be the high spot among the histronic events presented at the University, just as they were last year.

The Murder in the Red Barn.

Should one have accepted the explanatory line, "A Melodrama of 1840," which was found on the program for this play, and contented himself with seeing a play reproduced as it was given nearly a century ago, then he would have been most agreeably surprised. If lines in this tragedy were spoken seriously, and they seldom were, it was because the players thought that they would be funnier than if given in the comic spirit. In fact, the greatest objection to the performance was that the director had failed to realize the humor which most of the dialogue held for the modern audience, and relied entirely too much on burlesquing the whole play in order to make it amusing. Some of the scenes, especially the one in the prison cell where the old woman took out her knitting, were over-burlesqued to the extent that the real comicality of the situation was lost.

It required several scenes before one could become adjusted to the fact that a change of scenery was represented only by a change in the back-drop. This was probably due to the fact that the wings were painted as the interior of the barn. Had the wings been less definite, the illusion, possibly, would have been more complete. The fireplace in Mister Marten's kitchen, however, was adequate compensation for any discrepancies which might otherwise have been noticed.

The acting throughout was excellent. Alice Keating Cheney as Maria Marten, was everything the poor, young, heroine should have been. Her scenes with the baby (the character of the baby was not given on the program) were filled with maternal tenderness, especially when she unknowingly gave the precious the poison. Douglas Rowland as "The villian who pursued her" was most detestable and drew many hisses and cat-calls from the sympathetic audience. The Rustic Gent, Tim Bobbin, was cleverly acted by Harrison Dowd, but Ellen Love, playing opposite him in the role of Anne Martin, was entirely too charming to be completely funny. Edmund Forde was able to rely on playing the character of the father of the girl dramatically in order to make it one of the most ludicrous characterizations of the evening.

Between the acts, members of the cast gave divertissements that were in keeping with the spirit in which the play was given. The quartette singing "Come, Birdie, Come," was the most outstanding feature of the whole program, and had the Imperial Hungarian Tumblers shortened their act by a few falls, they would have been as entertaining a pair as could have been found.

The beauty of the play lies in the fact that the players apparently enjoyed giving it as much as the audience enjoyed seeing it.

The Duenna.

If it were possible, the presentation of The Duenna would be termed perfect and nothing more would be said about it. However, to do so, would be to fail to give sufficient credit to such performances as those given by Alice Keating Cheney, Edmund Forde, and Douglas Rowland. When Sheridan wrote The Duenna he wrote a most delightful comic opera, and when The Jitney Players presented it, they did so in its most delightful manner. Alice Keating Cheney as the Duenna was as ugly and as awkward as the most discriminating theatre-goer could ask for such a character to be. Her duck-like walk was one of the most comic movements one could hope to see. Edmund Forde symbolized the spirit of the eighteenth century theatre in his interpretation of the gruff but kind Don Jerome. Douglas Rowland played both Don Carlos and Father Paul, and in the latter role he received many laughs and a great deal of applause. In fact, the laughter caused by his portrayal of the bloated old monk almost stopped the show. Ellen Love as Donna Louisa was the quintessence of grace and charm. She has a lovely natural, but apparently untrained, voice. Frederick Forman, Harrison Dowd, and Richard Skinner were exceedingly good in the roles of the lovers, Mr. Skinner, giving a remarkably graphic portrayal of exactly what a good lover should not be.

The sets for The Duenna were much better than those used for The Murder in the Red Barn. The designer had caught the delicacy of the play and carried it into the execution of the scenery. The costumes were rich and colorful and lent an air of splendor to the production.

All who saw The Jitney Players hope that they will continue to pay Chapel Hill an annual visit, and assure them of a warm and enthusiastic welcome should they return.

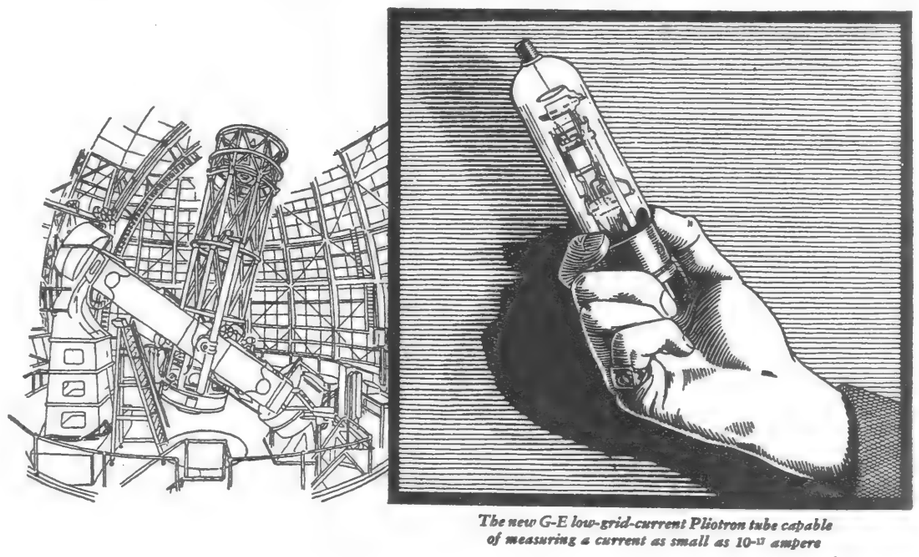
OPEN FORUM

Editor of Daily Tar Heel:

Why not change this place to a kindergarten or make it a school for delinquent boys. Don't say this sounds absurd; it sounds no more absurd than these idiotic rules that are supposed to go into effect governing the bedtime of invited feminine guests.

I've never been exposed to history in this man's University, but I have heard that the Puritans came over here from England in search of freedom. I feel sure that if any of them should happen in Chapel Hill right now they would drag their weary carcasses right back over the briny deep—and could you blame them? The answer is no.

I suppose the instigators will say in a it-hurts-me-more-than-i-does-you tone that they are doing this to protect our dear feminine element from the octopus—like Carolina demons that reach with a thousand outstretched arms to entwine the poor innocent girls into the predestined meshes of circumstance. I might add, to say the least, since the least said is the easiest explained, not to imply that I was individually concerned, that I greatly appreciate this most noble effort; but, I feel sure that when any Carolina boy invites a girl to spend the week-end she will be old enough to be perfectly capable of taking care of herself. (If she's sober and if not, either he or an officer can take care of her.)



In fact I think the law will have a negative effect, because lots of the dames who would heretofore have gone to bed immediately after the dance will now stay up just to get a chance to violate a rule. Everybody's doing it now; if you don't believe it just wait. Time will tell (at least I guess it will; it usually does).

Oklahoma Will Use Stadium for Classes

Norman, Oklahoma—(IP)—Because a heavy enrollment has placed class room space at a premium at Oklahoma University here, officials are considering making use of the large space underneath the seats in memorial stadium as extra classrooms.

It is believed that a wall may be built along the outer side of the big athletic plant, and the fifty by 250 feet thus inclosed may be divided into smaller rooms.

The new G-E low-grid-current Pliotron tube capable of measuring a current as small as 10⁻¹⁷ ampere

This Little Tube Measures Stars Centuries of Light Years Distant

BY MEANS of a new vacuum tube called a low-grid-current Pliotron tube, astronomers can gather the facts of stellar news with greater speed and accuracy. In conjunction with a photoelectric tube, it will help render information on the amount of light radiation and position of stars centuries of light years away. It is further applicable to such laboratory uses as demand the most delicate measurement of electric current.

So sensitive is this tube, that it can measure 0.000,000,000,000,000,01 of an ampere, or, one-hundredth of a millionth of a billionth of an ampere. This amount of current, compared with that of a 50-watt incandescent lamp, is as two drops of water compared with the entire volume of water spilled over Niagara Falls in a year.

General Electric leadership in the development of vacuum tubes has largely been maintained by college-trained men, just as college-trained men are largely responsible for the impressive progress made by General Electric in other fields of research and engineering.

Tar Heels Concentrate On Defense For Devils' Plays In Brisk Workout

Ends Practice Getting Down Under Punts as Kickers Prepare for Game.

LIGHT WORKOUT TODAY

Final Practices to Include Only Dummy Scrimmaging and Conditioning Exercises.

Definite preparations for the Duke game were started yesterday afternoon when Coach Collins sent three varsity elevens through dummy scrimmage on defensive tactics against DeHart's plays in a brisk workout at Emerson field. The three teams worked more than half an hour on the defense with freshmen impersonating Murray, Rosky, Brewer, and Company.

The ends ran down under punts also, as Maus, Branch and the other kickers primed their toes for the game. The ends were getting down fast under the punts and were covering the safety men well. Calisthenics and many laps around the field to get the squad in perfect physical condition also took up a great deal of the afternoon.

The only real scrimmaging of the week was held yesterday afternoon and this session was rather brief, Coach Collins preferring to have the team become fully acquainted with Duke's style of play.

Plans for the remaining two days call for long but light workouts, according to a statement made by Coach Collins last night. Work this afternoon probably will include further drills on going down under punts, and dummy scrimmage on defense.

The whole Tar Heel squad is bent upon the idea of beating Duke, and is putting every ounce of energy into the workouts to be in the pink of condition for the game. Since the Davidson game there has been an air of snap and speed in the practices pervading the whole football camp, which should reach a peak Saturday afternoon.

The first team lineup yesterday included: Lipscomb, center; Fysal and Blackwood, guards; McDade and Thompson, tackles; Brown and Walker, ends; Branch, quarterback; Magner and Nash, halfbacks; and House, fullback.

First College Grid Game Re-Enacted

New Brunswick, New Jersey.—(IP)—Fifty bewhiskered athletes reenacted the first intercollegiate football game ever played, that between Rutgers and Princeton in 1869, as a feature of the pageant held in connection with the 250th anniversary celebration in this city.

In addition to the fifty players (there were twenty-five men on a side in 1869) crowds of men and boys stood on the sidelines, all dressed in the garb of more than a half century ago.

Tar Heel Mentor Not So Jovial Now As at Virginia

They say gloomy Chuck Collins, head mentor of the Tar Heels, got generous and smiled a great broad smile after Carolina beat Virginia 41-0 last week, but the Carolina strategist isn't smiling this week. He's afraid the Tar Heels will let their margin over Virginia make them overconfident, and he knows that would be disastrous to Carolina hopes in the Duke game here Saturday.

Perhaps it's just as well that the custom of kissing a lady's hand has passed out. We gents are spared many a cigaret burn.—Arkansas Gazette.

Collins Announces Coaches Selection For All-State Team

Coach Chuck Collins announced the coaches selection for an all-state eleven. The selection was Rosky of Duke and Gregson of Wake Forest, ends; Cobb of State and Williams of Wake Forest, tackles; Fysal of Carolina and Davis of Duke, guards; Lipscomb of Carolina, center; Branch of Carolina, quarterback; Magner of Carolina and Murray of Duke, halfbacks; and House of Carolina, fullback.

Coach Collins took Johnny Branch with him to Raleigh last night to speak on the B. C. Sportlight radio program over WPTF. Bill Murray and Buz Rosky of Duke were also on the program last night.

ATHLETIC BOARD TO MAKE REPORT TO U.N.C. ALUMNI

University Athletic System Will Be Explained at Meeting Friday.

Reports covering operation of Carolina's unique system of controlling athletics will be received at the annual General Assembly of the University Alumni Association in Chapel Hill next Friday and Saturday, December 5 and 6.

The present system has been in operation since 1926, when a committee composed of President H. W. Chase of the University, President W. P. Stacy and Secretary Daniel L. Grant of the General Alumni Association was appointed to draw up an agreement for the management of athletics at the University. Dissatisfaction with the method then in effect, which gave University alumni comparatively little voice in the management of athletics, led to appointment of the committee.

Under the plan evolved by the committee and adopted by the alumni and the University faculty, a "three-three-three" athletic council, composed of three representatives each from the Alumni Association, undergraduate student body, and faculty, was set up with full authority over all matters pertaining to athletics. Under its provisions every member of the General Alumni Association has a voice in conducting athletics at the University since the alumni representatives on the Council are elected and instructed by the annual Alumni Assemblies.

Dr. Foy Roberson, of Durham, one of the three alumni representatives on the present council, will deliver the annual report at the Saturday morning session of the Assembly. He will make the first official announcement of the University football schedule for 1931, which will include a number of important changes.

STAR BACKS TO MEET DUKE FOR LAST TIME

The big ground gainers in Carolina's recent victories over Duke were Magner, House and Erickson in 1928, and Nash and Ward in 1929. Four of these boys, all but Ward, are raring to run their last game against Duke here Saturday, and the dope is that there's going to be a grand fight if the Carolina line continues to play as it did at Virginia.

Prosperity has been reported around the corner, but somehow we can't locate the corner.—Miami Herald.

THREE THREATS ON THE DUKE TEAM

Pictured above are "Smiling Bill" Murray, Buz Rosky and Kid Brewer of the Duke football team. These three star gridders will lead the attack of the Devils when they invade Kenan stadium Saturday. Rosky both calls signals and plays left end. Brewer is skilled at hitting the line and running interference. It is noticed that "Smiling Bill" is wearing number eighteen. It seems to be a favorite trick of his to wear one number in front and another in the back to confuse opponents. His regular number is fifty-two.

KAY KYSER NOT ABLE TO ATTEND GAME SATURDAY

Says That He Will Be Doing Greatest Cheering of His Life in Dallas.

Kay Kyser, member of the class of 1928, chief cheerleader and organizer of the famous cheerios, is in Dallas, Texas, directing his orchestra and is unable to be present at the Duke-Carolina game Saturday. He was invited by the president of the student body, Red Greene, to be present for the game.

Kay writes a letter to the students, however, in which he expresses his opinion about Carolina spirit and the Duke game, and says that he will be doing the greatest cheering of his life during the two hours Saturday out in Dallas. The letter follows:

To the Student Body,
University of North Carolina,
Chapel Hill, N. C.
Dear Students:

Even though it is impossible for me to accept the kind invitation that has been extended to me to come back to Chapel Hill, December the fifth and sixth to help carry Carolina over the top in her big game Saturday with Duke, I do want you to know that I will be and always am, cheering for a Carolina victory.

I have the utmost faith in the feeling that I know each University man has in his heart for Carolina and her team. This feeling or spirit might lie dormant and silent within some of you, but I am positive that Saturday afternoon you will arise as one man and literally drive our team to victory. There is no alternative—We must beat Duke. Without you it can't be done, so forget everything except—We must win.

I'll be doing the greatest cheering of my life during that game, and I know that you will too.

Sincerely yours for Carolina,
Kay Kyser.

BALEY, McKEE AND SHUFORD IN FINALS

Only Three Matches Remain In Fall Tennis Tourney.

Jim Baley and Billy McKee have reached the final round of the upperclassmen tennis tourney which Coach Kenfield has been running during the past two weeks. The final match will be played tomorrow afternoon.

Baley defeated Al Yeomans last Monday in the semi-final round 6-4, 3-6, 6-2, while McKee beat Frank Huskins yesterday 6-3, 4-6, 6-1 also to enter the last round.

Harley Shuford is in the finals in the upper bracket of the freshman tourney. In the lower half there are still two matches to be played before the final round, either Morgan or Dillard should meet Shuford.

Sport Slants

By Don Shoemaker

Now that President Graham's "Hills of Virginia" have resounded with the thud of Tar Heels line bucks across Cavalier goal lines, thorough trouncing of the denizens of his "Woods of Durham" is all that remains before Carolina to close a successful season. In definition of that term we offer Carolina 28, Duke 6.

There could be no better setting for the Blue Devil-Tar Heel encounter than Saturday's. Both teams have lost some over-confidence via the Wildcat and Deacon ministrations. Both will be cautious and observant of the breaks. It should be a perfect football game.

Glancing back over the results of this year's grid efforts we see but one actual set back on the Carolina record. It was nothing but a strong Georgia team that handed Carolina a trouncing at Athens a while back. There is no alibi offered for that game for Georgia was at her season's peak. The Tennessee and Davidson games offer a different slant.

ENTRY LIST FOR BOXING TOURNEY PASSES 40 MARK

Intramural Meet to Begin Next Wednesday Afternoon at Tin Can.

The list of entries for the intramural boxing tournament to be staged December 10, 11, and 12, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, has doubled in number. There are now forty-three entries who will try to wrest the crowns from the defending champions of last year.

The D. K. E.'s are leading the field with entries from the fraternities with three entries and one defending champion. The Beta's and Delta Sigma Phi's each have two entries.

Among the dormitories, Ruffin has three entries and are closely followed by Grimes and Manly. The Independent entries still lead the field with four and the Best house is close behind with two. These two factions are leading in numbers for the students who do not room on the campus.

The following men have enter-

Durham, December 3.—Coach Jimmy DeHart, working a Duke team for the last time to prepare for a game, has followed his usual procedure this week in practices by merely taking a short while to work on the defensive but doubly working on the Blue Devil offensive.

The final practice of the week, billed for Thursday, will end the four days that the Devils have worked for the game. The greater portion of the work has been on the Duke running attack with a couple of lectures on what to

ALBRIGHT TALKS TO FRESHMEN AT CHAPEL MEETING

Mayne Albright, student council representative of the senior class, delivered a short talk to the freshmen in chapel yesterday morning on the proper relationship that should exist with Duke. "Rivalry is natural," said Albright, "but it should be fruitful. A better spirit must be encouraged between the two institutions for the welfare of both."

The trophy to be presented to the captain of the winning team by the captain of the losing team for the first time this year is expected to increase the mutual good feeling between the two schools. This cup is to be offered by the representatives of the senior class of both Duke and Carolina and is to change over into the winner's possession each year to be kept until the next year's game.

ALPHA KAPPA PSI PLEDGES NINETEEN

Alpha Tau chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, professional commerce fraternity, pledged nineteen new men at a meeting of that organization yesterday. Each fall and spring this fraternity pledges a group of sophomores and juniors who are doing outstanding work in the school of commerce.

The new pledges are: Thomas Judd Campbell, Lake Wales, Florida; James Moore Gatling, Raleigh; Roger M. Kelly, Baltimore, Maryland; D. Russell Foster, Jr., Wilmington; Clyde Owen, Winter Haven, Florida; P. C. Idol, High Point; W. A. Lane, Monroe; Frank Bennett, Wadesboro; B. C. Prince, Norfolk, Virginia; J. W. Peacock, Wilson; Robert Hanscome, Washington, D. C.; J. G. Stikeleather, Asheville; E. S. Mann, Lake Landing; McBride Fleming-Jones, Chapel Hill; Robert W. Drane, Jr., Florence, Alabama; John S. Dozier, Rocky Mount; Sage H. Upshaw, Raleigh; Arthur H. Fleming, Jr., Louisburg; Eugene H. Wells, Greenville, South Carolina.

The Moocher

You know the type. You see them and talk with them every day. Some act just as ordinary as usual, while others are all sugar and sweetness as they await their chance to beg for lecture notes, reading notes, or already-written experiments.

The moocher is an artist in concocting excuses for failure of preparation. As a rule, he has had so much more work to do than anyone else that it really is not his fault that he must mooch his notes or experiments. He just has not had time to get them all.

You have seen the student who has been given at least two weeks for a certain amount of outside reading, yet the night before an examination he had not been inside of the library. In panic he runs to his more conscientious fraternity brother and pleads with tears in his eyes for a chance to see the other's notes. To climax the incident, the moocher goes to class the next day with Lady Luck, takes the quiz, and makes a better score than his aide.

Friends of German Will Meet Sunday

As in former years, the Friends of German are to meet Sunday afternoon from four to six at the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. C. Metzenthin, 402 Hillsboro street.

For some time, it has been the custom of the many students of German, and of former students whose interest in things German still continue, to meet on the first Sunday of every month. Everyone is invited, and the songs, entertainments and light refreshments that have marked each of the meetings will again be part of Sunday's meeting.

The only requirement for attendance will be a desire to speak German and a willingness to struggle along with it as best one can. The subjects to be discussed will be those which relate to Germany and the Germans, and everything will be discussed from the viewpoint of an American student traveling in Central Europe.

expect from Carolina.

The first two days of this week's work saw the Devils being crammed full of new plays and formations which were given test in scrimmage with a strong reserve eleven furnishing opposition.

In giving only a small amount of work on the defensive it is evident that the Duke coach is taking into serious consideration the fact that in nine games only four touchdowns have been scored against the Devils.

The grind that the Blue Devils have gone through in making football history for any Blue Devil grid outfit, has told on the Duke line. They started the season with an average of 189 1-2; now they average 186 1-2. The backfield is holding its own at 172 pounds.

Bill Murray, Duke's brilliant halfback, needs to gain only 18 points in the Carolina game to put him at 1,000 yards gained from running plays during the season. He has run 174 times for 982 yards, an average of nearly six yards per trip. Brewer has run 108 times for 763 yards.

SPORT SLANTS

As the pass that Don Hyatt caught in the Duke Wake Forest game was described as an impossible play from the standpoint of gridiron etiquette, so was the Dodd-Hackmann aerial maneuver up at Knoxville several weeks ago. That, and that alone, defeated Carolina numerically, but there is little doubt that the Tar Heels gained a moral victory.

None anticipated such a demoralizing upset in the Davidson game. The Wildcats lunched on raw meat and then went out and wiped up the Heels by excellent football plus spirit. Davidson deserves the glory of that victory for she earned it in a noble style, but it cannot be denied that a quality of spirit was lacking in the Carolinians' ranks that day.

A letter from Kay Kyser appearing in the Tar Heel today states that that dynamo of enthusiasm will be unable to lead the rejuvenated Cheerios Saturday. Some associate stated that the game should be called off on this account, for what would a Carolina-Duke game be without Kay? We recommend a demonstration similiar to that prior to the Virginia game last week, with torch light parades, speeches and a tea party later for that portion of the student body who would shudder at appearing in the crowd with delicate monocles and ivory headed walking sticks, which dontchaknow, would be endangered in the midst of such a rabble as an enthusiastic pep meeting.

Flying Circus Here

The Brinton-Bayles flying circus will be in Chapel Hill Saturday and Sunday. According to its agents, "nationally known pilots will give the greatest exhibition of acrobatic and thrilling flying ever shown." Admission and parking will be free.

ADVISORY BOARD TO HEAD SCHOOL OF ENGINEERING

President Graham Appoints Committee to Act Until Dean Is Chosen.

A temporary administrative and advisory committee to direct the school of engineering was appointed yesterday by President-elect Frank P. Graham to fill the position of Gustave M. Braune, who succumbed to an attack of pleurisy last week.

The new committee will have as its chairman Dr. A. W. Hobbs, dean of the college of liberal arts and a professor in the school of engineering.

The remainder of the committee is composed of heads of departments and schools in the University who are connected with the school of engineering. Professor J. M. Bell, of the department of chemical engineering and dean of the school of applied science, Professor E. G. Hoefer, mechanical engineering, Professor H. G. Baity, civil engineering, and John E. Lear, acting head of the department of electrical engineering, are members of the group.

This committee, filling the position made vacant by the death of Dean Braune and by the continued ill health of Professor George F. Bason, will have the responsibility of making a survey in the engineering school incident to its operation.

UNIVERSITY IS REPRESENTED AT ENGINEER MEET

Charles Hayes, secretary of the local chapter of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, has recently returned from a meeting of the southern district of the student technical division of the society. This meeting was held in Louisville, Kentucky, in conjunction with the meeting of the practicing engineers of the society.

Every technical school in the South except one was represented at the convention. This is the first time North Carolina has sent a representative. Mr. Hayes was the only representative from the University.

A. S. Lee, of Charlotte, is president of the society. Outstanding engineers from all over the country presented papers on many subjects. Many students presented papers in competition for prizes. Numerous inspection trips were conducted through the various technical plants in Louisville.

Next year the meeting of the student division will meet in Gainesville, Florida, at the University of Florida.

Honor Fraternity Chooses Secretary

Beverly Moore has been chosen secretary of Phi Beta Kappa to take the place of Miss Sarah Faulkner, who failed to return to school this year, it was announced yesterday.

Three members of the faculty were also selected to serve with the three officers of the honor fraternity on the executive committee. The committee is now composed of Fred Green, R. B. House, and C. P. Spruill from the faculty and University officials, and Joe Eagles, president, T. H. Barker, Jr., vice-president, and Beverly Moore, newly-elected secretary.

LOCAL Y MEN TO MEET IN DETROIT FOR CONVENTION

World Leaders To Speak To International Group of Students.

The University will send delegates to the international student-faculty conference at Detroit December 28 to January 1. This conference meets every four years, the last one being in Detroit in 1926-27. There will be around 3,000 students and 1,000 faculty at this meeting, representing every state in the United States, as well as twenty-four other countries.

The purpose of the conference is to consider through platform addresses and social groups the major social issues of the present-day world, as these issues are a challenge to educational and religious institutions. The leading educators and religionists of this and other countries will be on the program. Among the speakers will be such well-known men as Professor Millikan, one of America's foremost scientists, Reinhold Niebuhr, Bishop McConnell, Rabbi Wise, and S. Parkes Cadman.

Railroads are giving delegates reduced rates—half price plus one dollar. Hotels of Detroit are also giving half-price rates. The Detroit Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations have planned some real entertainment for the delegates, including sight-seeing trips and trips into Canada, to Niagara Falls, and other places of interest.

This University was represented in 1927 by nine delegates.

Dormitories Warned About Undue Yelling

For the past several weeks there has been a considerable amount of unnecessary yelling among the dormitories of the University concerning the coming Duke-Carolina contest.

Red Greene, president of the Student Union, is sending out a letter to the president of every dormitory, urging them to report immedately to the student council anyone yelling from one dormitory to another at night, particularly those who insist on using indecent language. This situation was rather deplorable during the Thanksgiving holidays and the student council will take rather drastic action in any such case reported to it. However the council does not believe that the students realize the commotion which they make in the black eye they are giving the University, and they also believe that this warning will put a stop to this unfortunate situation.

Frank Graham's Double Comes To Chapel Hill Creating Stir

Mistaken identity isn't just a movie plot formula. Paul Yelverton of Wilson will vouch for that and will offer as proof more than a handful of illustrations from actual experience. He has been mistaken time and again for President-elect Graham. Since the latter was chosen to succeed Dr. Harry W. Chase as president of this institution, Mr. Yelverton can't so much as poke his head out of his home town without being hailed as "Frank."

A premonition to the eventual situation appeared last spring when Professor Graham went to Fremont, Mr. Yelverton's native home, to address the school children. The "kids" couldn't see why Mr. Yelverton should have been secured to make a finals speech.

Soon the mistake became vice-versa. Within several weeks Mr. Yelverton was stopped on the streets of both Raleigh and Charlotte by ladies desiring to honor the new University head at luncheons. It must have been terribly embarrassing to explain why such gracious invitations must be refused. But not half as embarrassing as the next time when he was wrongly accosted. Mr. Yelverton's duties as undertaker had called him to the County Welfare Department meeting at the new Duke hospital. Hardly had he entered the door when more than a score of ladies mobbed him with requests and invitations. Before the innocent man had a chance to open his mouth, a Duke faculty member lent credence to the error by calling across the hall that he'd like to speak to "Frank Graham" a moment after the meeting. Soon the Goldsboro sheriff, a friend of Mr. Yelverton passed by with a "Hello, Paul." Imagine twenty-odd surprised ladies surrounding one blushing undertaker-victim and you have the picture.

The matter reached a climax recently when Mr. Yelverton visited Chapel Hill. Everybody nodded and spoke as he strolled down the street. He entered a barber shop. A wise barber declared, "You aren't President Graham, but which of his brothers are you?" Relieved that he had at last found someone who wasn't deceived, Mr. Yelverton ordered a collar. A bootblack returned from the errand with the news that President Graham didn't wear the size collar ordered. In Sutton's the soda jerker, from Mr. Yelverton's home town, stood with mouth agape, not knowing whether the gentleman before him was his university president or his fellow citizen. He guessed the wrong way. Our familiar looking visitor had scarcely made his way to the Friendly and found a table when a boy tapped him on the shoulder with a "I'd like to go to Durham this afternoon and—" Mr. Yelverton turned facing the student full-face. "Why you aren't him, are you?"

Hence, the Wilson man concluded that he would immediately go to meet his counterpart. After first being taken for President Graham at the latter's own office, he was informed that the sought-for one was out. He went down on the back steps of Old South building. Soon a car stopped there. President Graham sprang out and rushing up to the visitor cried: "You must be Paul Yelverton, because everybody I've seen today tells me how much we resemble each other!" The likeness of the two was remarkable, practically the only difference lying in Mr. Yelverton's long sideburns and the president's lack of them. Even their voices were somewhat similar! Passing students stared curiously at the pair. The spectacle of the two men so nearly alike in appearance talking together will probably linger long in the memories of the few who witnessed it.

LARGE CROWD AT FRESHMAN SMOKER

Approximately five hundred freshmen turned out last night at their initial smoker given in Swain hall at nine o'clock.

Due to the fact that the class has not yet organized, Pat Patterson conducted the meeting. Dr. Archibald Henderson, head of the department of mathematics, spoke about the past relations between Carolina and Duke Universities. Music was furnished by "The Carolina Buccaneers." The smoker was concluded by a few football yells led by two official cheer leaders.

MADRY ADDRESSES ROTARY MEETING

R. B. Madry of the University news bureau talked to the Chapel Hill Rotarians at their regular weekly meeting in the Carolina Inn Wednesday evening. Mr. Madry explained the work of the bureau in keeping the activities of the University community before the public.

The club has decided to have ladies night on second Thursday in January. The entertainment will take place in the Carolina Inn. The Chapel Hill club is planning to invite the clubs of Durham, Sanford, Raleigh and Burlington to attend. There will be twelve vaudeville actors to entertain the guests, and following the dinner there will be a dance with Jack Wardlaw and his Carolina Tar Heels playing.

Pikas To Entertain At Supper Saturday

The local chapter of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity will be hosts at a buffet supper given for the members of Duke, Davidson, and State chapters who attend the Duke-Carolina game Saturday. The supper will last from five-thirty to seven o'clock in the Carolina Inn.

This is the first time that the fraternity has done anything of this kind, and if it is a success, it will probably be made an annual affair.

Grail Tickets

Tickets for the Grail dance Saturday night will be on sale in Pritchard-Lloyd's drug store and in the Book Exchange Friday morning. If they are not all sold out they will be on sale in Bynum gymnasium Saturday night at eight-thirty o'clock. The price of the tickets will be one dollar.

FOOTBALL STORY LEADING ARTICLE IN ALUMNI REVIEW

Rare Silhouettes of Famous Alumni Are Reproduced in Latest Issue.

The December issue of the Alumni Review has just been printed and contains many interesting facts about the University. In this issue appear several good articles on the organ dedication, football, and the alumni book club.

The cover is made up of an excellent picture of Smith hall built in 1850 as a library and ball room, later to house the law school, and now the Carolina Playmakers theatre.

Three silhouettes presented to the University by Dr. Archibald Henderson are printed in replica in this issue. They are those of Joseph Caldwell, first president of the University; James Hogg, who is given the most credit for selecting the site for the University; and General William Lenoir, one of the heroes of King's Mountain and first chairman of the University Board of Trustees.

One of the articles in this issue covered the dedication of the new $34,000 Reuter Organ in the music building. The total cost of the renovating the old building, the organ and furnishings was $170,000, of which the State paid only $44,000.

The most interesting feature of the review was perhaps the account of the Carolina-Virginia game on Thanksgiving day. Several exceptionally clear photographs of exciting plays were included. Chuck Collin's father came down for the first time from his home in Oak Park, Illinois, and he was well pleased with the performance of his son's team.

Executives of Press Coming Here Saturday

The executive committee of the North Carolina Press Association is to meet in Chapel Hill Saturday, December 6, 1930, to complete plans for the seventh annual newspaper institute which is to be sponsored here January 14, 15, and 16 of the new year by the extension division.

As yet the program is in a formative stage, but the committee will make announcements of the principal speakers and further details. The executive committee is composed of J. W. Noel of Roxboro; Beatrice Cobb, Morganton; John A. Parks, Raleigh; H. A. Dennis, Henderson; JJ. L. Horne, Jr., Rocky Mount; R. E. Price, Rutherfordton; W. C. Manning, Williamston; and W. C. Dowd, Jr., of Charlotte.

Health Report

Health Officer S. A. Nathan's report for last month showed that there were two cases of pneumonia, one of which was fatal; one case each of diphtheria, chicken-pox, and syphilis.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR HANDLING OF CROWD SATURDAY

University of North Carolina authorities are organizing a record force of assistants and making a multitude of preparations to handle with dispatch and convenience the large crowd expected for the Carolina-Duke state titular game here Saturday.

A corps of twelve State Highway Patrolmen, under the command of Lieutenant Goodwin, will have charge of directing the traffic. The patrolmen will be assisted by fifty uniformed officers generously lent by neighboring towns, and by a large number of students who will serve as directors on the different parking lots.

Tickets will be sold from booths at the stadium by twenty students. There will be thirty-six more students keeping the gates by which approach is had from every direction. A corps of two hundred ushers will care for the seating problem.

All parking lots and aproaches have been put in tip-top shape, and the dirt stretch of road between the campus and the Raleigh Road and by the Freshman Field parking lot, has been newly paved. Likewise, all incoming roads have been reported as clear and in good shape, the detours having been lifted on Route ten from Greensboro to Burlington and on the Route fifty-four shortcut from Burlington to Chapel Hill.

The seats are going at a lively clip, according to announcement today from Graduate Manager Charles T. Woollen, but many good tickets are still available at the Book Exchange and Students' Supply Store in Chapel Hill and at out of town ticket offices.

Sunday Reading Room Hours

Several times this year we have heard certain students enrolled in the school of commerce voice the complaint that the commerce reading room is closed on Sundays, thereby depriving them of the use of the library at times when study is most convenient. It is the contention of those who are advocating that the reading room observe the same hours as the main library that very little expense would be involved in the innovation and that commerce students would then enjoy the same privileges of students in the school of liberal arts.

It seems that the tendency in many courses, especially courses in economics and commerce, is away from standard text-books and toward a rather prodigious amount of reading from various outside sources. In order to obtain this necessary reading material the student has to utilize the facilities of the commerce library quite extensively, and he pays a small fee for this usage in those courses in which such extensive use of library materials is necessary. In the light of this fee, many students contend that they are due certainly the same privileges in the use of the reading room as in the use of the main library.

We wish it clearly understood in the beginning that we do not demand that the commerce reading room be kept open on Sundays, for there is the possibility that too much additional expense would be involved. However, if the library can be kept open without straining reserves, we think those who are voicing the complaint have just reason to do so.—B. M.

Wednesday Night's Performance: Pro

There is no man alive who can say with any degree of certainty whether or not a performance in Chapel Hill will have an audience, and if it has an audience, how that audience will react to the performance. A few hundred University students do strange things now and then. They are not an excellent gamble. E. Carrington Smith experimented with the caprices of Carolina when he brought "The Big Pond," "La Grande Mare," to Chapel Hill. And the students, happily, showed excellent taste and judgment. They went. And they enjoyed it. We are sure of that point because they employed none of their utterly infallible means of making known their disapproval. A large audience enjoyed hearing a clever, if inconsequential, play well done. We are glad Mr. Smith gambled. We hope he will do it again.

With translations as ubiquitous, prolific, and just generally common, as they are, there is little point in having a reading knowledge of a language. But with international commerce, travel, and education, there is a great deal of point in being able to speak the various languages. And there is only one better way of learning to speak it than by hearing it spoken. Yes, we hope Mr. Smith will gamble again.

—V. A. D.

Wednesday Night's Performance: Con

Another time we students have been "sucked-in" at the Carolina theatre. Wednesday night when we paid to see a picture in French, we were miserably disappointed. How the Paramount producers can release such a fraud is beyond our imagination.

Out of the whole cast there were not but four French actors at the most. Maurice Chevalier, Claudette Colbert, the landlady, and the man who sat at Chevalier's left at the boarding house table were excellent and the French they spoke was beautiful, but the others were absolutely ridiculous.

Ronnie did not even know his lines, much less know how to speak French. In one place which was particularly noticeable he said to Barbara, "Vous etes amoureux" for "Vous etes amoureuse." All the way through he was a shame to the French language.

We have heard that the show went over big in France as one of the first sound pictures shown in that country, but this can not possibly be true. They might see it as a version of American pronunciation of French, but before it was a week old it would be booed and hissed off the stage.

The best French actor on the screen is without a doubt Maurice Chevalier, and Claudette Colbert is almost as good. We all admire the charm and beauty of the language and acting of these two, but we can not appreciate it when they are surrounded by such abominable understudies.

For better results the Paramount-Publix corporation would do well to pick their French actors from the French students of this University.—J. R.

It is only because of my good nature that you are to be once again privileged to read this greatly-looked-forward-to column. The Managing Editor and I had a little squabble the other day and I was on the verge of telling him to try to run his paper without my worthy services, when I realized that, after all, my first duty was to my public. I further realized that he had just returned from New York and probably had a headache. I am sure that you will be delighted to know that everything has been smoothed over and we are once again bumming cigarettes from each other.

Which reminds me that M. E. above referred to marveled over the fact that there was radio service in every room in the New Yorker Hotel fourteen hours a day. The same thing is true in a number of dormitories on our campus, the difference being that it is impossible to shut out the blamed things when you want to study.

Someone makes the assertion that after the Duke Kentucky game, betting on Duke to defeat the Tar Heels was at its height. As far as I was able to learn, that was mostly talk. I heard of a great deal of fourteen point money being offered, but somehow one could never find just who was offering it. Now, don't think that I am one to judge the amount of confidence a school has in its team by the way the students bet, I am only lamenting the fact that when point money is talked on Duke against Carolina it is usually just talk. I expect to see an editorial denouncing this paragraph in either the Daily Tar Heel or the Duke paper. All of which would go to show the good work which John Lang and his "Federation" have done.

Went to a bridge party given for the Chi Ohs. not long ago and was fortunate enough to have as my last partner a girl who had her heart set on getting the "Booby" while I was well on my way to a decent score. That's my alibi and I'm going to stick to it.

There would have been a good fire at the Chi Phi house the other night but the alarm was put in too early. If people would only be a little more considerate and let the fire get a little start before notifying our honorable Fire Fighters, we might have a little excitement occassionally. Besides the Demon Fire should be given a few minutes handicap in order to give it a sporting chance against the men in the helmets.

The Daily Tar Heel headlines: "Scientists Conducting Quest For Cause Back of Oiliness." May I suggest that eight-thirties might be the reason. (I'm sorry. Let it drop. Let it drop.)

So one of our neighboring institutions has organized a "Virgin Club." We have no fear that such an organization will ever become a menace on our innocent little campus. Should such a movement ever be attempted, it undoubtedly would die in its infancy because of the lack of eligible members.

Oh, dear, oh dear, I can hardly wait for the "Love Feast" Saturday.

Molitore Chosen As Vocal Head at G. C.

Edward Molitore has been appointed to succeed the late Gilman Alexander as head of the vocal department of Greensboro College, it was announced Wednesday by Dr. S. B. Turrentine, president of that institution. Mr. and Mrs. Molitore, who have recently moved to Greensbore from New York City, sing tenor and soprano respectively in the choir of the First Presbyterian Church, Mr. Molitore leading the tenors. He has sung with numerous large orchestras and opera companies.

Mr. and Mrs. Molitore have both been chosen to sing in The Messiah—the Christmas oratorio to be presented in the music auditorium here on December 15. Dr. Dyer, who has heard them both sing, says that their work is of the highest type.

Student Pep Rally Set for 9:00 Tonight

Football Team Will Attend Mass Meeting At Old Well In Body

Collins To Take Squad Out of Town for Night to Get Away From Noise of Campus.

1500 STUDENTS EXPECTED

Dormitory and Fraternity Presidents Request Support of Student Groups.

Tonight at nine o'clock the student body will gather around the Old Well for a monstrous pep meeting, which will be similar to the rally held before the football team left for Virginia. The team will attend the meeting in a body, and immediately afterwards will leave for a nearby town for the night to get away from the noise of the campus. A crowd of 1500 students is expected to join in with the cheerleaders in a peppy rehearsal of the Carolina yells, and several short talks by prominent men are being planned.

Judge W. J. Brogden of the North Carolina Supreme Court and a member of the class of '98 had been invited to make the principal talk of the evening, but it was learned last night that he will be unable to come. Coach Chuck Collins will have something to say about the game which should be of interest to the students. The University band will be at the meeting to lead the assembly in "Hark the Sound," the song of the cheerios, and will play several of their stirring marches before the meeting and between the rehearsals of the yells. Wallace Shelton, president of the University Dormitory Club, and Jack Ward, president of the Interfraternity Council, have made known to the several organizations on the campus the hour of the meeting, and have requested that these groups give their fullest support to the rally. This is the method that was followed to organize the campus for the successful meeting before the Virginia game, and judging from present indications, the same support will be accorded the session tonight.

Team Holds Secret Practice

Behind barred gates at Emerson Field, with an air of secrecy overhanging the scene on every side, the football squad yesterday did its last heavy training for the State titular game with Duke tomorrow. Only a final light polishing drill remains for today.

Meagre reports emanating from the secret practice had it that the Tar Heels looked good. Coach Collins ventured the opinion that the squad was in good physical shape, and that he expected them to be on their toes and fighting all the way tomorrow. However, Henry House and George Houston have been limping about the field all this week because of injuries received at Virginia, but Trainer Chuck Quinlan expects to have them ready tomorrow.

Of course Mr. Rockefeller could have built many churches with the money spent on one in New York, but doubtless he knows where it is needed most.

SPURTS IN SPORTS

By Jack Bessen

The "big day" in North Carolina football is only twenty-four hours away with both Duke and North Carolina primed for the battle which will decide the football championship in the North State. By their showing over the Cavaliers, the Tar Heels will probably rule the favorite to retain their title, but then Duke hasn't any mollycoddles to put in against the Tar Heels.

Duke, in their last two games, has shown a gradual decline in offensive power although their defense is as good as ever. Their backs didn't show any great tendency to run wild in the 13-13 Wake Forest game, nor did they shine against a comparatively weak Washington and Lee outfit. However, the general opinion seems to be that the Blue Devils didn't show anything to Tar Heel scouts, but will open up with everything in the game tomorrow.

Because of their 41-0 victory over the Cavaliers, the Blue and White is open to a beautiful attack of over confidence. If so, look out for a Blue Devil victory. But if Coach Collins has knocked any possible conceit out of our gridders, Carolina should win by two touchdowns.

The selection of Alabama to represent the South and East in the annual Rose Bowl game at Los Angeles New Year's day came as no surprise to football followers throughout the country. The Crimson Tide climaxed a schedule, second to only Notre Dame in difficulty, by defeating the Georgia Bulldogs 12-0, and well do they deserve the Dixie title. Their hosts, Washington State, also closed an unusually difficult schedule with a victory over Villanova. This is the third time in the last decade that Alabama has been selected to play the Rose Bowl classic, and the Tide has yet to be defeated there, defeating the Southern California Trojans 7-6 and tieing Stanford 7-7. On paper the Southerners appear to be the strongest and will be the favorite to continue their unblemished record in Los Angeles.

The tie between Alabama and Tulane for the Southern Conference championship again brings out the necessity of the revising the scoring system now in vogue—the percentage basis. The Crimson Tide has beaten eight Conference foes, most of them tough, while Tulane has only played four Conference games, of which, only Georgia Tech and Georgia offered any opposition. On the basis of merit, the Tide certainly deserves preference over the Green Wave when the Dixie champion is selected, but instead there will be a tie because both teams have a 1.000 average.

The plan that the writer suggests is the one used in the Na-

Conference Prohibits Freshman Game

The state championship Carolina-Duke game here Saturday will sound taps for the football careers of eleven heroes of the gridiron at Carolina.

Father Time's keen-bladed scythe will wreak especial damage among the Tar Heel backs.

Captain Strud Nash will be the big loss. Nash led the touchdown makers against Duke last year, and for three seasons has consistently been one of the cleverest running, neatest-blocking, and best pass-receiving halfbacks in the South.

And then there will be Jim Magner and Jimmy Maus, two of Carolina's best passing halfbacks of all time; Chuck Erickson, diminutive broken field ace who split honors with Magner in Carolina's 1928 victory over Duke; Henry House, driving fullback; and Pete Wyrick, heady and able quarterback over a three-year period.

The line losses will include three regulars and two reserves who have seen much service. Ned Lipscomb is being prominently mentioned for All-Southern center, while George Thompson and Aubrey Parsley have played left tackle and right end as regulars this year. Ellis Crew, tackle, and Shields Tabb, end, are the reserve lettermen who are ending up their college careers.

All these boys will wind up their eligibility period except George Thompson, who is a senior but has another year of eligibility, and may return if he desires. All of the number will be striving tomorrow to bring a third consecutive state title to Chapel Hill, and to keep Carolina's record with Duke unblemished since 1893.

SCRUBS TO PLAY KISKI IN PLACE OF FROSH SQUAD

S. I. C. Officials Intervene When Advised That Yearlings Have Played Five Games.

Due to the intervention of Southern conference officials, the scheduled post- season game between the Carolina freshmen and Kiski school has been definitely posponed, it was learned late last night. A game with the Tar Heel reserve, which has been set for two-thirty, will take the place of the yearling contest.

The action resulted from the notification of authorities here from the headquarters of the S. I. C. that the frosh here had played five games this season. and by the regulations of the conference would not be permitted to take part in another this year.

Authorities here, in booking the game, classified it as a post season meeting and were of the opinion that it would not come under the restrictions. Infraction of this rule calls for the suspension from intercollegiate football of those who take part in the game. Kiski officials, who arrived here with the preparatory school team yesterday afternoon readily consented to the substitution of the scrubs for the Tar Babies.

In practice yesterday afternoon, the "Notre Dame of Northern prep schools" presented a powerful, large line, and an aggregation of fast backs. The visiting squad ran through a few plays, kicked, and passed, to limber up for tomorrow's encounter.

Conquerors of the Pitt, and Pennsylvania frosh as well as the plebes of Navy and Army, the invaders will be a tough nut

1931 DUKE GAME WILL BE PLAYED ON NOVEMBER 21

Saturday's Game Last Post-Season Meeting of North State Rivals.

Durham, December 4.—Duke and Carolina will play their last December tilt on Saturday when the Devils and Tar Heels mix up in a classic which will decide the state title. The new Duke schedule card for 1931, just released, shows the ancient rivals playing at Durham on next November 21.

Duke's schedule will close on the Saturday after Thanksgiving, the Devils playing Washington and Lee at Lexington, Va. For the first time in over a decade Duke will have no Turkey Day game listed.

Two new foes appear on the Devil schedule, V. M. I. on October 3 and Tennessee on October 31. The eight other games will be with teams met during the present season.

DUKE, CAROLINA STARS SPEAK IN B. C. SPORTLIGHT

Coaches' Selection of All-State Selection Announced By Collins.

A short and snappy affair including enthusiastic and spirited talks, was the menu of the B. C. Sports Revue broadcast last Wednesday evening over radio station WPTF in Raleigh. A galaxy of stars representing the cream of the crop of North Carolina's contribution to the sphere of footballdom aided Coach Collins in putting on one of the best programs of the year.

Such luminaries as Buz Rosky, who plays the end position for Duke, and Bill Murray, the hard-driving, indomitable halfback who alternates between that post and fullback, carrying on for the Methodists were the contribution of Duke towards the success of the thirty minutes of football discussion. SEVEN MATCHES SCHEDULED FOR WRESTLING TEAM

Season Opens January 10 When Grapplers Meet Princeton There.

The 1931 wrestling schedule is announced with wrestling taking the spotlight soon after the Christmas holidays. On January tenth, the varsity moves to Princeton to do battle with old Nassau. The Frosh take on V. P. I., January thirty-first. Six other varsity meets have been scheduled with heavy opposition expected in all of them. Three other frosh meets have been arranged and it is very probable that more will be added.

There have been thirty active members of the wrestling with fair distribution in all the classes. No one man has his place cinched on the squad as tryouts are held before each meet. However, the outstanding grapplers that have reported to date are as follows: Lawson and Usher among the 115 pounders; Au-

GRAIL DANCE TO BE TERM'S LAST

Bynum Gymnasium Will Be Decorated With Christmas Colors For Occasion.

The third and last Grail dance of this quarter will take place in Bynum gymnasium Saturday night after the Duke-Carolina game between the hours of nine and twelve. The gymnasium will be decorated in Christmas colors, and music will be furnished by Jack Wardlaw and his Carolina Tar Heels. Chaperones will be presented with boxes of candy.

This is one of the first of the Grail dances to be given immediately after a football game as special permission was obtained from the officers of the German club.

Officials of the Grail expect this dance to have the largest attendance of the quarter because of the crowd of visitors in town for the final football game of the season. Tickets for the dance are to be on sale at Pritchard-Lloyd's drug store and at the book exchange Friday morning and if they are not all sold they will be on sale in the back of Bynum gymnasium on Saturday night at eight-thirty o'clock. The tickets will be one dollar this year, an increase of twenty five cents over the price last year.

The Grail gives three dances each quarter of the academic year. The dances are informal and are attended by a representative group of people. The proceeds from the sale of tickets are used for intramural awards and other things given by the Grail.

The officers of the Grail order are John Slater, president, Haywood Weeks, secretary, and Mayne Albright, treasurer.

"The times are changing and we are changing with them," is a familiar Latin quotation. The University library keeps up with this idea, for it subscribes to over 3,200 periodicals.

Over six hundred of these may be found in the right wing of the main reading room, and are arranged by subjects in this manner: philosophy fifteen, book review and bibliography twenty-six, sociology twenty-six, religion twenty-seven, classical literature thirty-one, fine arts thirty-five, English and German literature fifty-one, Romance literature fifty-two, history and political science sixty-five, and various other magazines, one hundred seventy-two.

In addition to these there are 35 newspapers, including some of the leading newspapers of the country such as The New York Times, Springfield Republican, New York World, and Christian Science Monitor. Among the state papers taken by the library are News and Observer, Charlotte Observer, Greensboro Daily News, and many others.

Closely following the newspapers in popularity are Collier's, Saturday Evening Post, Judge, and Life, The Literary Digest, Time, The Nation, and the New Republic which have a respectable following among the students. The really serious-minded students read Harper's and The American Mercury. Some of the worthwhile publications such as the Yale Review, Fortnightly, and the Nineteenth Century receive little attention.

peared to speak for Carolina. The former, diminutive Pete Wyrick who will be bidding adieu to college football war togs tomorrow, spoke on the defensive tactics of an alert signal-barker. Peter, by the way, made his initial appearance over WPTF in this talk. He confessed that his talk was unprepared, as he had been racking his mind for a suitable subject on which to converse intelligently. After giving his eloquent and satirical comment on the absence of the barbers and butchers of the "Hill' who were destined to play an important part in the program, he conversed briefly on the merits of the quarterback.

The Duke stars talked glibly about end play, its disastrous effect on running attacks, and about the influence which their coach, Jimmy DeHart, has had on their team since he came to the Friendly City. "Smilin' " Bill Murray, scintillating backfield ace for the Blue Devils eulogized the Duke coach to the skies. In Murray's opinion, DeHart has been grossly misunderstood up until the past year. And now the boys are behind him to the limit, as is easily shown by their meritorious work of the past football season.

Johnny Branch, delivered the most interesting bit of talk on the entire bill. The drift of the small quarterback's talk was concise and to the point. According to him, the most vital point about playing the barking post is getting the confidence of the men on the team, and compelling them to believe in him with the sincerest faith.

The Carolina mentor announced an all-state team which was picked by the coaches of the Big Five in North Carolina. They are given as follows: ends, Rosky, Duke, and Gregson, Wake Forest; tackles: Cobb, State, and Williams, Wake Forest; guards: Davis, Duke, and Fysal, U. N. C.; Lipscomb was unanimous selection for the mythical pivot berth; Branch was donated the quarterback honors, while Magner of U. N. C., and Murray of Duke were handed the laurels for stellar halfback play. Henry House, U. N. C., was presented the honor of the fullback post on the all-state team. No honorable mentions were picked but there were any number of the so called runners-up who would have come in for a share of glory had there been any announced.

Concluding the all-state lineup, the Carolina strategist wound up his program by announcing a number of boy's names who won free passes to the game which decides the State championship between Duke and Carolina here at Chapel Hill tomorrow.

tional Hockey League and also in the professional soccer circuits. For every win that a team records over a Conference opponent, two points should be awarded the victors; and for a tie, one point shall be awarded both teams. At the close of the season, the team that has the greatest number of points shall be declared champions. By this method it is easy to see that Southern football will be strengthened since there will be a tendency on the part of Conference teams to add more schools in their own circuit to their schedule. Another advantage that this scoring system will have is that a team that loses one game will not necessarily be eliminated, since the final standing will be determined by the number of games won ONLY. Coach Fetzer and Dr. Hobbs might take this into consideration at the Southern Conference meeting next week.

SOPHOMORES POSTPONE SMOKER THIS QUARTER

The sophomore class executive committee decided at a recent meeting not to hold a smoker this quarter, due to the fact that examinations are near and that there was not sufficient time to prepare for one adequately. The decision of the committee was unanimous; it was agreed upon that the money allotted for this function be held over until the spring quarter and added to the funds for the sophomore prom.

Ferguson who tips the beam at 165 pounds and Cowper at 175 pounds are tried veterans. There are several boys fighting it out for the 145 pound class.

The weaknesses in the squad are found among the heavyweights and the lightweights, the 115 pound boys. Potential candidates for the squad if they expect to do active work this year are urged by the coaches to turn out immediately after the holidays, since the first meet comes so soon after the return from vacation that heavy work will be required to prepare for it.

About twenty-five youngsters have been active among the Frosh. There is noticeable lack of capable men among the heavier weights, from 150 pounds and up. Coach Abbott calls all men who have the necessary weight and enough ambition to report immediately after the hilodays.

Coach Quinlan makes no prediction on what will turn up on the right side of the ledger for the season. The squad has been hitting its work hard. His outfit will be sure to offer heavy opposition to anything that the opponents may present.

SENIOR CLASSES SPONSOR SECOND GOOD WILL TRY

Trophy Will Be Presented Winners of Duke-Carolina Game In Friendship Effort.

Recognizing the fact that the annual football games between Carolina and Duke are clearly destined to become the high spots on the schedules of both universities, the senior classes of the two institutions have taken steps to place the rivalry on the highest level of sportsmanship.

Last season a joint meeting of officials in student organizations on both campi was sponsored by the literary societies, and a series of resolutions were drawn up and adopted favoring the establishment of better relationships in athletic, journalistic, and all other activities. From one of these resolutions there developed an idea of some tangible token of the friendly rivalry sought for, and this idea found expression in the friendship trophy which is to be awarded this season for the first time.

The trophy is to be an annual award presented each year at the close of the game to the winning team. It will remain in the possession of the victor until the next game is played. There will be no permanent possession, however, for any specific number of games won, but it is intended to be an annual award. According to the present plan, the trophy will be presented by the captain of the losing team to the captain of the winner, the rival chiefs meeting at midfield immediately after the close of the game.

The trophy is of silver and is mounted on a black base, oval in shape. Its upright surface presents two silver goal-posts and cross-bar made in proportion to those on the playing field. Dates and names of the winning teams will be engraved thereon each year.

KOCH WILL GIVE ANNUAL READING

At eight-thirty Sunday evening in the Playmakers Theatre, Frederick H. Koch will give his annual reading of Dickens' immortal Christmas Carol. For twenty-five years, the director of the Playmakers has annually read this play around Christmas-time to audiences in New York, Boston, and in numerous towns throughout the state. This Sunday will mark his 96th reading of the Carol. He began twenty-five years ago when connected with the University of North Dakota, where before a fireside in the parlor of the Woman's Building, he read it for the first time to an assembled group consisting of students and faculty members.

Professor Koch has an established reputation as a character interpreter. He has, in a pinch, taken parts in Shakespearean plays presented here. When just out of college he gave a one-man show of The Merchant of Venice, which he presented before audiences from New York to Boston.

Negro Singers on Radio

The Silver Tongue quartet, colored singers from Chapel Hill, will broadcast over station WPTF, Raleigh, Sunday morning between the hours of ten-thirty and eleven o'clock.

JOB'S KINFOLKS BEING PUBLISHED

Play by Loretto C. Bailey Accepted by Boston Publishing Company.

Loretto Carroll Bailey's three-act play, Job's Kinfolks has been accepted by the Walter H. Baker Publishing Company of Boston, and is now in the process of publication.

The full length play is the result of three one-act plays dealing with the lives of mill people. It is the story of a mill-woman's vain effort to rear an only daughter amid adverse circumstances and conditions which finally prove the stronger. Although the plot is cleverly woven, it is the characterization which accounts largely for the play's success. Mrs. Bailey, herself, acted the part of Kizzy, the grandmother, in one of the earlier presentations. The Theatre Magazine commented on her performance in the following way, "In her remarkable characterization of the old grandmother, she caught the image of tired, despairing old age with such sincerity and understanding as might be expected from a seasoned, mature actress—certainly, not from a young woman of twenty."

The play was originally produced by The Carolina Playmakers here on November 7, 8, 9, 1929 with Mrs. Bailey acting the part of Kizzy, Nettina Strobach as Kate, Phoebe Harding as Katherine, Muriel Wolff as Estelle, Howard Bailey as Danny, and Hubert Heffner taking the part of Carl Rogers. The revised full version play was the result of a combination of the original Job's Kinfolks, and its sequel, Black Water, produced April 5 and 6. The author was but nineteen when the first draft was read in 1927 before an audience which, though generally unimpressed, complimented her vivid characterization. With this incentive she returned the next morning with an entirely new play. From this time on she constantly improved it until finally a reviewer for The New York Times sums it thus: "Written with full knowledge of a mill-town background and played with authority and understanding, it has emerged a production of excellent unity and compelling force."

The committee to select an additional alma mater has received contributions over a period of a month, but feeling that there has not been an adequate enough expression from either the alumni or the student union they have extended the time until December 20.

From time to time The Daily Tar Heel will publish the proposed alma maters. The first of these follows:

ALMA MATER
By Alex E. Alexander

At thy sacred altar plighted
Our high vows shall be,
Where the flame of Truth is lighted
We will honor thee—
Alma mater, kindest mother,
Wisdom's glowing shrine,
All thy sons know not another
Heart as good as thine.

Children, to thy shining portals
Eagerly we fare,
At thy feet, most blest of mortals
We for life prepare;
Eating at thy feast of learning
Held all else above,
Till our minds at last are burning
With thy mother love.

Then into the world outpouring,
Ready for the strife,
Sons of thine go forth adoring
Thee, to conquer life.
Alma Mater we will cherish
Far tho we may roam
And never in our soul shall perish
Her Carolina home.

Graduate Of 1860 Recalls University Of His Youth

By Ben Neville

Sitting quietly at home, reminiscing of the days long past, living in the glories of the ante-bellum South, a typical old southern gentleman recalls the happy days he spent in his Alma Mater over seventy years ago. To him that space of time seems but yesterday, and his thoughts wander back to those familiar scenes in which he played a part. Vivid are the memories of those occurrencies and tender are the remembrances of friends he held so dear. Most of his college mates have passed into the Great Beyond, but to him they live again in the dreams and visions of his youth when they were in school together.

In 1860 about ninety ambitious boys were graduated from the University of North Carolina to pursue their life's work. The nation was then overspread with a black cloud of civil war, and those young gallants, fresh from the study of old Greek and Roman battles and conflicts of chemical atoms, heroically joined the fray, most of them in defense of their beloved state and southland, while others went back into their native North to fight against their former college friends. For four long years they were engaged in that mighty vortex which finally brought desolation and ruin upon their Alma Mater and the South. Of those boys who were graduated in '60 only two have not been called before the Supreme Commander—Dan Coleman and John Thorpe—and strangely enough they were on opposite sides in the conflict, the former being a Federal and the latter a Confederate.

Today Captain John H. Thorpe, now in his ninety-third year, lives anew the days he spent on the University campus and the trying circumstances he faced during the War Between the States. His memory is exceedingly vivid of the past, and he delights in his many friends with recollections of the University of his youth. To him this is an entirely different era and he is proud to see that the infant college of his day has grown into maturity. He has always had a strong affection for her and has followed her growth with great interest. He saw her fall in the gloomy days of Reconstruction only to rise again with new life and energy. With a staunch band of loyal alumni he nobly fought for and assisted in her re-opening, and during the critical days that followed, from 1875 to 1885, he served as a trustee.

"I have always had a deep affection for the University," said Captain Thorpe, "and I shall forever hold the memories of the days I spent there in a tender place of my heart. I consider the friendships I formed at Chapel Hill are of more value to me than the learning I gained from books, for no matter where I have chanced to go I have always found some friend from Carolina. In my day a college education consisted mainly of a knowledge of Greek, latin, and other language courses; all of that I have forgotten but my friends have a vivid place in my memory."

In this ante-bellum University, according to Captain Thorpe, the real governing bodies were the two literary societies, the Dialectic Senate and the Philanthropic Assembly. Not only were they arenas for debate but also they enforced the discipline of the University, and the fear of incurring their censure was greater than that of offending the faculty. These societies also had charge of the beautification of the campus, and students were fined for walking on the grass or for throwing paper on it.

Captain Thorpe joined the Phi, as was the custom for men from eastern North Carolina, and was very fond of the society. He testifies that the Phi was worth more to him than any other college activity. The meetings of the Assembly were secret, and honor and loyalty were stressed. The society was strictly in order at all times, and each meeting was conducted with great decorum, the members performing their duties with much spirit and diligence. Sitting on the rostrum was a

N. C. FEDERATION WILL MEET HERE

Executive Committee Members Are To Convene After Game To Consider Problems.

This evening immediately following the game, beginning with an informal banquet at the Graduate Club, the executive committee of The North Carolina Federation of Students will convene.

Among those who will be present are: John A. Lang, president of the Federation; W. D. Murray of Duke; Mary Jane Wharton, N. C. C. W.; Elizabeth Capp, G. C.; Dan Goodykoontz, Davidson; Clyde Blackman, Catawba; Mack Stout, and Dan Paul of State College; all of whom are presidents of their respective student bodies. A number of local campus student leaders, Pat Patterson, Mayne Albright, Red Greene, and several faculty members together with President-elect Graham have been invited.

The main things to be considered at this meeting are three in number—1. Whether to admit several of the smaller colleges such as Guilford, Elon and Saint Marys into the federation. 2. These student leaders will make a survey of all the work accomplished thus far, and will report same to each member student government and plans for the work of the federation will be decided upon for the remainder of the year. 3. To this meeting will come representatives of the North Carolina members of the National Federation and at this time a definite program of new projects and plans for the National Federation will be drawn for the purpose of submitting them to the congress of the national organization during the coming Christmas holidays.

For the purpose of establishing an endowment for the work of The National Federation, the State Federation will present at the Atlanta Congress, a sum of money to the National organization. Already, $40.00 has been raised and the officials hope to increase this amount to $100.

At this meeting a report will be made concerning the work of the State Student association on the improvement of Duke-Carolina relations. Included with this, will be a description of the activities of the State Student Officials in working through the student councils, Y. M. C. A.'s, fraternities, college presses, and other groups and clubs for the betterment of the Duke-Carolina spirit.

White Is Delegate To Chemical Society

This year the American Chemical Engineering Society will hold its annual meeting in New Orleans next week. From Monday through Wednesday there will be informal meetings or discussions held daily. On Thursday and Friday the society will conduct a tour through the Teche district for the purpose of looking into various industries.

Large numbers of chemistry professors and advanced students in chemistry attend this convention every year and most of the universities send representatives to the meetings. Dr. A. M. White of the chemistry department will be the representative from this University. Dr. White will leave for New Orleans either late Saturday or early Sunday morning.

PARKER STRESSES NEED OF LEADERS IN NATION TODAY

Judge Believes the Literary Societies Are Best Fitted to Produce These Men.

"Bring the literary societies out of the attics and put them back in their rightful position on the campus," stated John J. Parker in his address at the banquet of the Dialectic Senate in the ballroom of the Carolina Inn Thursday night.

The speaker began his talk impressing the fact that democracy would live only so long as it remained efficient. "This efficiency depends solely on the development of popular leadership," continued the Judge. He was of the opinion that never before in its history was democracy crying for leaders as it is today. "It is standing at one of the most crucial periods in its existence," he further declared.

It was his idea that the colleges and universities in the country must be depended upon to furnish this much needed leadership. Because students learn early to become interested in state and national affairs by taking part in the literary societies, the speaker stated that these groups were the best fitted to produce state and national leaders.

"The man with a personality who can deliver a message to the public, has and always will be listened to with respect," said Justice Parker. "A man can't become a leader unless he knows how to express himself in public assemblies."

In closing the Judge of the fourth circuit court of appeals made the suggestion that the University give credit for good work in these literary societies.

Dean F. F. Bradshaw, who was the first speaker on the program, stated his belief that the University was in need of the literary societies as much if not

A Grand Finale

Today's game climaxes Carolina's football season. It climaxes the careers of eleven Carolina players. By reason of the keen rivalry, the records of the teams involved, and the styles of football employed, the game today should climax both Carolina's and Duke's schedule.

Thousands of supporters of both Duke and Carolina will be in the stands today expecting 60 minutes of real football. Past records and past upsets will be examined to see what if any bearing they may have on today's game.

We are not interested in what has happened in years gone by. We are not concerned with the performance of the team in other games this season. Nothing in the past will determine today's score. The play of each individual as part of the Carolina team will determine whether we win or lose. And that play must be up to par every minute of the game.

Along with thousands of alumni and students we expect Carolina to win today. Good football alone is not enough; it must be great football for 60 minutes. Carolina expects great football from every man playing but more so of those eleven men who play their last games as Carolina men.

We know you can play football. We expect you to do it this afternoon.

Extracurricular Inertia

Observant students and faculty members are complaining that student interest in the many extracurricular pursuits on the campus is fading. This lessening of interest seems to be a creature of the elapsed part of the present fall quarter. Is general participation and interest in our various non-academic activities below par, we ask? In the light of observation, we answer without hesitation that it is.

With the exception of the Di and Phi literary societies, which have for some reason gotten into their second wind, campus organizations are suffering from student inertia more than at any previous time in the writer's stay on this campus. The Daily Tar Heel management has been forced to "fire" no small number of staff members for non-performance of assigned duties. Were it not for four faithful contributors, the Carolina Magazine would doubtless be nothing other than eight blank sheets of paper. Judges for debates are rather frequently recruited from the audience about ten minutes prior to the debate. Even though the membership of the debate squad shows no decline, tryouts to date have been suggestive of no research on the part of candidates for the teams.

Is there an explanation of such a situation? If so, does it constitute a valid reason? These are questions which are foremost in the writer's mind, an attempted answer to which is the remainder of this editorial.

The intensely hard fought campus political campaign of last spring has undoubtedly sown the seeds of bitterness and non-interestedness in the hearts of many. Even the victorious party in this struggle worked so hard that they have not yet fully emerged from their appointed rest. These are not reasons of sufficiently high caliber to thwart the work of those students who hide themselves and personal gain behind the movement and the organization with which they are connected. But there are few of us who are willing to do so. The student body seems to be at rest. If extreme activity in the past is not the reason for such a state of affairs, then there is a storm brewing now.

The student body will rise from its slumber in time, no doubt. The status of campus organization must be determined by the nearness of this event.—J. C. W.

A Fight To The Finish

This afternoon in Kenan stadium a young giant, confident of his potential strength and ability, will swagger forth to engage a battle scarred veteran for the state's gridiron championship. Duke University has just this year reached manhood and come into its heritage, in football as well as in other things. Throughout the early part of the present season it has ridden on the crest of a wave of victory, the ease of which surprised even the members of its team.

Now the Blue Devils come to Chapel Hill with the hope of defeating the most formidable of their traditional enemies, the Carolina Tar Heels. For thirty-seven years past, Duke has been unable to down the University in a football contest. It is its intention to demonstrate its newly acquired prowess by breaking the record this afternoon. The Tar Heels are determined, of course, that "they shall not pass;" so it will probably be a fight to the finish with the best team (which we naturally believe to be Carolina) eventually winning.

It is indeed commendable that both schools, engaging thus in such intense rivalry, should meet with the best of good will and harmonious relations. Hoping to improve the feeling between Duke and Carolina, campus leaders and journalists have been sponsoring a movement for the accomplishment of that end both here and at Duke. And the most friendly gesture of all will be made on the field this afternoon, when, after the game, the captain of the winning team will be given a trophy, awarded by the senior classes of the two schools, to be held until the next Carolina-Duke meeting.—E. C. D.

supervisor, who reported all misbehavior at the end of each meeting and the offenders were fined. The extent of the fines ranged from twenty-five cents to a dollar.

Among the two societies there was great competition for out-of-state men. In 1859 the Phi sent a committee to meet President James Buchanan, who visited the University at commencement that year, and escorted him to Chapel Hill. With great pomp and ceremony the president was initiated into the society.

"There were few Greek-letter fraternities in that day," commented Captain Thorpe, "and they were considered 'uppish.' The masses of students were not members of fraternities, and it was the best policy to run against them in politics."

There were no organized athletics at that time. "We never heard of such a thing," Captain Thorpe declared. Some students, sons of rich southern planters, kept house in club style. They brought servants, horses, dogs, and guns, and spent their holidays hunting and engaging in other field sports. Although there was no gymnasium, there was an unlimited field for such sports as were engaged in at that time.

At commencement the balls were gala affairs. Belles and rose-bud debutantes flocked from all parts of the state, and there was a carnival of lavish splendor both in dress and decorations. Smith hall, later the Library, served as the ball-room and was probably unequalled in the state for such an occasion. Much dancing, of the pigeon-wing order, was done and many speeches, both on the rostrum and in private ears, were made. These commencement balls were considered the most outstanding social events in the state.

During the time of his attendance here Captain Thorpe said that there was much hazing done but violence was hardly ever resorted to. No hair-cutting was done, and he never heard of any serious accident or injury resulting from horse-play. Most of the hazing consisted of playing pranks on unsuspecting freshmen but on many occasions paddling took place with much gusto on the part of the wielders of those instruments.

All students, except seniors, were required to attend chapel meetings in Gerrard hall both morning and evening to answer the roll call but freshmen were not allowed to enter the front door.

The initiations of the Mystic Tie, a sophomore secret society, were events of great interest on the campus. Once each year the entire student body would attend the initiation, and the rites were both amusing and impressive. The King sat on a high rostrum and supervised the initiation. His orders were carried out by twenty guards armed with pillows. The neophytes were forced to do almost everything they couldn't do. When one refused he was immediately set upon by the guards and beaten almost breathless with the pillows unless he did as ordered.

Captain Thorpe entered the University in 1856 and received his degree in 1860. When North Carolina ratified the Ordinance of Secession, he enlisted his services in the Confederate army and "walked from Bethel to Appomatox." He served for a short time in the A Bethel company but was later transferred to the A 47th, of which he was captain until Lee's surrender. In memory of his fallen comrades and through his love and admiration for them, he has compiled a roster of Nash County Confederate soldiers and has included in it the Edgecombe County roster.

After the War he turned his energies toward rebuilding his beloved state and sought to overthrow the scalawags and carpet-baggers who were sapping the life from her. With other "Bourbon Democrats," Captain Thorpe fought to safeguard Anglo-Saxon civilization and to perpetuate southern ideals and principles during the dark days of Reconstruction, a period in our history from which every self-respecting American citizen turns with shame and disgust. In October, 1875, the University was re-opened after being closed in 1870, and Captain Thorpe was elected one of its trustees. He was elected to the General Assembly in 1887.

With a calm satisfaction that only proceeds from the knowledge of duty honorably and nobly fulfilled, the old gentleman is ready to face his Maker as fearlessly as he charged the Yankee guns at Gettysburg. He has lived a long life of usefulness as a soldier, lawyer, and planter and is now ready to reap his reward by joining his comrades "in those green pastures beside the still waters." His shoulders are slightly bent but he walks with a firm tread. At present he is enjoying splendid health and delights in walking about and chatting with his friends. The glint of battle returns to his dimming eyes as he relates to them the stirring battles of the Civil War. He is as courteous as any young gallant of the Old South and he makes his visitors feel at home.

"My people have been very kind and good to me," he said, "And my Lord has been splendid, preserving me in body, physically, mentally, morally, and spiritually throughout the War and the trying days that followed."

It is only fitting to mention that Daniel R. Coleman, who shares with Captain Thorpe the honor of being the oldest living graduate of the University, now resides in Belleville, Ontario, Canada, after living a life of service as a teacher in schools for the deaf and dumb.

PARKER STRESSES NEED OF LEADERS IN NATION TODAY

more than ever before, and they are still just as important as any other activity in the life of this institution.

Professor George McKie in his talk spoke of the fact that Judge Parker was the only man he knew of who had been twice elected president of his class while in school here. The English professor was much delighted in the fact that there seemed to be an apparent revival of the interest in the literary societies this year. He stated his hope that this interest would continue to increase.

After giving a little history of the societies, Dr. Collier Cobb, the next speaker, gave several examples which tended to show how the societies of the past stood out not only on the campus, but in all parts of the entire country.

In introducing the speaker of the occasion, President-elect Frank Porter Graham recalled some of his remembrances when Judge Parker was a student here. He stated that he was of the opinion that all the signs seemed to indicate that the societies were undergoing a true revival, and were becoming more as they were in former days.

The banquet, which was attended by sixty-one guests, was presided over by W. C. Medford, president of the senate.

DRINK TOPIC FOR CONTEST ESSAYS

A national essay contest, open to all college students in this country and culminating in an international contest, is being sponsored by the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association. The general theme for the contest is "Alcoholic Drink in Modern Society," but each entrant must choose a specific subject for himself. "The purpose of the contest is to increase intelligent interest in the problem of alcoholic drink in modern society, to encourage students to study it for themselves and to express the results of their study in a paper that will convey information and, at the same time, be interesting to the reader."

National prizes amount to one thousand dollars; first prize being five hundred dollars (in the form of a trip to Europe): second, three hundred dollars; third, a hundred and fifty; and fourth, fifty. The country is divided into eight interstate districts. Interstate prizes are one hundred dollars—divided into first, second, and third prizes of fifty, thirty, and twenty dollars. First is the interstate contest, the winners of which go to the national contest. The interstate contest closes March 31, 1931, and the papers, not exceeding two thousand words in length, must be in at the central office by that time.

For further information and an application card write to the Contest Secretary, Intercollegiate Prohibition Association, Driscoll Hotel, room 10, Washington, D. C.

Jefferson Letter Sells for $23,000

Mrs. Raleigh Minor, sister of F. P. Venable, ex-president of this university, recently sold a letter written by Thomas Jefferson for $23,000. The letter was signed JJuly 1, 1776, just before the adoption of the Delcaration of Independence. It is addressed to William Fleming, from whom Jefferson had just heard that he had been re-elected to Congress. He tells of the drafting of the Declaration, on which he had been working for several weeks. Then he recounts a conspiracy against Washington and the retreat of the American Army in the nprth after the siege of Quebec.

The sale was made to Dr. A. S. Rosenbach, a well-known agent of collectors. He purchased it at an auction in New York. "Combined in this letter to an exceptional extent," says the New York Times, "are the historical importance and sentimental interest dear to the heart of collectors."

Small Fire In Venable Hall

Venable hall was the scene of a small fire Thursday night. Mr. M. W. Conn was working in his private laboratory when a quantity of ether, with which he was working, caught fire. This in itself was not particularly dangerous but the fact that in the laboratory was a considerable amound of inflammable chemicals added to the hazard of a blaze breaking out.

Mr. Conn realized this and tried to get the container of burning ether outside. It was too hot to hold long however and Mr. Conn let it burn there on the floor where it would do no harm. The inside of the door and the window-shade were scorched but other than that no damage was done. Very few of the members of the department were aware that there had been a fire and did not find out about it until the next morning.

Carolina-Duke Game 2:30 at Stadium

CAMPUS INTEREST IN BATTLE RUNS HIGH AT MEETING

President Graham and Others Speak to Great Assembly at Old Well.

15,000 TICKETS ARE SOLD

Odds for Game Generally Even With Some Conceding Carolina Slight Edge.

By K. C. Ramsay

At two-thirty this afternoon in Kenan Stadium the football teams of Carolina and Duke will clash in the football game which will decide the championship of North Carolina, and will also decide whether or not Jimmy DeHart can retire from his coaching position at Duke with having defeated Carolina once.

Up until ten days ago fans were confident that the Blue Devils would break the eight-year jinx and Duke supporters were offering up to fourteen points in bets, but since Thanksgiving the picture has changed and many have been known to offer odds to the neighboring institution. Opinion out over the state is that the odds are now even, while in Chapel Hill it is believed that with a clear day the Tar Heels should be conceded the edge.

Campus Interest Runs High

The interest and spirit of the campus rose last night at the monstrous pep meeting at the Old Well to the highest peak of the year as 1500 students stood in the rain to hear the noted speakers on the rally program and join in with the cheerleaders in giving the team a big send-off as they left for Sanford where they spent the night away from the noise of the campus.

Dr. Archibald Henderson, the first speaker at the pep rally, said that with football teams of the South standing above the teams of other sections this year it is almost impossible for an eleven to have a perfect season. "Carolina, like many other teams, has had its ups and downs," said Dr. Henderson, "but is now up and is going to rise to the top in tomorrow's game."

Coach Chuck Collins in his talk indicated that he is pleased with the showing of the team during the past two weeks and that he expects them to give their best performance of the year today.

"The University is bigger than football, football is bigger than the victory," said President Frank Graham, "and the team tomorrow is going to fight so hard and clean that if we lose we will win something bigger than the game, and if we win we will lose something bigger than the victory." President Graham also called attention to the trophy which is to be presented by the senior classes of Carolina and Duke to the winning team.

Large Advance Sales

It was learned last night that the advance ticket sales for the game will approach 15,000 and that with good weather today a crowd of over 20,000 should be here for the game. Every effort has been made to handle the throngs with a minimum of congestion, twelve state highway patrolmen and a large number of uniformed officers from nearby towns having been secured for the game. Thirty-six gate keepers and 200 ushers will be at the stadium long before the game starts to aid in seating the crowd.

TAR HEEL PICKS CAROLINA TEAM TO DEFEAT DUKE

Tennessee, Southern California, and Georgia Are Other Favorites.

Winners	Losers
NORTH CAROLINA	Duke
TENNESSEE	Florida
SOUTHERN CAL.	Notre Dame
GEORGIA	Georgia Tech
PENNSYLVANIA	Navy
MARYLAND	Western Md.

North Carolina meets Duke in what should be one of the hardest fought games anywhere in the country this season. The Dukemen, weary of the long line of defeats at the hands of the Tar Heels, have a great, smooth-running machine this year, while North Carolina, potentially one of the strongest teams in the south, appears to have at last hit its best stride. Carolina appears to be stronger than Duke in the center of the line; on the flanks, however, the Devils hold the edge. Lipscomb and Gilbreath ought to wear "Fat" Adkins and Rupp down to the well-known "nub". At the guard posts Bob Blackwood, Fysal, McIver, and Newcombe of Carolina seem to better Werner, Taylor, Carpenter and Thorne for the Blue Devils.

The two teams split tackle honors. McDade and Underwood are as good as anything DeHart can offer at this position; Carolina has been weak at left tackle all season, although Thompson and Hodges did good work in the Virginia game. In Captain Davis and Bryan, Duke has a pair of good tackles who play an important part on both the offense and defense. "Buzz" Rosky and Don Hyatt are one of the finest pair of flankmen in the conference. Opposing them will be Walker, Parsley, Brown and Davis.

In the backfield the Tar Heels hold a decided edge over Duke. While the Devils have fine backfield performers in Mason, Brewer, Mullen, and Ershler, the work of Bill Murray, has almost made Duke a one-man team. Where Duke has one outstanding back, Carolina has Branch, Magner, Captain Nash, Wyrick, Slusser, House, Erickson, Chandler, Maus, and Hous-

Prep Team Unable To Develop Scoring Punch

Kiski Tallies Sixteen First Downs To Carolinians' Five.

By Don Shoemaker

Stubbornly resisting repeated scoring thrusts within their five yard marker, the Carolina reserve eleven held Kiski school to a scoreless tie in Kenan stadium yesterday afternoon before half a thousand shivering fans. Only once did the Tar Heel scrubs exhibit scoring possibilities, and then a blossoming aerial attack via two perfectly executed passes down the field from the thirty yard line to Kiski's ten yard stripe withered in four fruitless line bucks.

The northern prep school team counted sixteen first downs to the Carolinians' five and netted a much greater amount of yardage. Utilizing the Warner system, the preparatory team slashed great holes in the Carolina forward wall and sent backs galloping for great gains. Only within the Carolina ten yard stripe did the spectacular offensive of the visiting northerners fail to function and then the scrub line held in some miraculous manner. The visitors were treated to a taste of true southern hospitality on several occasions plainly obvious to the spectators.

The backfield duet of Speaker and Hamilton clicked notably throughout the game, the former getting away for several spectacular gains in the initial quarter and his running mate giving the Heels similar trouble in the final period.

One of the few incompleted touchdown passes of the game came in the third quarter when Marks dropped a forty yard bullet-like heave from Kadlick on the five yard line in a clear field.

Though the balance of play was in favor of the Kiski legions, it was obvious that the Carolinians held the upper hand as demonstrated by lightning-like reversion to form when the goal line was threatened.

For Carolina, Smith, Bridges and Allen stood out in the line while Moore, Croom and Lasater distinguished themselves in the ball totin' department. Moore and Hamilton led the Carolina and Kiski punting and passing department, both men exhibiting adeptness at handling the pigskin.

Wisenbaugh, Hamilton, and Speaker looked best for Kiski in the backfield while Malcolm, Ormiston, and Marks exhibited a commendable brand of football in the forward wall.

Blue Devils Carry Rabbits Feet For Luck, It Is Learned

The Duke coach probably has been spending a great deal of time hunting here of late.

DeHart Starting Lowell Mason at Halfback in Today's Title Contest.

NO CHANGES IN FORWARDS

Regular Line to Take Field With Rosky, Hyatt, Davis, Bryan and Werner Among Group.

Special to the Daily Tar Heel

Durham, December, 5.—As his starting team in a grid classic that has assumed far greater proportions than any other clash in the state, Coach Jimmy DeHart will send an opening lineup composed of his most versatile backfield and his regular starting forwards.

The trio of backs, Murray, Brewer and Mullen, who have started every Duke game this season will take the field against Carolina today. Murray will be playing his final game, Brewer will have one more to go, and Mullen, the midget silent quarterback, will be playing against Carolina for the first time.

At the other halfback post will be Lowell Mason, former Charlotte high school star, who is a living example of the theory that persistence pays. He started this fall as a quarterback on the third Duke team, stepped up to the second when he attracted the coaches' attention and then to the first in fast order.

Mason was a valuable addition to the Duke backfield. He can pass and run, and is said by the Duke coaches to be one of the best defensive backs in the state. He is also an interference runner of great ability.

The regular Duke line will start the game in Rosky and Hyatt, ends; Captain Davis and Bryan, tackles; Werner and Tay-

ALUMNI CONSIDER BREACH BETWEEN TEACHER-STUDENT

Alumni Assembly and Faculty Deliberate at Banquet at Inn.

The Assembly meeting of the General Alumni association was well attended last evening at the Carolina Inn. The general problem of discussion was "What has Happened to the Relation Between Teacher and Student At the University." Members of the University faculty discussed points in connection with this problem.

There was much lively discussion among the more than one hundred representatives of alumni chapters scattered over this state and others. It is considered a noteworthy fact by many that on the eve of a big football game the alumni should come together to consider seriously problems existing between the student and the professor. It would indicate that the alumni are deeply interested in the problems of their Alma Mater.

W. T. Shore, of the class of 1905 and president of the Alumni Association, presided over the dinner which opened the meeting.

President-elect Graham in his introductory remarks showed the necessity of a progressive attitude of the state toward its educational program. He expressed the opinion that the University can not elect to follow a program of educational retrenchment. In the future the State must strive to maintain the high standards of education to which it has climbed to thus far.

R. B. House, executive secretary of the University, presided over the discussion for the evening.

Dean D. D. Carroll, of the school of commerce, chose as his talk "The Deans' Office." In this he described a typical day in a dean's office, when students come in to see the Dean about their life work, the best cure for boils, whether or not to drop a course, or hundreds of other similar problems. The dean's office is an intermediary between the faculty and the student, says Mr. Carroll.

Francis F. Bradshaw, dean of students, asserted that one of the most important functions of the University was personal advice to the students.

Dr. English Bagby, of the Psychology department, pointed out the advantage of teaching the student better study methods for the daily preparation of their work. In conclusion to his address Dr. Bagby gave several examples of cases handled here.

This morning at breakfast, nine o'clock, in the Carolina Inn the board of directors will hold a short meeting.

At ten-thirty this morning the association will hold a routine meeting for the purpose of making their annual reports and nominating men for next year's offices.

McNAMEE AMONG GAME VISITORS

Graham McNamee, world famous radio announcer, and Mrs. McNamee will be the guests of President Frank P. Graham in the official box at the Duke-Carolina game today. Mr. McNamee is generally thought to be the outstanding sports announcer of the decade. He has announced the World Series numerous times and has been engaged to broadcast such football classics as the Fordham-West Virginia game, the University of Southern California-University of Pittsburgh contest, and other nationally important sporting events.

Two Plays To Be Produced Monday

Dramatic talent has been exceptionally productive in the local playwriting course this past fall. In fact, so much so that an especial devise by way of studio productions has had to be introduced in order to relieve the congestion formed from the abundance of effort. Through this procedure, which calls for the production and presentation of a play before an invited audience consisting mostly of critics, and experienced "flaw-finders," a play, if it escapes alive, is well prepared to take a chance with an audience in the Playmakers Theatre and elsewhere.

A few plays have already been exposed to the treatment. Git up and Bar the Door was the first to profit by the pre-natal massage. Last week Irene Fussler's Ever Snitch was so tried and although it received, in general, many justified compliments numerous faults in its construction were detected. The play concerns fisherfolk in Nag's Head with a humerous plot built around the age-old "eternal triangle" theme. In the production, Donald Wood acted the part of Henry Jeffcoat, a fisherman, Gertrude Wilson Coffin, acted Huldy, his wife, and Mary Griffith, Philip Millhouse, and D. D. Carroll, Jr., took the parts of Mrs. Bickles, Tom Gatlin, and the widow's boy, respectively.

The Desert Shadow and The White Senorita, two one-act plays by Laurabelle Dietrich of Hollywood, California, are now undergoing the last finishing touches prior to their studio presentation next Monday evening. Both these plays have a distinctive quality that entitles them to a place apart from the ordinary run of single act dramas. The first, a psychoanalytical drama, is of a young wife's fighting attempt to overcome the fear of a desert. The second is a romantic drama dealing with an American flapper's struggle to retain her sweetheart's affection in competition with the beautiful Spanish senorita.

The following casts have been selected for these two plays: The Shadow of the Desert—Barbara LaMont, Ellen Stewart; Joan Hilliard, Margaret Vale; Edward P. Page, M. D., William Harris; Holt Hilliard, Henry Wood, III. For The White Senorita—Kenneth Galloway, Henry Wood, III, Dolores Fernandez, Margaret Vale; Patricia Ravenelle, Elizabeth Perrow; Mrs. Galloway, Bess Jones Winburn.

will be playing their last games today, and will be fighting hard to help turn in another victory over Duke. The Tar Heels playing their last game are: Captain Strud Nash, Jim Magner, Jimmy Maus, Pete Wyrick, Chuck Erickson, and Henry House, the bulk of Carolina's "hundred backs"; Ned Lipscomb, second all-southern center; Ellis Crew, tackle; Aubrey Parsley and Shields Tabb, ends; and possibly George Thompson, who is eligible for another year, but is a senior.

Duke loses five after today's game, Bill Murray, Buz Rosky, Captain Davis, Hayes and Rupp being the ones to don their uniforms for the last time.

Team Takes Light Workout

The Carolina team took its final workout before the game yesterday afternoon after the Reserves-Kiski prep game, and retired to the field house early. The work was concentrated on signal drills, returning kick-offs, and calisthenics.

The Duke outfit is expected to come over this morning late and stay at the field house until time for the game. Probable lineups as announced last night by the rival coaches were for Carolina: Walker and Brown or Parsley, ends; McDade and Thompson, tackles; Fysal and Blackwood, guards; Lipscomb, center; Branch, quarterback; Captain Nash and Magner, halfbacks; and House, fullback; for Duke: Rosky and Hyatt, ends; Captain Davis and Bryan, tackles; Werner and Taylor, guards; Mullen, quarterback; Murray and Mason, halfbacks; and Brewer, fullback.

Baley Beats McKee In Tennis Final

Jim Baley of the first year law class won the upperclassman tennis tournament yesterday afternoon by defeating Billy McKee in the final round 7-5; 6-3.

Baley had to make an uphill battle in both sets, but by steadiness and good head work was able to even the scores and then go on to win. McKee led 4-0 in the first set and led again 2-0 in the second, but was unable to play through for the deciding games.

Selection of All-State Teams Hangs On Duke Encounter

The two high-scoring teams in the state clash for the Big Five title here Saturday, and the result may go far toward telling whether Murray, Brewer and Company of Duke or Captain Nash, Branch, Magner, Slusser, House and the other Tar Heels form the strongest backfield in the Big Five. It may have a lot to do with who'll make the all-state teams too.

Intensity of Battle Makes Cripples Rise from Beds

The intensity of the Carolina-Duke rivalry to be renewed here Saturday is shown by the fact that it makes the cripples rise from their sick beds. Last year halfbacks Magner, Erickson and Slusser of Carolina were suffering with a bad leg, a broken finger, and a broken nose, respectively; yet every man asked and got permission to play against the Devils.

lor, guards; and Adkins, center. The power of the Duke offensive depends on the functioning of the linemen. Davis and Rosky will be in their last game.

Three of Duke's backs were famous in high school circles: Murray was an all-state fullback from Rocky Mount; Brewer an all-state half from Winston-Salem; and Mason an all-state and all-southern back from Charlotte.

In the line Hyatt was an all-state back from Waynesville; Bryan played at Winston-Salem; Davis' home is in Waynesville; and Adkins played for Durham high school.

Big Pep Meeting at Duke

The biggest pep-session of the year was held by Duke students tonight in Page auditorium. Student bodies of the two universities will stage a cheering contest of their own while the title-settling contest is in progress.

Duke's 65-piece band will accompany the largest delegation of students ever to leave the campus for an out-of-town game.

Coach Jimmie DeHart will send his last Duke squad into action on Saturday, and the loyal members of his team are for this reason among others ready to break a leg for their little mentor.

in the final quarter was abruptly terminated when Brandin, center, made a bad pass from center to Dutrich after the latter had hurtled around end for thirty yards to the ten. Bridges broke through to recover the pass which floated far above Dutrich's head to the thirty-six yard line. On two successive plays following Daniels and Bridges took passes to the seven yard line, but there, for some reason, the aerial scoring track was abandoned and the Heels took to line plunges.

TAR HEEL PICKS CAROLINA TEAM TO DEFEAT DUKE

ton. So it looks like the Tar Heels have the best team on paper. Although Duke has been very successful this season, a fast charging line will spell disaster for them. For example, Wake Forest's line out played and outcharged Duke's forward wall, and Duke was fortunate in obtaining a tie; this was largely due to the double and triple reverses that the Dukemen use in their system of play. The Tar Heels are a more versatile club than the "Millionaires." Duke's attack is largely confined to the ground and very little passing is done. Moreover the Tar Heels have better punters than Duke. But the greatest advantage for Carolina is the fact that the Blue Devils have not won in such a long time. Undoubtedly there is a slight inferiority complex hovering over the Duke squad when they meet Carolina; on the other hand, North Carolina may take too much for granted, and what have you? At any rate the fighting Tar Heels are in rare form and should send DeHart's boys back to the "Woods of Durham" still seeking the Golden Fleece.

Down in Jacksonville, Fla., Tennessee and Florida meet in one of the most evenly matched games of the year. Both teams are powerful and have had very successful seasons, but the hot climate should favor the 'Gators.

All things have an ending, and Notre Dame's remarkable winning streak may end today at Los Angeles. Rockne's men looked pretty bad against Army, and Southern California appears to be much stronger than the West Point aggregation. The Ramblers have lost the services of their fullback, Moon Mullens, who was injured in the Army game. The Trojans appear to have a heavier and stronger line than the Irish, while the two backfields seem to be about even. Ernie Picknert, the Trojan's great back, averaged 13 yards every time he carried the ball in the California game, and is one of the finest backs in the country. Duffield, Appsit, Musick, Mohler, and "Chick" Shaver are some of the other backs Howard Jones is counting on against "Rock's" boys. Ralph Wilcox and Arbelbide, ends, are considered the cream of the West Coast's wingmen. The long train ride will not do Notre Dame any good; nor will the hot California sun put drive and energy in the South Bend players. Also the Trojans have been defeated once whereas Notre Dame has marched through their schedule undefeated so far which will place them under a terrific strain. All in all it looks like such Irishmen as Schwartz, Carideo, Jaskwich and Kosky will have the championship cup dashed from their lips just as they were preparing to drink it.

Georgia Tech should be an easy mark for Georgia, but—! It is interesting to note that Alexander kept his stars under wraps the greater part of the Florida game. Then too, the game is being played at Grant field where the Yellow Jackets are always hard to down. Nevertheless, Georgia's stronger line and backfield should give them a victory over their ancient rivals.

KENNEDY TO PLAY IN ORGAN SERIES

Music Professor Will Inaugurate Vesper Series of Concerts This Afternoon.

Nelson O. Kennedy, assistant professor or organ and piano, will inaugurate the vesper series of organ concerts this afternoon at four forty-five. The recitalist took the degree of bachelor of music in piano and organ at Knox College in 1923. He did post-graduate work in the American conservatory, Chicago, receiving a second bachelor's degree in organ there in 1926. Kennedy has had, in addition, private study with Heniot Levy in piano and with Clarence Eddy in organ. Prior to his appointment here in 1926, he taught piano at Kansas State Agricultural College.

The program that Kennedy will present consists of the following: Handel, Suite from "Water Music"; McKinley, "Cantilena"; Brewer, "An Autumn Sketch;" Bach, "Toccato and Fugue in D Minor"; Iljinsky, "Cradle Song"; Cole, "A Song of Consolation"; Vierne, "Carillon de Westminster."

Kennedy will present the other recitals of the vesper series, January eighteenth, February fifteenth, March eighth, April nineteenth, and May seventeenth.

SCOUT LEADERS ATTEND SEMINAR

Alpha Phi Omega Takes Large Part in Meeting From Thursday Through Saturday.

For the past four days Chapel Hill has been the home of some of the highest Boy Scout officials in the state. They were here attending the Scout seminar Thursday through Saturday.

The seminar began Thursday night when the executives were addressed by two University leaders, Dr. English Bagby and W. B. Sanders. Dr. Bagby, of the department of Psychology, spoke on "Personal Traits." Mr. Sanders' talk was on "Juvenile Courts."

Friday morning Executive J. E. Steere of Charlotte gave a field demonstration on packs and packing for the benefit of Chapel Hill scouts and such members of the Alpha Phi Omega fraternity as were present. In the afternoon Dr. H. R. Totten, professor of botany, carried the boys on a field trip along with the executives and demonstrated woodcraft and field study.

Friday night ten of the scout executives along with Harold Meyer, professor of sociology, were initiated into the Alpha Phi Omega honorary scouting fraternity. Afterwards they were entertained at a banquet by the fraternity.

Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of sociology, spoke Saturday to the assembly on "Social Trends" and Dr. E. R. Groves, also of the sociology department, gave a talk on "Family Relations." Saturday afternoon the executives were guests at the Carolina-Duke football game.

Tickets on Sale

Season tickets for the Carolina Playmakers may be exchanged for reserved seats for "The Importance of Being Earnest" at the Student's Supply Store beginning Tuesday afternoon. The play will be presented Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings of next week.

Cabinet Meeting

Tomorrow night the Freshman Friendship Council, the Sophomore and Junior-Senior cabinets will meet in a joint session instead of separately as is the usual policy. This meeting, which is the last of the quarter, will cover the regular routine of business, and there will probably be an announcement of those who expect to attend the Detroit conference for students and faculty members.

MUD, GRIME, AND SLICKERS AMONG THOSE PRESENT

Duke-Tar Heel Game Muddiest Yet Played in Kenan Stadium.

By Billy McKee

On the muddiest field that a Carolina team has ever had to play in Kenan Stadium the Tar Heel football team played four quarters to a scoreless tie with Duke's Blue Devils yesterday afternoon. Starting yesterday morning rain continued to pour steadily right through the game without a let-up. The field was in a terrible condition before the game started with huge puddles all over and it got worse as the afternoon progressed.

The day brought recollections to some fans of the South Carolina game of 1928 which was played in a rain and sleet storm and ended in a 0-0 tie or the Maryland game played on Emerson field in 1927 which Carolina won 7-6. The latter game was played during the second half in mud probably worse than that in Kenan yesterday.

The stands though not as full as was predicted, despite the rain had some 20,000 wet and cold fans who braved the weather to see their respective teams battle. They all seemed to prefer to stand rather than sit during the whole game. Despite the rain the Carolina team seemed to like the weather. Entering the field to the cheers of the crowd and previous to the kickoff, one Carolina man after another threw himself into a mud puddle face down. This may have been an attempt to show that old Carolina spirit. Those white jeresys of the Devils and the orange of the Tar Heels didn't show their color very long, for after the first few minutes every man was one mass of mud. Substitutions made during the game were very conspicious by the cleanliness of their suits. Very often time had to be taken out for the players to wipe the mud out of their eyes or to wipe the ball as dry as possible.

The contest did not lack color in one respect, and that was the great variety in color and style of costumes worn by the spectators. Slickers and raincoats of every hue were to be found, besides every other conceivable kind of waterproof covering, which the steadiness of the rain did not prove very waterproof. There was one person, I saw though who had the presence of mind to dress to suit the weather. He was a Carolina student who wore a swimming suit under his slicker!

Much has been said and done lately in an effort to better relations between Carolina and Duke, who are naturally great rivals when they are situated so close together. A gold trophy which the senior classes of both

New Carolina Songs

The committee to select an additional alma mater song has extended the date of receiving contributions until December 20 due to the fact that there has not been enough adequate expression from either the alumni or the student union.

The Daily Tar Heel from time to time publishes the proposed alma maters. The second of these is submitted by Moore Bryson and are words to a completed song, the music of which has been written by Wex Malone.

ALMA MATER

Come fill the cup
And drink a toast
To Carolina's name.
Come drink with friends
Who cherish most
Our Alma Mater's fame.

Drink to her strength in unity.
Drink to her happy days.
Drink to the University.
Drink her eternal praise.

December Law Review Proposes Desirable Legislative Reforms

If a statute, proposed in the December issue of the North Carolina Law Review, is adopted by the next General Assembly, the generous driver of an automobile will be relieved of the risk which he now takes when he picks up a stranger on the road or invites a friend to ride. Under the present law, if an accident occurs, the stranger or friend may obtain a judgment of ten or twenty or fifty thousand dollars against his host. The proposal would restrict the liability of the driver to a gratuitous guest to cases where the driver was guilty of gross negligence, or wilful or wanton misconduct.

Whether a witness can be impeached by reason of his religious belief was one of the questions raised but not answered by the North Carolina Supreme Court in State v. Beal, the dramatic murder case growing out of the recent Gastonia strike disturbances. A statute is recommended to prevent the recurrence of such questions by forbidding any inquiry into the religious belief of a witness.

The North Carolina Law Review begins its ninth year with the publication of the December issue, which, in view of the meeting of the General Assembly in January, is largely devoted to suggestions and proposals for legislation. The proposals are non-partisan, strictly professional, and offer many improvements in the law of North Carolina as it is administered today. This is the first time that any law review has attempted to be of direct assistance in the framing and adoption of needed legislative changes. The statutes are set out in all essential particulars, except for formalities, and the discussion which accompanies each statute states concisely the reasons for its submission.

Professor M. T. Van Hecke, of the law school, contributes an article on "Four Suggested Improvements of the North Carolina Legislative Process." These are (1) the elimination of "blind" amendments and repeals of old statutes by requiring amendments to set out the section in full as amended instead of the present practice of striking out certain words and inserting other words in lieu thereof, and by requiring repeal clauses to list specifically by title and section number each statute intended to be repealed. (2) The establishment of a legislative drafting service under the control of a joint legislative commission, which would be at work both during and between legislative sessions, furnishing expert legal and drafting assistance in connection with the preparation of public bills. (3) The adoption of a system of continual revision of the statutes by the legislative drafting service, two or three topics each biennium, instead of the wholesale revision of the entire statute book each ten or fifteen years, and (4) further restrictions upon the enactment of private, special and local legislation so as to leave the legislature more time for the consideration of state-wide public measures, thus supplementing the effects of the constitutional amendments of 1916, which have, as construed by the courts, reduced the enormous bulk of special legislation only by about eleven per cent.

The members of the law faculty of the University contribute a joint article discussing proposals for legislation in the fields of banking, civil procedure, contracts, courts, criminal law and procedure, evidence, motor vehicles, property, trusts and warehouse receipts. Specific subjects discussed and accompanied by definite proposals are: the adoption of the Uniform Declaratory Judgment

Final Meeting Of Tar Heel Staff

All reporters and city editors are requested to attend the final staff meeting of the quarter tonight in Alumni building at seven-fifteen in room 104. Bob Madry, head of the University news bureau, has been secured to talk to the staff. His talk will be the last of a series of speeches given by journalistic men on the campus. Those men who have spoken so far in order are: Oscar Coffin, of the journalism department; J. Maryon Saunders, secretary of the Alumni Association and editor of the Alumni Review; and Louis Graves, editor of the Chapel Hill Weekly.

The managing editor states that because of the importance of this meeting tonight no one will be excused. The first meeting after the Christmas holidays is scheduled for Sunday night, January 11. At this time the staff will be reorganized, and all men desiring to try out for the staff for the first time will be given a chance to do so.

Major Cain Injured

Major Cain was very seriously injured yesterday evening about six-thirty when he was struck down by an automobile while crossing Franklin Street in front of his home. One car knocked him down and a second ran over his legs.

At the time the Daily Tar Heel went to press last night he was unconscious and his condition reported serious. Major Cain is eighty-three years old and was a former professor in the University.

RALEIGH PEOPLE HEAR GLEE CLUB

Varied Program of Foreign and American Music Presented In Meredith Auditorium.

Last night the people of Raleigh had an opportunity to hear the highly praised Glee Club from the University of North Carolina, which gave a concert in the auditorium of Meredith College, at eight o'clock. This exceptional club sang again this year with further laurels added since their previous visits, and with a rapidly growing reputation.

The Carolina club is not a glee club in the usual sense but a delicately trained choral organization which has earned praise in the principal cities of central and eastern states and in Europe. Besides receiving commendation for its work, the club has been rewarded more materially and is the possessor of three silver loving cups which have been won in recent years. They won the state-wide contest in 1926, a contest conducted by the Richmond News-Leader, at Richmond, in 1928, and last year crowned their triumphs with first honors in the South-Atlantic Intercollegiate Glee Club Contest.

The program was a varied and interesting one. It opened with a group of sacred numbers which offered a marked contrast with each other. First was an old German choral, written in the 17th century by Bach, showing a very solid and unusual type of church music. Following and in direct contrast was the very beautifully harmonic "Ave Maria" 'of Arcadelt, sung in Latin and exactly typical of the old Roman Church. Richard Wagner provided the closing number of the sacred group in "O God of God" which is familiar to everyone as the Pilgrim's chorus from Tannhauser.

The next two groups on the program were interesting in that an insight is given to music which is typical of other lands—of Finland, of Russia, and of France. Particularly interesting were the Russian numbers, two of which seem to picture the plodding, dreary nature of the Russian peasant life, whereas the other two seem to belong to the carefree Cossacks. The French compositions of the third group were characteristic by the apparent abstractness of their accompaniment.

The final group was entirely of songs by the famous American composers, MacDowell, Foote, and Gaines, and typified the better class of music by American composers. Especially interesting were the two numbers by MacDowell which, although written by the same composer are as different as it is possible for two songs to be.

District Committee Will Pick Four Representatives From States' Candidates.

Clyde Dunn, of the University of North Carolina, and Dean Husk, of Davidson, were selected to represent North Carolina at a meeting of the Rhodes Scholarship Committee just prior to the Duke-Carolina game yesterday. They will go to Atlanta, Georgia, where the four men will be selected who will represent this district at Oxford.

The Rhodes Scholarship Committee of North Carolina met yesterday morning in the office of President-elect Frank P. Graham for the purpose of choosing two men from North Carolina to represent the state at an interview in Atlanta, Georgia, where four men will be chosen from the representatives of seven states comprising this section to go to Oxford University on the scholarship.

A faculty committee in each college chose a group of men, not to exceed five in number, who were best fitted to fill the requirements of scholarship, leadership, personality, and who generally showed themselves as being worthy of the scholarhip.

Duke representatives were W. W. Marshall, W. A. Stanbury, Jr., and C. H. Livengood, Jr.; J. K. Pepper, W. B. McGuire, Jr.,

MAENNERCHOR TO HELP GLEE CLUB

New Chorus of Male Voices Completed After Two Tryouts.

The University's maennerchor, male chorus of sixty-five voices has been completed following the second tryouts of applicants for glee club membership. Those participating numbered eighty, the remainder of the original one hundred and twenty having found themselves unable to conform to the rehearsal schedule. The talent and interest of the men finally selected is expected to form a splendid chorus.

The glee club officials consider the quality of the vocal material a great deal higher this year than ever before. The ability of a large number of men to read music readily makes it possible to cover a wide range, especially since the University glee club library contains one of the finest collections of male voice music in the entire country. It is possible to present a complete program of Russian liturgical music, or of folk songs of the British Isles and continental Europe. There is likewise in the library a full program of Bach's chorals and excerpts from his cantatas in addition to the countless American compositions which always form part of the glee club presentation.

Since the glee club can take only thirty men on tour, Professor H. S. Dyer, of the music department, hopes to use the larger group through the maennerchor. The new organization will also make available more select voices for the South Atlantic Glee Club Cup contests in February.

The concert of the maennerchor is to be an exact duplication of that sung by the glee club when on tour.

Post Mortem

The big game is over. Students and supporters of the Carolina football team will discuss various aspects of the past season, pleased with some, displeased with others, but agreed upon one thing alone — that Chuck Collins has done a good job as coach of the team and that he should be signed immediately for another term of years.

Before the coming of Collins we were satisfied to win the Big Five Championship of North Carolina. Southern or national honors were out of the question. Since he has been here we have had strong and weak teams, we have won Big Five titles, and once we shot at the Conference mark only to have it marred by Georgia. But Carolina has risen from a team feared only in North Carolina and the South Atlantic section to a position of prominence in Southern Conference football. Carolina's rating is among the Big Ten of Southern Conference, win, lose or draw. The type of football played here has placed Carolina there and it will remain there so long as Collins continues as coach.

The cheers which greeted Collins' appearance at the pep meeting Friday night indicate his popularity with the students. Carolina is for Collins and it is our opinion that everything possible should be done to keep him.

Our Literary Societies

Judge John J. Parker, speaking to the members of the Dialectic Senate at their banquet Thursday evening, said, "Bring the literary societies out of the attics and put them in their rightful position on the campus." And what is their "rightful" place among our ever swelling group of organizations?

We would give them two functions: first, to stimulate interest in state and national affairs; second, to train in public speaking. As Judge Parker declared, the literary societies produce public leaders by bringing students into contact with the problems of the public, and by training them to speak effectively—for the public will always listen to a good speaker who really has something to say. When the societies fulfill these functions most effectively on a campus they assume their proper place.

For a certain group of people our own local societies are achieving these things. But this group is small, and the societies do not touch many who are interested in public speaking. It seems to us that this state of things is due to the idea existing in the minds of most students that the societies today are as they were last year or before. Our societies are no longer apathetic; a fresh intellectual spirit is rising in at least one of these bodies. Whether Judge Parker knew it or not, he was speaking Thursday night to a group which is making a gallant effort to shake the dust of years of inactivity.

Our societies are climbing down from the attics. Their appeal is to those who are interested in public speaking. Those who are interested should at least give the new order a test.—B. M.

At The Carolina

The Carolina offers its patrons a bill of exceptional merit for this week, a program beginning with such stellar attractions as "Feet First" and "Morocco," and closing with a Marie Dressler-Wallace Beery feature.

Monday sees the latest—and of course the best—release of Harold Lloyd, the much-heralded "Feet First," his second talking production. In this comedy Harold revives his old sky scraper feats, and a large share of the comedy action is offered by his antics on the side of a high, downtown building. But these are only a part of the spectacled fun-artists clowning, which passes in an ever novel review from automobile to train to steamship to airplane and back to terra firma where, after more progress with the plot (there is always plot in Lloyd's comedies) the hero finally wins the girl. The girl, incidentally, is that petite brunette, Barbara Kent.

An equally-heralded attraction, of a different nature, is seen Tuesday in Gary Cooper's "Morocco," a big scale film of the Foreign Legion containing all the color and romance of old-world Morocco and its picturesque background—ably seconded by the Legion. "Morocco" is essentially a picture of emotional interest since its theme is frankly love, and the treatment accorded the theme, combined with the realism of the picture and its fascinating setting, has produced a picture of the first magnitude. One of the best features of the photoplay is the work—and appearance—of Marlene Dietrich, star importation from Germany, whose charm will mark her for success from the start.

Bert Lytell, who divides his time from the Broadway stage and the Hollywood screen, is the star of Wednesday's production "Brothers," in which the dual role effected by the leading man gives opportunity for unusual impersonation as well as startling tricks with the camera. Dorothy Sebastian takes the leading feminine part.

The feature Thursday is "Sweethearts on Parade," starring Alice White, Lloyd Hughes, and Marie Prevost. This is a characteristic Alice White story: the heroine leaves her small town home to go to the big city, where she expects to marry a millionaire and instead falls in love with a marine. Some of the best action scenes are displayed in the conflict between sailors and marines, on shore leave at the same time.

Friday's attraction, "Young Desire," brings Mary Nolan to the screen again. This picture offers the blonde star an opportunity to do some of her best work in its story of a carnival dancer who tries to rise above her accustomed environment and discovers that her background will bar her. The leading man is William Janney, former stage star.

The week closes with "Min and Bill," in which Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery are seen as co-stars for the first time. Each of these personalities has done exceptional work in past performances, Miss Dressler having been lauded for her characterization in "Anna Christie," while Beery has been his typical old self in "The Big House" and "Way For A Sailor." The picture is an adaptation of Lorna Moon's "Dark Star," the novel which attracted much attention only a short time ago. Marie Dressler is seen as keeper of a water front hotel, while Wallace Beery plays the part of the sea captain lover. Dorothy Jordan takes the characterization of Nancy, the adopted child of Min (Marie Dressler), who is given the best advantages for leaving her low surroundings that Min can supply.

F. R. Brown, Jr., Dean Rusk, and Z. V. Long, Jr., were the Davidson selections while Charles Maddry was the only Wake Forest man. Mac Gray, Clyde Dunn, Travis Brown, Ralph Greene, and Edward Hamer were chosen to represent the University. All the candidates for the scholarship were the guests of honor at a supper Friday evening at Duke University.

The committee which chose the North Carolina representatives is composed of Josephus Daniels, chairman; Professor Harvie Branscomb, secretary, of Duke University; President H. S. Hilley, of Atlantic Christian College; Dean W. C. Davison, of the Duke University medical school; Professor G. R. Vowles, of Davidson; and Professor C. P. Spruill, of the University.

PHI WILL SELECT OFFICERS TUESDAY

Officers of the Phi assembly for the winter quarter will be elected Tuesday night at the final meeting of this quarter. A flashlight picture of the assembly is to be made for the Yackety-Yack, and for this reason President Mayne Albright requests that all members be present.

The newly-elected officers will assume their duties immediately following the election, and will take charge of the remainder of the meeting. Refreshments will be served following the selection of the officials.

Mr. Nelson O. Kennedy, whom it will be remembered has for the past five years been the accompanist and piano soloist for the club, was this year unable to devote his time in this capacity, but the Glee Club was fortunate in having as a freshman member, Mr. Harry L. Knox, who is an exceptionally brilliant pianist. Besides accompanying the glee club in some of its renditions, Mr. Knox offered four piano solos during the performance.

The following was the complete program for the evening:

1. Sacred Songs: (a) Now let Every Tongue Adore Thee; (b) Ave Maria; (c) O, God of Gods. Piano songs by Harry L. Knox.

2. Russian Songs: (a) Autumn; (b) Sun and Moon; (c) With Heart Uplifted; (d) Fireflies; (e) At Fathers' Door. Intermission.

3. French Songs: (a) Dreamworld; (b) Chorus of the Camel Drivers. Piano songs by Harry L. Knox.

institutions have set up to be given to the winning team will now however, have to be kept for another year. Another attempt to get better feeling on both sides was the three creers given by the cheering sections to their opponents. This is an indication that more little things of this type will be done in the future and that bitter feeling between the institutions will be lessened.

KOCH WILL READ CAROL TONIGHT

Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Playmakers, will give his twenty-sixth annual reading of Dicken's A Christmas Carol at the Playmakers Theatre this evening at eight-thirty o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Harrer and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Lawrence will sing carols between the staves.

If his performances in other places are included in the count, Professor Koch has read the Carol ninety-five times. In his interpretation of the immortal story, he has the rare ability to carry his audience with him into the spirit of the story.

There are eighteen notes and comments contributed by the student editors of the Law Review discussing recent decisions of appellate courts of North Carolina, Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia and the federal courts. Subjects discussed include the North Carolina chain store tax; the duty of a guest in an automobile; annullment of marriage contracted in jest; injuries by air-craft; injunction to restrain enforcement of municipal ordinance; injunction to prevent granishment of wages; setting aside judgment for neglect of attorney; fraud and deceit; and Workmen's Compensation.

Among the book reviews, there are two of considerable interest in North Carolina today: The Labor Injunction by Frankfurter and Greene, and Commercial Arbitration and Awards by Sturges. Professor Van Hecke reviews the first book and Dean Charles T. McCormick the second. Professor Coates writes a short description of the work which is being done under his direction in connection with the model code of criminal procedure of the American Law Institute.

By K. C. Ramsay

The University of North Carolina presented the superior punter, Johnny Branch, and Duke University had the hardest driving fullback, Kid Brewer, in yesterday's would-be football game down in Kenan Stadium. The result was that the fracas ended in a nothing to nothing tie. In spite of the terrible weather with a steady downpour falling throughout the entire game, 18,000 persons braved the elements and stood in the rain throughout the contest.

Clad in raincoats, yellow and green slickers, newspapers for hats, hastily constructed oilcloth coverings, and some unguarded against the rain, the fans remained in their places and cheered their teams. The Duke and Carolina stands answered each other time and again with loud demands for a score from their favored eleven, but the mud and slush won the game, not allowing either team to cross the last white stripe.

Though luck was not with either eleven when it came to scoring touchdowns, the Blue Devils seemed to be lucky otherwise. Captain Lee Davis grabbed the football from the referee just as the game ended, and when the two captains met in the middle of the field to match for the trophy which was awarded yesterday for the first time to the winning team by the senior classes of Carolina and Duke, the Duke captain called the coin right and won the award.

Duke State Champions

Holding the Tar Heels to a tie for the first time in football history between the two institutions, the Blue Devils copped the state championship for the first time since they resumed playing football in 1922.

The final standings of the "Big Five" teams place Duke on top with three wins, two ties, and no defeats, Carolina and Wake Forest tied for second with two wins, one tie and one loss, Davidson fourth with two wins and two losses, and N. C. State last with four losses.

Carolina Threatens Early

The Tar Heels threatened to score early in the game when Murray fumbled on his 20-yard line shortly after the game started. Magner fell on the ball for Carolina and got three yards on the first play. On the next play Carolina lost 15 yards on a penalty, Magner made eight on the next, and Nash got two as the ball went over to Duke on Duke's 18-yard line.

The second threat came later in the same quarter when Murray again fumbled Branch's punt on his 21-yard stripe. Ned Lipscomb fell on the ball and Carolina started its drive.

Magner got two; he got three more and then a first down on Duke's nine-yard line. On the next play Carolina failed to gain. Chandler fumbled and recovered for a five-yard loss, and two passes were incomplete, Duke getting the ball on downs. After this point in the game the Tar Heels were unable to advance the ball beyond Duke's 30-yard marker.

Duke Loses Chance to Score

The Blue Devils, being held down during the opening period, cut loose in the second quarter and drove the ball to Carolina's three-yard line only to lose it when Mason fumbled and McIver of Carolina recovered.

The drive started when Bryan blocked Branch's punt at midfield and recovered. Murray lost on the first play but fell just short of a first down on the next. Brewer made it a first, and the Devils kept it up with Brewer hitting the line for most of the gains in tallying four straight first downs before being halted when Mason fumbled.

Neither team was able to get a first down in the third quarter, but Branch succeeded in outpunting Murray to keep the ball in Duke territory for most of the period.

Kid Brewer started hitting the line successfully again in the fourth quarter and as a result the Devils ran up four first downs to none for Carolina. But with all this gaining they never succeeded in getting beyond Carolina's 34-yard line.

Daily Tar Heel To Announce All-State Selections Tuesday

Don Shoemaker, assistant sports editor of the Daily Tar Heel, will announce the daily's all-state football selection in the Tuesday edition together with the selection made by the campus plebescite. In the story will be announced the names of those winning the five free theatre passes.

The balloting for the campus selection was unusually heavy, and a close count in choosing many of the players resulted.

Arnold And Ruble Are Star Vaulters

The pole vaulting material of this year's track team owes much of it's strength to Brodie Arnold and Raymond Ruble. Arnold is at present holder of both the indoor and outdoor vaulting records. The indoor record of twelve feet seven and one-fourth inches was established last March and is also the Southern Conference indoor record. Last April in the dual meet with W. and L. Arnold cleared the bar at thirteen feet, an all-time record for Carolina and Emerson Field.

Ruble was a shot putter and discus thrower until last year when he was shifted to the pole vault, and during his first year he gave promise of becoming a formidable team-mate for Arnold. Twice last year he cleared twelve feet in competition; first against W. and L. and again at Princeton where he tied for first place. Ruble has already reached twelve feet twice this fall; once in practice and once in the freshman-varsity dual meet.

Arnold's foot injury is in shape again and he and Ruble should be rated among the foremost pole vaulters in the country.

Kicks Consistently

Johnny Branch's punting drove the Blue Devils back from Carolina's goal line several times during the game yesterday. Though he had two of his punts blocked near midfield, he succeeded in getting off good ones in the pinches. His average was 33.4 yards, which is very good for a rainy day and slippery ball.

SOUTHERN TEAMS PLAN TO CREATE NEW CONFERENCE

'Big Ten' of South May Be Organized Here Saturday at Conference Meeting.

CONFERENCE TOO LARGE

Many Member Colleges in Conference Are Dissatisfied With Size.

Realization of the dreams of Southern Conference officials for the organization of a southern "Big Ten," appeared a certainty in Dixie grid circles this week when it was learned that plans for such an association have practically been completed.

In an exclusive story this week the Atlanta Georgian stated that North Carolina, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Alabama, Tulane, Florida, Kentucky, Auburn, and Vandy would comprise the ten institutions in the league.

Information from authoritative sources revealed that formal announcement of the formation of the new body is expected at the annual meeting of the Southern Conference coaches here December 12. Further stated the Georgian:

"The Big Ten results from persistent agitation for a more compact football organization in the South. The present Southern Conference is composed of twenty-three teams, although when first organized in Atlanta in 1921 it was composed of only fourteen members.

"Eight other colleges were invited to join, increasing the membership to twenty-two, and two years ago Duke was admitted to membership.

"There have been several efforts to divide the conference into two distinct groups, one being composed of teams in the Northern and South Atlantic sector, and the other of colleges in the Southeast and Southern sections.

"All of those efforts had been evaded by the conference officials, the tendency being to postpone action at each meeting.

However, agitation for a division continued and certain leaders were informed that if they would definitely commit themselves to the idea, the necessary number of colleges would join in the move. The result was the secret formation of the Big Ten.

TAR HEEL TEAM TO PLAY FLORIDA AND VANDERBILT

1931 Football Schedule Is Announced at Meeting of Alumni Association.

DUKE DATE IS CHANGED

Georgia, Tennessee, Davidson, Wake Forest and Virginia To Invade Stadium.

An unconfirmed article which appeared in the Daily Tar Heel of November 26 was verified yesterday morning when Dr. Foy Roberson, alumni representative on the Athletic Council, announced to the meeting of the General Alumni Association at the Carolina Inn that Vanderbilt and Florida have been added to the 1931 football schedule and that Maryland and V. P. I. have been dropped.

The addition of these two teams to the roster makes this the hardest schedule ever attempted by a University of North Carolina football team. In the whole schedule there is not a single set-up. The season will open with Wake Forest coming to Kenan Stadium as usual, and this battle promises to be stiff. Coach Pat Miller will have many veterans to return, and the Tar Heels will find even greater opposition next year than they had in this year's close 13-7 victory.

The team will travel for the two weeks following, going to Nashville to meet Vandy, and to Gainesville for a game with Florida October 10. Coach Harry Mehre will bring his Georgia Bulldogs here for the game of October 17, and the Volunteers of Tennessee come here after them.

The state institutions will battle the following Saturday over at Raleigh, when Carolina meets State. State's unsuccessful eleven this year was composed largely of sophomores, and they will have much to build from next year.

Grant field, Atlanta, will be the scene of the next game with

Great Line Plunger

Kid Brewer's line plunging was the high spot in the Blue Devil's attack yesterday. He was largely responsible for the scoring threats made by the visiting team.

CAVALIER BOXERS LOOKING FORWARD TO GREAT SEASON

Captain Bob Rainey and Other Star Mitmen to Strengthen Virginia Team.

University, Virginia, December 6.—Virginia is looking forward to one of the best boxing seasons the Cavaliers have enjoyed in years. Seven dual matches have been arranged, four at home and three away. In addition the Southern Conference will be invited to hold its annual ring tournament here again this season.

Johnny Rowe, Cavalier ring coach, has had a fine squad of men drilling all fall. Practice is slacking up now, for the ringmen, along with other students, must face a pre-season elimination test in the form of fall term examinations.

If all the candidates for the boxing team pass their fall examinations Virginia will look forward to the best team since the first Conference boxing title

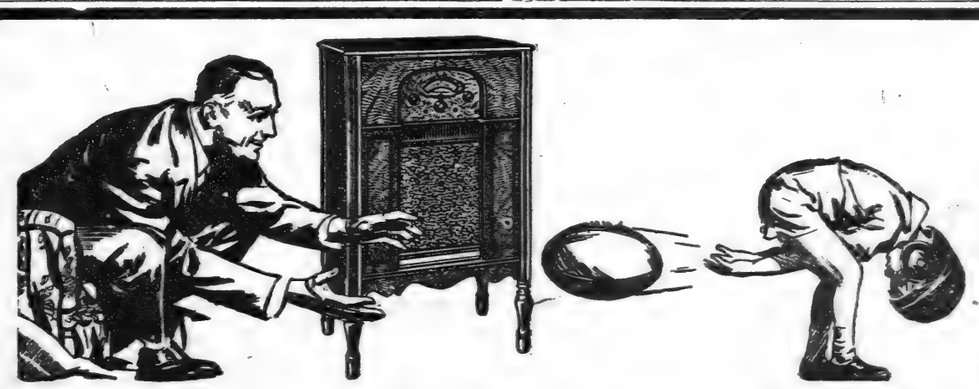
GRID STARS WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR BOXING TOURNEY

Football Players May Enter Intramural Bouts With Only Two Workouts.



Coach Crayton Rowe announced yesterday that any men who have been out for varsity or freshman football and who wish to enter the intramural boxing tournament, may do so by reporting to him Monday afternoon at four o'clock in the Tin Can. Intramural rules require all entrants to have at least six workouts before being eligible, but an exception has been made to allow men who have been in training all fall to compete in the tournament with only two workouts.

With the exception of football men who may enter, the tournament list is practically complete as only two more workouts will be held, Monday and Tuesday. Over fifty men have entered and have been working out daily under the instruction of Coaches Rowe and Allen. The lightweight and middleweight classes, with twelve men in each, are the largest divisions. The champions from last year are defending their titles in neither of these weights and there are no ranking favorites in either class.

As yet there are no candidates for the heavyweight title, won last year by Bob Bartlett of D. K. E., although several men now trying to get into the light-heavy division may be forced to move up through inability to get down to the 175 pound limit. Coach Rowe expects some of the men from the football squads to fill up the heavyweight class, however, and round out the full seven-class card.

Track Practice

The schedule for practice in the pole vault and high jump is now Monday, Wednesday, and Friday in both events. The high jump practice is at four-thirty and that of the pole vault at five-forty-five. Both practices take place in the Tin Can.

ALPHA PHI OMEGA INITIATES ELEVEN

The Alpha Phi Omega honorary scouting fraternity, at a banquet in the basement of the Methodist church Friday night, initiated eleven honorary members.

The formal initiation began at five-thirty, followed by a banquet in honor of the newly pledged men. Harold D. Meyer, professor of sociology and supervisor of field work, presiding over the dinner, asked that the old and new men stand in turn and introduce themselves and give an account of the work they are doing and have done in scouting, since some of the members were not acquainted with the scout executives.

With the exception of Mr. Meyer, all the new members are engaged at present in scout work, either state council executives or working under the national council. They are: Alfred W. Allen, Charlotte; Herbert Stuckey, Wilson; W. E. Vaughan-Lloyd, Winston-Salem; C. D. Brothers, Wilmington; R. M. Schiele, Gastonia; Chas. D. Benbow, Jr., Rocky Mount; W. E. Pennington, Goldsboro; Wallace B. White, Greensboro, J. E. Steere, Charlotte; and O. B. Gorman, Reidsville.

The Alpha Phi Omega fraternity was founded in 1925 and rapidly spread over the nation. Until now no definite step has been taken to extend the fraternity outside the United States, but scout officials and students of the order are working to establish it in England and from there to other European countries. The local chapter was founded last year and has ten members excepting its honorary members. They are: Charlie Powell, grand master; Allan Suther, deputy master; Ted Baroody, secretary; J. D. Zaglin; Lee Richardson; T. R. Kincaid; H. N. Brown; Jack Riley; Al Rodgers and A. D. Kornegay.

The membership requirements are that the applicant be an upper classman and at one time have been a scout. Before a member is taken in he must be approved by the unanimous vote of the old members.

Any men on the campus who are interested in scouting or have been scouts are invited to attend the open meetings of the fraternity.

the Tar Heels hitting Tech's Golden Tornado on November 7. Davidson comes to Kenan Stadium November 14 for the first time that they have played here since 1927.

The annual game with Duke has been moved up until the Saturday before Thanksgiving, and the Tar Heels and Devils will play no more post-season games.

Thanksgiving Day will bring the thirty-ninth meeting of the most ancient rivals in the South. Carolina will be hosts to the University of Virginia.

This schedule will present a difficult problem for the Carolina coaches, and a great reserve strength will be essential, but with the wealth of material from the freshmen and the large number of sophomores and juniors now on the varsity, the Tar Heels should be ready to tackle this difficult assignment next September.

The schedule:

Sept. 26—Wake Forest in Kenan Stadium.
Oct. 3—Vanderbilt at Nashville.
Oct. 10—Florida at Gainesville.
Oct. 17—Georgia in Kenan Stadium.
Oct. 24—Tennessee in Kenan Stadium.
Oct. 31—N. C. State in Raleigh.
Nov. 7—Georgia Tech at Atlanta.

is to provide the South with a compact group of football teams, and for the members to play representative schedules, mainly including rivals in its own organization. It will be impossible for the new schedules to be arranged for the next two or three years, most of the Southern colleges making their football contracts extend over a period of years."

For the bantamweight class there will be Jack Fisher, who won his "V" last winter, and Charlie McNeill from the '30 first year ring squad. As lightweights there will be Mike LaGiglia, a veteran letter-man, and Bobby Goldstein, the undefeated sensation of last winter's freshman campaign.

Charlie Payne, also a numeral man and former A. M. A. ring star, is expected to be the leading welterweight candidate. Fenton Gentry, who won his "V" last winter, and Lewis Reiss, of the successful first year team, are light-heavyweight contenders.

Hunter Motley, star heavyweight two seasons ago and captain of the Cavalier eleven, will again be boxing heavyweight. Herbert Bryant, fullback on the football team, has already started trying out for this same position.

The 1931 boxing schedule follows.

Jan. 17—Washington and Lee at home.
Jan. 22—Virginia Polytechnic Institute at home.

LAND APPRAISERS TO BE APPOINTED

A tax lister and two appraisers for every township will be appointed Monday to make a revaluation of all property next year. Gilbert Ray, who is the auditor and tax supervisor of Orange county, will make the appointments.

The appraisers will make a complete survey of all property and will make assessments according to their judgment. The owners may advise according to their opinions.

The property was revalued three years ago and the appraisers made assessments at about sixty per cent of the estimated real value.

Carolina And Duke Battle To Tie In Mud

"Smilin'," "Gallopin'" Bill Murray was greatly handicapped by the soft field as were Carolina's fleet backs, Branch, Magner, Nash, Chandler, and Maus, and as a result failed to gain consistently.

Murray broke loose for a gain of 15 yards in the first quarter and got off several other good runs of three to eight yards during the rest of the game, but Carolina's tackles and ends broke through several times to throw him for losses which totaled thirty-nine yards.

Blocking by both lines was excellent considering that it was difficult to get a footing with only water to stand upon, and the Duke linemen opened several wide holes for their Brewer to plow through.

Carolina's forwards were on the alert throughout the whole game, and it was when they were in a very bad hole that they played their best ball. Whenever a Duke back allowed the slippery ball to leave his fingers, Roy McDade, Ned Lipscomb, Harry Hodges or Bud McIver was on hand to slide upon it.

Captain Lee Davis, Emory Adkins, and Duke's ends, Buz Rosky and Don Hyatt, showed up well in the forward wall for the team which had on white jerseys when the game started.

Carolina	Pos.	Duke

ODUM APPOINTED HEAD OF SOCIAL SCIENCE EXHIBIT

Booth at World's Fair in Chicago In 1933 To Be Directed by Sociology Professor.

Announcement has just been made that Howard W. Odum, director of the school of public welfare, has been appointed director of Social Science Exhibits in the "Century of Progress," World's Fair, to be held at Chicago, 1933. Among other suggested plans is one providing for a comprehensive social science building alongside the temple of science, in which will be housed the exhibits of natural sciences, sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science and its committees and directed by Professor Henry Crew, head of the department of physics at Northwestern University.

There were two committees charged with the selection of a director. One was a special committee appointed by the Social Science Research Council and ratified by the "Century of Progress" administration. This committee was composed of the secretary of the Interior, Ray Lyman Wilbur; President E. B. Wilson, Social Science Research Council; President R. M. Hutchins, University of Chicago; President H. W. Chase, University of Illinois; President H. G. Moulton, of the Brooklyn Institution; and President Logan Paxon, of the University of Wisconsin. The other committee was a local committee at the University of Chicago, some of the members of whom were Dean Charles H. Judd, of the school of education; Professor Harry A. Millis, head of the department of economics; Professor Charles E. Merriam, head of the department of political science; Professor William F. Ogburn, of the department of sociology; and Professor Donald Schlesinger, school of law.

It is understood that the acceptance of this position will not take Dr. Odum away from North Carolina except on leaves of absence, granted for certain parts of the years, beginning with the winter quarter, 1931.

Tar Heel Editors To Give Radio Talk

Will Yarborough, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, and Jack Dungan, managing-editor, are scheduled to give the fourth of a series of radio programs broadcast over WPTF this year. Tomorrow afternoon from 5:30 to 5:45 the two Daily Tar Heel editors will discuss the subject of "Campus Publications."

"Red" Greene president of the student union, in the first radio program of the year outlined the system of student government now used on this campus. The second speaker on the series was Ed Hamer, president of the Y. M. C. A. Hamer discussed at length the work, history, finance, and organization of the Y association here. Archie Allen, in the third program, discussed University athletics. The last talk was made by "Red" Greene, who continued his discussion on the present student government system.

Tomorrow night's program will probably be the last to be given this quarter, but it is the plan that such an idea be continued during the winter quarter.

Executive Session Scheduled By Di

The Dialectic Senate brings its quarter's program to a close with the meeting tonight at which officers for the winter quarter and the president for the spring quarter are to be elected. Prior to the election of the next quarter's officials, reports from the several committees are to be heard.

From all appearances so far it has been reported that interest in the societies has increased somewhat over that of last year. Each of the five speakers on the program of the Senate's banquet held lately mentioned the fact that they had noticed the rising interest, and urged that this be kindled to a greater degree.

SONGS OF NEGRO TO BE DISCUSSED BY GUY JOHNSON

Community Club Sponsoring Meeting in Music Auditorium Tomorrow Night.

Guy B. Johnson, of the Institute for Research in Social Science, will speak tomorrow night at eight-fifteen o'clock in the music auditorium on the subject, "Negro Folk Music in the United States." The music department of the Community Club is sponsoring the meeting. Mr. Johnson will trace briefly the development of American negro folk songs, describing the various types of songs and pointing out the indebtedness of negro songs to the white man's songs.

In his latest work, Folk Culture on St. Helena Island, S. C., which has just been released by the University of North Carolina Press, Mr. Johnson devoted quite a bit of space to the controversy over African versus European influences in the negro spirituals. He came to the conclusion that the general features and many of the particulars of these songs were borrowed by the negroes from the whites during slavery. Tomorrow night he will summarize the evidence on this point. He will also discuss negro folk music as a basis for artistic composition.

Mr. Johnson will illustrate his remarks by musical excerpts, and after his talk there will be a program of songs, piano selections, and phonograph music illustrating the various types of negro music. In the folk song division Professor Ward Fenley will sing several secular songs, including "John Henry," "Stagolee," "Rainbow Round My Shoulder," and "I Told My Cap'n That My Feet Was Cold." He will accompany himself on the guitar. A quartet, composed of G. W. Fenley, G. M. McKie, Olsen, and R. P. Bond will sing spirituals in old-time style. Among their selections will be "Standing in the Need of Prayer" and several others collected by Mr. Johnson on St. Helena Island and rarely heard in this part of the country, including "Eagle's Wings," "Ma-

Replica Of Rosetta Stone Latest Library Acquisition

A cast of the famous slab of black basalt known as the Rosetta stone was recently acquired by the University of North Carolina library for the collection maintained by the Hanes foundation for the Study of the Origin and Development of the Book. The cast was secured from the British Museum in London through the efforts of Dr. L. R. Wilson, University librarian, while in England last summer. It is made of plaster, colored black, and polished so as to resemble very closely the original stone. It is now on exhibit in the main entry of the library.

The Rosetta stone played an important part in the discovery of a method of deciphering Egyptian hierogyphics. It was discovered in the Egyptian town of Rashid, called Rosetta by Europeans, in August, 1799, by a French engineering officer named Boussard. This officer was engaged in clearing a site for new fortifications being built as a part of Napoleon's military operations during the Egyptian expedition. The stone was later taken to Cairo at the order of Napoleon and there placed in a museum which he had founded in that city. When Napoleon capitulated to the English forces in Egypt in the spring of 1801, the Rosetta stone, together with other Egyptian antiquities, were surrendered to the British and sent to England. It is now on display in the Egyptian gallery in the British Museum.

The contents of the stone is an inscription of the decree passed by the Grand Council of Egyptian priests assembled at Memphis to celebrate the first commemoration of the coronation of Ptolemy V, in the year 196 B. C. The decree was written in two languages, Egyptian and Greek. The Egyptian portion of the stone has the decree engraved in two kinds of Egyptian writing; that is, the hieroglyphic character and the informal demotic hand. The Greek portion of the inscription is cut in ordinary Greek characters. By comparing the Egyptian portion of the stone with other examples of hieroglyphic writing, and by means of the Greek translation of the decree which also appeared on the stone and which could be read by Greek scholars, it was possible to decipher the meaning of the hieroglyphic and demotic characters and thus establish a method for reading material written in this way.

The University is fortunate in having acquired, through the Hanes Foundation, this important monument of human culture. The Hanes Collection was established April 5, 1929, by the Hanes family of Charlotte and Winston-Salem, as a memorial to their parents, John Wesley and Anna Hodgin Hanes. It comprises materials illustrative of the origin and development of the written and printed records from the beginning of history to the present.

Commerce Library To Be Open Sundays

Beginning next Sunday the commerce reading room in the general library building will be open during the regular library hours on Sundays from two until five o'clock. This Sunday service is being offered at the request of commerce students and will be continued as long as there is sufficient use of the room to warrant keeping it open.

So that the books in demand may be available for Sunday readers, the week-end circulation is discontinued and the following rules will be effective Saturday: Books may be drawn from the room Saturday night at ten o'clock for use until two o'clock the following Sunday afternoon. Failure to return books at this time renders the borrower subject to the customary fine for the late return of over-night books. Books may again be drawn for home circulation at four-forty-five o'clock Sunday afternoon, returnable at nine-thirty on the following Monday morning.

Engineers Meet Thursday

Thursday night there will be a joint meeting of the engineering fraternities. Professor Rodman of the University of Virginia and vice-president of the southern district of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, will address the meeting with a talk on Jefferson. The meeting will be held in Phillips Hall and all four societies in the engineering school will be present.

The alumni secretary, the class secretaries, the director of the Alumni Loyalty Fund, the alumni representatives on the athletic committee and the nominating committee made reports.

C. Felix Harvey and R. M. Hanes were nominated for president of the association; K. P. Lewis and Junius Adams for first vice-president; T. C. Taylor and W. D. Carmichael for second vice-president; and Claude W. Rankin and F. S. Spruill for representatives on the athletic council. These candidates are to be voted on by mail-ballots. C. W. Tillet, Jr. and A. MAJOR CAIN DIES AS A RESULT OF MOTOR ACCIDENT

Professor Emeritus of Mathematics and Celebrated Engineer Succumbs in Eighty-Fourth Year.

Major William Cain, former University professor and one of the outstanding members of the American Society of Civil Engineers died late Saturday night as a result of injuries sustained in an automobile accident a few hours earlier. The Major was crossing Franklin street when a car driven by Bill Parkin struck him down. Because of the poor visibility and the slippery street, it was impossible for Parkin to prevent the accident.

Major Cain was born in Hillsboro eighty-three years ago, and attended school in the same town. At the age of fourteen, because of the military training that he received while at school in Hillsboro, he was assigned to Camp Crabtree as drill master for the recruits. After the Civil War Dr. Cain returned to school at the North Carolina Military and Polytechnic Institute where he graduated with the degree of M. A.

Upon his graduation the late Major studied law with his grandfather, Judge John L. Bailey, but he was too young to practice, and when an opportunity presented itself for him to enter into the field of civil engineering he grasped it eagerly.

Dr. Cain was employed as an engineer by several railroads in the state until some funds which were to be used in constructing a new road were stolen, and it was no longer necessary for the railroad to employ an engineer when there was no road to be Vale Major Cain!

Major Cain has joined that great caravan which has never had a beginning and will never have an end. The Major left no children, but the seed of his wisdom and works will grow and multiply in the brains of men.

Kindly and alert, he was up until Saturday, when he left us, working on research the import of which would have been felt throughout the world.

May 14 Major Cain would have been eighty-four years old. Friends were planning a birthday congratulation which need now never be offered. These were eighty-four years of usefulness. From his fourteenth year when he drilled men for service in the Confederate army who were twice and three times his age, up until his world-known discovery of new principles relative to arch dams and their construction, as well as his active and virile instruction as a professor of mathematics at the University, which is a part of the lives of hundreds of men in this and other states, he did not live one day of uselessness.

Friends said that he was a man of half a dozen professions and it was true. The late Dr. Cain, the University having honored itself by bestowing the title of Doctor of Science upon him, could play a violin, write, teach and practice either as a civil engineer or lawyer.

The Carnegie Foundation singled him out to bestow upon him a retirement fellowship; the University of North Carolina called him to the post of professor emeritus; and now that divine plan or system, or anthropomorphic God, whichever you elect to guide the world, has chosen to bid him come into another universe. His is not death but the beginning of things.—JACK D.

For Charity's Sweet Sake

Agitation has begun for a post season football game between Duke University and the University of North Carolina. The proposed game would be played between now and Christmas for the benefit of charity. According to press reports, Coaches Collins and DeHart have expressed themselves as being willing to coach the teams.

Admitting that the game Saturday left doubt in the minds of many as to the superiority of either team and that ties settle nothing, we fail to see how another game would clarify the muddle. Duke has the state title; they won it fairly. Undoubtedly the weather Saturday was anything but proper for the climax of the North Carolina football season, but weather is another of those gambles of football.

Our objection to the proposed game is not based on the futility of attempting to settle the issue with another game but on the principle of taking a college sport away from the colleges and making it the pawn of the public. If college authorities wish to donate part of the gate receipts of a scheduled game to charity it is a noble gesture, but there is nothing noble or charitable in asking the two teams to resume training and work for a game that has nothing to do with their college life. Football is already threatening to become a big business proposition and a game Saturday would only make the game more so. Football is no article to be displayed for the benefit of charity.

There are practical objections to the plan. Examinations are approaching at the University. The players have little time during the regular season to prepare for examinations and it is unfair to ask them to sacrifice their work for the sake of charity. Another objection is that the season is three months long already and to drag it out another week is unreasonable. Give the players a chance to rest.

The suggestion of a charity game is noble, we are sure, but it is impractical and unreasonable.

The Carolina-British Debate

After an interval of two years, the heretofore annual Carolina-British debate will be resumed when two Cambridge University debaters vie with the local debaters in Gerrard hall, December 13. Even though the debate has already been well advertised by posters placed here and there on the campus, and over and above anticipated publicity in this publication, we feel that a portion of the editorial page might well be spent in an attempt to create a little interest in this, the highlight of the forensic program of the present collegiate year.

We feel no hesitancy in stating that hearing British debaters is always a pleasure. Their subtle, spontaneous wit and their dignified ease have won for them an enviable reputation. In these respects, even professional American speakers are seldom able to equal them. Only in pure logic and argument does even the best American debater surpass the Britisher. But aside from the entertaining qualities of British debates, the query to be debated December 13 is alone worthy of a large audience. The social problems arising out of the emergence of women from the home are attracting as much attention at present as any single transformation which the elapsed portion of the twentieth century has witnessed.

But approaching the matter from another angle, the Daily Tar Heel and the Debate Council join in urging the students of the University to attend the debate, because of the obvious insult which a small audience would do to the occasion. American-British debates draw large crowds everywhere they occur. We sincerely hope that the local habit of not attending debates will be overruled on the night of December 13.—J. C. W.

The Musical University

By Wex Malone

The series of vesper organ recitals was inaugurated by Professor Nelson O. Kennedy in the auditorium of the music building Sunday. The program of seven well-selected numbers constituted a conservative but delightful afternoon of organ music. The Suite from "Water Music," by Handel, and Bach's Fugue and Toccata made up the strictly classical element. These were interspersed with five numbers in the more modern mood.

Cantilena by McKinley was perhaps the high spot of the first part of the program. The melody, effectively executed, and warmly colored by sensible voicing, was superimposed on a delicate weaving accompaniment. The number had a pronounced effect. It was brought to a close with a fantastical passage on the Vox Humana. It is hoped that this selection will be repeated later on in the series.

Bach's Fugue and Toccata gave Kennedy ample opportunity to demonstrate his agility with the pedals. The artist displayed a uniform sustained quality in this phase of organ fundamentals, which, while perhaps not so ostentatious as that of Eigenschenk in the Pedal Etude heard last month, appeared to your reviewer to be a much more polished exhibition. At times the organ was entirely too loud. Power in music is one thing, a deafening roar that shakes the whole hall is another. This same over-abundance of volume was conspicious during Eigenschenk's recital last month.

The Cradle Song, judging from comment heard after the recital, was the favorite of the afternoon. A simple, unaffected melody was done quietly and beautifully. Surely there could be no more appropriate number than this for an afternoon concert. It is to be regretted that the wood wind passage concluding the selection was played on a flute registration that was badly out of tune. Even this, however, did not mar the effect of the Cradle Song.

Kennedy concluded the program with Carillon de Westminster. Here is an attempt to reproduce the overtones of Westminster Chimes. The effect is achieved perhaps, but at what a price! The eight notes of the Carillon are reproduced on practically every voice of the organ. The result is disonential if not discordant. As the number draws to a close the tune of the chimes is blasted forth on the full organ, overtones and all. A similar effect would be produced if the performer were to sit on the keys. To your reviewer this number represents experimentalism in musical composition carried to the point of absurdity.

The University is indeed fortunate in having an artist of Kennedy's proficiency. He is to be complimented on his sensitive execution of the first vesper recital. The size of the audience proved that there are enough musical minded people in Chapel Hill to make the series a decided success.

KOCH READS CAROL NINETY-SIXTH TIME

Charles Dickens' immortal "Christmas Carol" was read by Professor Frederick H. Koch Sunday evening before a crowded audience in The Playmakers Theatre.

The reading was finely rendered and performed with the ease and excellency of one who has read the all-time Christmas drama for ninety-six times covering a period of 25 years. There was no doubt as to his familiarity with it. He caught the characterization of Scrooge, Bob Crutchit, and Tiny Tim with astonishing accurateness. His interpretation of the miserly Scrooge was executed with all the finishing touches of a professional. Not once did he allow undue sentiment to carry his audience away from the commonplace realism of the story. With as much adeptness he reached and caught the meek sympathetic voice of Tiny Tim. Scrooge's mental struggle with his preternatural visitors was felt as significantly awesome as its author ever intended it to be.

The rendering was made additionally impressive by a simple setting consisting of two Christmas trees placed on either side of the reader's chair. The whole house was darkened with the exception of a faint, ghostly candle illuminating the reader's face. Between the parts, a quartette from the balcony of the theatre sang Christmas carols in keeping with the spirit of the play.

DECEMBER 10 IS DATE SET FOR RESERVATIONS

The date for reserving dormitory rooms for the winter and spring quarters is December 10, after which rooms will be assigned by the University business office.

A room is reserved at the business office on or before December 10 by a deposit. This is a chance for occupants of dormitory rooms to keep their old rooms for, afterwards, rooms will be assigned.

The business office urges that those wishing to reserve rooms do not wait until the last day to make deposits but do so as early as possible to avoid having to stand in line.

STEPPING INTO A MODERN WORLD

Charting tomorrow's telephone needs

Looking ahead — laying a firm foundation for tomorrow's telephone service — has long been a keystone policy of the Bell System.

To illustrate: business starts creeping into a residential district — a sign that greatly increased telephone facilities will be required. Through intensive studies, commercial engineers forecast the needs of five or more years hence with scientific accuracy. Additional exchanges, cable ducts, equipment of all kinds are planned and built. When the call comes the telephone company is ready.

So long as the nation continues to change and grow, the plotting of its future telephone needs will never grow dull. The opportunity is there!

Carolina And Duke Will Not Meet In Proposed Charity Football Game

Southern Conference and University Faculty Not Likely To Give Consent.

GRAHAM OPPOSES PLAN

Says Post-Season Game Unwise Way to Meet Unemployment Situation.

In a meeting of the officials of the University of North Carolina and Duke University yesterday morning, it was decided, after full and sympathetic consideration of the needs of the poor and unemployed, that it is wholly unwise for the football teams of the two institutions to meet in a post-season football game.

The meeting was held in response to several telephone calls and telegrams received here and to opinion expressed in the newspapers of the state during the week-end. Proposals were made to play the game in the Greensboro World War Memorial Stadium Saturday, or in the Duke Stadium Saturday or New Years Day.

The rules of the Southern Conference are so strong against playing post-season games that it was thought by faculty members and officials in the department of athletics here that consent of the executive committee of the conference is unlikely.

In addition to getting the consent of the conference to play this game, it would also be necessary to have the faculty of the University approve the proposal. This is improbable since a faculty resolution for academic reasons declares that there should be no games after Thanksgiving. It is for this reason that the Duke-Carolina game next year will be played on the Saturday before Thanksgiving.

Although several members of the football team were in favor of meeting Duke in the proposed post-season game, the general opinion of the squad is that examinations are too near for it to be wise to play such a game. It would require intensive training throughout the whole of the Christmas holidays, and staying in Chapel Hill for practice if the game were played New Years Day, and the opinion of the two teams was against this.

"Both universities are most sympathetic with every plan to meet the unemployment and poverty of these times," said President Frank Graham yesterday, "but it is the general opinion that the post-season game is an unwise way to meet so fundamental a situation."

NASH INVITED TO PLAY IN CHARITY FOOTBALL GAME

Strud Nash, captain and star halfback of this year's football team, has been asked to play in a charity game between Northern and Southern football stars in New York City, it was learned today. The game is scheduled for December 27, with practice starting December 17. "Stumpy" Thomason, former Georgia Tech star now playing professional football in New York, is the promoter. Captain Nash, however, declined the invitation due to reasons which were not made public. This is a signal honor for Captain Nash, who has been handicapped by illness most of the 1930 season.

Thomason, all-American of three years ago, will probably be remembered for his brilliant broken field running of '27, '28, '29; '28 being the year when Georgia Tech defeated California in the Rose Bowl classic by a score of 7-6.

THE BATTLE OF CHAPEL HILL

By Don Shoemaker

The rain did one thing anyway—it saved the local soda jerkers and barbers the trouble of composing their usual alibis.

A kind friend advises us that we should have changed the name above to the "Battle of Trafalgar."

Think what this country might have been now if the battle of Bunker Hill had been fought on a field such as Kenan was Saturday afternoon. (Don't shoot until you see the whites of their eyes, you dope.)

We believe that the meanest guy in the world is the worm that stole our galoshes just before the game.

Friends who offered us their house and lot for our choice seat in the press box prior to the game should be glad that we refused their offer for that realm of the gentlemen of the press was deluged repeatedly as the awning overhead sprung sundry leaks.

The oil skin and linoleum market in Chapel Hill seems to be the only thing that has prospered in the country since the stock crash a while back.

Heard through the loud speaker after one of those innumerable decisions that were reminiscent of the strong odor of putrid eggs: "What was the decision on that penalty?"

"I don't know what the h--l it was!"

The rain would have to let up just as the final whistle blew.

With apologies to players of both teams: it was the dirtiest football game that we have ever seen.

We are told that Billy Arthur nearly drowned on that third play during the half.

We recommend a pulmotor squad and a dozen life guards for the next game of Saturday's variety.

Head coverings in the crowd ranged from lamp shades to wash bowls.

Our idea of nerve is the guy in back of us who was sitting on a life preserver and continually yelling, "Down in front!"

The only song that the two bands forgot to play during that delightful fifteen minutes of musical repartee near the end of the game was "You Mud Me What I Am Today."

Iowa Students Show Enthusiasm for Team

Ames, Iowa.—(IP)—When the Iowa State college newspaper published a letter from an Ames merchant, charging that the students were not giving their team proper support, the students broke up classes, and more than half of the undergraduate body went in a group to the business section where bonfires were lit in the streets, and then went back to the campus to hold an impromptu pep meeting in preparation for the next day's game.

Little damage was done by the students although the fire department was kept busy putting out the many bonfires.

S. I. C. CONVENING HERE FOR TENTH ANNUAL SESSION

President Graham, Governor Gardner, and N. W. Dougherty To Address Meeting.

The tenth annual meeting of the Southern Conference comes to Chapel Hill Friday and Saturday of this week for the first time since the conference was organized, and coaches of the conference football teams will convene one day earlier to transact their business before the general meeting.

A full program for the week-end has been prepared by the program committee which is composed of Dean of the College of Liberal Arts, A. W. Hobbs, chairman; Director of Athletics, R. A. Fetzer; N. W. Dougherty of the University of Tennessee; and W. D. Funkhouser. Despite the fact that the conference has a full calendar of business to attend to the committee has been able to arrange several recreational events, including a golf tournament at the Hope Valley Country Club Thursday, and a tour through the cigarette factories of Durham for those not taking part in the tournament.

Coaches Meet Thursday

The first meeting of the coaches association will be at the Washington Duke Hotel in Durham at seven o'clock Thursday night when they have their annual dinner, and the business session will follow at nine o'clock.

Coach Chuck Collins will open the business session with the official welcome of the University. A response to Coach Collins remarks will be made by W. C. Raferty, president of the coaches association. H. J. Stegman, representative on the rules committee, will lead a discussion on proposed changes in the official rules, and round table discussions on stadia construction, football motion pictures and radio broadcasting have been planned.

Election of officers for the coming year will conclude the business session.

Conference Sessions At Inn

The opening session of the Southern Conference will be at 2:30 P. M. Friday afternoon in the Carolina Inn Ball Room, and the dinner is scheduled for that evening at 6:30 o'clock. The executive and other committees will meet during the morning preceding the general business session.

President Frank Graham, Governor O. Max Gardner and President of the conference, N. W. Dougherty, will be the speakers at the conference dinner. In addition to the official delegates, coaches, visitors, representatives of the press, and guests of the University of North Carolina will attend the dinner.

A second business session follows at 8:30, and the closing meeting for transacting business is set for Saturday morning.

Following the closing of the Saturday morning business session, delegates will be given the opportunity to visit places of interest in this vicinity.

Track Squad Meeting Wednesday Afternoon

Letters are being mailed to all active members of the varsity track squad announcing a meeting of the squad on Wednesday afternoon at five o'clock in the commerce auditorium located in 103 Bingham hall.

This meeting will last only thirty minutes and all members of the student body who expect to be candidates for the varsity track squad are urged to attend.

PROSPECTS LOOM BRIGHT FOR 1931 HARDWOOD SQUAD

Stars Return to Togs as Football Season Draws to End.

With the close of the football season, heavy work for the basketball squad began. The most important addition from the football ranks was the return of Tom Alexander, who, during the latter half of last season, was Captain Marpet's running mate at guard. The squad is now complete and drills will swing along regularly until examination period.

Prospects for a winning team appear brighter than during the last two years. Coach Ashmore's main problem just now is finding forwards who will fill the places left by Neiman and Green, who did not return to school this year. Edwards and Hines have been working at these posts as have Hendlin and Cleland, but all lack the polish that makes a first class basketball player, but as work progresses, these men will show improvement.

Although the loss of Captain Harper at center, appeared at first to be a great one, the good work of "Sandy" Dameron, a veteran, and Cecil Longest, a junior, at that post assures the Tar Heels of having a good pivot man.

There is no doubt but that the guard positions are the teams strongest posts, there being two regulars, Marpet and Alexander, holding down first string positions, and Choate, another regular veteran, held in reserve. In addition to this, there are Lineberger and Henry, crack guards of last year's freshman quint, who will give the lettermen plenty of trouble for their places.

At the time of writing, the schedule is as yet incomplete, but there will be, as last year, about three or four games with nearby "Y" teams before the Christmas recess. Indications also point to a game with Villanova, one of the East's crack teams. The Easterners will be in Raleigh and Durham shortly after the Christmas vacation for games with State and Duke respectively, and the chances are that Chapel Hill will see an engagement between Villanova and the Tar Heels. This game will furnish an excellent opportunity to see how the 1931 edition of the Tar Heels will perform.

Tar Heel Picks 1930 All-State Grid Team

Carolina Places Four Men on Mythical Eleven; Duke Gets Three.

WEALTH OF MATERIAL

Murray of Duke Named to Captain First Team; Stout Heads Second String.

By Don Shoemaker

In selecting the 1930 All-State team, the Tar Heel feels that one of the strongest teams in this section has been assembled. From end to end the line is representative of the best grid-iron talent in North Carolina and the backfield presents a quartet of aces whose attributes in each branch of the game give the team a wealth of offensive and defensive power.

On the first team Carolina placed four men; Lipscomb, Fysal, Branch and Magner. McDade and Nash secured berths on the second team.

With Rosky, Murray, and Brewer as first string selections, Duke took three places. Adkins, Werner, and Hyatt were the Duke men to make the second team.

Brock was the only Davidson man to place on the first eleven while three of his team mates, Brown, McCall, and Fraley made the second team.

State placed two men on the two teams, Cobb on the first and Stout on the second.

Williams and Gregson were Wake Forest's representatives on the first eleven and Webb and Mills landed positions on the second team.

With Rosky and Gregson at ends, the mythical eleven has two of the strongest wing men in the state. Gregson is noted for his ability to scent a play while Rosky's adeptness as a pass receiver gives the team a well-rounded aerial attack.

A wealth of good tackles in the state renders difficult the selection of men to fill the two posts. Cobb of State, Williams and Webb of Wake Forest, and McDade of Carolina are among the foremost. Both Cobb and McDade are sophomores, but Cobb holds the edge over the Carolina linesman in the opinion of several coaches consulted. Should his team have made a better record, Cobb would have taken a post on the All-Southern this fall. With two more years of football before him he should rise to great heights in southern grid circles. Williams, by virtue of his show against Duke, takes the other tackle post from his teammate Webb.

Brock of Davidson, Werner of Duke, Fysal of Carolina, and Stout of State shine in a field of brilliant guards. Blackwood, McIver, and Taylor are lesser luminaries in this division of the forward wall and escape berths on the two teams by narrow margins. Brock, for his smashing exhibition against Carolina and Fysal for his ability to get down under punts and hold up his side of the line receive our endorsement on the first eleven. But for the showing of his team this year, Captain Mack Stout of State would certainly be a formidable choice for one of the initial guard posts.

Lipscomb and Adkins are the two outstanding pivot men in the state. Lipscomb earns his place on the mythical eleven by his ability to break up passes and back up the line from the post of roving center on the defensive. Adkins and Gilbreath trail the Carolina center for the post.

Branch of Carolina is an undisputed selection at the quarter back position. His strongest recommendations are his kicking ability and spectacular open field running. McCall of Davidson and Mullens of Duke run a close second, but we favor the former for the second string post.

Murray, one of the outstanding quarter backs in the south, takes one of the half back positions while Magner, by his passing prowess is the other half. The passing combination, Magner to Branch, is one of the finest in the southern conference.

Brewer outranks the fullback field as the most outstanding in the state. His performance against the Navy, Kentucky, and Carolina indicate that his line plunging ability is not hampered by field condition. Big Five coaches believe House of Carolina to be one of the three ranking fullbacks in the state and upon this recommendation he receives the second berth on the All-State eleven.

Murray, Duke, as the most outstanding performer on the first team is selected to the captaincy while Mack Stout of State heads the second team.

PHI BETA KAPPA INITIATES ALUMNI

An initiation ceremony for alumni of the University of North Carolina who attained high scholastic rank while students here prior to 1893 but who, because of the absence of a local chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, national honorary scholastic fraternity, failed to be taken into the society, will be held at seven-fifteen o'clock tonight (Tuesday) at the parish house of the Episcopal church here, it was announced yesterday by Dr. T. J. Wilson, Jr., secretary of the University chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

When the Alpha of North Carolina was chartered in 1904, succeeding the local society, the laws adopted provided that no honorary or alumni members should be elected. Recently at the suggestion of Dr. Wilson the laws were amended to permit the initiation of alumni who would have been eligible for initiation had there been a local chapter. This includes the clasess from 1879 to 1893.

The Registrar of the University has investigated the records of alumni of that period and upon his report a number have been elected to membership. Some of those eligible who live at distant points have been initiated through the courtesy of chapters located conveniently. Those residing in North Carolina will be initiated here.

All active members of the local chapter and those residing in near communities are expected to attend.

Five Win Free Theatre Passes

An unusually large number of ballots were received for the campus selection of the all-state team, John W. Kirby, 201 Mangum missed but two places on his team, while four men tied for second with three misses each. They were: Frank Crane, 409 Mangum; N. A. Townsend, Jr., 312 Lewis; Willie C. Adams, 309 Carr; and J. L. Womble, 6 Battle. These five may call at the sports desk in the Daily Tar Heel offices this afternoon between two-thirty and three o'clock to receive their free theatre passes. A tabulation of campus votes indicates that the students favor Slusser over Magner at the halfback berth, and Webb and McDade at tackles in preference to Williams and Cobb.

Washington Doctor Conducts Clinic

Dr. Wade H. Atkinson, class of '88, a resident of Washington, D. C., has removed four hundred and forty pairs of Johnston County tonsils in a clinic he conducted in cooperation with Johnston County medical authorities. The first clinic was held two summers ago and was so successful that another clinic was held this last summer.

The tonsil operations were performed only upon those children who brought a certificate from their family physician to show their inability to pay for regular operations. Dr. Atkinson states that there are five thousand children in Johnston County, his native county, that need tonsil operations and are unable to pay the expenses of the operation. He has interested the Optimist Club of Washington in his projects, and that organization has assisted him in furnishing supplies for his clinics.

American Legion Oratorical Contest

Notice has been received that the title of the third annual collegiate oratorical contest sponsored by the American Legion will be "The American Legion." The finals of the contest will take place in February or March. The subject of the first contest was "Duty of a Citizen to Vote," while the second subject was "The Flag." All students interested in participating in this contest should see Mr. McKie at 210 Murphey immediately.

MAJOR CAIN DIES AS A RESULT OF MOTOR ACCIDENT

built.

When he left the railroad business, the Major taught at the Carolina Military Institute in Charlotte for five years and then at the Citadel, Charleston, South Carolina. It was at the Citadel that Major Cain was given his military title; here the late doctor was a ranking professor and head of the department of mathematics.

In 1889 Major Cain came to the University as head of the department of mathematics. In 1920 he was retired on the Carnegie pension with the honor of professor emeritus. His nephew, Dr. Archibald Henderson, has succeeded him as head of the mathematics department at the University. During his entire life as a teacher, Major Cain has been interested in research in the field of applied mathematics and engineering, and since his retirement has done a tremendous amount of research in these fields.

His principal subjects of research have been the theory of reinforced concrete arches, earth pressure theories, and arched dams. A few years ago Major Cain was given a gold medal by the American Society of Civil Engineers for his paper on "The Circular Arch Under Normal Loads." The formulas deduced in this paper were specified by the United States Authorities for use in the computing of stresses in the many arched dams constructed in California in the last few years—some of them three to four hundred feet high. It is said that Major Cain has contributed as many papers and discussions to the American Society of Civil Engineers as anyone in America. The University branch of the society is named for its distinguished founder and member, Dr. William Cain. Major Cain was director in the national society for two years. Among his publications are a text book on calculus, three books on arches, one on stresses on bridges, one on retaining walls, and one on symbolic algebra.

Funeral services for the late Major were conducted in the Chapel of the Cross yesterday afternoon at 2:30. As a mark of respect to the former professor the bell in South building was tolled during the time of the services. The Major was interred in Hillsboro cemetery. The honorary pall bearers were: President Frank P. Graham, Professors W. D. Toy, F. P. Venable, H. V. Wilson, Isaac Manning, C. S. Mangum, Grover Beard, Vernon Howell, R. E. Coker, C. T. Woollen, George McKie, W. W. Pierson, Thorndike Saville, A. S. Wheeler, W. M. Dey, E. C. Branson, W. C. George, Colonel J. H. Pratt, Marion Cheek, Dr. R. B. Lawson, S. A. Emery, Paul Collins; Cheshire Webb, of Hillsboro; Colonel T. F. Davidson; Haywood Parker, of Asheville; President John F. Coleman of the American Society of Civil Engineers; George T. Seabury, Secretary of the American Society of Civil Engineers; Charles E. Waddell, of Asheville; R. F. Jacobson, of Los Angeles; and Raymond White, President of the William Cain student chapter of the American Society of American Engineers.

Active pallbearers were: Professors T. F. Hickerson, W. D. McNider, W. C. Coker, John Lasley, A. W. Hobbs, H. G. Baity, John M. Booker, and Louis Graves. The local chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the members of the Bachelors Club attended the funeral in a body.

GOOD ATTENDANCE AT CONCLAVE OF N. C. FEDERATION

Student Body Presidents of the State Gather to Lay Plans for National Convention.

The Executive Committee of the North Carolina Student Federation, of which John A. Lang of this University is president, was well attended Saturday afternoon when it met in the Graduate Club.

The presidents of the various student bodies represented their colleges. State College was represented by Dan Paul; Meredith was represented by Anne Simms. Nancy Jones attended for Saint Mary's, and L. A. Upchurch substituted for W. D. Murray of Duke University. Several local campus leaders were present: Red Greene, Pat Patterson, Mayne Albright and J. A. Lang.

An informal dinner opened the gathering at the Graduate Club. The meeting followed in the Di Senate hall, at which time Guilford College was admitted into the federation by letter, and Saint Mary's by representative. Lang gave a report of the work of the federation in the past year. Some of the facts he brought out were: The first Congress of the North Carolina Student Federation met in Chapel Hill in May, 1930, organized the Federation, adopted a constitution, passed necessary legislation for its activities, and discussed local, state, and national student and public problems. An explanation of the purpose of the federation and an appeal for student and faculty support were prepared and sent out to every student press of the state and talks were delivered before ten student bodies in September. In October a Student Government Week was put on in this state in which President Murrow of the National Federation and President Lang of the State

Y GROUPS ELECT CONVENTION MEN

Comer Gives List of Delegates To National Meeting in Detroit.

H. F. Comer, secretary of the University's Y. M. C. A., stated yesterday that a list of delegates who were elected by junior-senior and sophomore cabinets and the freshman friendship council Monday night to attend the Detroit National Convention between Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. students of leading colleges and universities in the country, had been made out and that at least eight of the probable list were expected to attend the conference.

The sudents who were elected by their respective groups are Ed Hamer, K. C. Ramsay, F. M. James and John Park of the junior-senior cabinet and Jim Kenan, Bob Barnett, Frank Hawley and Billy McKee of the sophomore cabinet. The freshman friendship council are expecting to send four representatives who are Graham McCloud, Bob Reynolds, Charlie Poe and Alex Andrews.

The program of the conference will consist of consultations, platform addresses and sharing of experiences concerning the place of religion and the agencies of religion in college and university life.

JOHNSTON URGES FROSH TO BE MORE CONGENIAL

In order to "promote better feeling on the campus and to forward congeniality between all classes" Henry Johnston, Jr., assistant dean of students, urged the freshmen yesterday in chapel to carry out the wishes of their parents or others in regard to looking up persons on the campus or in the community. Mr. Johnston asked each man to fill out an individual card, noting either faculty members, campus leaders, or students that they have been told to see. A list of those persons that have been met was also to be included. In this list the names of faculty councillors, student assistants, and any social groups affiliated with were to be placed.

DI, PHI PICTURES TO BE HUNG IN MEMORIAL HALL

Long-Abused Portraits To Be Brought From Society Attics To Adorn New Structure.

The tablets which were in the old Memorial Hall have now been placed in the new. About 160 of them—all except those bearing the names of the University's Confederate dead—are on the walls of the main lobby, the upper lobby, and the stair halls, at the front end of the building. The Confederate soldiers' tablets are in the auditorium itself, on each side of the stage.

And it has been decided to hang in Memorial Hall the portraits of the Dialectic and the Philanthropic societies. When the new Di and Phi halls were built the portraits were stored in attics, because there was no wall space for them, and there has been considerable dissatisfaction at the concealment and neglect of them.

A committee of the faculty directed the placing of the tablets, and representatives of the faculty and of the Di and Phi societies will attend to the hanging of the portraits.

It is expected that the building will be completed by about the 15th of January. Most of the plastering has been done, and the main job ahead is the laying of the floors. Work on these is proceeding by night as well as by day.

The removal of the mass of scaffolding which was erected for the plasterers gives the visitor a good view of the interior. He sees a white ceiling whose smooth surface is broken by circular ventilators; a wide balcony which, being built on the cantilever plan, requires no pillars for support; a proscenium arch forty feet wide; a deep stage, with doors opening into dressing rooms; and an abundance of windows and exits. A gigantic chandelier will hang from the center of the ceiling, and there will also be concealed lighting all around the top.

Publications To Be Discussed Over Radio

Will Yarborough, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, and Jack Dungan, managing editor of the paper, will speak over radio station WPTF at five this afternoon on the general subject of campus publications.

Yarborough will open the program and discuss the history and traditions of the four publications. Dungan will then tell of the mechanical side and the organization of various staffs.

Student Governing Group Uses No Written Law Or Precedent

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The Tar Heel is following its style when it refers to the student body as the student union. Mr. Albright's article, which is the third of a series suggested by the Faculty Executive Committee, this time deals with the Student Council.)

By Mayne Albright

The student union is the electorate and the legislative branch of student government. The student council is the governmental agency elected by the student union. Upon this governmental agency rests the responsibility of the judiciary. It must assume the responsibility for upholding and enforcing good campus citizenship and for developing a sense of individual responsibility among the students in regard to the honor system.

In organization the council is characteristically simple. It consists of the student union President, representatives from the three professional schools, representatives from the three upper classes, and a representative from the council of the previous year. It is controlled by no written law or fixed precedent. It tries cases informally and decides upon them impartially according to their individual circumstances. Any move to increase the membership of the council and thus make it a less wieldy body has been discouraged by the student union but from the many suggestions made, two seem to be the most practical and advisable: the addition to the council of a representative from the school of engineering; and the election of a vice-president of the student union.

The first function of the student council is to investigate and try all reported violations of the honor system or the campus code, and to take whatever action it may see fit to remedy and to prevent such violations. It must sponsor such organizations as the student activities committee, and have general supervision over campus affairs. It must be responsible for the handling of the polls in elections, referenda, and plebiscites. It should serve as a link between students and members of the faculty or board of trustees.

As the governing body in a process of student self-government, the council is the agent of the students and not of the faculty. Its duty is to handle all matters of student discipline and supervision. The present council makes two exceptions to this rule: Cases of similarity in quiz books involving probable violations of the honor system are reported to the faculty executive committee and tried by that body. Bad checks are handled by a representative of the dean of students' office, but second offenders in this matter are sent to the student council. Sentences imposed by the council may be appealed only to the student union. The jurisdiction of the student council is confined neither to the boundaries of the campus nor to any particular group of offenses. Since its policy is liberal, its scope must be broad.

All of the actions of the student council are circumscribed within the limits of the two governing principles of the honor system and the campus code. Various councils have added to the duties and power of the body but none have impaired its usefulness by narrow interpretation or iron clad rules. All student councils are dependent upon the coordination of the student unions they represent for their successful administration.

STUDENT-FACULTY SOCIAL CONTACTS URGED BY GRAHAM

"Learning to know your faculty members is one of the greatest experiences of university life," said President Frank Graham before a joint meeting of the freshman council and the junior-senior cabinet in the Y Monday night. "Students who leave Chapel Hill every weekend miss the opportunity to acquaint themselves with some of the most diversified minds in the nation," continued the president. "Faculty members are always glad to welcome students to their homes, and Sunday afternoon and night is probably the best time to make calls.

"The late Major William Cain was a personality whom students greatly profited in knowing, and his loss is a severe blow to this community. When I was in college, visiting the faculty was one of the chief diversions, and the lack of this social contact in the University today could very profitably be substituted by a renewal of faculty-student acquaintances."

At the close of the talk the cabinet members had a volunteer discussion.

Earlier in the evening the junior-senior cabinet conducted a short business session, and President Ed Hamer appointed Haywood Weeks as chairman of the deputation committee. The other cabinets also met for a brief business routine.

MISSING STUDENT RUMORED TO BE IN TEXAS TOWN

Morgan P. Moorer, Jr., long missing University-freshman of the University who disappeared from Chapel Hill last February, was believed to have been seen in Pampa, Texas, but disappeared again, according to a report of Asheville police circles.

A message sent by Texas Salvation Army officials to the effect that the former student of the University had been seen in a flop house lead to hopes of finally discovering Moorer, but police and reporters of the Texas town were unable to find the person resembling Moorer.

Moorer, slender, dark-eyed, moody youth of seventeen, slipped away from the University in February, 1930. After a week's quiet investigation University officials initiated a nation-wide search, helped by the press and police departments in many cities.

There were many unverified reports that he had been seen, but none bore fruit. Efforts to solve the mystery had been given up until the message from Pampa.

Tickets for the presentation of The Messiah next Monday were placed on sale at the Book Exchange, the Students' Supply Store, and the music building yesterday. The proceeds from the concert will go to the Orange County unemployment fund.

Senior Meeting

The members of the senior class are called to meet in Gerrard hall during chapel period today at the request of President-elect Frank Graham, R. C. Greene, president of the student union, and H. N. Patterson, president of the senior class.

The junior and sophomore classes will be called to meet at the same hour Thursday and Friday respectively.

RESISTANCE OF BODY DISCUSSED BEFORE SOCIETY

Fussler and Wheeler Are Speakers at Meeting of Mitchell Society Tuesday Evening.

The Elisa Mitchell scientific society met last night at seven-thirty in the physics room of Phillips hall for its 324th meeting. The members heard two speakers, Dr. Karl H. Fussler, professor of physics, and Dr. Alvin S. Wheeler, professor of organic chemistry.

Dr. Fussler discussed the subject "The Electrical Resistance of the Human Body," in which he gave the results of much research in which he was able to correctly measure the resistance of the human body to an electrical current.

The experiments were made before Fussler came to this University. He took students who were willing and used a direct current to determine the resistance. He found that 0.05 ohms was usually the maximum current that the average person could stand, and that the resistance of a person was constant during a day but might change over a period of a day. By eliminating resistance due to contacts he was able to obtain the best results yet obtained on the subject, he said.

Dr. Fussler gave some very interesting incidents of peculiarities he discovered while making his experiments, but he said that because he had not enough data, he would not state them to be facts. On one day the resistance of a certain person will be constant, but the next day it may be higher or lower. One experiment while a man was very angry gave his resistance to be 981 ohms, and the next day when he was quite calm his resistance was only 431.

Using a direct current of about 0.05 amperes the resistance ranges, for the trunk, from 18.4 and 28.2 ohms; from hand to hand, from 209 to 400 ohms; and from foot to foot, from 262 to 543 ohms.

Dr. Wheeler gave an address on a subject on which he has been experimenting for three years, and in regard to which he has obtained successful results. He has published a book on the subject, The Bromination of Dihydroxynapthalene, and in the December issue of the Journal of the American Chemical Society there appeared an article on his work on the subject.

ADMINISTRATIVE COUNCIL FAVORS ALTERED SYSTEM

Registers Approval of Optional Class Attendance Recently In Force.

By unanimous decision of the members present, the Central Administrative Council has gone on record as favoring a policy of optional class attendance for all juniors and seniors in the University. This privilege has recently been revoked by the Faculty Committee and is now granted only to those members of the two higher undergraduate classes who have made Honor Roll grades the preceding quarter.

The Central Administrative Council, which is an advisory group composed of various student body officials, is of the opinion that the step taken by the faculty was not a forward-looking movement in the University's progress. With the tendency in University circles toward education based on knowledge rather than on credit-hour requirements, optional attendance in the University of North Carolina was held to be a distinct achievement and a practical step toward the desired curriculum reform.

The Council would urge unbiased consideration of this problem by both students and members of the faculty. It has been customary for a student-faculty meeting in the form of the Student Activities banquet to be held at least once each year. From these meetings has developed much progressive legislation as well as better coordination between students and faculty. The inauguration and continued existence of the Tar Heel as a daily paper may be largely attributed to this source.

Since optional attendance is believed to be a matter of student concern, the Central Administrative Council asks for serious consideration and some definite action at the next meeting of the Student Activities Committee.

LAW ASSOCIATION WILL HEAR BOYD

Greensboro Attorney To Give Second of Talks on Abstracting Land Titles.

The second series of lectures on the abstracting of land titles are to be delivered on Friday of this week under the auspices of the Law School Association. Mr. Charles T. Boyd of Greensboro is the lecturer. Mr. Boyd is a prominent young member of the Greensboro, Bar and is an experienced title-examiner.

The talks will be followed by a trip to Hillsboro on Saturday. The trip will be for the purpose of examining actual records. This will give the students practical experience and will be conducted by Mr. L. J. Phipps of the Durham Bar.

Mr. Boyd's speeches will complete those on title examinations for this year. Mr. George H. Wright of Asheville lectured here early in the fall on the technique of abstracting and Mr. Boyd will place emphasis on statues and decisions governing title work. These lectures were inaugurated four years ago by the Law School Association and Mr. Kemp D. Battle of Rocky Mount opened the lectures.

A Challenge to the University of North Carolina

Many were the comments whole and half-hearted, many were the expressions of admiration for the man, his accomplishments, his youthfulness, and his ideas when Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, appeared before the Southern Conference on Education which convened here in November.

Probably the majority who heard the man speak in earnest tones of what he chose to call "The University of Utopia" put it down in their so-called practical minds that "The University of Utopia," in which emphasis would be placed upon turning out intellectually minded persons and not upon grinding out a definite quota of A.B.'s, B.S.'s, etc., each scholastic year, was as far away as the proverbial millenium.

They will be confounded then by the fact that this thirty-one year old "flighty theorist" has inaugurated his system at the University of Chicago.

American education has built super structure of theory (impossible of attainment) upon super structure in an attempt to approximate that glorious ideal—a perfect democracy in which universal education would make all persons equal. The ideal can not be quarrelled with, but after one hundred and fifty years of democracy and at least fifty to seventy-five years of universal education, we rank as one of the most illiterate of the civilized nations in the world. Lately there has been a swing toward modernizing higher education and an attempt to free the capable student from the drag of the incapable. But the swing has with the exception of Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, Rollins, and the Meiklejohn school at Wisconsin University, been a new theory which has been largely discussed but has never been put into effect in any large way until Dr. Hutchins' move.

There is absolutely no justification for compulsory class attendance, fortnightly examinations, and a routine based upon mathematics, which dictates that so many persons in each class shall fail because arithmetic has so ruled or that persons of exceptional ability shall be forced to take four years to arrive at a degree when two would be sufficient. Compulsory mathematics, language, compulsory this and compulsory that. Colleges with their disciplinary measures which passed out of the European universities when the monks released education into the hands of laymen, are more like military and "prep" schools. And most ironic of all is the misnomer applied to the colleges of liberal arts, the term liberal evidently being a play on words.

Efficiency demands the division of the average student from the superior student. It is a well known fact that the brilliant or better than average student does not lift the poor high enough to offset the lagging interest on the part of the superior student when the group must slow up for the weak. It is a stultifying influence which ruins whole University careers along with uninteresting and after all hardly essential required courses.

The University of Chicago will operate under the following system beginning with the scholastic year 1931-32—

A College—in which all students will begin.

Four divisions of the college by which students will approach their primary degrees: Humanities (Philosophy, Art, Religion, Latin, Greek, Romance, Germanics, English, et. al.); Social sciences (Psyhology, Economics, History, Sociology, Anthropology, etc.); Physical sciences (Mathematics, Physics, Astronomy, Chemistry, Geology); Biological sciences (Botany, Zoology, Physiology, Bacteriology, Pathology, etc.).

Students will be admitted to the professional schools only when they have passed through the college "with distinction" based upon comprehensive examinations or have already secured degrees.

This is not particularly novel so far, although it does away with the seventy-two departments of the university in favor of twelve schools or groups such as—the college, the humanities, the physical sciences, etc. The radical departure is in the mechanics to be employed in the operation of this "University of Utopia"; to wit, students will not have to attend classes unless they so desire, there will be no formal grades, and no periodic examinations. Comprehensive examinations are to be given to determine a candidate's fitness for a degree. At any time students may ask for examinations to ascertain their standing upon the subject in question, however.

The examination if failed would still permit the student to re-enter the college until able to pass it. If successful, the student may enter a division in which he concentrates upon harder courses in small seminar groups. Degrees will only be offered by the divisions and the professional schools, none being given by the college.

The University of North Carolina, the eldest of the state-owned institutions standing as the Intellectual Beacon on the edge of the South, which will be the next section of our empire to experience intensive development industrially, would do well to have a rebirth intellectually, along lines of the new "Utopian University."

Whereas most are agreed that universities exist for the maximum development of every student and for the improvement of the facilities that God has granted to man, and further—whereas the University of North Carolina, known for its advanced thought and liberal atmosphere, is continually swinging toward a college of rules, and a University of automaton system which would kill initative, and the very soul of education—The Daily Tar Heel respectfully suggests to the Board of Trustees, to President-elect Graham, and to the faculty that the University of North Carolina embrace the Hutchins plans, appoint a committee at once to adapt the plan to this particular university, and arrange for its being put into operation not later than the fall of 1932.—JACK D.

Duke-Carolina

Relations between Duke University and Carolina have always been a subject of discussion, especially was this true during the past week, when the football game between the two colleges was played. With these two institutions so close to each other geographically, and such rivals in size and position, a very bitter feeling has developed between the student bodies. It has gone beyond the ordinary friendly rivalry, and has developed into something more serious.

Attempts have been made during the past year through the efforts of the North Carolina Student Federation to develop a more friendly attitude at both Chapel Hill and Durham. One result of this effort was the presentation of a silver trophy by the respective senior classes to be given to the football team winning the annual game. A second proof of the dawning of a new feeling was the three cheers both the Duke and Carolina cheering sections gave their opponents during the game Saturday. Efforts of this type are to be commended. Duke will always be our neighbor, and the sooner Carolina students get to understand this, the better will be their relations.

We are not advocating that there be no rivalry between the Tar Heels and the Blue Devils (for that will always exist), but we do believe that the bitter, mean attitude should be done away with as soon as possible. More cooperation by the students is needed. Let us at Carolina do our share.—W. W. M.

Possible Explanations

It seems a shame that only one-nine hundredth of the students in the University had poetry in the latest issue of the Carolina Magazine. We can think of three possible explanations.

Perhaps the students are laboring under the false impression that inspiration is absolutely essential to composition, that would-be poets must stare big-eyed at the ceiling whence cometh the inspiration. And the old Muse idea is poetic fiction. It's very beautiful fiction, very time-honored fiction, but always fiction, whatever the qualifying adjective. The great majority of people could compose poetry if they could recover from their apparently innate idea that poets must see visions, dream dreams, and extend limp hands that await, and get, the guidance of heaven. Practice and mechanics are infinitely more important and democratic.

Perhaps it is the lack of a course in versification that keeps the University students from composing. There are essay, short story, and playwriting courses, but there is no course in creative poetry.

Perhaps the students are persuaded that there is a literary oligarchy on the campus that has a very efficient monoply on the literary mediums of the campus. Perhaps they suspect a ninety-nine-year franchise and are too awed to attmept a little muk-raking. There's no monoply.

Perhaps there are other explanations.

OPEN FORUM

COMMERCE LIBRARY OPEN SUNDAYS

To the Editor:

I hope I may have space in your columns for a reply to the courteous and reasonable request made in your editorial Friday, December 5, for the Sunday opening of the Commerce Reading Room.

Let me say at the outset that the Library is acceding to this request and that, beginning Sunday, December 14, the Commerce Reading Room will be open from two to five on Sundays so long as there is any considerable use of the room during these hours.

In extending the hours of the Commerce Reading Room, the Library is not increasing the expenditure for room attendance. For the past two years budget reductions have fallen on the Library more heavily than on many other departments of the University. This year the cut in the Library's appropriation has been so serious that it has lost two members of its staff. It is, therefore, impossible to spend more money on the Commerce Reading Room staff, but it is possible to transfer some hours of an assistant's time from week-days to Sundays. This transferral may curtail to some extent the service offered on those days, but it does provide a means for keeping the reading room open on Sundays.

I should like to make clear a point made in your editorial concerning which there is some reason for misunderstanding. The editorial spoke of the fee charged for the use of certain books in commerce courses as a reason for the reading room being open on Sundays. It should be understood that this book fee is assessed by the School of Commerce and not by the Library. The Library is not responsible for the assessment, collection, or expenditure of this money, but is merely the agency through which the books so purchased are circulated. I should also like to state a fact that may have very well escaped the attention of users of this reading room: namely, that the reading room has never been open on Sundays, even when it was in the commerce quarters in Saunders hall, and that since it has been transferred to the general library building, its hours have been increased, at the request of the school of commerce, by nine hours per week.

It is also worth noting that with this change in the opening hours it will be necessary for the books in the commerce reading room collection to be in the room from two to five o'clock on Sundays. Consequently, books drawn out for week-end use Saturday nights will have to be returned at two o'clock on Sundays so that users of the room may have access to them. This is obviously an improvement in service, since the books will thus be available to more students during the week-end.

Yours very truly,
DONALD CONEY,
Assistant Librarian.

IN THE WAKE OF NEWS

Jack Dungan

We had a devil of a time getting The Wake Of The News out of bed this morning. We have been so weary contemplating examinations and envying the order of things to be inaugurated at the University of Chicago where there are to be no compulsory examinations or class attendance, that if we weren't a Tar Heel to the last glass we'd pack up and go to the University of Utopia.

It is interesting to learn that Professor Odum will have charge of the sociological booth at the Chicago Centennial in 1933. The fair is to masquerade under the very pleasant title of "Century of Progress," the celebration no doubt to center around the progress accomplished in liquor traffic and gang warfare which has caused the city to become bankrupt.

Professor Koch has read his, or begging his pardon, Dickens' Christmas Carol for the ninety-sixth time. The Tar Heel reports that a "crowded audience" witnessed the event. Professor Koch need never worry, however, about capacity audiences for his Playmaker events so long as his classes meet as a body to attend his affairs.

Those Three Little Words have acquired a few more letters in the modern girl's vocabulary and are quite a little differently phrased nowadays.

Ho! Hum! It's only 380 days until Christmas 1931. Mail your packages early so that they will be delivered.

Frank Graham's double has come to the village to startle and amuse the clever townspeople. This no doubt explains how Mr. Graham is able to make so many speeches and appearances as he has been doing all this year. One human being isn't capable of doing as much.

The town was much agog over the importation to the county of a French motion-picture well acted by poor linguists. It struck us as mighty odd that a foreign picture should create so much discussion when most of the dialog employed in the regular films screened here has to be translated into English before it can be understood, the film jargon being a foreign language.

Everybody is choosing All-State, All-Southern, and All-American teams. Any one wishing to compare notes on All-Americans are invited to our domicile in the attic of the Y any night after eleven. Bring your own cigarettes. No one is exempt for consideration for an All-Campus-All-American team we are in the midst of compiling.

Federation, together with five college presidents, twenty-five professors, took part. This was instituted to improve student government and intercollegiate relations. A definite appeal went out in November to several very antagonistic student bodies to adopt ways and means of allaying their hostilities, out of which came the establishment of a number of trophies and good-will meetings. In December the State Federation made a radio address from Raleigh, and this station promised the federation future programs if desired.

At Saturday's meeting Harry F. Comer, of the "Y," addressed the assembly.

The proposed projects to be presented by the North Carolina delegates at the national convention in Atlanta during the Christmas holidays was mapped out. The North Carolina Federation fund was officially approved of by the Executive Committee, and all the student presidents pledged to have their respective student bodies contribute to this general fund. The latter will be presented as a nucleous of a large sum to be used during the incoming year for the National Student Federation of America. The amount has now been raised to $50.00, and there is hope that the North Carolina delegates will raise it to $150.00.

STUDENTS BURN EFFIGY OF GOVERNOR T. G. BILBO

Jackson, Mississippi, December 9.—Students on the University of Mississippi campus took a pair of stuffed pajamas bearing a placard, "Down with Bilbo," and burned them last Saturday night. Governor T. G. Bilbo, at whom the attack was directed, has informed the press in a telephone conversation from his Popularville plantation that he will make no statement about the affair until he received official notice of its occurrence from university officials.

Nash Selects All-Opponents Football Team

Chooses Three Each From Georgia and Tennessee in Selection for Tar Heel.

Captain Strud Nash yesterday selected for the Daily Tar Heel the 1930 All-Opponents football team. This eleven is composed of the star performers that have played against the Tar Heels this season.

On the first team Captain Nash chose three Tennessee players, three from Georgia, two from Georgia Tech, and one each from Virginia, Duke, and N. C. State.

In selecting a quarterback Nash found little difficulty in eliminating all except Dodd of Tennessee, and Roberts of Georgia was the best fullback for the season. The Tar Heels, however, met many outstanding gridders for the other posts, and Captain Nash stated that is was difficult to choose men for the halfback and guard positions.

The selection:

Jones, Georgia Tech	End
Maree, Georgia Tech	Tackle
Thayer, Tennessee	Guard
Adkins, Duke	Center
Leathers, Georgia	Guard
Cobb, N. C. State	Tackle
Smith, Georgia	End
Dodd, Tennessee	Quarterback
Hackmann, Tennessee	Halfback
Thomas, Virginia	Halfback
Roberts, Georgia	Fullback

Honorable mention went to: Chandler, Maffet, and Maddox of Georgia; Evans and Berger of Maryland; Williams of Wake Forest; McCall and Brock of Davidson; Hooper of V. P. I.

"Kid" Brewer Elected New Duke Captain

Durham, December 9. — As the last official act of the greatest football season in Duke history, Pierce O. (Kid) Brewer, was last night elected to captain the first Duke university team under Wallace Wade.

Brewer's home is in Winston-Salem. He was a high school star there, being named as an all-star high school halfback. This year for Duke he has alternated at halfback and fullback, starting the season at half and then to full. He sometimes alternated between the two positions.

Coach DeHart announced that twenty-five Devils would be awarded the coveted "D" for play during the season. Each letterman will also get a gold football.

The lettermen: Captain Lee Davis, Waynesville; Marcus Rosky, Chicago, Ill.; Robert Hayes, Charlotte; William D. Murray, Rocky Mount; P. O. CAROLINA SIXTH IN S. I. C. RANKS

Duke Fourth With Rating of .800; N. C. State Is Nineteenth.

With a rating of two defeats, two ties, and four victories, Carolina ties with Florida and Maryland for sixth place in the southern conference standing this year.

Tulane, repeating its victorious sweep of last year to the title ties with Alabama for first place. 'Bama has a record of eight victories and no defeats while the Green Wave has won five games and lost none in conference circles. Although Tulane has chalked up a successful record a defeat by Northwestern early in the season mars its otherwise perfect national rating.

Tennessee assumes third place in the standings with Duke in fourth place. The Vols were defeated by Alabama and Duke lost to South Carolina and tied with Carolina.

DAILY SPONSORS DUKE-CAROLINA MYTHICAL GAME

Ticket Proceeds From Game To Go To Charity.

Mythical stands will be cheering and mythical blue-jersied gridders will trot up and down on a mythical field Saturday, but there will be no game. A unique plan fostered by the Raleigh News and Observer providing for the sale of tickets to a post season Carolina-Duke game, the proceeds to go to charity, has been advanced by that newspaper and the sale is prospering rapidly. It was announced Tuesday that several hundred dollars worth of the tickets had been sold.

Under the banner of "ALL CHARITY and no football" this crusade for the benefit of charity will be carried on for the remainder of the week. In its columns yesterday, the News and Observer appealed to the "good sportsmanship of football fans, the game presenting a splendid opportunity to prove that sporting blood goes much further than just standing in the rain to watch a football game."

Proceeds of the ticket sale will go to the Salvation Army through the supervision of Mrs. W. T. Bost, State Superintendent of Public Welfare.

FOOTBALL

By K. C. RAMSAY

THE STUDENT BODIES OF CAROLINA AND DUKE ARE TO be congratulated for the attitude and sportsmanship exhibited in the game Saturday. During the past few years many people have feared that the proximity of the two institutions would cause athletic rivalry to rise to such a point that relations would have to be suspended. But after the game Saturday, all such fears are rapidly being dispersed. The bands answered each other with marches, the cheering sections competed to see which could do the best, and several of the football players have been heard to say that it was one of the cleanest football games ever played in the stadium. (We will beat the punsters to it by saying that we are speaking figuratively.) It was, indeed, a fitting way for the two institutions to start a new era in athletic relations now that Duke has moved on its new campus and is getting to be one of the great universities.

WE ARE VERY GLAD TO LEARN THAT PRESIDENT GRAham, speaking for the University, and the officials at Duke have spoken against playing a post-season football game. Speaking relatively, we do not believe that such a game would do enough good for charity to warrant the football players, already weary from the three months grind, keeping in rigid training any longer. Then, too, it would be taking an unfair advantage of the Southern Conference executive committee to ask them, who this weekend will be the guests of the University, to give the institutions permission to break the rules of the conference. The fact that examinations start one week from today is not to be neglected either.

IS COACH COLLINS GOING TO RETURN NEXT YEAR? THIS is a question which is heard over the campus, and with it follows the statement that the student body wants him back. His contract has expired, and so far as we have been able to learn, he has not signed a new contract. We have been a pest around the stadium for the past three years, watching what goes on down there, and are convinced that he is the coach for the Tar Heels. We are looking forward to an announcement from the athletic council that Coach Chuck Collins has signed a long term contract as head football coach at the University of North Carolina.

"AFTER THE BALL IS KICKED ACROSS THE LINE OF scrimmage (even though it may be partially blocked), no player on the kicker's team may touch or recover it until it touches an opponent," states section six, article one, in the N. C. A. A. official football rule book. In the Duke game Saturday Referee Flowers ruled, however, that besides being partially blocked, one of Carolina's backfield men touched the ball before it was recovered by Duke. This being the case the ball was rightfully in the possession of the Blue Devils.

THE 1930 FOOTBALL SEASON HAS COME TO AN END AND with it the closing of a successful season for the Tar Heels, not to mention that this is the "last edition" of FOOTBALL. Many people about the campus will doubt the statement of ours that the season was a success, but we are firmly convinced that it was, considering that several of the mainstays of the championship 1929 squad were lost by graduation. Five wins, three losses and two ties is not a bad showing at all. And when you lose to such powerful teams as the Universities of Georgia and Tennessee, you have lost to top-notch conference teams. The loss to Davidson was a loss to an inferior team, but the way in which the Tar Heels took that defeat and settled down to work to literally run roughshod over Virginia shows what that outfit is made of. Enough has been said about the naval engagement of Lake Kenan without our commenting on that.

The student body, disregarding the warning of the coaches and others who knew that the 1930 team was not as potentially strong as that of 1929, became poor losers after that Georgia game and were poor supporters until they rallied before the Virginia game. In every sense the season was a success, and we believe that the change in attitude of the students before the last two games, and the prospects of good material for next year bespeak for the 1931 Tar Heels a great season, despite the fact that the schedule probably will be the hardest ever attempted by a Carolina football team.

FROSH TO SEND PROMISING MEN TO 1931 SQUAD

Tar Babies Hand In Togs; Season Successful Despite Setbacks.

After practicing last week to play the Kiski game only to find it postponed, the Tar Babies ended their training and handed in their equipment at culmination of a successful season this week.

Although they won only one of their five scheduled games, nevertheless they showed a steady improvement throughout the season and climaxed it with a superb 45-0 victory over the Virginia yearlings. They were very disappointed to find that the game with Kiski was called off and are now eagerly awaiting the winter practice which begins after Christmas.

Coach Enright and his assistants, Farris and Sapp, developed a fine array of future possibilities. They developed a fast, tough line, and a shifty, hard running backfield that clicked better each time it played. In Barclay, McIver and Shore, Enright is sending three of the best guard prospects to the varsity that have been seen in a good while. All of these men are big and strong and can pull out of the line and run interference in a commendable manner. In Crane, Strickland, Mulligan and Mullis, Coach Collins will get four big men to work on next year. Mullis was forced out of play this year by a knee injury, but will be ready for winter practice. For the end positions, Brandt, Jones and Frankel are all good prospects. All of these men showed to advantage on the Tar Baby eleven this fall and should be heard from again. Parker and Gardner are two hefty and heady centers who follow in the footsteps of Lipscomb and Gilbreath. The backfield of Anacaustas, Woollen, Whitener, and Phipps will all go up with the exception of Phipps who has planned to enter West Point next year. The other three will all be valuable assets to Coach Collins' squad next year. McGill and Hackney are other backs that have shown promise.

On dismissing the squad after the last workout last week, Coach Enright told the boys how much he had enjoyed playing with them and asked them all to turn up at winter practice regardless of their present standing. The practice is to be held after the holidays.

To Address Durham, Chapel Hill A.A.U.W.

Margaret T. Corwin, secretary of the graduate school at Yale university, and a former director of the North Atlantic section of the American Association of University Women, will be entertained at tea tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock in the union of the Women's Campus at Duke University, when she will speak to the members of the Durham and Chapel Hill branches of the A. STUDENTS ASK AID OF STATE FACULTY

Raleigh, December 9.—The North Carolina State college sophomore class has appealed to the faculty council to take immediate action in support their effort to discourage whatever whisky drinking that may now be done by the student body.

In their petition to the faculty, the sophomores say they are anxious to live up to their action in outlawing whisky and hope to see other classes take similar action.

"We feel that if we can stop drinking among the students of State college, the scholarship standing of the student body will be raised and conduct will be improved," they say.

The class appealed to the faculty council to set aside a day in the near future at which time each instructor be asked to take the first ten minutes of his class hour to discuss with his students the effects of drinking.

If this plan does not appeal to the council, the sophomores ask that the professors "formulate some better plan of co-operation," declaring that "what the class wants is the 100 per cent backing of the faculty in our fight to outlaw drinking in the college."

Phi Sigma Kappa Entertains at Inn

Phi Sigma Kappa social fraternity entertained its members and visiting alumni at a banquet in the private dining room of the Carolna Inn last Saturday evening.

The guest of honor for the evening was Charles R. Huff, of Washington, D. C., regional vice-president of the fraternity, who with Mrs. Huff was among the visitors at the Carolina-Duke game. Mr. Huff addressed the gathering, and told of the tradition and achievements of the various chapters of the national fraternity.

Ed Curlee acted as toastmaster for the occasion. Immediately following the banquet, the members gathered around the piano and sang the fraternity songs.

Village Takes On Cheery Atmosphere Of Holiday Season

Manifestations of the fact that Christmas is close at hand may be seen anywhere along Franklin street. The shop windows are loudly proclaiming with a beautiful display of gifts the slogan, "Buy now." Many enterprising and public spirited storekeepers have arranged to have the fronts of their shops decorated with cedar boughs and electric sings which will soon shine for the sentiment of "Merry Christmas." The committee on unemployment is considering the suggestion of placing small cedar trees at intervals along Franklin street.

As this article goes to press, the buildings which have been decorated are: Randolph and McDonald, Stetson "D", Hill Bakery, Carolina Barber Shop, Consolidated Service Plants, Student Supply Store, Carolina Confectionery, Chapel Hill Bank, and the "M" System store. The Consolidated Service Plants are supervising the decoration of the buildings and expect a great number of stores to arrange for this Christmas display who have not already done so.

ROLLO BROWN WRITES IN HIGH SCHOOL JOURNAL

The December number of the High School Journal was mailed last week. In addition to the regular columns there are several interesting articles which discuss library psychology, classroom visitation, contract teaching, and North Carolina high school statistics.

Mr. Rollo W. Brown, known as the distinguished biographer of Dean Briggs of Harvard and author of the Creative Spirit and Lonely Americans, tells with sympathetic understanding why the present-day South is peculiarly entitled to the adjective "new".

As we understand the current economic doctrine, folks should not wait like shorn lambs to have wind tempered to them. They ought to go out and blow themselves.—Boston Herald.

TROOPS STATIONED AT CUBAN SCHOOL

Havana, Cuba, December 9.—Troops were stationed around the National university in Havana yesterday to suppress any student disturbances which might arise, several of which have occurred here in the last two days. Precautions are being made to prevent serious disorders.

In clashes with police several students have been injured and a large number arrested but there has been no shooting. High school students staged an hour's riot all their own yesterday afternoon.

Commanding the troops around the university is Captain Mareo Montero, a former star athlete and campus hero. His presence is expected to help quiet disturbances.

The fourth dean to be elected within a week, Dr. Carlos de la Torre, is now threatening to resign, since students refuse to permit classes to be resumed, as suggested by Carlos Miguel de Cesopedes, the new secretary of education.

UNIVERSITY HAS BIG POLICE BILL

The University was put to the expense of $304.90 to pay for the additional police which were hired to regulate traffic before and after the Carolina-Duke game last Saturday.

Ten policemen were recruited from both Greensboro and Raleigh, seventeen from Durham, eight state highway patrolmen and three Orange County deputies.

The University payed each officer five dollars for his services and in addition payed for his meals and transportation. The services of the state highway patrolmen were offered by the state free of charge.

Recital at Salemburg

Salemburg, December 9.—Friday evening at seven-forty the voice department of Pineland College gave its annual December recital under the direction of Miss Amelia Maier, head of the department.

FAIR SEASON IS ENJOYED BY TAR HEEL HARRIERS

Victories Over Duke and V. P. I. Loom in Recent Season.

Led by one veteran from last year's cross-country squad, Captain Cliff Baucom, the Carolina harriers climaxed a fairly good season when they placed fourth in the Annual Southern Conference meet here several weeks ago. Although not favored to win the cross-country meet, the Tar Heels were picked to have put up a better showing than they did in the annual race. The injury jinx coupled with first class opposition, spelled disaster to the plans of the Blue and White hill and dalers, and they had to be satisfied with fourth place.

Carolina stock hit the top of the market when V. P. I. succumbed to a close, hard-fought contest on the last day of October. Duke was promptly taken into camp by Coach Ranson's boys, after the Blue Devils had lost to the Navy and Washington and Lee in succession.

In a quadrangular meet of Virginia teams, V. M. I. won honors by nosing out the snappy Gobbler outfit with a one-point margin. This surprising turn of events dropped Carolina's paper edge to a state bordering on equality. After losing to Auburn, Georgia Tech rallied back to form with a decisive victory over the Clemson Tigers. Nothing was learned of the strength of Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, and they came to Chapel Hill with the advantage of being "dark horses" in the Dixie tourney.

N. C. State abolished its cross-country team at the first of the season. Lack of interest, was the premier reason why the State officials ruled this phase of athletics off their roster.

Alabama, and Maryland were invited to compete with the other conference teams in the meet here, but declined for some unfathomable reason.

As the number of prospective entrants in the conference meet dwindled, competition soared. The entries from the Cavalier state took on a more serious air, as they set their minds on carrying the cup away from Chapel Hill for the first time in several years. Their spirited and volcanic attitude materialized as the Cadets and Gobblers walked away with one-two honors in the run, between the halves of the Tar Heel-Virginia Frosh football game, which Carolina won by an overwhelming margin.

Duke was not doped as a favorite due to its previous losses to the Middies, and the Generals.

Florida came from the bottom of the scramble to place third in the championship meet. This was quite an upset, as the Alligators were not expected to put up such a versatile attack.

The Tar Heels, destined by dopesters to make a strong effort to defend their title, were living up to their name at the two-mile post when Captain Baucom and two other Carolina men were announced to be in the leading group of runners. However, Baucom's leg injury began to contribute a break to the invading harriers, and he was forced to slacken his pace, allowing the other runners to beat him to the tape.

Next year Coach Dale Ranson will have a seasoned junior team with which to battle the various conference opponents. He expects to put up a convincing argument in the way of a well-rounded team why the conference title should be brought back to Chapel Hill.

Fortunately Al Capone is feeding the unemployed rather than giving them jobs.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Rankin Arranges Athletic Schedules

E. R. Rankin, of the extension division, left yesterday for Goldsboro to arrange both the schedule for the 1931 baseball season and the football schedule for the season of 1931, in the class A eastern high school conference.

Tonight Mr. Rankin will go to Salisbury to arrange the 1931 football and baseball schedule for the class A western conference.

VOLUME XXXIX | CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, DECEMBER 11, 1930 | NUMBER 68

ENTERTAINMENT COMMITTEE BOOKS FIVE ATTRACTIONS

Goya, Famous Spanish Dancer, Will Open Series with Recital, February 6.

The University entertainment series, which has been inactive since last June through the lack of a suitable auditorium, reopens February 6 and continues into May, there being five numbers with the possibility of still another.

The committee experienced considerable difficulty in securing the type of talent which would maintain the high standard heretofore in existence. The group feels that the five numbers for which dates have been definitely set on the University calendar, present variety and a standard of excellence such as make the individuals or organizations paramount in their fields.

The course is scheduled as follows: February 6, Carola Goya, famous Spanish dancer; February 20, Bruce Bairnsfather, known as "the man who made the world laugh in its darkest hour," creator of "The Better 'Ole," which played in both Europe and America for four years; March 2 or 8, Gay McLaren, dramatic recitalist, frequently called "the human speaking movie"; March 31, the Kedroff Quartet, noted Russian cathedral soloists, who have made nine tours across America, and twice that number over Europe; April 7, Angna Enters in her "Episodes and Creations in Dance Form."

The sixth number, which if scheduled will occur in May, will be a recital by one of the leading young musicians whose home is in North Carolina. The committee plans to provide one appearance each year of an oncoming native musician whose reputation and record of advancement appear to merit this honor.

Since no entertainments on the course were presented during the fall quarter, students in the school of education and the college of liberal arts will have the credit of one dollar paid at the time of enrollment carried over to the winter quarter. Outside season tickets will be available at the beginning of the next quarter to students, faculty, and townspeople at the reduced price of $2.50. A more detailed announcement of the course will be made after the holidays.

University Women Hear Howard Odum

At the regular monthly meeting of the American Association of University Women Tuesday night, Dr. H. W. Odum of the University school of Public Welfare read selections from his unpublished book, Cold Blue Moon. This is the third volume in the trilogy of Black Ulysses. The first two are Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder and Wings On My Feet. Cold Blue Moon is to come out some time this month. The whole book is an attempt to picture the old plantation from a new realistic point of view. One of the selections read by Dr. Odum was a description of a horse race in the old South before the war, told from the point of view of the jockey.

At the January meeting of the A.A.U.W., Dr. Guy Johnson of the University faculty will present a paper on negro folk lore.

D. T. D. ENTERTAINS DUKE CHAPTER IN ANNUAL BANQUET

The Delta Tau Delta fraternity entertained the Duke chapter at a banquet Saturday evening following the Duke-Carolina game. Between seventy-five and a hundred persons attended, including alumni and their wives, the members and their dates.

The hall was decorated in the fraternity colors under the direction of Charlie Rollins.

During the course of the evening, several informal talks were made. Among those speaking were C. T. Bullock, of Greensboro; Dr. Canfield of Greensboro, Dr. Sellars Crist of Charlotte; Bill Andrews of Greensboro; and Professor Harold D. Meyer of the University.

Following the banquet the group sang several of the fraternity songs.

This banquet of the Duke and Carolina chapters of the Delta Tau Delta is to be an annual affair. The banquet will be in Durham next year.

VARIATIONS MADE IN REGISTRATION

All Students Will Begin at South Building and Complete Process with Their Deans.

Registration procedure relating to juniors and seniors and students in the medical, pharmacy, and graduate schools for the winter quarter carries some features which are at variance with the practice of other recent years.

Each student, regardless of his classification or school affiliation, should begin the registration routine at the Registrar's office, first floor, South building. There each student will procure a card determining his eligibility to register. Any unpaid bills or other factors calculated to hinder or prevent registration will be learned from this card. To prevent delays, all students should clear themselves to the satisfaction of the business office, the library, Swain hall, the Book Exchange, the bad check committee beforehand, in case obligations are outstanding at any of the named places or departments.

The students having cleared themselves for registration, the Registrar's office will provide the necessary forms for completing the details.

Medical students will register with Dean Manning in Caldwell hall; pharmacy students will register with Miss Alice Noble in pharmacy hall; graduate students will register with Dean Pierson in room 202, South building.

School of commerce students will register with Dean Carroll in 114 Bingham hall; school of education students will register with Mr. McIntosh in 126 Peabody hall; college of liberal arts students will register with Dean Hobbs and Mrs. Ray in room 203, South building. Heretofore

Screech Owl Takes Refuge In Library During Recent Cold

By Bob Woerner

The recent cold spell resulted in a peculiar as well as interesting occurrence on the campus. A full grown screech owl took the library over as a place of refuge from the severe cold. He probably came in during the night and in the morning he was discovered perched on top of one of the exhibit cases on the third floor.

To each chance passerby he was equally courteous, bowing his head and blinking his eyes sleepily. Cats, dogs, horses, and other domestic animals have been known to rely on human help to keep from freezing, but instances of owls doing this are very rare. His coming to the library seems to indicate that the sages were right when they called the owl the wisest of birds. He wished to use his time to the best advantage and so while he was getting warm he could also "ponder over the volumes of forgotten lore."

Screech owls even when full grown are scarcely over five inches tall and this one was no exception. He was grey with brown and black spots scattered profusely over his back and wings. On the under side he was less speckled and even more beautifully marked. His claws were long and sharp and his beak a little ominous. His sleepy looking eyes stared at one blinkingly, and he seemed to be on the point of asking a question.

The zoology department was notified and soon Mr. Owl was being taken to Davie hall to be put under observation. He offered no resistance to being captured, but as soon as he was in the net he showed a little resistance. His captor got a few scratches for his pains, but other than that, there was little trouble in making the capture. After a careful study is made of him, he will probable be killed, mounted and added to the collection of stuffed birds which this department possesses.

Judge Lindsay Says Modern Youth May Inaugurate Great Moral Age

"Our young people of today are, as a rule, wholesome, sane and sensible," states Judge Ben B. Lindsay in the January College Humor, discussing "Sex and the College Student." "If given half a chance, they will inaugurate a moral age the best yet known in history. They are trying to accommodate their lives to things as they are. They want to approach experience with less hypocrisy and more honesty. Frankly, they are enmeshed in economic and social conditions in the making of which they had no part. What they are going to do about it they do not yet quite know, but that they will find a way out in line with happiness and a sound morality is highly probable. These are some of the conclusions I reached in a recent tour of American college communities, during which I lectured before liberal groups both on and off the campus, on the problems of love and marriage.

"In the discussion of these questions I found girls on the whole much keener and franker than the boys. They were, I should say, more honestly inquisitive and concerned over the future of marriage and morals. At an exceptionally illuminating discussion at Chicago University, one of the girls said to me: 'I think your program for the Companionate Marriage is wonderful. I want to get married,' she confessed, 'just as soon as possible after I leave college. But until I understood what you meant by Companionate Marriage, I was afraid that would not be very soon. My fiance feels the same about it as I do, but, you see, marriage is one thing and maternity another. Now I have worked all that out to my own satisfaction. Oh, yes—I would like to be a mother some day, but neither my fiance nor myself feel that we can afford that expense for quite awhile. And I think you absolutely right when you say that a girl should be as much the master of her sex as a boy. She should have her love life with the certainty that it will not result in parenthood until she is ready for it.' . . . And then after a moment's silence, touched, it seemed to me, with poignancy, she added, 'How much better it would be for us both not to be tied up with a child or children if we should find out that, after all, we were not suited to each other.'

"What she had said seemed to me to be sensible and I commended her, adding, however, my view that the companionate relationship of which she was so strong an advocate might much better be in lawful marriage than in liaison. Whereupon a brilliant young girl in the group burst out: 'But say what you will and be as conventional as you please, you know well enough that the judge is right when he says boys don't get married until after they are thirty. And if that is interfering with my love life, I think I have just as much right to have that love life out of wedlock as in wedlock. . .'

"For a moment I was dazed. Was I, after all, a bit old-fashioned in standing for a legal, conventional marriage as a preliminary for any sex relationship?"

Leavitt Writes Book On Spanish Author

Dr. S. E. Leavitt, of the Spanish department, will have a new book published in a few days. This volume deals with the Estrella de Seville and Audres de Claramonte, and will discuss the author, date, and sources of this famous play, which has long been attributed to Lope de Vega. The book is the result of Dr. Leavitt's research in Spanish literature.

ENGLISH DEBATER TALENTED PERSON

Holdsworth Distinguished as Athlete and Journalist at Cambridge.

The two Cambridge University men who are to debate with J. C. Williams and McBride Fleming-Jones of Carolina in Gerrard hall Saturday night on the query: Resolved: That the emergence of women from the home is a regrettable feature of modern life, have noteworthy records to show for their college careers.

Mr. Geoffrey Crowther who, with J. C. Williams, will speak for the affirmative, has taken the place of Mr. H. C. Oatridge who was called back to England on the Cambridge team. Mr. Crowther is a former president of the Cambridge Union Society and is now working in New York.

His colleague, Mr. Albert Edward Holdsworth, is most versatile. He is now twenty-one years old and claims as his place of birth Walthamstow, Essex. He received his early education at Saint Saviours, Walthamstow, and entered Sir George Monoux Grammar School in 1920.

He rose finally to head the school and became editor of the school magazine. He was on the varsity football eleven and played cricket. Since October, 1928, he has been at Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge.

He holds the distinction of being the only man ever elected to the committee of the Union Society while a freshman. He was secretary and is now vice-president of the Marshall Society (a University society of more than three hundred members which has as its purpose studying social problems). He is, besides the things already mentioned, editor of his college magazine. His games now are association football and lawn tennis. The future career of the multi-talented Mr. Holdsworth is as yet undecided.

Infirmary List

The following patients were confined to the infirmary yesterday: E. L. Peterson, G. L. Weeks, R. E. Betts, and Coach Collins.

YARBOROUGH AND DUNGAN DISCUSS LITERARY ORGANS

Working of Campus Publications Considered in Talks Over Raleigh Radio Station.

The weekly broadcast from station WPTF in Raleigh went on the air yesterday afternoon at five o'clock with Will Yarborough, editor of the Daily Tar Heel, speaking about the four campus publications. Yarborough did not attempt to discriminate between the merits of the Tar Heel, Carolina Magazine, Yackety Yack, and Buccaneer, but gave a resume of the purpose of each publication.

Jack Dungan, managing editor of the Tar Heel, in his talk stressed the technique and mechanics of publishing a paper or magazine. Dungan stated that work on the Tar Heel, the only daily college newspaper in the south, required more hours of endeavor than any single activity in the University, football not excepted. According to the managing editor, there are 300 students employed on the four campus publications who, because of practice in handling news, fiction, and money, are being trained to be future executives. Some of the prominent men developed through working on the University publications are: Phillips Russell, Hatcher Hughes, Thomas Wolfe, Jonathan Daniels, and Paul Green.

J. M. Little Heads Di, and Ransom Whittenton Is Elected To Phi Presidency.

Ransom Whittenton of Benson and J. M. Little of Winston-Salem, were chosen to head the Phi assembly and the Di senate respectively at the executive sessions of the two bodies, which met Tuesday night.

The Phi assembly after a very stormy debate on the constitution, which deals with the selection of the members of the ways and means committee, elected its officers for the winter quarter.

Ransom Whittenton defeated Thos. R. Baldwin for the speakership by a commanding lead. Wm. E. Uzzell won the position of speaker pro-tem over Jno. A. Wilkinson. The other officers were elected without opposition. Wilfred N. Sisk, sergeant-at-arms; Dan A. Kelly, reading clerk; Thos. R. Worth, assistant treasurer, and the following were selected on the ways and means committee: Virginia Douglass, chairman, Cecil K. Carmichael and Geo. W. Wright.

Speaker Albright spoke to the Assembly after the business had been finished. In his speech he expressed his appreciation for the cooperation shown by the assembly during his administration.

The Di senate also elected its officers for the next term. J. M. Little was chosen president for the winter quarter, and K. C. Ramsay, president for the spring term. Claude R. McIver was elected speaker pro-tem. Clyde Shreve was elected over McBride Fleming-Jones and B. G. Gentry for sergeant-at-arms. W. C. Medford former president will be the critic for the next term.

Some important changes were made in the constitution after much discussion.

Faculty-Student Relations

The Alumni Assembly together with members of the faculty met Saturday to discuss "Faculty and Student Relations." The Tar Heel may have an altogether wrong idea about what faculty and student relations should be, but it strikes as rather significant that only a very one-sided view can be obtained by listening to the faculty side alone. There was no recognized student leader, or any student in attendance at all, so far as we have been able to ascertain.

By rumor we have it that the conclusion reached by the alumni, deans, and faculty persons was that the reason for a breach between the faculty and the student body was that the students resented contact with instructors and professors, and were the offending parties. We rise in the defense of the students to say that the reason for the cold relations which now exist between some of the faculty and the students is not entirely a student initiated move.

It is so easy to ascribe meaningless and general reasons for a condition which at its least insidious stage ages with astounding rapidity the ideas of the faculty, and deprives the student of guidance and counsel. The real cause we suspect is the deprecatory attitude adopted by so many pedants toward undergraduate instruction and an almost fanatical worship of research which is all right in its place, but which should not supersede instruction in universities. Research belongs in the laboratories and should never overshadow the fact that an instructor is primarily a teacher and not an intellectual gymnast. An ever increasing idea that Universities must be run by rule and not by judgment, and that students must be compelled to do everything that is expected of them is another factor contributing to the condition of faculty-student relations. The professor who is nothing more than an enforcer of rules, who can see no farther than rules, and furthermore who gloats over being able to enforce them never will be popular or even respected and does not belong in any university although our universities are full of just such men.

We venture to say that there are less than twenty teachers in the University who would be willing to invite a flunking student to their homes for the purpose of encouraging or instructing him. Further, we have heard that there are some instructors who dislike their work so much that they sigh a huge sigh of relief after their three hour day is accomplished and rush with joy to their field of preferment—society, research, golf, tennis, etc.

The students, on the other hand, have themselves to answer for a part of this condition. The lamentable betrayal of hospitality of some of the faculty each year of the existence of the flaming Yellow Journal, which, outside of being gross taste and violations of the gentleman's code, was ungrateful. The belittling of professors who attempt to break the ice, and most obnoxious of all — deliberate booting for the sake of grades alone, and not for the mutual intellectual contact such an action should bring, have only widened the breach.

There has been a noticeable enlivening in college spirit, as that spirit relates to the gridiron, and a revivifying of campus organizations and activities, and if the faculty is or has been sincere in wanting to associate on social and intellectual planes with the members of this student union now is the most auspicious time to instigate such a movement.—JACK D.

The Government Handles Unemployment

Our today's press is replete with pictures of the horrors of unemployment: thousands in New York City are walking the streets in search of jobs; business failures in many states have reached an unparalled peak, a consequence of which is that many people have lost the means of gratifying their daily wants with hardly due notice; underpaid workers (half-brothers of the unemployed) are striking; and the whole country seems to be talking of nothing but hard times and unemployment.

Charitable organizations and poor relief funds are working under the double handicap of necessary wider distribution of aid and diminished source of proceeds. The individuals who do not feel the sting of the situation are few indeed, and there are none who do not observe its effects. Even college students are becoming alarmed, for we note that they are assembling in conferences to discuss the problem. The national government is now taking a hand, and hopes for relief have been high. Up to the present time there has been much talk but little action among the legislative and administrative heads, and it seems now that we have been disillusioned in our faith in the effectiveness of the government in handling the situation.

It was just yesterday that the newspapers carried on the front page an article dealing with the proposed appropriation of $110,000,000 for unemployment relief. Alongside this was an account of the needs of the secretary of the navy to build more battleships amounting to $135,000,000. It is a difficult thing for an average citizen who is not in close contact with the workings of the government to understand why our legislators think we need more new warships when what we think we need is more bread and more economic security for the ordinary man. But perhaps the government will be in the right if it accepts these two bills, for after all it may be more important to protect ourselves from the deadly navies of England, Japan, and Italy than to make sure that the man in the street is working, secure and well fed.—B. M.

Minority Rule

Political observers note today in the national congress a peculiar, undemocratic, and anomalous situation—control of legislation by a well-organized and militant bloc both in the senate and house. Dictating not only to regulars of both parties, but to the president, himself, these small groups place the will of their relatively few constituents, or their own wills, paramount to those of recognized majorities. Peculiar enough is the situation resulting from the Norris-Borah-Brookhart western bloc existing at present, but there is ample possibility that in the next regular session of Congress only one delegate in either or both of the houses will hold the balance of power. This interesting state of affairs will result in the event regular contingents are equally divided, and Farmer-Laborite members from Minnesota are thus enabled to assert their individuality on each question brought up.

Not entirely new is this situation, it is true. Not many years ago a similar condition was brought about by the Lafollette bloc, and others preceded it. But it is probably safe to assume that at no time before has the final decision rested with so few individuals, or with individuals representing such a relatively insignificant portion of the total population.

It is obvious that beneficial results might be gained by such a condition, if the minority used its unusual power to force passage of constructive legislation. But so far, from all appearances, little except private ends have been striven for by existing minorities. Undoubtedly it would be preferable to rely upon majority rule, carrying with it direct and unavoidable responsibility. Uncertain and devious enough are legislative channels in this country without additional impediments and obstacles being placed in the way of the majority will.—J. M. L.

Misunderstanding And Misrepresentation

A narrow-minded man of God and a poorly balanced freethinker with what appear to be paranoid tendencies almost came to blows in an epithetical conflict in the Cathedral of St. John, the Divine in New York Sunday. But, the faithful and fashionable flock would stand for no offense to its minister, although he had just a moment before been blaspheming the free-thinker, and but for the intervention of the police would have thrown the intruder down the steps and out of the church in the true Christian spirit of tolerance.

All this came about because Bishop Manning does not understand companionate marriage as it is misrepresented by Judge Lindsey. The everyday mind in its usual conception of companionate marriage thinks of it in much the same manner as Bishop Manning describes Judge Lindsey's book: as being conducive to "lewdness, promiscuity, adultery and unrestrained sexual gratification." Actually, there are no such ideas behind the theory or in the practice of companionate marriage. The plan, it is said, is fully legitimate, legalized and sanctified, for it is merely a secret contract between a marrying couple by which they agree to practice absolute birth control for a definite length of time to allow both man and wife to engage freely in other pursuits, economic and otherwise. OPEN FORUM

VOTE FOR HUTCHINS' PLAN

To the Editor of the Tar Heel:

I don't know what all Dr. Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago may have in the back of his flighty and theorizing mind, but I am ready to offer momentous praises unto Allah and cling like a disciple to those words of pearly wisdom that would send compulsory classes, quiz books, and credits into the land of long ago.

I am tired of them; I am sick of them; I hate them, for they stand like a scourge that whips and beats until the soul is dead. Under a system of compulsion and formal check ups there can be no true study, no true learning and consequently no true education. I have read somewhere or other that learning came like a sweet, pure light showing the way to understanding, and with understanding (at the option of the owner) a slow and meditative chin-rub, and maybe a calm little smile denoting that the smiler had absorbed something other than that Emperor Charles the Fifth died in 1558, and that a white rat could run through a sawdust pile in exactly one hour and thirty minutes. I'll bet, too, that that fellow, whoever he was, did not have to cut short his chin-rub or dash his little smile into a hideous scowl because it was necessary, in order to pass tomorrow's quiz, to memorize a half a book of French idioms.

Now I, too, am a "Tar Heel to the last glass," born with a tobacco leaf in one hand and a sack of peanuts in the other and I should hate very much that the University of North Carolina should lose such a dominating personality as myself. For I have been in the University too long to know so little. I know a little chemistry, a little French, a little German, and a few other odds and ends that I have picked up between quizzes, but I would like to know just a little more. I would like to hang a sheepskin in the front room at home that my father could proudly show to all the neighbors and say, "My boy did that," and one that I could step up and say, "Yes mamm, that's me."

Births and Deaths Balance In Report Of County Coroner

The coroner's report for the month of November shows that the births exactly equalled the number of deaths; there were four of each. G. M. Braune, late Dean of the University engineering school, succumbed to an attack of pneumonia. Jessie Kirkland, colored brick mason, died as a result of chronic nephritis; he was sixty-eight years old. L. J. Bright, white, died in his forty-eighth year from an attack of angina pectoris. John Riggsbee, colored, one month old, died of malnutrition.

The births were evenly divided between the sexes; there were two boys and two girls born. A daughter was born to both Mr. and Mrs. James Baldwin, colored, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Caldwell, colored. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Winston, colored, and Mr. and Mrs. William Roberts, colored were both blessed with the birth of a son.

W. V. PARKER CONDUCTS MATHEMATICS SEMINAR

Mr. W. V. Parker conducted the mathematic seminar yesterday afternoon held in Phillips hall at three o'clock. He discussed a method of obtaining curves of the type y equals $g(x)$ which are tangent to a curve y square equals $f(x)$ at all points when they meet. When $f(x)$ and $g(x)$ are polynomials and the degree of $g(x)$ is at least one-half the degree of $f(x)$ and not greater than the degree of $f(x)$. He also showed how many such curves exist for any given point of the curve y square equals $f(x)$.

This treatment of curves is apparently new and is not found in any text books on mathematics. Mr. Parker happened on it while writing a thesis for his doctor's degree last year. It is a rather elementary problem and it seems strange that nothing has heretofore been written on it.

There seems to be a long-time fuse attached to the dynamite in the Hoover law enforcement commission report.—Chicago Evening Post.

Faculty-Student Relations

The Alumni Assembly together with members of the faculty met Saturday to discuss "Faculty and Student Relations." The Tar Heel may have an altogether wrong idea about what faculty and student relations should be, but it strikes as rather significant that only a very one-sided view can be obtained by listening to the faculty side alone. There was no recognized student leader, or any student in attendance at all, so far as we have been able to ascertain.

By rumor we have it that the conclusion reached by the alumni, deans, and faculty persons was that the reason for a breach between the faculty and the student body was that the students resented contact with instructors and professors, and were the offending parties. We rise in the defense of the students to say that the reason for the cold relations which now exist between some of the faculty and the students is not entirely a student initiated move.

It is so easy to ascribe meaningless and general reasons for a condition which at its least insidious stage ages with astounding rapidity the ideas of the faculty, and deprives the student of guidance and counsel. The real cause we suspect is the deprecatory attitude adopted by so many pedants toward undergraduate instruction and an almost fanatical worship of research which is all right in its place, but which should not supersede instruction in universities. Research belongs in the laboratories and should never overshadow the fact that an instructor is primarily a teacher and not an intellectual gymnast. An ever increasing idea that Universities must be run by rule and not by judgment, and that students must be compelled to do everything that is expected of them is another factor contributing to the condition of faculty-student relations. The professor who is nothing more than an enforcer of rules, who can see no farther than rules, and furthermore who gloats over being able to enforce them never will be popular or even respected and does not belong in any university although our universities are full of just such men.

We venture to say that there are less than twenty teachers in the University who would be willing to invite a flunking student to their homes for the purpose of encouraging or instructing him. Further, we have heard that there are some instructors who dislike their work so much that they sigh a huge sigh of relief after their three hour day is accomplished and rush with joy to their field of preferment—society, research, golf, tennis, etc.

The students, on the other hand, have themselves to answer for a part of this condition. The lamentable betrayal of hospitality of some of the faculty each year of the existence of the flaming Yellow Journal, which, outside of being gross taste and violations of the gentleman's code, was ungrateful. The belittling of professors who attempt to break the ice, and most obnoxious of all — deliberate booting for the sake of grades alone, and not for the mutual intellectual contact such an action should bring, have only widened the breach.

There has been a noticeable enlivening in college spirit, as that spirit relates to the gridiron, and a revivifying of campus organizations and activities, and if the faculty is or has been sincere in wanting to associate on social and intellectual planes with the members of this student union now is the most auspicious time to instigate such a movement.—JACK D.

The Government Handles Unemployment

Our today's press is replete with pictures of the horrors of unemployment: thousands in New York City are walking the streets in search of jobs; business failures in many states have reached an unparalled peak, a consequence of which is that many people have lost the means of gratifying their daily wants with hardly due notice; underpaid workers (half-brothers of the unemployed) are striking; and the whole country seems to be talking of nothing but hard times and unemployment.

Charitable organizations and poor relief funds are working under the double handicap of necessary wider distribution of aid and diminished source of proceeds. The individuals who do not feel the sting of the situation are few indeed, and there are none who do not observe its effects. Even college students are becoming alarmed, for we note that they are assembling in conferences to discuss the problem. The national government is now taking a hand, and hopes for relief have been high. Up to the present time there has been much talk but little action among the legislative and administrative heads, and it seems now that we have been disillusioned in our faith in the effectiveness of the government in handling the situation.

It was just yesterday that the newspapers carried on the front page an article dealing with the proposed appropriation of $110,000,000 for unemployment relief. Alongside this was an account of the needs of the secretary of the navy to build more battleships amounting to $135,000,000. It is a difficult thing for an average citizen who is not in close contact with the workings of the government to understand why our legislators think we need more new warships when what we think we need is more bread and more economic security for the ordinary man. But perhaps the government will be in the right if it accepts these two bills, for after all it may be more important to protect ourselves from the deadly navies of England, Japan, and Italy than to make sure that the man in the street is working, secure and well fed.—B. M.

Minority Rule

Political observers note today in the national congress a peculiar, undemocratic, and anomalous situation—control of legislation by a well-organized and militant bloc both in the senate and house. Dictating not only to regulars of both parties, but to the president, himself, these small groups place the will of their relatively few constituents, or their own wills, paramount to those of recognized majorities. Peculiar enough is the situation resulting from the Norris-Borah-Brookhart western bloc existing at present, but there is ample possibility that in the next regular session of Congress only one delegate in either or both of the houses will hold the balance of power. This interesting state of affairs will result in the event regular contingents are equally divided, and Farmer-Laborite members from Minnesota are thus enabled to assert their individuality on each question brought up.

Not entirely new is this situation, it is true. Not many years ago a similar condition was brought about by the Lafollette bloc, and others preceded it. But it is probably safe to assume that at no time before has the final decision rested with so few individuals, or with individuals representing such a relatively insignificant portion of the total population.

It is obvious that beneficial results might be gained by such a condition, if the minority used its unusual power to force passage of constructive legislation. But so far, from all appearances, little except private ends have been striven for by existing minorities. Undoubtedly it would be preferable to rely upon majority rule, carrying with it direct and unavoidable responsibility. Uncertain and devious enough are legislative channels in this country without additional impediments and obstacles being placed in the way of the majority will.—J. M. L.

Misunderstanding And Misrepresentation

A narrow-minded man of God and a poorly balanced free-thinker with what appear to be paranoid tendencies almost came to blows in an epithetical conflict in the Cathedral of St. John, the Divine in New York Sunday. But, the faithful and fashionable flock would stand for no offense to its minister, although he had just a moment before been blaspheming the free-thinker, and but for the intervention of the police would have thrown the intruder down the steps and out of the church in the true Christian spirit of tolerance.

All this came about because Bishop Manning does not understand companionate marriage as it is misrepresented by Judge Lindsey. The everyday mind in its usual conception of companionate marriage thinks of it in much the same manner as Bishop Manning describes Judge Lindsey's book: as being conducive to "lewdness, promiscuity, adultery and unrestrained sexual gratification." Actually, there are no such ideas behind the theory or in the practice of companionate marriage. The plan, it is said, is fully legitimate, legalized and sanctified, for it is merely a secret contract between a marrying couple by which they agree to practice absolute birth control for a definite length of time to allow both man and wife to engage freely in other pursuits, economic and otherwise. OPEN FORUM

To the Editor of the Tar Heel:

I don't know what all Dr. Robert Hutchins of the University of Chicago may have in the back of his flighty and theorizing mind, but I am ready to offer momentous praises unto Allah and cling like a disciple to those words of pearly wisdom that would send compulsory classes, quiz books, and credits into the land of long ago.

I am tired of them; I am sick of them; I hate them, for they stand like a scourge that whips and beats until the soul is dead. Under a system of compulsion and formal check ups there can be no true study, no true learning and consequently no true education. I have read somewhere or other that learning came like a sweet, pure light showing the way to understanding, and with understanding (at the option of the owner) a slow and meditative chin-rub, and maybe a calm little smile denoting that the smiler had absorbed something other than that Emperor Charles the Fifth died in 1558, and that a white rat could run through a sawdust pile in exactly one hour and thirty minutes. I'll bet, too, that that fellow, whoever he was, did not have to cut short his chin-rub or dash his little smile into a hideous scowl because it was necessary, in order to pass tomorrow's quiz, to memorize a half a book of French idioms.

Now I, too, am a "Tar Heel to the last glass," born with a tobacco leaf in one hand and a sack of peanuts in the other and I should hate very much that the University of North Carolina should lose such a dominating personality as myself. For I have been in the University too long to know so little. I know a little chemistry, a little French, a little German, and a few other odds and ends that I have picked up between quizzes, but I would like to know just a little more. I would like to hang a sheepskin in the front room at home that my father could proudly show to all the neighbors and say, "My boy did that," and one that I could step up and say, "Yes mamm, that's me."

Births and Deaths Balance In Report Of County Coroner

The coroner's report for the month of November shows that the births exactly equalled the number of deaths; there were four of each. G. M. Braune, late Dean of the University engineering school, succumbed to an attack of pneumonia. Jessie Kirkland, colored brick mason, died as a result of chronic nephritis; he was sixty-eight years old. L. J. Bright, white, died in his forty-eighth year from an attack of angina pectoris. John Riggsbee, colored, one month old, died of malnutrition.

The births were evenly divided between the sexes; there were two boys and two girls born. A daughter was born to both Mr. and Mrs. James Baldwin, colored, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Caldwell, colored. Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Winston, colored, and Mr. and Mrs. William Roberts, colored were both blessed with the birth of a son.

W. V. PARKER CONDUCTS MATHEMATICS SEMINAR

Mr. W. V. Parker conducted the mathematic seminar yesterday afternoon held in Phillips hall at three o'clock. He discussed a method of obtaining curves of the type y equals $g(x)$ which are tangent to a curve y square equals $f(x)$ at all points when they meet. When $f(x)$ and $g(x)$ are polynomials and the degree of $g(x)$ is at least one-half the degree of $f(x)$ and not greater than the degree of $f(x)$. He also showed how many such curves exist for any given point of the curve y square equals $f(x)$.

This treatment of curves is apparently new and is not found in any text books on mathematics. Mr. Parker happened on it while writing a thesis for his doctor's degree last year. It is a rather elementary problem and it seems strange that nothing has heretofore been written on it.

There seems to be a long-time fuse attached to the dynamite in the Hoover law enforcement commission report.—Chicago Evening Post.

ROWE TO BUILD 1930 RING TEAM AROUND SENIORS

Captain Goodridge, John Warren And Obie Davis Nucleus For Team.

ALLEN'S POST IS VACANT

Stars from Last Year's Freshman Outfit Expected to Win Berths.

With the varsity boxing squad numbering thirty men already, indications are that Carolina will be represented by another strong ring team this year.

The Tar Heels have won Southern titles in two of the last four tournaments, and Coach Crayton Rowe hopes to build a strong 1930 team around three senior veterans from the 1929 outfit which won six meets on a schedule that showed eight of the best teams in the South and East.

Captain Noah Goodridge, a southern finalist in the 135-pound class; John Warren, heavy weight and brother to the well-known "K. O." Warren; and Obie Davis, smart 160-pounder, are the veterans. All three have been showing good form in early season tests, and should give much strength at their respective posts, although several rookies are putting up spirited bids for their places.

Evan Vaughan and Harry Sheffield, lettermen in the 115 and 125-pound classes, are still eligible, but are not working due to rigors of studies, and it looks as if Coach Rowe will have to groom new men for these posts as well as for the heavy post and the 145-pound berth left open by graduation of Archie Allen, captain last year.

Two freshmen stars of last year have been looking especially good this fall, Marty Levinson, hard-hitting 125-pounder, and Platt Landis, rugged heavyweight, may do much to solve Coach Rowe's problems. Boren and Biggs are showing about even in the 115-pound class, but Allen's vacated post in the 145-pound class presents a real problem. Holderness, 145-pound intramural champ last year; Farris, a reserve; Gatlin, Henderson, Jackson, Lumpkin and Stallins have all been battling on an even par, and the Carolina coach is still looking for the 145-pounder outstanding.

Among the other men who have been campaigning spiritedly for posts before the advent of the winners of this week's intramural tourney are Clark, promising 125-pound reserve; Cook, Wardlaw, Raymer, R. Hubbard, and Cross Country Captain Baucom, 135 pounders; J. Hubbard, and Parsons, 160-pounders; and Wilson and Glover, heavyweights.

FELLOWSHIPS OFFERED FOR STUDY IN FRANCE

The American field service fellowships for French Universities, incorporated, has announced that a limited number of fellowships for advanced study in France will be awarded for the year 1931-32. Each of these will carry a stipend of $1400 and will be tenable for one year, with a possible renewal for a second year, providing circumstances are favorable.

In general, the fellowships are offered in the fields of the sciences, arts, languages and literature, education, history, and law. One of the requirements that applicants must meet is that he have a practical ability to use French books, both in general subjects and in his own special field, and be able to speak French and understand lectures delivered in French.

UNABLE TO PLAY IN CHARITY GAME

Despite the fact that his condition is much improved, it is highly improbable that Coach Chuck Collins will be able to play in the charity football game between the New York Giants and former Notre Dame stars in New York Sunday, according to an announcement made by Dr. E. A. Abernethy yesterday afternoon. Coach Collins is very much disappointed over the fact that he will be unable to take part in the game and run again with the 1924 Notre Dame team, noted for the "four horsemen" backfield.

Coach Collins has been confined to the infirmary since Monday with a "bad cold." His condition is much improved, his temperature having fallen from 104 degrees on Monday to 100 at noon yesterday.

SPORTS EDITORS CONFERENCE HAS BEEN POSTPONED

The Conference of the sports editors of the college papers in the Southern Conference which was planned for December 13, has been indefinitely postponed because of the nearness of examinations.

This decision was reached by the sports editor of the Daily Tar Heel, K. C. Ramsay, and the sports editor of the Kentucky "Kernel," Vernon Rook, after several of the editors wrote that they would be unable to attend.

Wesleyan Freshmen Fight Sophomores

Delaware, Ohio.—IP)—Delaware police were called upon recently to disperse a class fight between 400 freshman and sophomore women on the campus of Ohio Wesleyan University.

Freshman girls for several days had refused to appear in their freshman berets. Then one evening the sophomores organized and swooped down on the freshman cottages.

The freshmen likewise were soon organized and a hot battle ensued. Hair was pulled, dresses torn and faces scratched in the melee. Sophomores succeeded in ducking a few of the frosh coeds under the showers.

The first policeman on the scene mistook lipstick, smeared on the faces of the freshman girls, as blood marks, and sent in a general alarm. The cops soon separated the combatants, and no one was seriously hurt in the conflict.

The unsubdued frosh co-eds later marched through downtown streets in snake dance formation, shouting to the world that they would not wear the prescribed freshman headgear.

Finals of Boxing Tournament Tonight

The final and semi-final bouts of the intramural boxing tournament will be held today. The Tar Heel went to press last night before a report was received on yesterday's fights. A complete account of the results of the tournament will appear in tomorrow's issue of the Daily.

QUINTET TAKING FORM IN DRILLS

Guards Will Come up To Drop In Scores Under Ashmore's New Plan.

The basketball squad looked especially good in yesterday's scrimmage, showing accuracy in shooting and a class in floorwork and in general play that heretofore has been lacking. The boys were following up their shots and sinking them with great regularity. Dameron, Cleland, Hines, and Hendlin, starring at this.

This year, as in other years, the Tar Heels will use the system of the guards as well as the forwards cutting in to drop the ball in the hoop. This system is rather unusual since the main function of the guards is to keep the opposing forwards from scoring. However, Coach Ashmore believes that a "strong offense is the best defense," and as a result the Tar Heel team will devote more time to offensive play rather than defensive.

From the latest reports, the proposed Villanova game will not be played. The Wildcats will be in Durham and Raleigh to play Duke and N. C. State respectively during the examination period and it is extremely doubtful that a game will be scheduled. However, the Tar Heels will probably play the Durham, Raleigh, and Greensboro "Y" quints, their last year opponents, before school adjourns for the Christmas holidays.

Although no definite call for candidates for the freshman squad has been made, quite a number of first year men are working out daily in the Tin Can, getting into shape and warming up their eye in preparation for the first call, which will be issued as soon as school opens for the winter quarter.

Yale-Princeton Bands

Poison Soup Kills 30 Indian Students

Bombay, India, December 10.—Soon after eating their noon time meal Monday, thirty students in the London mission school at Erode, Madras, died and fifteen others were in a painful condition because they ate some soup into which a poisonous lizard had fallen. The cook who prepared the meal also died. Fatal poisoning by deadly reptiles is common in India, but such an event rarely occurs in civilized centers.

TAR HEELS WIN MANY PLACES ON ALL-STAR TEAMS

Lipscomb Gets Second Team All-Southern Berth on Associated Press Team.

BRANCH MAKES LONG RUN

95-Yard Dash Against Maryland Longest of Season; McDade Plays 507 Minutes.

By K. C. Ramsay

Sports writers over the country this year have taken notice more than ever before of the strength of the University of North Carolina football team, and many of the mythical selections have placed Tar Heels on the teams.

Carolina failed to place anyone on the first All-Southern team this year, but copped one second place on almost every selection as well as many honorable mentions. Ned Lipscomb received many votes for the first All-Southern team and was beaten for the post by "Preacher" Roberts of Tulane after a close vote.

Branch

The Associated Press selection gave Lipscomb the second team berth, and extended honorable mention to Johnny Branch. Many selections mentioned Rip Slusser and Jim Magner. Branch missed by one vote getting the second team place on the United Press selection, being nosed out by Austin Downes of Georgia.

The Associated Press mentioned Branch for All-American quarterback this year, as did several other selections. Placing on the honorable list for All-American quarterback this year is quite an honor when there are such field generals in the country as Frank Carideo and Bobby Dodd.

All-State selections are choosing the customarily large number of Carolina stars for their teams, most of the picks showing from three to five Tar Heels. Johnny Branch has received probably the largest vote of any Carolina man for all-state honors, while Ned Lipscomb is likewise a favorite. Jim Magner, because of his great ability at passing, is almost a unanimous choice for a halfback post. Other Carolina gridders who have received many first team votes are: Ellis Fysal, Roy McDade, Henry House, Rip Slusser, Strud Nash, and Bob Blackwood.

Branch Leads Nation

Johnny Branch leads the nation in long punt returns for touchdowns. His 95 yard dash against the University of Maryland was the longest run of the season, according to statistics compiled by Park H. Davis, recognized expert football statistician. Besides this long run Branch dashed 80 yards against V. P. I. for a score.

Captain Strud Nash's invitation to play in the North-South charity football game in New York during the Christmas holidays recognizes not only the ability of the Tar Heel captain, but also the strength of the Tar Heel team.

McDade Plays 507 Minutes

Roy McDade, right tackle, played more football this season than any other member of the varsity football squad, seeing action in every game of the season, and playing for the full sixty minutes in three contests. His total time for the season was 507 minutes. The season was composed of nine sixty minute games, and one, the Wake Forest
